Editorial

A theological professor is said to have given the following directions to a class of young ministers: "Have something to say; say it; then quit." The last of these injunctions is not the least important. Many a good sermon is ruined by extending it unduly.

A Baptist minister in Mississippi in writing up his meeting says: "It was more of a Bible institute than an evangelistic campaign." We regret to say that we have seen not a few meetings of this sort. The study of God's Word is important, but the main object of a revival is to lead the unsaved to Christ, if there are any in the community.

Why is it that church papers so often quote from other journals and write after the borrowed article "Exchange" or "Selected," when they know perfectly well where it was obtained? Such a practice lacks much of measuring up to a high standard of ethics in journalism. They might learn a valuable lesson in this respect from our secular periodicals which seldom do such a thing. Surely what is worth quoting is worth giving credit for.

How rare is the man of charitable judgment and prudent speech! Far too often we pass upon the actions of others with an imperfect understanding of their surroundings and the motives that controlled them. Nearly every day we inflict with our tongues injuries that may never be repaired. Reckless statements do not become the disciples of Christ, who are taught that they will be held accountable for every "idle" (harmful) word that they shall utter. The universal prayer of mankind should be that of the Psalmist: "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips."

Office-seeking in the secular world has little to commend it, and in the Church it is positively reprehensible. Ambition for ecclesiastical position is incompatible with Scriptural holiness. To see a minister scrambling for high place is humiliating; he should await in humility the call of God and of the brethren, and if the door to conspicuous advancement is never opened, he should not feel disappointed and complain. It is a great honor to be Christ's representative even in the humblest sphere. The standard that Paul set for the Christians of his time was that in "lowliness of mind each should esteem others better than himself;" that in honor they should prefer one another. But in this boasted twentieth century we seem to have developed some of a somewhat different type. And the new variety has come not by a process of evolution, but by a process of retrogression. In this respect at least we are not better than our fathers.

OUR MISSION AND OUR OPPORTUNITY.

The South has always been the home of conservatism, and the Southern branch of Episcopal Methodism has been of the type of the section in which the greatest part of its membership is found.

It is quite evident that the country is being swept by gales of the wildest radicalism. In the North especially these currents are most manifest. The Northern branch of Episcopal Methodism has not been able to escape the effect of the atmosphere of the section in which a majority of its members live. At their recent General Conference stormy scenes were enacted. A Bishop, who was superannuated, took occasion to say to the Conference that his retirement was accomplished by irregular and illegal methods, and that political motives lay back of it. And a large part of the Conference applauded what he said. Other action taken was scarcely less agitating.

But while there is much radicalism in the North and much of it in the Northern Methodist Church, there are many thousands of conservative people in that section who have no sympathy with radicalism. They are growing more and more inclined to ally themselves with the conservative Southern people in maintaining unimpaired our great political inheritance and our time-honored religious institutions.

At such a time it behooves the South to stand firmly by its traditions in order that there may be a rallying center for the conservatism of the nation to gather about. Southern Methodism affects the South even more strongly than does Congregationalism influence New England, and our Church has a great responsibility arising from this fact. Herein we have a mission and an opportunity. Let us be equal to it.

We can save Episcopal Methodism by remaining true to our traditions. The conservative elements of the North are as vitally interested in our standing firm as we ourselves are.

Radicalism will run itself out of breath in both the political field and the ecclesiastical field before many years have passed. It is all important that there be in the nation compact bodies of conservatives as rallying centers of safety and sanity. Our Church should be such a center.

Our Church has surely come to the kingdom for such a time as this. Its mission will be fulfilled by fidelity to the great principles for which it has always stood. Some conservative men in the Northern Church have expressed the wish privately that the two churches should unite in order to overpower the radicals among them. That would be for us to be overwhelmed by radicalism. We can serve our sister Church better by maintaining our own organization than by being absorbed by hers. Our example and our strength even now restrain, somewhat, radicalism among the Methodists of the North.

At the Ecumenical Conference in Toronto last October it was shown that half the increase of Methodism in the United States for the past decade was found in the Southern Church. Let us go on our way, preaching the same gospel of power which our fathers preached, minding the same things, and walking by the same rule. Ten years hence, as things now seem to be going, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be the strongest body of Methodists in the western world, if not the strongest in all the world. We need not experiment with untried and unnecessary devices. We are doing well. Let us hold fast that which is good and make it better, both for our own sake and for the sake of Methodism in every part of our country.

THE CASE OF BARON YUN.

The case of Baron Yun Chi Ho is one of special interest and concern to Southern Methodists. Though converted in his home land of Korea, he was educated in the United States, attending Emory College and Vanderbilt University. His conduct since he became connected with our Church has been most exemplary. It has been that of not merely a nominal Christian, but of a true disciple of Christ, who, having himself experienced the saving power of the gospel, desired above all else to have it reach and bless his fellow-countrymen, who for so long have been enveloped in the darkness of heathenism. His act in turning aside from the high political honors which then seemed awaiting him, to teach in a Christian school at Songdo, was one of commendable self-sacrifice and proved him to be a man of noble ideals and purposes.

This gifted and useful Korean was arrested and imprisoned by the Japanese authorities early in last February, upon the charge of conspiracy in a movement to assassinate the Resident Governor-General. According to report, his confinement was close, and for some time he was not allowed to see any one. It seems that at first he was held at Songdo, but later was removed to the federal prison at Seoul. There is now a rumor that he has been released on bail, pending his trial, which is expected to take place in the near future.

The action of our Board of Missions in seeking to befriend Baron Yun in this hour of trouble was most timely. The paper presented to the Japanese Ambassador at Washington by Bishops Wilson, Candler, Hoss and Murrah, and Dr. W. W. Pinson, was an admirable one in every respect. It was tactful and judicious, yet clear and straightforward in its statements. It certified strongly to the high character of Dr. Yun, to the splendid service which he has rendered, and to the confidence of our Church in his integrity and innocence. Such a testimonial ought to carry great weight. Meantime, let our people pray that the God who delivered his faithful servants from prison and threatened death in former ages, may come to the rescue of our distinguished fellow-Christian across the wide seas.

A CHURCH EXTENSION SOCIETY "IN BREECHES."

John Wesley looked forward with dread to the time when Methodist enterprises should become so great and the demands for money so insistent that wealthy men would become necessary to us. He foretold that then discipline would be impossible. Whether Mr. Wesley's prophecy has come true, this writer will not discuss. A worse evil even than this is for us to think that men of wealth are the necessary condition of an advancing church.

In some of our great centers you sometimes hear it said that Methodism can do no mighty works there because she has no men of great property. Methodism planted herself without the patronage of the great and without the subsidy of the rich, and can still extend her borders by the enthusiasm of humble men. New Orleans once had a Church Extension Society in pantaloons, and that man possessed none of the marks of worldly greatness.

Richard Keen was an Englishman by birth, having first seen the light of day near the city of London in the year 1846. When twenty-one years of age he married, and soon afterward came to Brooklyn. In 1855, Brother Keen moved to New Orleans. Whilst residing in Brooklyn he was led to Christ through the efforts of his employer. His conversion was genuine, as shown by his zeal and success in bringing others to Christ.

Immediately upon coming to New Orleans he cast his lot with the Methodist people, who then had a small frame church on Gravier Street. New Orleans then had forty-eight Methodist members. Shortly afterward Poydras Street Church was built and Methodism began an advance movement, of which he was the leading spirit.

Bishop Parker wrote of Brother Keen editorially in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, under the September, 1876, date line, as follows:

"The thirty-five years which Brother Keen spent in New Orleans were important ones to Methodism. He was largely engaged in all the enterprises of the church during that period, and intimately connected with its extension and development. He did a great deal of pioneer work, and laid the foundation of several churches. He was the first to open a prayer meeting and Sunday school where the Moreau Street Church now stands, and that church grew out of his labors. He was also, in company with Brother W. H. Dameron, the first to break ground for Methodism in Algiers, and a church was soon built there. The next church on Louisiana avenue, which is now thriving under the pastorate of Rev. James A. Fry, is a monument of his untiring energy and zeal, and ought to be called after him for all time to come. The beautiful church in Jefferson, now the Sixth District, situated on Cadiz street, owes also a great deal to the same untiring hands. In 1848 he organized a Sunday school on the corner of Dryades and Felicity streets, built a small church, and turned it over to a pastor as 'The Andrew Chapel.' For years this little school and church did a good work, until it was absorbed in the present church on Felicity street. Brother Keen had a hand also in the 'Old St. Mary Street Church,' the first of our up-town churches, and also in the original Elijah Steel Church, on Magazine Street, better known in its day as the 'Flatboat Church,' because constructed of the lumber of broken-up flat-boats. The present Felicity Street Church was constituted by the consolidation and union of Andrew Chapel, St. Mary Street and the Elijah Steel congregations in 1848, under the pastorate of Rev. H. N. McTyeire, now one of our Bishops. Brother Keen had moved his membership to this charge about the time of the consolidation, and, as usual, took a large amount of stock in the new church, which was dedicated by Bishop Capers on Christmas morning, December, 1850. Although a poor man, he was one of the largest contributors, and determined to live on bread and water rather than fail in paying the amount subscribed.

"Besides what he gave, which was beyond all examples of giving we have ever met with, he bestowed much time and personal labor upon all of our church-building. He could beg money, and did it, and wrought with his own hands besides. As a Sunday school man he was pre-eminent. He was always engaged in organizing and superintending schools. He started nearly all of our Sunday schools, and was a diligent worker in this field to the last. He was the superintendent of the Louisiana Avenue Sunday school at the time of his death. He has indeed, filled every post in the church that a layman could fill. He was trustee, class leader, steward, Sunday school superintendent, sexton, and often all of these at the same time.

"There was no work for God that he was not ready to perform. He could sweep, dust and light the church, work all night to build or repair it, and act efficiently as steward, raise the tunes, take up the collection, and do everything that a Christian man ever did do in the service and offices of the church. He lives in the history of New Orleans Methodism from its infancy, and his monument is in nearly every brick and beam and bell and spire. Every Sunday school is his memorial, and every congregation is a witness to his wonderful usefulness. A few such men in any community would evangelize it; a regiment of them would conquer a State. Brother Keen was a plain, illiterate man, without polish of manners, not prepossessing in person, nor greatly endowed in intellect, but he was humble and mightily in earnest, and consecrated all to God. He certainly made the very uttermost of his gifts and opportunities, and what he accomplished ought to shame and condemn thousands who, with superior gifts, accomplish far less for Christ. He came fully up to the apostolic exhortation: 'Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord.' He was diligent in his own affairs, but still more diligent in the affairs of his divine Master. On the 2d of August Brother Keen left home for Alabama. Called by some business engagement to the little town of Jackson, on the Tombigbee River, he there died after a brief illness, and there he was buried. His last hours were peaceful, and we have no doubt that the final summons found him ready, willing and even glad to depart and be with Christ."

Bishop McTyeire wrote to the Editor of the Advocate the following note:

"Let me thank you for the biographical sketch of Richard Keen, which you gave in the editorial columns of the Christian Advocate. I knew him well. Your sketch is nothing exaggerated. He deserves to be held in honorable memory by us all. Let us glorify the grace of God in him.

"There is one portion of Scripture in connection with which I have often thought of Brother Keen. He illustrates it. I believe that humble, working, good man went before the Master, saying: 'Lord, thy pound hath gained ten pounds.' Such a man is eminently the product of Christianity. I knew a case where, on his way to early morning work, he called in at a newly converted neighbor's and taught them how to hold family prayers; and this he did until they got in the way of it. He did it literally, en passant. He was a hearty worshiper. I loved to see him in the congregation, for you were sure to hear him, too. Once I was reading as the lesson, the thirty-fourth Psalm. He could not contain. With his rough, honest hand he brushed away the tears, and said aloud: 'Yes, Lord, that is so—this poor man has tried it.'"

What Methodism in New Orleans needs is not fifty men of wealth, but a hundred men with the missionary spirit of Richard Keen. With such, in the next twenty-five years this city could be made both Protestant and Methodist. Wealth is the least thing in the propagation of great truths. May God give us of His grace and multiply the number of those whose zeal is increased. If we will emphasize men and the Kingdom more, money and the Kingdom will take care of themselves. May God give us men of vision, of faith and daring in our great cities.

MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS.

Delivered in the College chapel on Tuesday, June 11, 1912, by the Rev. William Hayne Leavell, D. D., LL. D., of Carrollton, Miss. Dr. Leavell is one of the most scholarly and eloquent Presbyterian ministers in the South and a son-in-law of the late United States Senator J. Z. George, some of whose papers he is said to be preparing for publication.)

Age and experience are everywhere granted the right to admonish and instruct the young. There is a certain satisfaction in urging others to do the things one has himself not always done. Some truth is found in the philosophy of Pudd'n-head Wilson: "To be good is noble; but to show others how to be good is nobler and no trouble." It is oftentimes not much worth while to admonish the aged, but it is always worth while to admonish the young, for who can tell but that some seed may take root in a fruitful soil and bring forth manifold results?

An old and wise man once said to a young one who stood facing the responsibilities of his life: "Take heed to thyself and to thy teaching." The modern form of this word of counsel is: "Look to yourself." And I know of nothing of more importance to you now on this the day of your coronation, than to look to yourselves, and to reach the clear determination that you will always and everywhere meet the obligations of your sovereignty.

To-day is an epoch in your lives. And the wise man is he who seizes his epochs. At such points of experience we arrive oftentimes at crises, and in such crises wise men and women determine upon some line of action, some course of conduct, and fix upon their program of life. Son of God although he was, Jesus Christ did this very thing during those dreary days in the desert when he was tempted of the devil. He then committed himself to the principle of self-sacrificing love as his line of action, and struck hands with God in an inviolable compact to live his life, do his work and win his victory by the persistent sacrifice of himself. From that he never veered, never swerved, never departed; under its demands he never flinched; its full and terrible price he paid to the last farthing and by means of it he illustrated and illuminated righteousness on the earth.

According to your wisdom will be the certainty, the clearness and the fixedness of your purpose in life. If you will consider the age in which you are called to live, consider the qualities of this modern time, you will see how necessary it is for every one of you who means to make himself worth while in this day and generation, to "look to himself," for this is as material an age as the Christian world has ever seen. Men have more wealth than ever before, more learning, more philanthropy, even, make greater benefactions than ever, have more power for good and more machinery for applying it; yet our spiritual life has a lower angle and shorter vision than at any time since our nation was born in the sacrifice of our fathers and established in the providence of God. The notes of materialistic desire sound with a louder clang through all the spheres of our national purpose and hope. More and more we are measuring all things by the gold standard. Money talks—talks in every form of speech, sings in every note of joy, and rides its triumphal car through every sphere of life. There is a mad race for money in which we are all entered and every man is stripped. None wants some, some wants more, more wants much, and much wants it all. It is no longer a matter of doubt—it is a settled fact, that the orders of society are now graded by the amount of money one has. We may as well be honest and frank about it: learning, culture, eloquence, faith, and character do not determine the degree of one's influence, nor fix his position in the world. That is fixed by his wealth.

I fear there is some reason to think the Church itself may be in danger from that which has already corrupted society. The Church is doing too much reverence to the "strong box" and bowing too low before the bank account. Men are trying to drive a "coach-and-four" through the Ten Commandments, and are rushing through the Sermon on the Mount with the world tucked under one arm and the Church under the other, and imagine they can accomplish the impossible feat of serving both God and Mammon. In the language of our redoubtable ex-President—who is himself an explosive and far-sounding illustration of his own vigorous doctrine—this is a "strenuous age." Every nerve is keyed to its highest pitch, every eye is shining with the light of anticipated triumph, every voice is strident with the tones of command, and the very air is shivered by the shout: "Clear the way, for I am coming." Being lost to our experience, moderation has passed out of our vocabulary. The mild and gentle phrases of the more refined years, being no longer heeded, are no longer used. Whatever we wish to be heard nowadays we must say in the extremest language we can find and yell in the loudest tones we can command, or we will get no more attention than would a whisper amid the loud, crashing thunders of a storm in the mountains.

This is not an overdrawn picture of our modern times in which you are called to live and do your work. Your task is not an easy one and I do not envy you either your responsibilities or your youth. The larger part of my work in the world is already done. It was done amid the far less complex conditions of the past. To my moderate powers that time was better suited. I do not think of myself as a coward; and yet I am grateful that God did not see fit to burden me with the responsibility of youth in this day and time. Still I congratulate you that yours is the duty and responsibility, for I honestly believe that God knows and that he cares, and that "as thy days may demand, so shall thy strength ever be." So here you are and here and now you are called to do your part. The summons comes from God. Had he not wanted you in the conflict at this time, he would have called you into being at some former or some later day. He places you here now, so gird up your loins and "quit you like men."

This modern age is as I have described it. Those who are to mould it into different forms for better things must be found and equipped. Here is where the college comes in. And you must never forget that a college is more than money, more than students, more than instructors—it is both a history and an atmosphere. It is true that the real atmosphere of the college is largely made by the teachers who represent scholarship and learning. It is true one man may be able to dominate the whole situation, like Thos. Arnold at Rugby and Mark Hopkins at Williams, and create an atmosphere and influence a generation. Yet it takes more than teachers, however competent; more than money, however much; and more than students, however many, to create a real college. Of course, both money and students are necessary to make a seat of learning great. Wise instructors and wise instruction are needed also. But even these things cannot of themselves and at once make a real college. Something more is needed. Time is needed—time for a history to grow, time for the creation of an atmosphere. In such fashion are made the institutions whose peculiar empire is the discovery and equipment of competent scholars to do the work of scholars in the world; as well as the discovery and equipment of others whose business in the world does not, indeed, deal with questions of technical scholarship, but which does require for its highest efficiency trained and disciplined powers. The whole man should be trained, not only his brain. Whatever may have been true fifty years ago, it is no longer a question that a well developed body is of vast importance amid the contests of our modern time. Too many persons drag along because their bodies are not sound and well. Still there is danger that our institutions may give such importance to physical training as to misplace the emphasis and cause students to overestimate its value. Once I visited one of the famous universities of the country and my son pointed out to me "the most famous fellow in college." I inquired and learned the young man was famous, not for scholarship, but for football. He was the famous "full-back" of the college team—or half-back, or quarter-back—something about his back. And it seemed to me the emphasis was wrongly placed, where the most distinguished classman in college was distinguished for his back and not his brain. The emphasis should yet be placed upon mental discipline and learning as the proper equipment for life in an age that is more and more needing, if not demanding, education and culture.

It is coming to be better understood that one is better prepared for life if his powers are trained, even should his duties be found amid what are called the humbler walks of life. One should be better fitted for life as a farmer, bricklayer, stoker, merchant, clerk, housekeeper, seamstress, or cook, for being educated, for having a cultured mind. Not that one would plow better, or build better fires, or sew and cook better for being educated; but he is all the better fitted for life in such spheres for possessing a cultivated mind. To such a man life is not so narrow and dull, not so devoid of interest and variety, not so dependent upon coarse gratification for pleasure, and not so open, therefore, to temptation. Such a man can "walk with the wise" all the days of his life. When most alone he is least alone. He can keep company with the sages whose rich lore he knows, and entertain the conceits of an active and cultivated mind which soars above the dull and the commonplace. "My mind to me a kingdom is."

I know, of course, that not a few of the ablest men and women in the history of our country lacked such training and culture. They greatly contributed to the greatness of our history. I would honor them all the more for being able to do this, despite their lack of training and culture. But we are ceasing to be a new country. Our experiment in government is no longer an experiment. More and more our leading men are being pitted against the representatives of the most cultivated, most learned, and most highly civilized peoples of the Old World. We are beginning to feel this. In recent years the best service rendered our country abroad has been rendered by men of the best culture among us. Our best representatives to the culture of Europe have been men like Motley, Lowell, Phelps, Bayard, Curry and Choate. Our public men no longer openly sneer at scholarly aspirants to public position as mere "doctrinaires;" they have quit sneering at the "literary fellow," as they formerly called the scholar in politics. More and more the scholar is coming to the front. We are wanting our leaders to be educated men. We are beginning to realize that a certain moral quality is apt to be associated with culture, even if it be little more than good taste in morals. We feel that the country is not so likely to be misrepresented in matters of propriety by men of culture. We are sure, for example, that a Lowell or a Curry would not be apt to write a treatise on the game of "Poker," as was done by one of our former ministers to the Court of St. James. Educated people whose minds are well furnished and whose powers are thoroughly disciplined are not likely to be bigoted and narrow and prejudiced and "infallible." And there are so many situations in life that can be made awkward and uncomfortable, even intolerable, by the narrow-minded bigotry of ignorance.

It is well, then, to ask what manner of man shall he be who shall enter life now, meet the responsibility, and achieve the possible in our day and time, in our country, and in the world? I answer in a word: He must be a sound man. And this, unlike Gaul, is divided into "four" parts:

1. Our man must have a sound body. I do not mean that he must have physical beauty. You may not agree with me, but I think physical beauty, particularly that degree of it which attracts universal attention, is both a danger and a disability. Men who have been marked by extraordinary physical beauty, from Absalom to Byron and Beau Brummel, have never been able to leave behind them a good name for manliness and virtue. There is a quite universal feeling that men of great beauty are apt to be great rascals. It is not generally thought that men possessing the powerful fascination of beauty have enough of virtue not to misuse that power to the undoing of others. The experience and observation of the world have created so much doubt of its value as to require a man of unusual beauty to prove his virtue before men will believe he possesses it. And the difficulties he encounters in overcoming this prejudice are neither few nor small. It is said that some Englishman once ran across Daniel Webster without knowing who he was, and pronounced him a humbug because "no man can be as great as that man looks."

But beauty is not necessary to soundness. By soundness I mean health, development and power of endurance. Most of the uncomfortable people I have known have been people whose bodies were not sound. I have almost come to believe that a sound body is a condition precedent to wholesome piety. The rickety and washed-out specimens are apt to be very difficult people. A sound body is to a large degree necessary to the sustained labor of life, whether of a physical or intellectual sort. To this end there should be careful physical training. It is true Paul said, "bodily exercise profiteth but little." He meant that it profited little as a substitute for godliness; which is manifestly true. But as an aid to service, to efficiency, to godliness even, bodily exercise profiteth much. It makes for health and strength, makes for that soundness which prevents the physical condition that racks the spirit of a man. There is, therefore, a reason, a good, sound, substantial, wholesome, sensible and religious reason, for the gymnasium in the college as a necessary instrument for the adequate equipment of men for the strain of life in our day and time. The moral attainment of the race would be vastly helped, if all the world's workers were possessed of sound bodies. It would be all for good, if men whose minds are trained and whose souls are clean were as well developed and strong in body as the man I saw win the final victory for the Boston Baseball Team by one magnificent stroke, twenty-five years ago.

2. Our man must have a sound mind. I make no plea for genius. Genius is rare, is not subject to law, blazes no path for others, but only for itself. Genius is a comet which flashes athwart the heavens in an orbit peculiar to itself, illumines the night for a little while, and then fades forever from the skies. It frightens as many people as it charms.

I make my plea for common sense. Common sense is a star. It goes by law, follows a prescribed course, moves in regular order, serves its office well, frightens nobody, never flickers and falls, but shines on in undimmed radiance to the end. Somebody has said that "common sense is the best substitute for genius." I go further: Common sense, for every ultimate purpose, is far and away better than genius. You may safely ride the steed called "horse-sense." It strikes a steady gait and jogs along to the journey's end. On that steed you always arrive. It never turns "turtle" and drops you in the ditch. Common sense plods; genius refuses to plod; yet plodders win in the long run. Napoleon was a genius and Wellington was a plodder; and the final triumph of the plodder made for the betterment of mankind.

The result of my prolonged observation is the conviction that a sound judgment is the highest intellectual quality. It is developed out of common sense. It is cultivable—you may grow it to that degree of perfection where it rarely, almost never blunders. The "sound mind" needs to be trained, educated, drawn out, cultivated, enriched. It needs to know many things, to know some things well, to know something perfectly.

There is such a thing as culture and there is such a different thing as "culchaw." Remember that the one thing in all this world which cannot be counterfeited is culture. You may counterfeit wealth, many men are credited with wealth who are merely "high rollers;" you may counterfeit manners and breeding and show off a certain superficial acquaintance with the customs of good society, you may counterfeit an honorable ancestry and get strangers to accept you as a scion of some distinguished family, may even lie about it long enough and hard enough to convince yourself that noble blood runs in your veins, but you cannot counterfeit culture, for the moment you "open your mouth you put your foot in it." A simpering young idiot once assured Oliver Wendell Holmes that he much enjoyed reading the "Autograph of the Breakfast Table." Talleyrand once entertained the English historian, Robertson, at his salon in Paris. Being himself busy with many things, he commissioned Madam Talleyrand to familiarize herself with the author's writings—a specious form of flattery common to such occasions. She read diligently, but unfortunately got hold of the wrong book. In lingering near them for the moment Talleyrand heard his wife, with her most insinuating charm of manner, say: "Do, Mr. Robertson, tell me whatever became of your man Friday." With a loud laugh the Minister of State exclaimed: "My lord! sir, she has mistaken you for Robinson Crusoe."

Surely, "a little learning is a dangerous thing." Too little culture is hazardous for him who is ambitious to appear as a man of culture. But I want also to warn you against too much culture; against a too prolonged and exclusive cultivation of the mind. Culture should be a means and not an end. One who expends all his energy and time in sharpening his axe will never fell a forest; one who is forever enriching and refining his culture by exclusive study and never putting it to service, will finally get an instrument too fine and too brittle for execution. A lady's penknife, however sharp, is not an effective weapon for clearing away the forest. That was the fault of the late Lord Acton. He was said to be the most learned man in Europe. He was at home in the theological problems with Dollinger, in questions of State with Gladstone, could instruct Jowett in his specialty, and could guide Mommsen in early-Roman, and Hatch in early Church history. But his learning was so extensive, his culture so refined, and his taste so exquisite as to make him unwilling to put out any work, lest it should fall short of perfection. Under much prodding he finally projected a universal history, but before any appreciable portion of it was completed he died, and all his vast learning was lost to the world. It is possible to sharpen an instrument too much and keep at it too long and so do nothing worth while all through life.

I have always enjoyed the sharp criticism given by a hardy Western scholar to his inept Boston friend who spent all his time in the study of Transcendentalism, but confessed he could never really comprehend that unique Concord Philosophy. The Westerner said: "That's easy: Transcendentalism is the spiritual cognoscence of psychological irrefragibility connected with concomitant ademption of uncoluminent, spiritualized and etherialized contention of subsultory concoction."

3. Our man must have a sound soul, also. That will include his affections, of course. "As a man thinketh, so is he." More than that: As a man loveth, so is he. Indeed, a man is what he loves more than he is anything else. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh"—the mind projects, the effort is put forth. A man will seek to reach, to do, what he loves. He will go after and get what he loves, or know the reason why. He will move heaven and earth to possess and hold what he loves. In such a man's life sentiment will occupy a large place. His tenderness will be in proportion to his soundness and bigness of soul. He may hide it as the Scotch are said to do, who sternly repress every open expression of sentiment and in secret wet their cheeks with tears as they croon "John Anderson, my Jo, John."

Mixed as my own blood is with the strains of the Covenanter and the Huguenot, I admire the German subjection to the power of emotions. The best expression of it is the dialect poem of Charles Pollen Adams, called

"MINE SCHILDHOO."

"De schiltern they vas poot in ped,
All tucked oup for der night;
I dakes mine pipe der mantel off,
Und py der fireside pright
I dinks aboutt when I vas young—
Off moder, who vas tead,
Und how at night—like I do Hans—
She tucked me oup in ped.

"I mindt me off mine fader too,
Und how he yoozt to say,
'Poor poy, you haf a hardt oldt row
To hoe, und leedle blay!'
I find me oudt dot id vas drue
Vot mine oldt fader said,
While smoodhing down mine flaxen hair
Und tucking me in ped.

"Der old folks! Id vas like a dhream
To shpeak of dhem like dot.
Gretchen and I vas 'oldt folks' now,
Und have two schiltern got.
Ve lofes dhem more as nefer vas,
Each leedle curley head,
Und efry nightt ve dakes dhem oup
Und tucks dhem in dtheir ped.

"Budt dhen, somedimes, when I feels plue,
Und all dings lonesome seem,
I vish I vas dot poy again,
Und dis vas all a dhream.
I want to kiss mine moder vonce,
Und vhen mine brayer vas said,
To haf mine fader dake me oup
Und tuck me in mine ped."

The man whose heart is right and whose soul is sound will not be an agnostic; he will believe in something and believe in it with all his "might and main." He will believe in God and believe that He will reward all who diligently seek him; will believe in his fellow-men, that they are worth serving and worth saving; will believe in himself, that he is worth while, that he is here and now for a purpose, that he is endowed with capacity, is burdened with responsibility, and charged with destiny. His song will be:

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify."

And he will believe in destiny. However he may shun the dogma of personal predestination, he will believe in that high predestination of the eternal which has foreordained from before the foundation of the world the ultimate and transcendent triumph of righteousness; will believe in that mighty and Imperial Moral Order of the Universe which is steadily marching toward its complete and final victory; and that some day mankind will be caught in its majestic sweep and carried to its glorious destiny. Such a man will know how to use his powers of body, mind and soul, combining them into one fit instrument to effect the good of man and the glory of God. So will he become a copy of his Lord, and hope again to see the heavens open and to hear once more the blessed tribute: "Thou art my son, in whom I am well pleased."

4. Our sound man with his sound body, sound mind, and sound soul, should get a sound companion.

The divine wisdom once declared, "It is not good for man to be alone;" and the divine power created man "male and female"—the two hemispheres of God's highest and divinest world. All the ages since have confirmed the truth of the declaration.

Sometimes we say that God added "woe" to "man" and named the combination woman; that woman introduced the serpent into Paradise and brought all our woes into the world; say with John Milton:

"Earth felt the wound; and Nature from her seat, Sighing through all her works, gave signs of
That all was lost."

We say these things sometimes; but we know, we who have had mothers, sisters, sweethearts, wives and daughters, we know that woman has brought to the world its purity and sweetness, and sympathy and love, and inspiration and nobility and helpfulness—in a word, its happiness and worth. She is our companion, our "guide, philosopher and friend." With an honorable pride, she crowns us in our hour of victory; with invincible faith she sustains us in our hours of defeat; cheered and upheld by her brave and dauntless soul, we go forth again to the battle, with victory in our heart and might in our arm. All good men and true worship at her shrine.

It is out of these deep experiences and these high loyalties comes our impatient, hot, determined, sometimes rude and frantic opposition to the new woman, and to all the elements and instruments of that unwholesome cult. We resent the effort to expose our women to the vulgar gaze, to publish their persons within the yellow glare of a shameless press. The civilization of mankind can better do without all it would gain by making woman more like men and less like women. The heart of every true man resents and resists, in the degree of his wisdom, all efforts to masculinize woman. We want none of the new woman who prates of her rights; who, as one of our humorists puts it, "discusses her rights, recusses her wrongs, and cusses the men." The woman who trained the men who fought and won the battles of human liberty and progress thought of her rights in a far different fashion, thus:

"The rights of women, what are they?

The right to labor and to pray,
The right to watch while others sleep,
The right o'er other's woes to weep;
The right to succor in distress,
The right, while others curse, to bless;
The right to love whom others scorn,
The right to comfort all who mourn,
The right to shed new joy on earth,
The right to feel the soul's high worth,
The right to lead the soul to God
Along the path the Savior trod—
The path of meekness and of love,
The path of faith that leads above,
The path of patience under wrong,
The path in which the weak grow strong.
Such woman's rights God will bless,
And crown her champions with success."

Steer clear of the new woman who longs to get in the "public eye" and make an independent career. She will spoil yours. Seek out, find and win the woman who is cut and fashioned after the pattern of her who made your father worthy and made her son a man. The writer, John Paul, tells us of the impression the new woman made on the wise old father of the sons of Adam:

"Abou Ben Adam, after Eve's decease,
Awoke one night from a long rest in peace
And saw within and up and down his room—
In what seemed trousers, but of ampler bloom—
A woman striding; not his Eve of old,
Bosoming of whom had made Ben Adam bold.
But to the vision bifurcate he said,

• "What wearest thou?" The woman turned her head

And with a voice that seemed indeed a stare
Answered, "The things new women mean to wear."

"And are you one?" said Adam. "Aye, quite so,"
Replied the stranger. Adam whistled low,
But cheerfully, and said, "In that case, then,
Count me, I pray, as one that loveth men."

Wise old Abou Ben Adam! May his tribe increase. Every normal and sound-hearted woman ever born into the world would rather be the wife of a good man and the mother of his children than to be anything else in the world. Once under my own roof, I undertook to tease Frances Willard about being an old maid. She stopped me short with: "I serve where I am called. I would rather be a wife and mother than have all the honor that has come to me."

"Look to yourselves." Come into possession of a sound body, sound mind, sound soul, and sound companion. So can you face confidently the present and the future. While the battle rages and the Great Commander calls, you can respond with all you are and all you can become. When the fight is over and the victory is won and the King calls over the names of his heroes, whether in the "line" or on the "staff," may you then be crowned with the wreath of triumph, as you are this day crowned with the duty and responsibility and opportunity of sovereign citizenship in the greatest nation of all this old world's wonderful history.

Church News

Bishop Candler's sermon preached at Emory and Henry College on June 9, the occasion of their recent Commencement, is reported to have been a remarkably brilliant and forceful utterance.

Gipsy Smith has been invited by the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Australia to conduct a revival campaign in that country during the year 1915. He has taken the matter under advisement and will give his answer at a later date.

Following the example of our Church, the recent General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church authorized all unordained local preachers employed as pastors to baptize and perform the marriage ceremony, where not in conflict with the laws of the State.

Dr. A. C. Dixon completed a few days since his first year's service as pastor of the Metropolitan Temple of London, the church that was made famous around the world by the ministry of Dr. C. H. Spurgeon. This anniversary was celebrated by special services lasting three days.

There is now talk of a union between the Methodist Protestant Church and the United Brethren in the United States. Committees are at work formulating a plan, and it is thought the outlook for merging the two bodies is encouraging. Together they would have a membership of over half a million.

A Fisherman's Institute, costing about $150,000 and provided with social rooms, dormitories, class rooms, and a gymnasium, has been erected at St. John's, New Foundland, and named for Dr. Grenfell. It is said that the splendid facilities of this plant will be at the service of working girls, as well as fishermen.

Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, who, with his singer, Mr. Alexander, has been evangelizing in Australia, is reported to be seriously, if not fatally, ill in that country. Dr. Chapman recently closed a great meeting in Dunedin, New Zealand, in which there were said to have been 860 conversions and 200 young men called to the ministry.

The Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church are paid $5,000 a year, and in addition to this are allowed $500 for clerical assistance, and $1,000 for house rent where no episcopal residence is furnished. The salary of the editor of the New York Christian Advocate is $5,000; that of the other editors, $4,000, and that of the publishing agents, $5,500.

The sons of two very distinguished Presbyterian ministers were recently approved as candidates for the ministry by the Presbytery of New York. One was Mr. Tertius Van Dyke, son of Dr. Henry Van Dyke, of Princeton University, and the other was Mr. Basil W. Hall, son of the late Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall, of the Union Theological Seminary.

Dr. G. C. Rankin, the esteemed editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, has lately been sorely afflicted in the loss of two of his children: Mary Frances, who died on May 25, and George Clark Stevens, who died on June 1. We pray that the Heavenly Father may graciously comfort and sustain this faithful servant of the Church and the other members of the stricken family in this trying hour.

A granite monument has been set up at the grave of the late Bishop Merrill who is buried in the Rose Hill cemetery in Chicago. The money to have this done was obtained from the preachers who were ordained to the ministry by Bishop Merrill, no one being allowed to contribute more than $1. Three other Methodist Bishops sleep in this same cemetery: Hamline, Harris and McCabe.

Dr. W. W. Pinson, chief missionary secretary of the M. E. Church, South, embarked for Japan at San Francisco on June 28, taking passage on the steamship Mongolia. He will spend several months in the Orient, inspecting our missions and familiarizing himself with the religious conditions existing there. It is well for our leaders to have first-hand information concerning the fields into which we are constantly sending men and money.

The Nashville Christian Advocate makes the following comment upon Bishop J. H. McCoy's Commencement sermon at Vanderbilt University: "The text was from the third chapter of John, the eighth and eleventh verses, and it was one of the most practical and at the same time one of the most eloquent and inspiring messages heard on any similar occasion." Everywhere he goes, this modest but gifted young chief pastor is producing a fine impression.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate states that the Northern Methodists will undertake to build a college at Washington, N. C., the town authorities having agreed to donate to the enterprise twenty acres of land and $5,000 in cash. One would think that these brethren have enough to do in the North without wasting money trying to invade the South. Our worthy contemporary pithily remarks that such a course is not likely to promote the cause of union.

It is stated that President Yuan Shi Kai, of the Chinese Republic, has placed his sons and nephews under the instruction of a British Baptist minister specially appointed by the Mission Board to be their tutor. In many pagan countries missionaries have long been praised for their work as teachers and patronized by the upper classes, who oftentimes are not Christians. This gives them a great opportunity to perform an enduring work for the Master.

The Polytechnic College of Fort Worth, Texas, is said to have matriculated 600 students during the session just closed. Dr. Culver, who was announced by the secular papers as having resigned, according to a later report, has been influenced to continue as president of the institution. A recent writer in the Texas Christian Advocate says of Dr. Culver's work in that State: "He has captured our hearts and compelled a recognition of his ability as a thinker, orator and college president. The mantle has fallen upon worthy shoulders. Polytechnic has, indeed, closed the best year in its history." We note that the Southwestern University, at Georgetown, Texas, has conferred upon this gifted ex-Alabamian the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

Marconi, the great inventor, has invented a wireless call bell, which will respond to a danger call so loudly that should the wireless opera-

Congressman R. P. Hobson, of Alabama, has announced himself as a candidate for the United States Senate in that State, to succeed the Hon. Joseph F. Johnston, the present incumbent. Mr. Hobson's reputation by no means rests upon the sinking of the Merrimac alone. He is a man of unusual intellectual gifts, of deep conviction, and of great force as a speaker.

The people of New Orleans who are so fortunate as to own stock in some of the great commercial institutions domiciled here, will receive during the next ten days more than $4,000,000 in dividends. Some of the commercial institutions will pay as high as 8 per cent on their capital. This is a fine showing, considering the depression caused by crop failures and the recent floods.

New Orleans has decided to wage an unrelenting war on rats. It has been proven that the rat is the cause and distributor of the germ of the Bubonic plague, and this disease is now running its course in Porto Rico, the rat-ridden island of the south. All ships entering New Orleans from Porto Rico are being inspected and ridded of the vermin before being permitted to land.

A determined fight is being waged against the cattle tick in Mississippi and Tennessee, and a fight is being begun in Louisiana to stamp out charbon among live stock. The cattle tick and charbon together have wrought great havoc to the Southern farmer, and, when these two plagues are destroyed, there is nothing to prevent the South from becoming as well known for its stock raising as it now is for its cotton, cane and rice culture.

A prize-fight recently held in New Orleans was called by a local paper "a piece of management" that will bring the promoters of boxing into deserved disrepute. It is time Louisiana was waking up to the extent of the mad reign of the sportsman in this State. Why should Louisiana permit such beastly brutality, when other States hold it as a heathen practice? And yet a bill is now pending before the State Legislature to permit 25-round boxing bouts.

There are 13,000,000 foreign-born residents of the United States. The question is asked by certain pessimistic persons: Can America Americanize this vast army of foreigners? Of this number 4,039,200 are from English-speaking countries and more than three and a half millions are of German ancestry. Thus with but five million Italians, Jews, Russians, etc., who are not in sympathy with American manners, it is an easy matter for the 85,000,000 Americans to Americanize our foreign-born population.

The solons at Baton Rouge are considering a bill, which, if passed, would make it compulsory for every pupil attending public school to pass a physical examination and to be subject to medical examination and treatment at the will of an appointed doctor. Personally we can see nothing of advantage in such a measure, but, on the contrary, it might cause those patrons who prefer calling their own doctor and who object to having another physician prying around their children at will, to patronize private schools in preference to the public schools.

In a recent address in London, Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, the German Ambassador to Great Britain, paid an eloquent tribute to Emperor William. Among other things, he said: "William II is more than an emperor; he is a true leader of his people in spirit, as well as in deed. He has guided them through nearly a quarter of a century and preserved an unbroken peace, and history will look back upon his reign as a remarkable development of the German people in every direction of intellectual and moral activity." We do not think the Baron's statement is at all too strong. William is very generally regarded as the ablest monarch who has sat upon a throne within the last quarter of a century, and the German nation has certainly made wonderful strides since his hand has been upon the helm.

A STATEMENT AND APPEAL

To the Pastors and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Within the Bounds of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference.

Dear Brothers and Sisters: I wish to call your attention to the statement filed by the Bishop and Presiding Elders appearing in the Advocate at recent date. The need of our brethren in the flooded district is very urgent. In most places there will be little if anything made. We ought to help them in their adversity. They cannot stay at their posts unless assistance is given. This collection will be especially for the preachers, to enable them to remain at their posts and to finish the Gospel to a people who are temporarily stopped from helping themselves. The preachers are urged to present this call at every place. Our people are urged to give as liberally as the case demands.

The reports from the preachers at the District Conference, recently held, showed that progress was being made in the district. Reports showed that up to that time 304 members had been received since Conference. So far only a few special efforts have been made, only the general round of pastoral work. The protracted meeting season is not on us. Let's press the battle and make this campaign mean more to and for the Church than any other. The high water has interfered somewhat with work anticipated for the year, but as far as is possible I will carry on the plans outlined.

According to the announcement and agreement made at the Preachers' Institute, I will not hold all the Conferences the third round. When the time announced comes round, if the elder does not arrive with the date, let the pastor hold his conference and make reports to me by mail. I don't know yet what places I will not make, as that will be governed by the time I will have to help in meetings where there is no other means of making them go without my help. I will give this time to meetings at needy places that are not able to pay for the work of an evangelist or helper.

Let us all work together with God for a great forward movement. Let the preachers and people at every point work for a payment of the Conference collections in excess of the assessments and away yonder in excess of anything heretofore done, because a large section of our Conference will and can do practically nothing. So let us who can come up to the help of the Lord. Praying God's blessing upon your labors, I am, Yours faithfully, BRISCOE CARTER.

HOME FIELD NOTES.

Seeing Louisiana at this particular time is not altogether an inspiration, for the awkward way the trains have of consuming hours in reaching places where the schedule calls for minutes makes one not a little nervous. I left New Orleans Wednesday morning, June 26, at 7 o'clock, bound for Lake Charles. The train I rode on, the Southern Pacific, was detained by way of Baton Rouge, and arrived at Lake Charles 16 hours after leaving the Crescent City. Thursday morning I reached the floor of the State League Conference, which was moving along under the able presidency of Rev. H. W. Jamieson, of Shreveport, with Lawrence Hoffmann, a Centenary student from Jennings, at the Secretary's table.

I cannot go into details concerning the program, but every part of it was interesting and instructive. The young people appeared to be in earnest about the work of the Master, and while they planned social features, study classes and material progress, the greatest demonstration of interest came when the subject of winning souls to Christ was introduced. Bowed down before the altar of God, every delegate pledged himself to win a soul for Christ during this year.

The Business session, which was held on Thursday afternoon, showed that the State Leaguers are in earnest about the young people's department of church work, and wisdom was exercised in selecting all the officers for the ensuing year. I regret to be unable to give a list of the officers, but I have just as yet received the list from the recording secretary. The Conference came to a close Thursday night. Dr. F. S. Parker preached an able sermon, after which the Lord's Supper was administered.

Friday morning, after saying good-by to Brother and Sister Maya in whose beautiful home I had been charmingly entertained, I left Lake Charles in company with a lively group of Leaguers bound for Lake Arthur, to attend the Lafayette District League Conference. It was impossible for me to go with them all the way, so at Mermentau I bade adieu to Dr. Parker and the rest, where the party boarded a launch and proceeded down the Mermentau River towards Lake Arthur.

At Lafayette I was particularly blessed by being entertained for a few hours in the splendid suburban home of Mr. and Mrs. Crow Girard. Brother H. N. Harrison, the popular pastor at Lafayette, added to the delight of the hour the value of his presence. What more could one ask? Lafayette is a beautiful city, the Girard home is a charming place, with its great library, yard of shade trees and rural setting presided over by its lawyer-banker-farmer lord and affable Christian lady, and Brother Harrison is such a person as the Spirit of God only could make out of a man.

From Lafayette I went to Alexandria, where I arrived at 4 p. m. and soon met and talked briefly with Dr. E. H. Werlein. Alexandria is one of the most delightful places in the whole South. The Methodist Church there is a magnificent structure and its membership is characterized with true Christian fervor and Methodist zeal. I would have been delighted to have been able to spend a week in the Hub of Louisiana, but sheer necessity drove me out of town at midnight.

The L. R. and N. train, on which I left Alexandria, was making its third run since the flood. To call it a "run" is an exaggeration, for it was a drag over soft tracks, through a land made bare by furious floods. As I gazed from the car windows and saw the havoc that had been wrought: plantations barren, cities silent and deserted, steeped in filth and stagnant water, and, withal, the odor of decaying vegetation, I could not help but call to mind the appeal Bishop Monmon and the presiding elders of Louisiana were making to the churches of Louisiana for help. (This appeal was agreed on at Alexandria, just two days before.) If all the members of each congregation in the South could have been with me on that morning ride, the collection on July 14 would reach $18,600.

I arrived in Baton Rouge and by 10:30 o'clock was in the delightful company of Rev. W. W. Drake and Dr. P. N. Parker. It is needless to talk about Brothers Drake and Parker. To merely mention that one has had the pleasure of being in their company is to invite the envy of all who know them. Brother Drake is doing a great work in Baton Rouge. I was permitted to spend Sunday with, to me, the most charming host and hostess in the State of Louisiana. I do not say this to cast a reflection on any of the splendid folk in whose homes I have been entertained. I speak for sentimental reasons, for I was entertained by my father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Gearheard of Litcher.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Conference was held in First Church, Alexandria, June 11-13. The majority of the pastors were present, but the number of lay delegates was small.

The reports of the pastors show that the Leagues are few, but the Sunday schools are numerous, and many are reported to be in a flourishing condition. Several adult Bible classes are doing good work. The work of the women is well organized in many of the charges. Some of the churches report the financial condition to be satisfactory. Four pay their pastors salaries by the month. Interest is shown in missions, and there is a prospect of full collections on several charges. Meetings have been held in a number of places and 214 and more have been added to the Church. There is much missionary territory in the district, and there was earnest discussion of those needy fields along with plans for their development. The character of each preacher in the local ranks was passed, and the licenses of the unordained renewed. J. H. Montgomery was recommended to the Annual Conference for re-admission. The delegates to the Conference in Monroe are H. H. White, T. W. Holloman, P. A. Swain and J. E. Williams. Alternates: J. H. Montgomery, D. B. Baker, C. W. Ward and C. P. Wilkinson. Columbia was chosen as the next place of meeting for the Conference.

Tuesday morning Rev. R. M. Brown of Boyce preached a very thoughtful and helpful sermon. At night the preaching was done by Rev. R. H. Harper. The last day of the Conference was devoted to the laymen, and Mr. V. L. Fulton and Rev. W. H. Coleman addressed the Conference in the interest of Missions. Rev. R. W. Vaughan, Rev. P. O. Lowrey and President R. E. Bobbitt of Mansfield College attended the Conference in the interest of their several works. A collection for the Divinity School was taken by R. H. Harper, and enough was received in cash and subscriptions to meet the pro rata due from the Alexandria District.

Four charges were affected by the floods. One of the pastors was not able to attend the Conference on that account. All have gone ahead with their Master's work. The pastor and people at Columbia have been going to church services in boats. Fish could be caught in Brother May's calf lot. He did not tell us what became of the calf. Brother Kelly has held services regularly on the Harrisonburg Charge, despite the flood, and has done good work among the refugees within the bounds of his charge. A number of the refugees have also been in reach of Brother Kleinschmidt. Marksville and Melville have suffered, too, from the flooded condition of the Atchafalaya country. These brethren and their people in the flooded districts still need our sympathy, our prayers, and our practical help. The people of First Church, Alexandria, are excellent hosts, and the stay in the thriving little city was very pleasant as well as profitable to the brethren.

R. H. HARPER, Secretary.

MORE LIGHT WANTED.

Dear Brother Meek: I have no desire to meddle with Brother Lipscomb's and Dr. Featherston's disputation about the teaching of our Church concerning the salvation, or rather regeneration, of infants. I call to mind the words of Solomon in regard to a matter of that kind (Proverbs 26:17). But there are some questions I should like to ask Dr. Featherston to answer, as follows:

1. Is it not a fact that John Wesley died a member of the Church of England?

2. When did he (Wesley) preach the sermon from which you quote—before or after the Methodist Church was organized?

3. When he said "our Church," did he not refer to the Church of England, and not the Methodist Church? If you answer the Church of England, then the mist is lifted; but if you answer the Methodist Church, do you not involve our great and honored founder in some difficulties from which it is impossible to deliver him?

But I must let the two brethren engaged in the discussion settle these questions, lest I experience the truthfulness of Solomon's words. Give us some light.

THE DANGEROUS DOOR.

"Oh, Cousin Will, do tell us a story! There's just time before the school bell rings." And Harry, Kate, Bob and Little Peace crowded about their older cousin until he declared himself ready to do anything they wished.

"Very well," said Cousin Will. "I will tell you about some dangerous doors I have seen."

"Oh, that's good!" exclaimed Bob. "Were they all iron and heavy bars? And if one passed in, did they shut and keep them there forever?"

"No; the doors I mean are pink or scarlet, and when they open you can see a row of little servants standing, all in white, and behind them is a little lady dressed in crimson."

"What? That's splendid!" cried Kate. I should like to go in myself."

"Ah! it is what comes out of those doors that makes them so dangerous. They need a strong guard on each side, or else there is great trouble."

"Why, what comes out?" said little Peace with wondering eyes.

"When the guards are away," said Cousin Will, "I have known some things to come out sharper than arrows, and they make terrible wounds. Quite lately I saw two pretty little doors, and one opened and the pretty little lady began to talk like this: 'What a stuck-up thing Lucy Waters is! And did you see that horrid dress made out of her sister's old one?' 'O yes,' said the other little crimson lady from the other door, 'and what a turned-up nose she has!' Then poor Lucy, who was around the corner, ran home and cried all evening."

"I know what you mean," cried Kate coloring. "Were you listening?"

"Oh, you mean our mouths are doors," exclaimed Harry, "and the crimson lady is Miss Tongue; but who are the guards and where do they come from?"

"You must ask the great King. This is what you must say: 'Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips.' Then he will send patience to stand on one side and love on the other, and no unkind word will dare come out."—Young Soldier.

MILLIE'S FLOWER MISSION.

Millie sat on the porch in her small rocking-chair, singing to her doll, Susan Alethea. The roses were in bloom, and the vines with their green leaves and sweet blossoms completely covered the porch, making it like a big, cool room, with walls more beautiful than any that the greatest artist in all the world could have painted.

In the parlor were two ladies calling upon Millie's mother, and through the open window she could hear them talking about something which they called the "Flower Mission." By and by, she began to grow interested in what they were saying, and stopped rocking to listen. She didn't know what a Flower Mission was, but she felt sure that it was great and good, whatever it was, for the ladies told of the flowers it sent to sick people, and to poor people, and to little children who had, some of them, never before in all their lives had a flower, and of how much the flowers did to make people better, as well as happier.

After the ladies had gone, Millie sat quietly thinking for a few minutes. Suddenly she bent down and whispered to Susan Alethea, "Let's you and I have a Flower Mission, too."

"May we cut some roses, mother?" she called.

"Yes, if you don't take too many buds," said mother; so Millie cut and cut until her apron was nearly full.

The big house opposite had no roses in the yard, and on the broad porch sat a young man in a wheeled chair. He sat there every pleasant day, looking so thin and white and sad, and he could not walk at all. Millie often looked over at him and was very sorry for him, and now he seemed just the one for her Flower Mission to help; so, before she had time to be afraid, she was running across the street and up the steps.

"I'm a Flower Mission, and I brought you some roses," she said. The lonesome look went out of his eyes as he took the flowers, saying with a smile: Thank you ever so much. I've just been looking over at them and thinking how lovely they were."

"I'll bring you some more some day," said Millie, "but I must go right home now," and away she ran.

"Be sure to come again," the young man called after her.

She did go again many times, and the merry little girl herself did even more than her flowers to brighten and shorten the long days for him.

Mother liked the Flower Mission plan, and suggested other people to whom she could carry flowers. After the roses were gone there were pansies, and verbenas, and phlox, enough for a bunch for somebody every day, and Millie's Flower Mission was busy all summer making people happy, and making Millie happiest of all.—The Sunbeam.

AN APPRECIATION.

A useful life is a valuable heritage. A good and influential man leaves a worthy legacy to his community. No man has been a greater factor in the internal development of this section of the Delta than Chester H. Pond, the founder of Moorhead. When he domiciled in 1890 on the banks of Moorhead Bayou, Mr. Pond was the first white citizen in this vicinity. Upon this pioneer location a village grew up. Having on his own enterprise constructed a portion of the Y. D. railroad, Mr. Pond promoted the transportation facilities that made possible the rapid progress of one of the richest districts in the Delta. He lived to see the fruition of his toll and enterprise. He witnessed a virgin forest converted into timber products, a wild-wood broken up into farms, a canebrake transformed into a town with good schools and churches. He was a seer as to the resources of his locality and a promoter of their utilization. His activities are writ in the history of this section.

Mr. Pond was a man of invention as well as of vision. After serving in the telegraph corps of the Federal army during the Civil War, he left Ohio, his native State, and went to New York City. There, in pursuit of electrical studies and experiments, he came in touch with Thomas A. Edison, whose confidence he shared. Of his several electrical inventions, the most notable is the self-winding clock, now in wide use.

Certain characteristics of the man are worthy of emulation. Brother Pond was a man of purpose and perseverance. He had a high aim in life. He set before him lofty marks to work to and to strive for. He pursued the course laid out before him with strenuous persistency and indomitable perseverance. He believed that where there was a will there was a way. Perhaps the most cardinal characteristics of the man were energy and optimism. He was thoroughly energetic—constitutionally active, and always busy. He possessed the peculiar power to concentrate at a given point and marshal along a given line all his energies to the accomplishment of an undertaking. This faculty magnifies the capacity for achievement, multiplying as it does one's resources. Brother Pond took a bold, bright view of things, and never doubted that "good will be the final goal of ill." For him "faith was the victory." Confidently he expected to-morrow to be better than to-day. In defeats, he read portents of unanticipated advantages. In temporal loss and weakness, he discovered spiritual benefits. At full eventide the curtains fell, and he passed on to a new employ.

Brother Pond was of catholic sympathies. His favorite hymn was "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love." While of the Congregational persuasion, he was a loyal communicant and patron of our Church. A bungalow erected for the use of the Primary and Junior departments of our Sunday school stands commemorative of Brother Pond's patronage and pillar work in our congregation. The works of his hands have been established in our midst. His memory will be cherished in Moorhead for many a day, and his name revered.

SEASHORE CAMP-MEETING.

41st Annual Camp-Meeting July 10-17—Special Rates on the Railroads.

The Seashore Camp-Meeting is known over a large part of Methodism to-day. Men have attended it from all parts of the Union. The religious services are under the direction of the presiding elders of New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile Districts of the M. E. Church, South, and these brethren will be assisted by the best preaching talent that can be obtained.

Preaching under the Tabernacle, Grove and Cottage Prayer Meetings and other religious services will be held during each day and evening, to which all persons on the ground are not only cordially invited, but are expected to attend.

Plan to come this year, and bring your unconverted friends with you. All Methodist preachers will be provided with board and lodging free of charge during the Camp Meeting.

A Delightful Summer Home.

There is not in all the Southland a more delightful place to spend the summer than on the Seashore Camp Ground. There are ample accommodations and good board.

Many men and women date the beginning of their aggressive service for the Master to a few days spent on the Camp Ground. There is a distinctively Christian atmosphere and the many assemblies as well as the Camp Meeting bring together some of the brightest men and some of the most saintly characters we have. There is no compulsion about attending any of the lectures or sermons, but they are in easy reach and there is a sane and healthy tone, that tends to vigorous thinking and wholesome living.

ATTRACTIONS FOR THE SUMMER OF 1912.

Annual Camp Meeting, July 10-17. The Camp Meeting really gives the right to exist to the grounds, and it was for this purpose that Christian men invested their money in this property, in order that men might come away for a season from their other cares and commune with God.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, July 18 to 28. This is the successor to the former Seashore Epworth League Assembly. It has simply broadened the scope of its work. While not undertaking to do especially evangelical work, but rather to train the young people how to work, this assembly usually numbers many conversions as an immediate result of its work. Some of the gracious revivals that have blessed some of the churches have had their inception in the new motives for service given the young people in this assembly.

Editorial.

VANDERBILT MATTERS ONCE MORE.

The following statement concerning the proceedings of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust at its recent meeting at Nashville, taken from the Methodist Messenger of June 21, will doubtless be read with interest by the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi:

The Vanderbilt Board of Trust at its recent session, in spite of the injunction now in process which calls in question the right of the Board to elect men to its membership except upon such terms as the General Conference may determine, proceeded to elect a number of new members and to reelect a number of those whose terms had expired. The new members are Messrs. Frank Washington, J. P. Washington, John W. Thomas, and A. B. Hanson, of Nashville; A. C. Ford, of Texas; Frank C. Rand, of St. Louis; and J. R. Kingdom, of Mississippi. Those reelected are Dr. J. H. Dye and Judge William Moore, of Arkansas; Mr. W. T. Sanders, of Alabama; and Prof. William H. Hays, of Tennessee. Dr. W. D. Bradford, of the Texas Conference, was one of the members of the Board whose term expired this year, but it will be noticed that his name does not appear among those who were reelected. As Dr. Bradford is one of the most eminent of the University's alumni and a minister of the highest standing for character, ability and influence in his State, the only possible excuse for the failure to retain him must be found in the fact that he has had the courage to differ from the majority of the Board in regard to the Church's rights in the University. It appears to us that this is not a very striking illustration of what is called academic breadth and freedom. The trustees seem bent on eliminating every man who fails to comply with their demands or agree with their policies. It is not likely that they will listen to our advice on any subject. If they would do so, we should say to them that this is not a good time for attempting to suppress any remnant of independence that may be left in the Board. The following protest, signed by Drs. Bradford and Chappell, was very properly entered upon the minutes:

"A PROTEST."

"We, the undersigned members of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, desire hereby to enter our protest against the action taken by the Board this day in attempting to fill vacancies in the Board, and we do this for the following reasons:

"1. We believe it to be illegal and in contempt of the injunction issued by the Chancery Court of Davidson County, Tenn., in October, 1910.

"2. We believe it to be inopportune and a further complication of an already difficult condition. While the suit is pending nothing certainly ought to be done to raise new issues.

"3. We are further of the opinion that the members now holding places on this Board are legally entitled to retain the same until a final adjudication has been made of all disputed matters by the civil courts.

"It has also come to our ears that the proposed alliance between the University and the Peabody College has utterly failed of realization and that the college will not build upon the ground purchased from the University. The result is that the University Trustees are anxious to recover the fourteen acres which they bargained away for a price entirely below its value, but are helpless to accomplish their wish. In this case, at any rate, it seems that it would have been well if the protest of the bishops against the disfigurement of the campus had been heeded. The Peabody College owns thirty acres adjoining the Vanderbilt campus on which they propose to erect their buildings. In the fourteen acres purchased from the Vanderbilt Trustees will be found the present residences of Dean Tiller and Chancellor Kirkland. These buildings will be used by Peabody College for offices. Thus pass out from the ownership and control of Vanderbilt University fourteen acres of the most beautiful and valuable land about the city of Nashville."

We do not know whether the action of the Board in electing members to take the places of those whose terms have expired is in violation of the injunction issued by the Court in 1910 or not. If it is, it would seem that the Vanderbilt Trustees in undertaking to override the restraining order of the Court, justly deserve to be censured. But with the view that they should voluntarily refrain from displacing the gentlemen on the Board who are loyal to the Church on the ground that propriety requires this while the present litigation is pending, we have little sympathy. The issue is squarely joined in the present contest, and as we see in the time has come when even temporary truces are out of place. We shall find no fault with the Trustees for electing every man who believes that the Church owns and has a right to control the University as fast as it is possible for them to do so; and on the other hand, if the Church wins the lawsuit, we think that every person connected with the institution who has sought to aid in taking away her property ought to be forced to sever his connection with it. This is a real and not a sham battle, and we think it is entirely proper that the victor should have the exclusive right to administer the affairs of the institution in an absolutely unimpaired manner.

For our part, we would have the Church and no others at the hands of the majority of the Trustees. They have unwaveringly shown their disloyalty to her authority, have evinced a willingness to resort to every possible legal technicality and device to wrench from her grasp more than $1,000,000 worth of property (to which by every consideration of justice and equity she is entitled), and it is but natural that they should desire to have associated with them on the Board persons who approve their course, rather than those who condemn it. In this connection, it is interesting to recall the fact that about two years ago they tried to add to their company Bishop Murray and Bishop Lambuth, but that they both asked to be excused. Dr. Bradford's dismissal for the obvious reason which inspired it, is a compliment to him and a high honor.

A DESERVED TRIBUTE.

The secular papers do not always honor and show appreciation of those who spend their strength and their lives to promote the moral and religious welfare of humanity, but now and then one of them pays a tribute to some Christian worker which has a ring of genuineness that proclaims it to be something more than a merely conventional utterance. An instance of this is seen in the following editorial on General William Booth's blindness, which appeared a few days ago in the Philadelphia Bulletin:

"The news that Gen. Booth will have to spend the sunset of his life in total darkness will be received with genuine regret the world over. The grand old man of the Salvation Army is one of the world's great men. He would have been a great man in any business he might have chosen to engage in. He has been a great man in the greatest work in the world—the uplifting and regenerating of humanity. It has been the fashion to sneer at the fantastic methods of the religious propaganda of the Salvation Army. It is crude, no doubt, lacking in learned depth and wanting in polish. But it has never been wanting in depth of charity, lacking in love of humanity. It has never preached theology to empty stomachs, nor been pharisaical enough to say to the poor and starving: 'Depart in peace, be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful to the body.' Gen'l Booth may be trusted to take his blindness with the same fortitude that has always distinguished his conduct. The inner light that has been his daily guide will not be withdrawn, and the promise that 'at evening it shall be light' will not fail him in his hour of sunset. Like St. Paul, we doubt not that he will glory in his infirmity. Like that warrior, too, the General has fought a good fight and has kept the faith. He has been a good soldier of Jesus Christ, and the world salutes him as he passes from the active stage."

OUR TOUR CONTEST.

Our Tour Contest is making headway, and seems to be awakening interest in many parts of our territory. Quite a number of contestants have entered the field in Louisiana, several have registered their names from South Mississippi, but as yet there have been but few entries from Central and North Mississippi. This is somewhat surprising since the opportunities offered are certainly most attractive. We trust that our pastors and presiding elders will seek to assist us in securing contestants in the places where none have volunteered to take up the work. We ought to have at least three or four in each presiding elder's district. Many young ladies are timid and hesitate to enter the field for fear that they cannot succeed. They need encouragement, and a word from the preacher would quickly enlist them. The trip that we are offering to Switzerland will be under the best chaperonage and will be first-class in every respect. So also will those to Lake Champlain. Remember, every person who secures as many as twenty-five new subscribers will be given a prize. The time when contestants may enter the field will be held open to the last month of the campaign, but those who are thinking of competing should forward their names at once. There should be no delay. We hope that every friend of the Advocate will aid us in securing a full list of entries within the next week or ten days. Let it be remembered that the main object of this contest is to put the Advocate into the homes of our Methodist people in Louisiana and Mississippi, and surely such an undertaking is worth while.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

We are under obligation to Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, our pastor at Forest, Miss., for some subscriptions sent in last week. In looking after the various other interests of the Church, he does not neglect the Conference organ.

Rev. H. A. Gatlin, agent for Whitworth College, and Rev. J. H. Foreman, our pastor at Bogie, Chino, Miss., were in New Orleans last Friday and favored our office with a delightful call. These brethren were on their way to the Seashore Divinity School.

Quentin Henry, of Henry, La., a local preacher student who won honors at Centenary College this year, has been appointed as supply pastor of the Pecan Island charge for the summer. He expects to continue in Centenary until he has completed the course.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Vicksburg, attended the funeral of Judge Adam Byrd in Neshoba County on June 24, and delivered a beautiful tribute to his deceased friend. The substance of this eloquent address appeared in the Commercial Appeal of June 26th.

Mrs. J. B. Streater and Miss Ella Rivers Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., are the appreciated guests of Mrs. R. A. Meek at her residence, No. 5914 Coliseum Street, this city.

The Louisiana Conference Board of Missions is in session this week in New Orleans. It is confronted by some very grave problems on account of the Conference having taken a forward step last December and the advance plans having been disturbed by the floods and crop failures.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson has been granted a month's leave of absence from his church in Crowley, and will spend the entire time at the Seashore Camp Ground. Brother and Sister Atkinson have received scores of letters of sympathy since the death of their little son, which was noted in last week's Advocate.

Rev. Elton Wilson, of Hammond, La., is holding a revival meeting at Greensburg, La., and reports state that he is delivering some of the strongest sermons ever heard there. Brother Wilson is an able preacher, and it is not surprising that the people of Greensburg are being awakened under the sound of his voice.

Rev. C. M. Morris, of Bayou La Chute, La., has placed the Advocate in every home on his charge where there is a Methodist, except three. He is exercising his wits to find a good way to put the paper in these three homes. We will leave it to Brother Morris to find a way, for he seldom fails to do what he undertakes.

Rev. W. L. Doss, pastor of Epworth Church, New Orleans, is on the program to conduct the vesper services during the Seashore Assembly. Brother Doss is one of the most consecrated pastors in the Louisiana Conference, and will no doubt bring some deeply spiritual messages to those who bear him at these early evening meetings.

Through the courtesy of the pastor, Rev. J. A. Goad, we are in receipt of a copy of the Year Book and Directory of the New Albany Circuit (North Mississippi Conference). It is well arranged, neatly printed, and contains much interesting information. We are grateful to Brother Goad for his kindly commendation of the New Orleans Christian Advocate in this annual.

"Too much cannot be said in praise of Mrs. Carrie West Smith for the high class of the entertainment," says the local paper in commenting on the Children's Day exercises that were held in Holly Springs, Miss., recently. The report further says: "The sum of $26.06 was realized from the collection, which is the largest amount ever contributed at a Children's Day service in this church."

Rev. W. M. Young, our pastor at Amory, Miss., reports a largely attended and interesting meeting at that place, in which he was assisted by Rev. V. C. Curtis, of Kosciusko, who preached with great acceptability. The singing was conducted by Rev. J. S. Duke, of Nettleton. A more extended account of the services, written by Brother Young, will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Mrs. C. C. Weir, the wife of Rev. C. C. Weir, our pastor at Franklin, La., has gone abroad with the party to whom the Picayune is giving an European tour as a result of the contest conducted by that paper last year. Sister Weir was one of the successful competitors, much to the gratification of her many friends, and we hope that she may have journeying mercies and a delightful trip in every respect.

The probabilities are that the Louisiana Conference will receive $7,500 in payment for its interest in the old Centenary College property at Jackson, La. Such a result (coming from the efforts of Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev. W. W. Drake and others) would be very gratifying, and the settlement of the long-standing Centenary College property controversy would bring relief to every member of the Louisiana Conference.

A great revival meeting was closed last week at Mer Rouge, in which eight members were added to the Church and the congregation was greatly revived. The Conference evangelist, Rev. A. W. Turner, did the preaching, and Prof. R. N. Jeffries led the singing. Rev. A. F. Vaughan, the pastor, joins in what seems to be the opinion of all who have been assisted by Brother Turner—that he is an ideal Conference evangelist.

The New York Weekly Witness of June 19 printed in full Dr. J. W. Moore's article, entitled "Pitfalls in Social Work," which appeared in the Nashville Christian Advocate some weeks ago. The Witness also made editorial mention of it, devoting nearly a column to a discussion of some of the questions with which it dealt. This was a well merited recognition of Dr. Moore's timely and able handling of this important subject.

The Greenville District Conference, which met in Greenville, Miss., last week, was an occasion of much interest. The attendance of both preachers and laymen was good, and the services and exercises were of a high order. Among the visitors in attendance were Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. J. R. Countiss, Rev. H. M. Ellis, Rev. W. L. Duren, and Rev. W. M. Williams, and Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick. The delegates elected to the Annual Conference are as follows: J. H. Sherard, J. H. Johnson, J. D. Barbee, and Judge Percy Bell.

Rev. H. F. Tolle writes that his people at Lake, Miss., have enjoyed a gracious season of refreshing recently. The meeting was continued for sixteen days, the preaching being done by Rev. D. E. Kelley. There were 51 additions to the Churches, 40 of them uniting with our Church and 11 connecting themselves with other Churches. Brother Tolle's account of this revival will appear next week, having reached us too late for this issue. Of his charge he says: "The work is moving along very nicely, considering the weather and other difficulties that we have had to encounter."

We are pleased to state that Mr. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, Miss., who has been suffering acutely with a gall-duct trouble for several weeks, and who went to Rochester, Minn., for treatment at the hands of the Mayo brothers about ten days ago, seems to have improved somewhat since his arrival there. It was the opinion of his physicians that only an operation could give him permanent relief, and it was performed on Tuesday of this week. A telegram from the bedside states that the operation was entirely successful. Let the brethren continue to remember this useful layman at the throne of grace.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, the efficient pastor of Centenary Church at McComb, Miss., gives the following interesting summary of the year's work: "We have received 70 members, have baptized 16 children, and have collected for all purposes $3500. We have in our Sunday school two organized classes, a Home Department, and a Cradle Roll; we also have a weekly teachers' meeting. Our prayer meeting last Wednesday night (June 26) numbered 55. Brother Scarborough has had a fine meeting at South McComb, with Rev. Lloyd Decell assisting him. There were 31 accessions to the Church."

The high water, backward season, and other natural causes which are responsible for the financial depression throughout Louisiana and Mississippi at this time, are also responsible for the somewhat small attendance at the Seashore Divinity School this year. The program, however, is equal to any that has ever been given there, and those who are in attendance are being greatly uplifted by the inspiring lectures that are heard both from the platform and in the study rooms. The undergraduates who are taking their Conference course of study under the Divinity School teachers are generous with praise of the good instruction they are receiving.

Rev. C. V. Briethaupt, of the Houma (La.) Mission, passed through the city last week en route to Chicago, and favored us with a pleasant call. He was accompanied by Mrs. Briethaupt, who also went with him on his Northern trip, the people having generously provided these faithful workers with the necessary funds to cover their expenses to the Illinois metropolis, where they expect to remain about a month. This is the first vacation that Brother Briethaupt has taken since his entrance into the itinerancy some five years ago. Just before leaving home he conducted a successful meeting, and took five members into the Church.

Brother D. V. Portis, of Wahalak, Miss., in remitting for his subscription, sends us $2, instead of $1.50, and adds: "Your paper is too cheap at the latter price." We have long thought this, but it is something unusual to find a patron making such a statement. Many religious periodicals which contain nothing like the amount of matter the Advocate carries charges $2 for a year's subscription and enjoy a good circulation. Still there are some who think that the Advocate ought to be furnished at a cheaper rate, which, under existing conditions, is impossible. As our regular price is $1.50, we did not accept Brother Portis' subscription at $2, but at the usual rate, placing 50 cents to the credit of our "Help Fund."

Dr. I. W. Cooper has received tentative plans for the Mary J. Lampton Auditorium, which is to be constructed on the Whitworth College Campus. The proposed design shows a structure 58 feet wide by 98 feet long, and 33 feet high. The suggested material for the building is pressed brick. It is to be seated with opera chairs, the lower floor being capable of accommodating 540 persons and the balcony 210. Plans have also been received for the new President's home, which will be quite a handsome and commodious residence. Dr. Cooper is to be heartily congratulated upon the fine progress he is making in improving the property and increasing the facilities of this historic institution. Never before was its outlook so bright.

Rev. A. W. Langley, our faithful pastor on the Verona charge, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "Our church building at Plantersville was so wrecked by a wind storm a few days ago that it will have to be taken down and rebuilt. It had been in existence only about four years, and its erection cost the few members that we have there quite a struggle. But they are a plucky little band, and have gone about the task of rebuilding with a determination to succeed and to have even a better house than the first." We regret to hear of the misfortune that has befallen this flock, but the commendable spirit which they are manifesting makes us proud of them. We pray that they may be richly rewarded for their fidelity and sacrifices in the years to come.

Information has reached us of the election of Mrs. J. M. Wyatt to the Chair of History in the Industrial Institute and College at Columbus, Miss. Coming without solicitation upon her part, this is quite an honor; and as this great institution is her alma mater, no doubt she will find it quite congenial to be again within classic walls. We heartily congratulate the Board of Trustees upon their good fortune in securing her services; they have certainly made no mistake in adding her to the already strong faculty of this most excellent college. Though it was expected that Sister Wyatt would continue her work of instruction at Whitworth, when this call came to her Dr. Cooper generously consented to release her from her contract with him. Mrs. Wyatt is a sister of United States Senator Thomas P. Gore, of Oklahoma, whose brilliant career in Congress has attracted national attention.

Mr. W. A. McKennon, the capable superintendent of the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, La., sent us a few days since a clipping from a local paper which states that on Sunday, June 23, the total attendance of this school broke all previous records and reached the number of 1102. It is affirmed that this is now the largest Sunday school in Louisiana, and inquiry is being made of the General Sunday School Board at Nashville as to the largest Sunday school in the connection, that this one may enter the contest with it for the first place among all the schools in the Church. Children's Day, which was celebrated on June 23, with a program rendered by the Elementary Department, is said to have been a most inspiring occasion. Arrangements are now being made for a service at which the officers and teachers, who number over 60, will be installed, and it is hoped to have it conducted by the Bishop in charge of the Louisiana Conference.

YOUR OWN CHURCH.

Be true to your own Church. Give it a hearty and loyal support by word and deed. Remember that it belongs to you; that it is a part of your religious life; that in it and by it you are being trained for usefulness here and immortality hereafter; that its honor is much in your keeping; that its growth and purity are affected to the extent of your influence by what you say and do; that the people who have faith in your word will look upon it largely according to your representation, and that with its good name and prosperity is bound up the glory of the blessed Jesus. Then do nothing to injure its reputation, or to weaken its power for good or mar its fellowship.—Thomas Parry.

PRAYER.

Prayer is the atmosphere in which the Christian lives; the key which opens the door of heaven; the wire which connects us with the great white throne; the gate through which we enter into the presence chamber of the Eternal; the highway on which we meet the King in his beauty; the pillar of cloud by day and of fire by night, which lead us through the wilderness of this world to the bright Canaan beyond; the valley in which still waters flow and Easter lilies bloom and in which He, whose name is Wonderful, revealed himself; the golden stairway by which the angels convey the longings of our hearts up to our Heavenly Father.—Henry Alexander Lavelly.

The Egyptian government has begun the work of redeeming 1,000,000 acres of wet land, an undertaking that will cost $15,000,000. Ninety per cent of the redeemed land will be owned by the government, and will be leased out to small farmers for the cultivation of cotton.

On Nov. 27, 1910, a bright, blue-eyed, baby-boy came into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Henderson. For nearly eighteen months he was the pet of the household, but the love of father, mother, brothers and sisters could not stay the hand of death. On June 4, 1912, little DAN THOMAS went to sleep to awake in heaven, where there is no more sickness, pain or sorrow. My heart goes out in loving sympathy to the bereaved parents. May our Heavenly Father comfort and sustain them in this time of sorrow.

S. A. RIVES.

HANNAH M. infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Millsaps, of Brown's Well, Miss., was born Oct. 12, 1911, and died Feb. 4, 1912, and was buried in Hazlehurst Cemetery, Feb. 5. This was the only child of fond parents. The babe brought sunshine into the home, and her early leaving has left many shadows. Bright hopes were centered in the beautiful babe. Its life was free from sin, and now she has entered an eternal life. The father and mother know that she is safe in the arms of Jesus.

I. W. COOPER.

On June 10, Miss RUBY McEWEN met an untimely death beneath the wheels of a train on the Illinois Central railroad. Even while the sound of the train could be heard as it left her lifeless form behind, her innocent soul had gone to God who gave it. She was born Nov. 27, 1898; dedicated to God by baptism, May 25, 1899; gave herself unreservedly to God and united with the church June 10, 1908, and lived a consistent Christian life until death. Her body was consigned to the earth in the McEwen Cemetery, ten miles east of Summit, Miss. Hers was a life of humble submission to God, and we all rejoice in the thought that we may meet her on the beautiful shore.

G. G. YEAGER.

HENRY PATEN YOREEL, one of our noblest and best young men, aged 17, the only son of a Christian mother, herself a widow, passed to his reward in heaven on June 10, 1912. He leaves besides his mother, one sister, Mr. Wear, a grandfather, Mr. Clay Hendrix, several aunts, and a host of cousins and friends to mourn his departure. Paten was a bright boy, a lover of Jesus Christ, a member of the M. E. Church, and one of the purest Christian characters I have ever known. He was always appreciative of his pastor and ready to talk on religious subjects. He had planned for himself a Christian education. He had spent two sessions in the Montrose Training School, and his plan was to graduate from that institution. While he had not told me, I think he also intended to go to Millsaps College. I had pictured for him a large and fruitful life, exerting a strong and powerful influence for righteousness in the world, but God knows best and he must have seen that it was wise to call him home. Life seemed to be fair before him. No one could but feel hopeful for a boy with such a consecrated mother, with means that were being so judiciously expended in his best and largest development. The mother had pictured her boy as a strong man, well rounded in character—a mother's ideal, stay, support and comfort in old age. God called him to a higher destiny in a better and brighter world, and the mother and other loved ones shall meet him again when they shall have served God faithfully to the end. A loving, tender son and brother has gone. I have lost a true friend. We shall always cherish his memory and we expect to see him in the sweet by and by. His pastor.

RESOLUTIONS.

(Resolutions of respect to the memory of Mrs. G. B. BROWN.)

Whereas, our Heavenly Father, in his wise and unquestionable providence, has removed from our midst our friend and beloved president, Mrs. G. B. Brown, therefore, be it Resolved:

That we deeply deplore her death, and tenderly express our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and assure them that she is not only a loss to them, but an irreparable loss to our Society, in which she took so much interest.

Signed in behalf of the Missionary and Ladies' Aid Society, Zachary, La.: Mrs. Jas. A. Montegudo, Mrs. P. P. Kennedy, Mrs. I. N. Doyle.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

The following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted by the members of the Methodist Sunday school at a called meeting held in the Methodist Church at 5 o'clock p.m., Sunday, June 16, 1912:

Whereas our Heavenly Father, in his wise providence, has taken from among us our sister in Christ, Mrs. ADDIE GARDNER DANIELS, therefore, be it resolved:

First—That we hereby express our profound sorrow over her death, and extend to her grief-stricken loved ones our deepest sympathy.

Second—That the Fernwood Methodist Sunday school has been deprived of a faithful worker.

Third—That the Methodist Church has lost a useful and devoted member.

Fourth—That these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of our Sunday school, and that a copy be delivered to the family and also furnished the local papers and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: E. H. Scott, P. H. Enoch, John Thorburn, Mrs. E. C. Edmiston, J. S. Scutt, Mrs. J. S. Scutt, Fernwood, Miss.

On the afternoon of June 11, 1912, at 2:15 o'clock, Brother JOHN MOORING FLY, of Mooringsport, La., departed this life. He was born at Jackson, Tenn., June 13, 1848, and moved to Louisiana while yet a youth. He was married to Miss Emma Garlick in March, 1874, who made him a true and faithful companion until his death. To them were born four children who still survive, and who were present at the time of their father's death. Mrs. R. T. Sharp, who lives near the old place, Mrs. W. B. Noel, of Shreveport, and Misses Era and Fay Fly, of Mooringsport, are the children. Brother Fly was happily converted and united with the M. E. Church, South, more than twenty years ago, during the time of the pastorate of Rev. J. S. Sanders on the Mooringsport charge. He served a number of years as steward, and was at the time of his death a member of the board of trustees, in which office he had served for a number of years. The funeral service was conducted on the afternoon of the 12th of June in the Methodist Church at Mooringsport, the writer and Rev. J. S. Sanders, officiating. His body was laid to rest in the Mooringsport Cemetery just back of the little church. A large number of friends and relatives were present. His death did not come as a surprise, as he had been in declining health for more than two years, and confined to his bed for four months. But while it was not a surprise, it was sad to give him up. "Yet we do not sorrow as those who have no hope." His suffering was intense, yet he bore it patiently, and often during the last few days expressed himself as being ready and waiting for the Lord to take him home. He was a kind and affectionate husband, a loving father and a good neighbor. Weep not for him, companion, children and friends. His suffering and toils are over. Only be faithful and meet him in heaven, the home of the blest.

Tidings From the Field

Wesley Charge (La. Conf.):

I will send you a note from the Wesley Circuit. We are planning for a vigorous campaign for the Advocate through the entire charge. You are giving us a splendid paper. It should be in every Methodist home. My people are poor, but they need their church paper as much as any. We expect to strive for an advance on all lines. Our prospects are good for an upward move on every line of service. Our congregations are increasing and the attention is splendid.—Thos. J. Martin, Sr.

Mt. Olive, Miss.:

Our church at Mt. Olive has closed a gracious meeting which resulted in six accessions on profession of faith, and a general uplifting of the membership, spiritually. Brother George Thompson, of Hattiesburg, did the preaching, and it was well done. George is a safe and sane preacher. Through the kindness of a big-hearted layman, our pastor goes to attend the Divinity School at the Seashore Campground. May the Lord increase the number of such laymen. Through the continued mercies of God, I have just passed my 78th birthday. My wife and I are very feeble in body, but get renewed spiritually day by day.—H. R. Caldwell.

Waynesboro Circuit (Miss.):

Dear Brother Meek: As it has been some time since I have written an article for the Advocate, I will try in my weak way to give to the readers of our paper a synopsis of what we are doing for Christ and souls in this part of the moral vineyard. Spiritually, I believe that the general state of the Church is better than it was when I came to the charge. Our altars have been crowded at a number of services with penitent souls who were seeking the forgiveness of sins, and with some seeking the blessed experience of sanctification. Our motto is, "Help somebody to-day for tomorrow we may die." Financially, our charge is near the standard. My people say that they are determined to pay up in full this year, and by the help of him who said that "it is more blessed to give than to receive," I fully believe they will. Our presiding elder, Rev. W. H. Lewis, was with us on June 8, 1912, at Big Rock, and held our second quarterly conference. Hebron, Fedora, Pleasant Grove, and Big Rock were well represented, and it was the best quarterly meeting that I have attended since I have been in the itinerancy. The things that made it so were these: Our presiding elder came to us in a fine humor, as he has always done; and I am happy to say that the spirit that was manifested among my people was just fine, and, best of all, the preacher in charge was in a happy frame of mind. We are all looking forward to a great awakening in our coming revival meeting season. We are praying that God will bless and save souls. My people are cheerful, and I am happy. Hallelujah!—Hilary Westbrook, pastor.

Holly Springs, Miss.:

It may be of interest to the brethren and former pastors at Holly Springs to hear something of conditions here; hence I write these notes. We have had a pleasant and successful six months among as loyal and responsive a people as it has ever been my privilege to serve. Our congregations have been large and the people have been exceedingly kind to their pastor. We have made some genuine progress in material things. The official board adopted the monthly plan for the payment of salaries, and each month's salary has been paid up to date and the presiding elder has been paid in full at each quarterly meeting. We have put the parsonage in thorough repair. A new roof has been put on it, new gutters provided, it has been repainted on the inside, a new bathroom constructed, and a $60 steel range bought. We now have one of the most comfortable and convenient homes in the Conference. We expended on these repairs about $364. We had an excellent Children's Day service and raised $26. We have raised and expended for all purposes up to date about $1300. We had with us Brother Dorsey, of Water Valley, Miss., two weeks, and much good was accomplished by his faithful and forceful preaching. We confidently expect Holly Springs to have a good report at the Annual Conference, and the preacher read out for Holly Springs need not feel afflicted, but may rest assured he will have a loyal and responsive people to serve. Our diligent young presiding elder is "making good" in every way, and is largely responsible for the progress and good conditions here and throughout the district. Best wishes to the Advocate.—R. O. Brown, P. C.

Forest, Miss.:

We have recently been blessed here with a wonderful revival. The Lord Jesus Christ showed himself a great Savior—great in his convicting, cleansing, and recovering power; great in his goodness, leading members out into a larger field of Christian activity, after first filling them with the Holy Spirit; great in the love which he shed abroad in the hearts of the people. The spirit of brotherly love and co-operation manifested was beautiful. Methodists, Presbyterians, and Baptists were so united that Satan had to resort to new tactics to keep the unsaved from accepting Christ. It could truthfully be said, "See how these Christians love one another." Rev. D. E. Kelley, our self-surrendered Conference evangelist, was with us the last fifteen days of the meeting, and preached with Holy Ghost power. God was in every message that he brought us. Christ Jesus was held up in his sermons in his beautiful life of sacrifice and service as the ideal example; he was also shown to be the Son of God, dying on the Cross to save a lost world; the sinner was made to feel deeply his guilt, and that the only way of salvation was that of the Cross. Some, at first, seemed to think that he claimed too much for the "blood," but after consideration and prayer they accepted the message. Brother Kelley showed himself sufficiently learned to impress the educated by his discourses, while those not so well informed understood and appropriated what he said. He is, furthermore, a great personal worker, and took part in the prayer meetings, of which we had two: one for men, and one for women. I have not since I have been in Forest seen anything like this great meeting. The church members of all denominations enjoyed a season of real refreshing and were made more consecrated than ever before; there were 46 accessions: 30 to the Methodist Church, and 16 to the other Churches. A number of family altars were erected, and the pastor was gloriously revived. We gave Brother Kelley a free-will offering of $130.—A. M. Broadfoot, P. C.

Tishomingo City, Miss.

Yesterday, June 23, was a red-letter day for Tishomingo City. We had our Children's Day service. Everybody came and brought someone else. Brother Grady Finch, the superintendent, is a very fine young man and presided in a manner that met the approval of all. Some thought that we would not have time to have a Children's Day service, but in his quiet and commanding way Brother Finch said, "we are going to have it" and proceeded to appoint the program committee. We used our regular program literature. To say that the committee did excellent work would be putting it mildly. The children rendered their parts to the satisfaction of all present. I think it was the best service of the kind it has ever been my privilege to enjoy. Others said the same. The collection was good, but not as good as we were expecting from the number of people present. We give the committee and the superintendent credit for the good service. I thank God for the privilege to serve such a people.—A. J. Henry, P. C.

Those Three Grand Prize Trips

Will be taken by someone. We now have several contestants just beginning. There is no contestant, so far, who has sent in any great number of subscriptions. The field is at present practically open. There are whole Districts in NORTH MISSISSIPPI Conference without a contestant, and yet one of the grand prizes will go to the North Mississippi Conference. Would it not pay as many as a dozen women to enter from that Conference? We want twenty more contestants to enter during the next week.

We want twelve from the North Mississippi Conference, five from the Mississippi Conference and three from the Louisiana Conference. Then we will have just the right sized army of workers to make it possible for each contestant to win a valuable prize, the Church to be greatly blessed by the circulation of Christian literature and the Advocate to have double its present circulation.

The Cost is Small.

A contestant need spend very little money to win one of these Grand Prizes. There is scarcely a preacher in either Conference but who will give free entertainment to any contestant who will come to his charge and canvas his membership. The travel connected with persuading one of these prizes will be an experience worth while, besides the new friends a contestant will make while placing subscriptions will be a source of pleasure for many years.

The Real Good

of this contest is derived by the Church and the new subscribers who are secured. The prizes are valuable, and the pleasure the winners will enjoy while seeing America and Europe is beyond description, yet to place a Christian newspaper in a home may win a soul to Christ, and a soul is more valuable than all the beauties of the world. The winner of one of these Grand Prizes may see the great Niagara Falls, bask in the sunshine surrounded by the illimitable beauties of Lake Chautauqua, and absorb the majestic splendor of New York City, or sail the high seas in company with the World's greatest Sunday School leaders, see the earth's garden of majestic snow-capped mountains in Switzerland, attend a world's Sunday School Convention and see other historic points in Europe, and at the same time have been responsible for the salvation of a score of souls by circulating the church paper.

Get in Line

right now, fill out the nominating blank and send it in, and go to work to-day to win a Grand prize.

COMMENCEMENT AT THE MERIDIAN COLLEGES.

By J W Beeson, A.M., LL.D.

The Meridian Male College and the Meridian Woman's College unite each year in their closing exercises. This year it was said by many that the Commencement exercises exceeded those of any previous year to this in the history of the colleges. Every program from beginning to end was of a high order of excellence. The department of expression gave the first program, which reflected great credit on the teachers. The School of Oratory and Expression reached high-water mark and is now furnishing fine teachers for other colleges.

The Grand Concert was pronounced the best that this great Conservatory of Music ever gave. The whole program would have done credit to Boston, Chicago, or New York, so it was said by good judges of good music. The Temperance program was very fine, and gave no uncertain sound on that all-important subject.

The Commencement sermon was preached by Rev. G. W. Matthews, of Georgia. Unlike the ordinary set sermons on such occasions, it was full of spirituality and set the key-note for the week. Brother Matthews preached every day and did much good in preparing the young people for the testing of the summer. This was said to be the most spiritual of any of the other Commencements of the colleges.

The graduating class numbered about 75 in all departments from both colleges and represented about twenty States and countries. It was quite a strong class spiritually and intellectually, and will be heard from for good in future years. Nearly fifty per cent of the graduating class from the Woman's College are volunteers and missionaries to the foreign field, and several of the leading young men, too, are missionaries and preachers. They are a high type of young men from every standpoint.

The address to the class by W. F. Melton, Ph.D., on "Life and Literature" was a gem of diction and gave great satisfaction. Dr. Melton was a boyhood friend of the Beeson brothers and has distinguished himself as an educator and author.

The Board of Trustees, through its president, Brother L. P. Brown, made a report commending the excellent work of the year and the remarkable growth of the colleges. This goes into history as the best year, in many respects, that the colleges have ever known. Many improvements have been made in buildings, grounds, faculty, curriculum, etc., until this twin college plant has become one of the leading private schools of the nation.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference met in Amite City on May 30. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. W. W. Drake, of the First Church, of Baton Rouge. Rev. C. C. Miller, the efficient and worthy presiding elder, presided. Rev. R. S. Walton was elected secretary. There were two sermons each day. The preaching was in power and demonstration of the Spirit. It was done by the following brethren: Drake, Howard, Harper, L. C. Wilson, J. M. Brown, Elton Wilson. Brother Miller presided with grace and ability, and to the pleasure and profit of the entire Conference. The pastor, Rev. H. W. Bowman, gave the Conference a most hearty reception and had everything arranged to suit the convenience of all. He makes an ideal Conference host. He was so obliging to the writer, that I shall not soon forget him. Why, Mr. Editor, he secured a big room and chair for me, knowing that I would not be able to sleep, or allow any one else to sleep much, if we had to sleep together, as I am so warm-natured that it requires a great deal of fresh air for me.

The people of Amite City received the Conference with open arms, and made us pleasant in every way. The devotional exercises before the opening of each session were very helpful. The Conference did a vast amount of work, and while the reports from the different charges were not as encouraging as we had hoped they would be, we think there was no room for complaint, all things considered. All of the different parts of the Church work were looked after and given proper consideration. The communion service on Friday night was very fine, indeed, and many felt the power of God. The Love Feast on Sunday was not as well attended as it would have been had it not been for the continuous rain, but those who were present enjoyed it. Dr. Cooper, of Whitworth College was a visitor and addressed the Conference. Brother Chalmers, publisher of the New Orleans Advocate, was present at the latter part of the Conference. Strong resolutions were adopted endorsing the able and efficient administration of Rev. C. C. Miller as presiding elder, and regretting the fact that the four-years limit makes it necessary for him to go elsewhere or change relations. The District Conference was one of the most harmonious and spiritual in the history of the district. The next Conference will be held at Wilson.

May God bless the brethren not only of this district, but throughout the entire connection! May all be faithful and at last hear the welcome words, "Come, ye blessed of my Father!"

COLFAX (LA.) CHARGE.

Just a few words concerning my work. We've held revival meetings at Colfax and Montgomery. Rev. S. L. Riggs did the preaching for the Colfax meeting, and it goes without saying that it was well done, and appreciated by many. The results were not what we desired to see, yet we are sure that good was accomplished that we know nothing about, and a number of the members were spiritually revived. Sisters Bartlett and Pardew did the preaching at Montgomery, which was well received. Several were converted, some were reclaimed, and the membership was strengthened. This was a good meeting. We are making some progress along some lines. We have some faithful people, who are helping to press the battle. The W. H. M. S. at Colfax is doing good work. Some new furniture has been put in the parsonage, and the fencing has been ordered for the yard around the parsonage. We are trying the Duplex-Envelope "financial system" at Colfax, and believe it is going to work very well. We expect to keep pressing the battle for lost souls and the furtherance of God's holy cause along all lines, hence expect better results.—E. L. Cargill.

POLLOCK, LA.

I will write a few lines concerning the state of our church at this place. We have a registered membership of about 74, and Rev. C. B. Powell is our pastor. The Sunday school, which numbers something over 100, is better organized and is more progressive than it has ever been. Brother W. A. Brown is the superintendent. Brother Powell is a humble, kind, and energetic man, and a good preacher. Our church is composed of people of limited means, but they are moral, law-abiding, and willing to do what they can for the church. Our town has suffered so much from fires that our citizens are considerably discouraged and the churches have felt the influence of these disasters, but we are looking for better times. We are expecting a quickening of interest under the leadership of our present pastor, who has the confidence and good will of the people. Our prayer meetings are increasing both in attendance and interest. I am glad to see the New Orleans Advocate so much improved. Every Methodist family in the State ought to take it. I took it 25 years ago, but, upon changing my church relations, ceased to be a subscriber, but recently I returned to the M. E. Church, South (the Church I love best of all), and sent for the paper again. I appreciate it very much, and, after I have read it, I give it to some one else. I have specially enjoyed the articles of Brother Lipscomb on "The Things Methodists Believe" and Brother Harrison's articles on the opening chapters of Genesis.—James H. Walker.

IN MEMORIAM.

Whereas, under Providence, Mr. C. H. POND has passed from our midst, and whereas, the Adult Bible Class of the Methodist Church at Moorhead, Miss., has lost a faithful and valuable member; therefore, be it resolved:

First—That we express our esteem and appreciation of the exemplary life and worthy character of our honorable brother.

Second—That we extend the heartfelt sympathy of the class to the members of the bereft family.

Third—That these resolutions be spread on our Minutes; published in our county and church papers, and a copy presented to the family.

Signed, B. A. Brady, J. R. Bright, committee.

Makes Piano Buying Easy

A BAND of TEN men can perform with the greatest ease a task that would be absolutely impossible for ONE man. Think of the TREMENDOUS POWER of ten bands of ten men each—or one hundred men! They could lift an ordinary house and carry it away. That is the principle which is embodied in the Advocate Piano Club—the overwhelming purchasing power of an army of 100 buyers! If you were to go into the market to buy seven car loads of pianos (100 instruments) you can imagine what kind of discounts would be offered you by the manufacturers. That is twice as many pianos as the average dealer sells in a year, and enough to keep a small factory running for three months. Is it any wonder that The Club saves its members one-third the cost on high-grade pianos.

But this big saving in price is only ONE of the MANY attractive features. The Club makes piano buying easy, safe and absolutely devoid of any possibility of dissatisfaction. Club members are protected IN EVERY DETAIL of piano buying.

JOIN THE CLUB NOW

Don't wait until the fall when money gets easy. Summer calls for music in the home. Join the Club now and let this sweet toned Ludden & Bates Piano bring melody, happiness and entertainment to every member of your family. The Club removes every possible objection to the easy payment plan. Read the following letters from Club members who are now enjoying their delightful Ludden & Bates Pianos:

"I have studied the plan very carefully and consider it a very liberal one. As to my Piano, I consider it a splendid instrument and am proud to be in possession of it." Mrs. A. BRANNING.

"I cannot express my appreciation to you for your generous offer. I think it the best thing of the kind I ever knew of. There are so many music lovers who really are unable to purchase so fine an instrument."

"I am very much pleased with the piano I purchased from you some time ago, and I think you can well name it my friends here."

L. H. BAXTER.

"I think it a capital idea. I know we would not have had our Piano if we had waited to have gotten the whole amount. I find no fault with the Club Plan at all, and as for the Club Piano, we are just delighted with it. All our friends say they would like to have one just like it. It is just a beauty, and we value it more than anything in the house."

MRS. E. J. LEWIS.

"Nothing could give myself and family more pleasure than to testify to the superiority of the Ludden & Bates Piano we have built as it tone, finish and all other points calculated to make a piano an article of pleasure and ornament in any home. If you ever have occasion to want me to recommend the Ludden & Bates Piano to any one in person, I hope you will not hesitate to call on me."

J. A. BROOKER.

"I wish to thank you for your courtesy in all our dealings, and also to express to you our appreciation of your sending us so good an instrument. It has proved satisfactory in every way. To our ears there is no piano in town which has so good, pure and sweet a tone as the Ludden & Bates. If ever you wish for an endorsement from this section of the country we will most gladly furnish it."

THOMAS J. BARTEN.

"I am perfectly delighted with my Ludden & Bates piano and fully satisfied. It is a beautiful instrument in every way and is just what I knew it would be—a grand, good instrument, and what all Ludden & Bates pianos are. I thank you very kindly for the courtesies shown me, and for filling the order so satisfactorily, and the trouble you have personally been to in regard to it."

C. E. BENNETT.

"I beg to advise you that I am highly pleased with the tone and the artistic finish of our Ludden & Bates piano. It will be a pleasure to us to recommend your pianos to all our friends. I have seen many instruments of other makes, but yours is 'a beauty' and one which everybody can be proud to own."

MRS. J. A. ROBERTSON, JR.

"I am more than pleased with the Ludden & Bates piano. It has a beautiful tone and a lovely case. Everyone that has seen it thinks it a beauty. I thank you for the pains you have taken in selecting it for me."

A. P. CANNON.

"I am well pleased with my Ludden & Bates piano. The tone, action and finish, inside and outside are a No. 1 in every respect. I cannot speak too highly for the Ludden & Bates piano. I want also to thank you for the gentlemanly manner in which you have treated me."

Editorial

NOT NEEDED IN THE SOUTH.

Under the caption, "Fraternity with a Vengeance," the Wesleyan Christian Advocate four or five weeks ago contained the following editorial utterance concerning the plan of the Methodist Episcopal Church to locate more of its Bishops in the South:

"The press dispatches announce that the Northern Methodist General Conference has fixed on Atlanta as one of the places at which one of their Bishops is ordered to make his residence, and this, too, when the work of that Church in Georgia is small and growing smaller, and when our Church has a resident Bishop in Atlanta. Such action as this accords ill with the loud professions of fraternity and the melting deprecations about 'raising altar against altar' which are so often uttered by our Northern brethren. Such action shows clearly that when these brethren talk of fraternity and union, they mean nothing more nor less than an attempt to 'absorb' the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We forewarn them that the policy of 'disintegration and absorption' failed when it had Bishop Ames, assisted by Secretary of War Stanton, back of it, just after the war, and it will succeed no better now when our Church is prosperous and strong. If our Northern brethren mean war, let them continue acts of this sort. If they are sincere in their protestations of fraternity, let such acts cease. This we say in advance of the selection of any particular Bishop to occupy 'the Atlanta see.' It applies to the action taken by the General Conference without regard to the Bishop who may be chosen to waste his time as a 'resident Bishop' here."

This candid and vigorous statement is timely. When Episcopal Methodism was rent in twain and the plan of separation was formulated by the masterful men who composed the General Conference of 1844, the clear understanding was that neither branch of Methodism was to seek to invade the territory of the other. Neither the Northern nor Southern body has lived strictly up to the terms of that compact, but the Methodist Episcopal Church has been the chief transgressor, and is also largely responsible for the extent to which it has been violated by the Church, South. The sectionalism and bitterness growing out of the Civil War has hitherto tended to palliate somewhat this unbrotherly rivalry, but that has now largely ceased to exist. It has been the cherished hope of many that, with the fires of sectional animosity dying out, the spirit of true fraternity might animate the membership of the two denominations and lead to a wholesome co-operation in the Master's work—not only in mission fields, but also in the home land. This latest movement of our sister Church indicates that the coming of that long-looked-for day is yet in the far future.

The only logical inference is that in increasing her episcopal force in the South the Northern Church intends to push her work more aggressively in this section; that wherever opportunity offers, she proposes to become our competitor and rival. The inevitable effect of such a course will be to stimulate our people to do likewise—to push across the border-line wherever they can find an open door. Altar will be built against altar, and money wasted that is sorely needed to extend the kingdom elsewhere. Already the main argument advanced for dropping the suffix, "South," from the name of our Church is that it will aid in establishing our work in northern latitudes. And one reason why we desire to see no change of name is because we are opposed to this policy of wasteful and hurtful competition.

Considering the expenditure of effort and means it has made, the success of the Northern Church in the South has been very meagre. In the eleven years from 1898 to 1909, its net gain among the whites in Alabama was only 325; and during the same period its eleven white Conferences in the Southern States showed a gain of only 9,000, while in the same field the growth of our Church was more than 300,000. And though the M. E. Church is doing a considerable work among the colored people, far the larger number of Negro Methodists are in the independent bodies.

As we see it, there is nothing to justify the efforts of the Church, North, in undertaking to intrude itself into our territory upon a larger scale. If the increase of episcopal sees among us means this (and what else can it mean?), it is, to express it mildly, a regrettable mistake. As we have said, it must result in an almost criminal misuse of finances and men. And certainly it is wholly incompatible with affirmations of a desire for fraternity and union. With federation in force in some sections of the country and weak denominations withdrawing from some localities, that others, unlike them in many respects, may do better work, the spectacle of one branch of Episcopal Methodism invading the field occupied by another branch which had a common origin and is one with it in doctrine, is far from edifying. If this action checks the growing feeling of good will between the two Churches and produces irritation and a strife for supremacy throughout all sections of the country, the responsibility should be placed where it properly belongs.

It scarcely needs to be said that in writing this we have no wish to be discourteous to the Northern Bishops who have been designated to come among us. So far as we know, they are men of high character and a capacity for usefulness. With them as individuals we find no fault; it is against the unfraternal policy of their Church that we are registering our protest.

A WRONG EDUCATIONAL TENDENCY.

It is easy to place too high a value upon degrees. It takes more than a D. D. to make a preacher and more than an A. M. or Ph.D. to make a teacher. Because one has attended some famous institution of learning, it does not necessarily follow that one is a scholar. Natural ability counts for much in estimating one's capacity for work, and so does character. The story is told that when Daniel Webster was graduated from Dartmouth College he tore up his diploma and threw the fragments away. That was going rather too far, but we think that disposition of it was preferable to framing it and hanging it up for people to see. The man whose chief evidence of competency is a piece of printed and signed "sheepskin" is in a bad plight. In measuring men, the world rightly uses the standard, "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Perhaps the greatest weakness of our American colleges to-day lies in the fact that their faculties are largely made up of mediocre specialists, instead of broad-gauged and really able instructors. Max Muller said: "One who knows only one language, knows no language." It seems to us, by a parity of reasoning, that the teacher who knows only one branch of study, knows no branch; for all truth is connected and can be fully known only in its various relations.

It is doubtful whether, with all the loud boasting over their improved methods and manifold excellencies, the output of our schools to-day is equal to that of the schools of former decades. The test of any educational system or institution is the men and women it makes. And where in Mississippi, for instance, are the statesmen of the stature of Poindexter, Robert J. Walker, Davis, Prentiss, Lamar, George, and Walthall? Where are the preachers of the accomplishments, eloquence and power of C. K. Marshall, William Winans, Robert Paine, T. A. S. Adams, J. J. Wheat, and Charles B. Galloway? Nor is it in Mississippi alone that this condition exists. The situation is the same throughout the nation. There are in Congress no Websters, Clays or Calhouns. We have among us no Jeffersons, Hamiltons or Marshalls. It is our scarcity of big men that makes Roosevelt and Bryan seem so large. We are living under the reign of the Lilliputians, and we think our educational methods are in part, at least, responsible for it. We need less glitter and show, and more subsoiling and solid work.

Nothing so broadens and uplifts one as contact with a great personality. Three years with Christ converted fishermen into apostles, whose outstanding figures are yet visible across the sweep of nineteen centuries, and whose influence is still widening. The most imperative need of our schools is not an increase of endowment and equipment, much as that would help; but instructors with capacious powers of mind and heart and character; whom to touch would be to become ennobled, and whose teaching would enlarge every faculty of the soul and awaken within it a passion for the highest and the best in life. A professor should be first a MAN, and then, if he wishes, a specialist. Bishop Galloway used to say with striking emphasis, "The question as to who teaches our children is even more important than what they are taught."

OUR AMERICAN YOUTH.

By Miss T. Sawyer, D. D.

OUR AMERICAN YOUTH—the young men and young women of this country—can their equals be found on the face of the earth? If not, there are their opportunities and responsibilities greater than those of any other class of young people in existence. Descended from splendid stock, whether there is running in their veins pure revolutionary blood or the blood in them is mingled with English, Scotch, Irish or other good foreign blood, our American youth comprise those of both sexes in our country who are in their later teens, or having passed out of their teens, are at the very threshold of manhood and womanhood. For the purpose presently in hand we ought certainly not to stop at the legal twenty-one years, but include with our youth those young persons who, though older, are just taking position and becoming active factors in the movements of the day. Some there are who are never really old—only so according to the calendar, for their hearts have been kept ever green and tender, their sympathies and ways commingling most easily with all young life. They show forth a spring-like and surprisingly beautiful life even in the midst of their wintry days.

However, we shall consider that by "our American youth" is meant the young life of the American nation as it comes to the front in the activities and achievements of our age. Though the United States is still a young nation, it has made marvellous advancement in Christian civilization, and in greatness, dignity, and power it stands easily, if not at the very head, still at the fore among the leading nations of the earth. In the light then of the unsurpassed record of glorious achievements made by our fathers and mothers—the men and women of before and since the War between the States—it is justly expected of our American youth of to-day, working up from their superior vantage ground, that they will do greater things than the world has yet dreamed of and cover themselves and their country with imperishable glory. The spirit of the great and good in the galaxy of America's sons and daughters who have wrought so grandly in the past of her history should be moving and regnant in the young American men and women of this day, making it imperative upon them to prove themselves worthy descendants of such illustrious ancestry by pushing that civilization for which our country stands to the utmost of dominion and power.

Never in the history of our race has there been a period more propitious for grand, heroic actions, for work uplifting plans and deeds, and never before have the youth of any land had such splendid opportunities for making the most possible of themselves, and for impressing and elevating and saving their fellows.

"Knowledge is power," and knowledge has been amazingly increased throughout the land, light for head and heart and soul streaming from thousands of founts of knowledge, so that now it is quite impossible for even the most ill-placed and misinformed citizen to longer hide away in the dark folds of absolute ignorance and hopeless degradation. The sources of information, helps to varied knowledge, opportunities for becoming familiar with all human invention, facilities for the quick and thorough mastery of the sciences and of languages, dead and modern, and the aids, many and helpful to the understanding of God's Word and also the lesser literary works of men—all these are so numerous and so much at hand, that American young men and women, intent on their own and the improvement of others, can hardly go amiss, and are without excuse if they are not mighty performers of noble deeds, even passing far beyond their fathers in their achievements.

So much has been done already that, at the first blush, it seems as if there were little left for our American youth to do. Our predecessors worked almost unaided and with crude and misused tools in hand, and yet they made for us the superior advantages that we now enjoy. But there is plenty yet to be done. There are still many millions of acres in our fair land untouched by plow or man, and they will not be reaped and stored into smiling harvests of grain and cotton and cane for many years to come. So all the fields of human endeavor have not been worked up and covered by those who have gone before us. There is still in the world of human enterprise very much of virgin soil inviting our American youth to their best output of brain and muscle and righteous living. True, Edison, the wizard, still lives and works his wonders, but there stretch beyond him and all others many leagues of unexplored sea; and there are yet mighty forces to be discovered and utilized in the ever-coming years.

Each one of our American youth has in himself a continent to work up, and in his country proper, as it lies between the oceans, untraveled by its wealth of possessions and possibilities, and with its outside territory, he has a vast field calling for his best endeavors. But in his adventurous ardor and with exultant spirit, seeking to span the whole wide world, all lands may be the scenes of his exploits. Very many and great, therefore, are the opportunities of our American youth, and hence their responsibilities are immense. Descendants of those who planned and unfolded for all mankind the best of blood courage bravely in their veins, an essential integral part of this brainless of nations, and standing in this their day in the midst of grand and glorious opportunities, we assuredly believe that they should, by the mere logic of the situation, mold the very thought, trend, swing and life of the world itself. Our American youth, using their opportunities and meeting their responsibilities ought to carry in all that is noblest and best in human nature, our entire race upon their broad shoulders.

They are undoubtedly and directly responsible for the maintenance of the American Sabbath as against the Sundry of continental Europe; for the maintenance of our glorious system of free public instruction; for the prohibition of the liquor traffic and the consequent protection from its baleful influence of our homes and women and children; for the destruction of all corruption and rot in Church and State, and the maintenance of the purity of civil and religious life.

And beyond all this, our American youth owe it to the world to present to all peoples and nations and tongues a model manhood and a model womanhood. When we consider whence we came, who we are, and what because of our opportunities, is expected of us, we verily believe that on American soil and out from the ranks of our American youth should come forth the strongest, truest, noblest of men and the sweetest, purest and best of women. Ours is the glorious task to be living in this stretch of time, and with so much at hand to inspire and help us to noblest deeds. "Heart within and God over head," may we every one live for God and home, and every land—aye.

For the cause that needs assistance.
For the wrong that needs resistance.
For the future in the distance.
And the good that we can do.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE AND ITS COMMENCEMENT.

Dear Doctor Meek:

Will you let me tell your readers something of Mansfield College and its recent Commencement? For the past five months I have been living in the college, while "Old Nick" has been going to and fro, and up and down in Louisiana, seeking to interest people in the affairs of the college. Heretofore I have belonged to that class of wives who lose their breath whenever husband is out of sight, but have endured his absence with considerable equanimity, owing to the pleasant surroundings in this delightful place. I have never before lived in a place where so many nice people were congregated. It makes one feel like starting to school again, and I felt as if I had renewed my youth when I entered a French class with my small boys. From personal experience, I can say the college has at least one thorough teacher.

Do you know that Mansfield College is on the highest hill in Louisiana, overlooking the rest of the State? The situation is perfect. While located in the heart of the town of Mansfield, on its campus of wide extent, it is surrounded by forest trees of ancient growth, pine, oak, cedar, cypress, hickory and sycamore. Strikingly beautiful are the white-stemmed sycamores, the tender green of their leaves mingling with the olive and brown of the pine and cedar. I read a little poem the other day that very nearly describes the scene.

On a hill-top towered,
By green forests bordered,
Seen by distant or lone passer-by,
Nestled the clouds or the deep blue sky,
Stood my Alma Mater, the College on the Hill.
Looked large through leafy wood,
Strangely towering stood,
Mysteriously mysterious,
Delightfully imperious,
Loved Alma Mater, the College on the Hill."

If the parents of the State could see this place they would at least give it a trial before sending their girls to some distant college.

The College comprises six buildings. The original college building is a wooden structure with an imposing Greek portico, built by Dr. Thwait, the founder. It is now the dining hall. The main building is beautiful colonial style and of brick, has on the first floor a magnificent reception hall, a parlor, office, and music and class rooms. The second and third floors are dormitories. During the Civil War this building was converted into a hospital. And even now one of the rooms is known to the girls as "ghost room" and dark stains are pointed out on the floor as "blood stains." Mysterious sounds are imagined in the awesome calm of night, and there is a tale of a one-legged ghost that thumps through the halls on hollow heels. There is another brick building, "the annex" quite as large as the main building, erected about eight years ago to meet the demand both for additional recitation rooms and dormitories. All of the rooms occupied by the girls are large and airy. In fact, to me, for some years a dweller in those city houses known as the "double-barrelled shot gun" variety, they appear tremendous. Jacob Rife says it is just as much a crime to kill a man with a house as with an axe, but there is no danger that the Mansfield College girls are going to be killed with poor ventilation. The buildings are lighted with electricity, and the college has its own water supply and sanitary plumbing throughout.

The health of the girls for the past year was almost perfect. While, of course, "boarding schools never have anything to eat," the girls on "nothing to eat" gained from 5 to 20 pounds in a few months.

The curriculum is high and meets the requirements of the General Board of Education for colleges for girls. The Methodists of the State are to be congratulated on the election of Prof. R. E. Bobbin to the presidency of the college. Mr. Bobbin has been for years prominently identified with educational work in Louisiana and for several years has been connected with the State Normal College at Natchitoches. The Professor and his charming family have already taken up their residence in the college, and from the way things are going you would think that school is going to open to-morrow.

I was much interested in the Commencement exercises. They reminded me of Commencement occasions in Jackson, La., during the palmy days of Millwood and Feliciana Institutes and Centenary College. The Primary Department's entertainment, under the direction of Miss Ensign and Mrs. Liverman, had the largest audience probably of the series, and this notwithstanding that an admission fee was charged. Miss Kyle's violin concert was unique and well attended. The sacred concert Sunday night demonstrated that Mrs. Egan, who is at the head of the music department, knows how to bring out all the music that is in a girl. Especially beautiful were the processional and recessional of the Sunday morning service. Dr. S. H. Werlehn, of Alexandria, preached a sermon that was both eloquent and appropriate, emphasizing the ideals of true womanhood.

Monday morning the Alumnae held a meeting that was interesting and enthusiastic, even though not large. This association has recently fitted up the college library. Monday night the voice pupils, assisted by Miss Griffin, the teacher of expression, gave a concert that was wholly enjoyable, even by folks who are not "lovers of music." Tuesday at 10 a. m., the impressive graduating exercises were held. I wish every father and mother in the State could have heard Dr. C. W. Carter, who delivered the literary address, discuss the subject of education. The two graduates, Miss Elsie Hawkins and Miss Frances Page, acquitted themselves with éclat, reflecting credit on the institution. Prof. A. B. Peters, who retires from the presidency of the college, rounded out his good work with an address to the graduates that was warmly complimented. Miss Page, one of the graduates, belongs to a third generation who have graduated here. In truth, the graduates of this year go out to take their places in the ranks of a goodly number of splendid women. Among the alumnae I find the name of Miss Ellen K. Burruss, who became the wife of Bishop Linus Parker. Another name is that of the well-known authoress, Julia Truitt Bishop. There are the names of many other women who have glorified motherhood and dignified life in many phases. I find myself half untrue to my own alma mater, wishing that I might have been numbered among these.

SHOULD BE RAISED AT ONCE.

To the Preachers of the Louisiana Conference:

I am instructed by the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, through its Executive Committee, to request that the Home Mission Assessment be raised as early as possible, and remitted to our treasurer, S. H. Meyer, 116 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La. We make this request in order to meet the demands made on the Board. The Board promised to advance part of the salary of the Conference evangelist, and as yet the returns from the meetings held have not equaled the amount advanced. Hence the need of additional funds. If you cannot now secure your total assessment, send what you can.

Our evangelist, Rev. A. W. Turner, while greatly hampered during the first months of the year, is meeting with such success that we feel satisfied in maintaining him. So far, he has had about 200 accessions, and has had good collections at the last three or four places visited. This work is far too important for the Board to be easily discouraged. We appeal to the brethren to stand by us in our attempt to carry out the plan projected.

SEASHORE ASSEMBLY FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

The combination of serious Christian work and summer vacation has been receiving yearly demonstrations of value for the past thirteen years at the annual sessions of the Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, formerly known as the Seashore Epworth League Assembly. The Assembly has held its annual meetings at the famous Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., from the beginning, and has been the means of making the summer vacation count for spiritual values to many young men and women who have there felt the strong influences of Christian fellowship, while they enjoyed the restful atmosphere of the Mississippi Gulf Coast and the recreations that are there to be had in the way of boating, bathing, fishing, strolling, and otherwise using the freedom and variety afforded by this beautiful region.

The Assembly has been the means of fitting hundreds of persons for effective work for the kingdom of God, especially through the Epworth League, and those who during the session decided to devote their lives to the service of Christ are to be found upon the mission fields, in the city churches, and in the deaconess ranks to-day. No session has passed without the fruit of souls won for Christ; in fact, though not primarily evangelistic, the Assembly has been especially blessed in leading young men and women into the Christian life, as well as in training for that life those who had already entered it.

The general plan of the programs for the Assembly has been that of spending the forenoons in three or four periods of class work in the Bible, Missions, methods of Christian work and Junior and Senior Epworth League organization and conduct. Among the teachers have been some very eminent men and women, such as Professor Thomas Carter, Dr. C. P. Atkinson, Miss Mabel Head, Dr. E. H. Rawlings, Dr. John A. Rice, Dr. A. F. Watkins, and others; Miss Daisy Davies, Miss Emma Tucker, Mrs. Lipscomb and Mrs. Moody have been among the leaders of the devotional meetings, especially the vesper services, which have been greatly blessed as occasions of decision for Christ. The number of eminent men who have taken part in the platform exercises is large, and the impressions of a lofty aim and a spiritual atmosphere have always been made upon those who attended the evening platform meetings. The Sunday services are the great occasions, the pulpit being usually supplied by the great men of the Church.

The Assembly was organized fourteen years ago under the leadership of Rev. George D. Parker, now a missionary in Brazil, assisted by Professor Thomas Carter, Professor Henry Beach Carré and others, with the especial purpose of training leaders for the work of the Epworth League. It was perceived by these pioneers in Assembly development that the key to the Epworth League work is the leader. For the training of leaders their plans were made and with that end in view they have been adhered to with but few modifications. Pastors who find themselves hampered in their efforts for the training of their young people may send picked young men and women to this Assembly for training. Epworth Leaguers who are longing for a more useful life, having the divinely implanted impulse to serve, but not knowing how best to realize their desire to do more for the Master, here learn the art of service. The work is made exceedingly practical as the teachers are those who know their subjects at first hand. Especial attention is given to personal evangelism, and no success is scored unless soul winners go from these gatherings to bring men to their Master.

The session for this summer begins July 18, a day after the conclusion of the annual camp meeting, and continues until the 28th. Twenty-two speakers and teachers will take part in the program, including those who are to have charge of the music. The course in Junior Epworth League work will be especially strong under the leadership of Mrs. Sue Stuart Brame, of Jackson, Miss. The departments of League work will be conducted by Rev. A. I. Townsley, Miss Ethel Beane of Montgomery, Ala., and Dr. Parker, the General Secretary of the Epworth League. Miss Louise Taylor, of New Iberia, La., and Miss Mabel Head of Nashville, Tenn., will have charge of the Mission Study Classes. The Bible course will be under Dr. Parker. Personal work will be given by Dr. G. B. Winton, editor of the Missionary Voice, and the music will be in charge of Rev. C. N. Guice, of Meridian, Miss., and Miss Maud Carradine Westbrook, of New Orleans. The full list of speakers and preachers will be found in the Program, which will be sent on application to F. S. Parker, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. Arrangements should be made for rooms and hoard by correspondence with Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss. The Assembly is sustained entirely by voluntary offerings, and the expense of those taking advantage of its opportunities is limited to travel and board and the gate fee of one dollar for the season of ten days. The railroad rates are one and one-third fare for the round trip. Board may be had at one dollar a day.

F. S. PARKER.

HIS PLAN.

By S. D. Gordon.

Somebody has supposed the scene that he thinks may have taken place after Jesus went back to heaven. The Master is walking with Gabriel, talking intently, earnestly. Gabriel is saying: "Master, you died for the whole world down there, did you not?" "Yes." "You must have suffered much," with an earnest look into that great face. "Yes," again comes the answer in a wondrous voice, very quiet, but strangely full of deepest feeling. "And do they all know about it?" "Oh, no; only a few in Palestine know about it so far." "Well, Master, what is your plan? What have you done about telling the world that you have died for them? What is your plan?"

"Well," the Master is supposed to answer, "I asked Peter and James and John, and little Scotch Andrew, and some more of them down there, just to make it the business of their lives to tell others, and the others others, and yet others, and still others, until the last man in the farthest circle has heard the story, and has felt the thrilling and the thrilling power of it."

And Gabriel knows us folk down here pretty well. He has had more than one contact with the earth. He knows the kind of stuff in us. And he is supposed to answer, with a sort of hesitating reluctance, as though he could see difficulties in the working of the plan, "Yes—but—suppose Peter fails. Suppose after awhile John simply does not tell others. Suppose their descendants, their successors away off in the first edge of the twentieth century, get so busy about things—some of them proper enough, some of them may not be so proper—that they do not tell others; what then?" And his eyes are big with the intenseness of his thought, for he is thinking of the suffering, and he is thinking, too, of the difference to the man who hasn't been told. "What then?"

And back comes that quiet, wondrous voice of Jesus: "Gabriel, I haven't made any other plans,—I'm counting on them."

Whitworth College,

BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

Miss Rowan is one of the most prominent educators of Mississippi. Read carefully her testimonial. Parents who are interested in the education of their daughters should write for catalogue:

"It is a well-known fact that Whitworth College occupies a most conspicuous and important position in the educational advancement of South Mississippi.

"During the session of 1911-1912 I had occasion to observe the management of this institution and to note the training which the students receive. I have been forcibly and favorably impressed, not only with the thoroughness of the course of study, but also with the care which is expressed in guiding young ladies into avenues of usefulness and refinement. Especially do I commend the attention the health of the students and the kind and sympathetic treatment shown them along this line. Moreover, the painstaking care which is exercised toward bringing out all that is good within the young women who attend this College is a most praiseworthy feature.

"The harmony prevailing between faculty and student-body is a feature indicative of progress and advancement, under which Whitworth can but grow in usefulness.

"I cannot praise too highly the noble Christian spirit that permeates the atmosphere of this school, and to any young lady contemplating a college course, I unhesitatingly say that she will be amply repaid for all time and money which she might spend at Whitworth.

"Respectfully,

"JEANIE ROWAN.

Digest of the Above Statement.

We think the time has come when a complete statement should be made of what each Conference has contributed, how it has been done and to what extent each Conference is reaping benefit from the Connectional Superannuate Endowment Fund. The showing above has been prepared with care and may be relied upon. It will be interesting and in some respects surprising.

The "Dallas Subscription" has been distributed to the Conferences from which the contributors came.

The total sum received from all the Conferences by all methods is $148,757.25. The amount received from the assessing Conferences is $41,251.21. From these figures it may be seen that a little more than one-third of this total sum has been paid on assessments. The average time which the assessment plan has been in operation is only three years, while by voluntary contributions it required ten years to collect not quite two-thirds of what we have from all the Conferences, while not all of them have had assessments. Our cash assets April 1, 1912, were $265,497.97. The total amount disbursed to beneficiaries is $21,143.

The total income from investments, after paying all expenses, is $41,125.82. Do endowment funds pay? About one-fifth of our total cash assets has come from interest on investments.

This is a Connectional Fund. The great increase of contributions made and of benefits received by the several Conferences is evident. We must insist on the active co-operation on the part of all the Conferences following the most successful method heretofore employed.

JOHN R. STEWART,
Secretary-Treasurer

HER SERVICE APPRECIATED.

The Woman's Missionary Annual Conference has just closed its session in Nashville. It was a most delightful and harmonious gathering, being completely dominated by the spirit of the Mission. The resignation of our very much beloved president, Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, was a feeling of sadness over the Conference. She had served as an officer in the different places ever since the organization of the Woman's Home Mission Society. She had been consistently elected for about eighteen years. These long years of loyalty of unflinching faithfulness to duty, of patience and gentle firmness during trying hours of uncompromising sinfulness and right industry, together with her sweet, Christian character, had deeply endeared her to the women of the Missionary Society all over Louisiana. She would have been re-elected at the recent session, but she stood firmly against it. She had been president of the organization for the last six years and positively would not be re-elected. She was the first president of the Missionary Society after the union of the Home and Foreign departments and on motion of Mrs. C. J. Miller, Mrs. Kennedy was elected life president, or president emerita of the Missionary Society.

During the six years of her wise, gentle, but firm management, the Society prospered wonderfully. She leaves the Missionary Society of the M. E. Church South in Louisiana in a thoroughly organized and splendid condition in its every department. With deep regret the women gave her up as their president.

A MISSIONARY WORKER.

GOD'S PROGRAM FOR THE WORLD.

(The following are notes taken by Mrs. Robert Wynn of Crowley, while Miss Mabel Head was delivering an address on the above subject at Nashville during the recent Woman's Missionary Meeting there.)

Everyone wants the resources of God. Many accept the good things of God just as the pauper. Until within the last few years we have looked upon the great task that lay upon the world as something that lay in the distance, but in the last few years we have come to understand something about the great number of people yet to be reached and we must make our motto read, "The resources of God are promised only to those who undertake the program of God, which is the speedy evangelization of the world." It means something to live in a time when we shall wake up to the last great battle of the conflict. One of the weak points in false religions is that they exclude the women and girls.

All the missionary work of the churches in this country, great and splendid as it has been, has been done by less than one-third of the people who have their names on the church roll.

Miss Head spoke of visiting a magnificent Buddhist temple in which were gathered a large congregation of Americans, with only eighteen or twenty Orientals, when three American young men, strong, capable, seemingly intelligent, every one a college graduate, took the vows of the Buddhist priesthood, saying that they had found that there was nothing of reality in the religion of Jesus Christ, and that they would give their time and their all to promote Buddhism. Later there were five other young men who took the same vows. She said: "Sad as was that ceremony, strange and queer as all that service was, when I realized that all those people were gathered there to worship Buddha, I had to realize that they were doing it because for and I, who love the Lord Jesus Christ, had been as slow in carrying out the Lord's program for the world's redemption."

She spoke in detail of the marvelous interest in Bible study and prayer in Korea, giving also the touching story of Ling Su in China, who, as a tiny baby, starting and dying, was placed up with her mother, who had trapped a great great cat, carrying her little daughter in order to save the missionaries' children. The mother died when taken to the hospital, and Ling Su grew up in the school. She became a nurse, then a physician, taking a post-graduate course, and went with Mrs. Campbell to Seoul. She had a temper which had given her some trouble. One day she came to Mrs. Campbell and saying said she must give up all her work as she had been angry again. Mrs. Campbell assured her she would be forgiven if she talked with her Father about it. So she remained in her room three days in supplication, taking no nourishment but bread and water once a day. At the end of that time she came forth radiant, and told Mrs. Campbell that while waiting before God he had told her he wanted her to go back to her own people and win them. With deep regret Mrs. Campbell gave her up. On Ling Su's return to China, her evangelistic work so engrossed her time and thought that she gave up her medical work and is in great demand for special services.

Miss Head told thrilling stories of work in our Korean and Japanese missions in California. In Alameda every Saturday afternoon, eighteen foreign women and seven Americans gather for a two hours' Bible study. Most of these foreign women are employed and prefer to forfeit five dollars a week from their wages rather than miss the Bible study.

It is claimed that forty-four of the one hundred and twenty-five who were graduated from Princeton University in the class with Governor Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate for the presidency, are enrolled in the American Book of Honor, "Who's Who in America." The class of 1879 is now pointed to as the one having in it the most men of note of any single class ever graduated by an American institution. Among the most noted of the class besides Governor Wilson are Judge Mahlon Fisher of the United States Supreme Court, C. H. McGovern, the inventor of farm machinery, and Mr. Peter J. Hamilton, the Alabama historian and personal friend of the presidential candidate.

Church News

Rev. Charles D. Bulla, Superintendent of the Wesley Adult Department of our Sunday School Work, has been made a D.D. by Randolph-Macon College.

Bishop Hendrix, at the unanimous request of the presiding elders, has changed the date of the North Alabama Conference from November 6 to November 20.

According to the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, Vanderbilt University enrolled during the past session nineteen foreign students, representing eight different nations of the world.

Dr. Carter Helm Jones, pastor of one of the leading Baptist churches in Oklahoma City, Okla., will supply the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia for six weeks this summer.

Prof. C. W. Peppler, for the past fourteen years Professor of Greek at Emory College, Ga., has been chosen to the same chair at Trinity College and has signified his acceptance.

Dr. W. P. Ivey, of Lenoir, N. C., a brother of Dr. T. N. Ivey, Editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, passed away after a brief illness on June 26. He was a well informed physician and a citizen of large usefulness.

The University of Wisconsin, at its recent Commencement, conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws upon Bishop J. W. Bashford, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This institution is his alma mater.

It is stated that Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan has purchased the copy of Fox's Book of Martyrs formerly owned by John Bunyan, paying therefor $100,000. Thus does greatness distinguish and add value to everything it touches.

A portrait of the late Bishop C. B. Galloway was lately unveiled in the chapel of Vanderbilt University. This picture is the companion-piece of the one unveiled in the Millsaps College chapel last fall by Bishop W. A. Candler, having been painted by the same artist.

Prof. O. E. Brown, of the Vanderbilt Theological Faculty, has been granted a year's leave of absence, which he expects to spend abroad. His program is to visit Europe, the Holy Land, and our mission fields in the Far East. He was expected to sail on July 5.

The late General Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church appropriated $6000 toward providing a home for superannuate ministers of that denomination at Colorado Springs, Colo., and $5000 for the colored flood sufferers in Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas.

The Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Conn., has about consummated the task of adding $1,000,000 to its endowment. Of this amount the Rockefeller Board of Education contributed $100,000. The last Commencement marked the close of the 81st session of this historic institution.

Dr. W. F. Alexander, pastor of the Prytania Street Presbyterian Church of New Orleans, and Dr. J. C. Barr, pastor of the Lafayette Presbyterian Church, will both spend the remainder of the summer in Europe. Their pulpits will be provided for by special arrangement during their absence.

Bishop Mouzon spent Sunday, June 30th, with the Epworth Leaguers of the Little Rock (Ark.) District at Malvern, where they were holding their annual meeting. It was his first visit to Arkansas since his election to the episcopacy. The Western Methodist states that his sermons were "clear, strong, and wonderfully helpful."

Chancellor J. H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University, has been tendered the presidency of the University of Arkansas, but at this writing has not announced whether he will accept. Prof. J. H. Reynolds, who for ten years has occupied the Chair of History in that institution, has been designated as Acting President, and will direct its affairs until the selection of a permanent head has been made.

At the recent session of Galloway Female College at Searcy, Ark., twenty-one young ladies were given diplomas. The Seniors gave to the College as a memorial a beautiful sideboard and fifteen quarter-sawn oak chairs costing nearly $500. It has been customary for years for the graduating class to make a parting gift to their alma mater as a token of their loyalty and love and as a means of perpetuating their memory at the institution in after years.

The following cablegram was sent by Bishop Lambuth from London to the Nashville Christian Advocate on June 20: "Just out of Africa. Leave for Brazil Friday (June 21st). Traveled 5000 miles in Congo, 1800 on foot. Visited 50 chiefs, several cannibal tribes, 200 villages. Treated 400 patients; met Belgian authorities in Bruxelles; fine mission concession granted, several acres free, among Batetelas, a great tribe of warriors from Lualaba region, on backbone of continent, explored by David Livingstone. Chief urges our coming and anxiously awaits decision. God has led us. Gilbert and I have pioneered the way; who will follow?"

The Methodists of the Old North State have set themselves to the task of increasing the present endowment of Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., by the round sum of $1,000,000. The General Board of Education (Rockefeller) has offered to donate conditionally $150,000 and the Dukes $650,000, leaving $200,000 to be raised by the Church, of which $60,000 has already been provided for. It looks as if the friends of Trinity are going in the near future to show the gentlemen who have been saying that no great institution of learning can be built up under the control of the Church that they are entirely mistaken. Indeed, if Vanderbilt does not move forward with a quicker step, it is quite possible that she may be outstripped in a few years.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

It is claimed that the Liberty Bell which hangs in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, has suffered a further crack of six inches during the last two weeks. It is feared that this historic relic may by natural causes be cleft in two.

A moving picture show in New Orleans recently interspersed its varied pictures with striking Scriptural texts. We do not know who was responsible for such a moral movement, but it may be said that there is no greater opportunity to reach the masses with the truth than by such a plan.

The seamen's strike, which was declared a few days ago, is assuming large proportions. It is now believed that all vessels sailing under the American flag will be affected. Charges of mutiny have been brought against a number of the strikers, but the sailors are determined not to give up the fight for better wages and better conditions.

What greater blessing could come to an aggressive city than to have laid at its door an abundant supply of cheap fuel? Shreveport, the metropolis of North Louisiana, is fortunate in having this very blessing suddenly thrust upon her. Gas and oil in abundance have been found within the city limits. Already Shreveport is a thriving town commercially, and it has great natural advantages. Centenary College will doubtless win for it a reputation as a city of superior educational advantages; it is claimed to be the leading Sunday school town in the State, and, best of all, it has swung the franchise lash and driven the saloon out.

Dallas, Texas, is to have a new $5,000,000 union depot. Such an improvement is something any city would boast over, and several cities in the South are already waking up because of the proposed improvement at Dallas. New Orleans would be greatly blessed if she had a union station, centrally located and patronized by all the contributing lines.

In 1911 more than half a billion dollars were distributed among the beneficiaries of life insurance policies. This is, indeed, an age of protection. All that a man has, even to his future ability to maintain his family by obtaining money, is guarded by an insurance clause. Last year more than three billion dollars of new insurance was written.

Nearly a dozen persons were killed while riding in heavier-than-air flying machines on July 4. That the air has not yet been conquered is evident. The great problem of the inventor is not how to fly, but how to protect the life of the person flying in case of accident. As long as the present death rate continues so high among those who try to fly, little will be accomplished in aerial navigation.

General Edward S. Bragg, commander of the famous "Iron Brigade" during the Civil War, died June 27 in the 86th year of his age. He was one of the most fearless fighters in the Union Army, and since the war has been a prominent politician. One by one the old war leaders are passing away, and, whether of the North or the South, we cannot but lift our hats in honor of the soldiers of the sixties.

The German Music Publishers' Association has sounded a note of warning against what it terms "American rag-time and Viennese operettas." The German publishers say that the profits from the sale of the lighter class of music are greater than the sales of good music ever netted them, but for the sake of the public they must sound a note of warning. "The public's artistic sense is deteriorating," they say, and we are disposed to agree with them.

In an amendment to the general Naval Appropriation Bill passed by the lower house of Congress, the United States Senate has made arrangements for the building of two modern battleships this year. While it may appear that we need other things worse than battleships, yet they are handy things to have around a navy yard in case of war. Recent naval activity on the part of Japan is supposed to be responsible for the decision to build the two ships.

The following financial figures of interest have been given out from the United States Treasury Department: It will not be necessary to issue more bonds for the Panama Canal construction for more than a year, there being now in the treasury for that purpose $100,000. It cost $10,000,000 less to run the army and $16,000,000 more to run the navy in 1911 than in 1910, and there was a $4,000,000 decrease in pensions last year and $1,568,000 deficit in the postal department.

W. Morgan Shuster, about whom the newspapers of the world had much to say a few months ago on account of his being ousted from Persia, where he, as an American, had been a great force in financial circles, has written a book entitled "The Strangling of Persia." We do not question Mr. Shuster's ability to occupy headline space in the sensational press, but we have our fears that his impulses to write were due more largely to the fact that his notoriety could thus be assessed, than to the fact that he had a great message to give the world.

WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY COOPERATION

Dear Brother:—

By request of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Conference of North Mississippi, I sent you an account of the last annual meeting held at Booneville, Miss., June 1-4, 1912. This was a historic occasion in that it marked the thirty-first and last annual meeting to be held under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of North Mississippi. One generation of missionary activity, directed by godly, consecrated women, reached its climax in this deeply spiritual and thoroughly wide-awake business-like meeting. Added significance grew out of the fact that its educating, spiritualizing forces, coming through a period of years equal to that of the earthly life of the Savior, were in this meeting to be merged into the larger work of the Woman's Missionary Society. Both officers and delegates came to this Conference feeling the weight of its importance, the significance of its action, and the seriousness of its issues. Not is it strange or unusual that mingled feelings of gladness and regret animated the hearts of all, particularly the veteran workers who had so long upheld the banner of Christ and in which was inscribed their foreign marching orders. "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

The new and untried, even in the Master's cause, may well give pause to the thoughtful and conservative, however large the field and hopeful the outlook confronting them. And thus it was at Booneville, the tender memory and the backward glance were relieved from sadness only by the larger hope and the broader vision of a wider sphere of usefulness in the Master's cause hereafter to be represented by the united efforts of the womanhood of our great Church. Emotions which might otherwise have found expression in a sigh of surprise or a tear of regret, were so transformed by faith and hope that they found in a smile of joy and notes of triumph, as the final resolution of union with the Home Mission Society was unanimously passed.

Booneville indeed lived a most cordial host and entered heartily into the spirit of the meeting from the initial to the closing service. Throughout the Conference, our thoughtful pastor, Rev. S. J. Brown, ministered with all courtesy to our pleasure and comfort. Brother Brown is in high favor with his people.

The opening meeting, Saturday night, June 1, marked the formal expression of Booneville's splendid welcome in addresses delivered by the Rev. Mr. Buchanan of the Baptist Church and by Mrs. Alexander for the Methodist societies. In fully chosen words Miss Marie Buckley, of Winona, responded. This program, with musical contributions of the sweet-voiced choir, prefaced the annual love feast, a consecration service of prayer and praise, with which it has long been the custom of the Foreign Missionary Society to begin its Conference sessions. It was the high privilege of the writer to preside over this service, not to lead it, for all were agreed that the Holy Spirit patterned that sacred office. Such a gracious outpouring of his wondrous presence as baptized the large audience and loosened tongues unaccustomed to public testimony, occurred in individuals, lifting the soul to mountain-tops of transformation, where all is merged into a glorious vision of the risen Redeemer of men. We had prayed that this last annual meeting should be memorable for its spirituality, and that this first service should sound a keynote deep and harmonious, to the sweet-song with which it should close the generation of labors for the blessed Christ.

The very mention of Dr. S. A. Steele as the preacher of our annual sermon on Sunday morning, carries with it the assurance that the mountain heights attained the night before were kept with an increase of power throughout the day. Surely we sat together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus, as we listened to the gifted preacher's masterly handling of the text, "Thy kingdom come." Our hearts burned within us as he showed our Father's business as at hand and put on show the whole armor of faithful soldiers of the cross. Dr. Steele on this occasion, fully sustained his high regard as a pulpit orator. The administration of the Lord's Supper to around 2500, and of seven hundred communications was a beautiful Pentecostal sign.

Sunday afternoon was devoted to a Children's Mass Meeting conducted by Mrs. W. M. McInnes. The Booneville Juveniles rendered an excellent and appropriate program, winning exceptional praise. Speaking talks were made by our two returned missionaries, Miss Nell Drake of China and Miss Louise Barcroft of Mexico. Both spoke feelingly to the children about the missionary life of the neglected, unloved children of heathen lands. It was a seed-sowing time and we do not doubt that the Lord of the harvest will one day number among his faithful missionaries in foreign fields one or more of these precious young hearts impressed by Misses Drake and Barcroft in this service.

On Sunday night Mrs. J. E. Grubbs of Winchester, Ky., second Vice-president of the Woman's Missionary Council, made a ringing appeal for the young life of the Church. Mrs. Grubbs won all hearts by her pleasing personality, splendid intelligence, and deep spirituality. As an immediate result of her presence and labors amongst us, several bright young women, led of the Holy Spirit, signified their desire to enter the missionary work, either at home or abroad.

The address of the President, Mrs. S. M. Thomas, at the opening business session Monday was up to her usual high standard, and sounded the clear-voiced "Go forward" in no uncertain tones. Mrs. T. M. Clark, our gifted and efficient corresponding secretary, inspired us anew, both by her annual report, and in her full and interesting account of the recent Council meeting held in Washington City.

The District Secretaries had wrought well in their respective fields and brought creditably good reports, despite "hard times," but weevil and the overflow. The Lord had prospered his work in their hands. The banner for finances will go to Holly Springs District in the gratification of its secretary, Mrs. T. J. Edmund of Water Valley.

The four vice-presidents continued helpful in constructive instances on their various departments of the work as follows:

Children's Work—Mrs. McInnes, First Vice President; Young People's Work—Mrs. J. E. Thomas, Second Vice President; Christian Stewardship—Mrs. S. B. White, Third Vice President; Social Service—Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Fourth Vice President.

These instances were a new feature in our Conference routine and met with hearty response and warm expressions of endorsement.

The claims of our Bible and Training School at Kankakee City were represented by Miss Vella Richardson of Corinth, who has been a pupil at Stanton during the past session. Already she bears unmistakable proof of the splendid work done by that great institution. Miss Nell Drake of Soochow, China, thrilled the hearts of a large night audience, as she spoke of the mighty spiritual forces at work in China to-day, as she gave us first-hand information of the great revolution now in progress in the Far East. Truly the present generation is living in a "grand and awful time," for it is witnessing the literal fulfillment of the prophecy of our Christ: "I shall give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

Miss Barcroft, our own North Mississippi daughter, brought a similar message from Mexico, which is also in the throes of a terrible political revolution. Her faith is triumphant in the confident belief that God will bring out of the din and confusion of these evil days the regeneration of the Mexican nation.

The Treasurer's report gave a total of over $5,500 for the year. Mrs. G. C. Jones deserves honorable mention for her twelve years of faithful steadfastness in this responsible office. As a matter of fact of gratification and interest, it is interesting to note that the Treasurer's report at the first annual meeting of the Conference Society, held at Verona in 1901, showed a total of $104.00. How nobly have the women of our Church grown since those pioneer days; how gloriously has the God of Missions prospered his servants in their faithful hands; how wondrously has he honored their small part in the civilizing, Christianizing agencies of the greatest missionary age the world has ever seen!

The Conference closed, as it had begun, with a consecration service conducted this time, by Mrs. J. E. Grubbs. On blessed knees singing the consecration song, "Thou go where thou wilt, he to go, dear Lord, 'Tis he what thou wilt, he to be"—the women of the Foreign Conference closed their last annual meeting. This was it sure to "sing out the old and sing in the new," as we passed into the larger, united organization, which we trust is to become, under God, a tremendous force in the fulfillment of his plans for a redeemed world.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY MEETING.

The second annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in Louisiana was held at Natchitoches, June 10-12. In spite of the postponement of the opening, and, the meeting opened with forty delegates in attendance, there were representatives from every Church.

All were impressed with the deep spirituality of each service. Miss Mabel Head was at her best, and her several addresses on Scripture and God's Call will long be remembered. I wish that every woman could have heard her tell of "God's Program for the World and Our Part in Executing It." We realized as never before that there is much we can do as individuals. Our very own new deaconess, Miss Hest, who is to serve at Boone, La., was an inspiration, and we feel sure that she will help the pastor at Boone in his hard field of labor. Our hearts burned within us as Mrs. Nellie O'Rourke told of the conditions and needs of Mexico, our next-door neighbor.

Rev. B. H. Harper and his good wife are in favor with the people. Brother Harper's excellent opening sermon gave the meeting the right kind of start. As his word paintings caused us to "look upon the fields with wine harvest," it was easy to pray that the Lord of the harvest would thrust forth laborers. This was followed by as the 2 session as it has been our privilege to hear by Dr. Moore of New Orleans, on "Go ye into all the World."

Natchitoches made a fine business city. All the delegates had good homes but we had the best of all. Baton Rouge was chosen as the best place of meeting. Mrs. E. B. Kennedy, who has faithfully served as President for six years or more, returned and was made Honorary President. The other officers are as follows: First Vice President, Mrs. Henry Harper; Second Vice President, Mrs. R. E. Bolden; Third Vice President, Mrs. R. E. Wyatt; Fourth Vice President, Mrs. E. B. Kennedy; Corresponding Secretary, Home Department, Mrs. Crow Grubbs; Corresponding Secretary Foreign Department, Mrs. A. P. Holt; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Geo. B. Parker; Treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Holmes.

Mrs. Parker's address on "Social Service" brought us face to face with problems at our door. Miss Ada Parker was also with us and rendered valuable help. A delightful reception was given by the Parsonage Queen and her ladies of honor. Our hearts joined our voices in singing, "God be with us all we meet again."

A BOY ON A BRIDGE

One evening several years ago, a brilliant company was gathered in an elegant mansion in London, says an exchange. While it was yet early in the evening one of the guests, a distinguished nobleman, begged his host to excuse him, as he must hasten away. "I left my son Henry on London Bridge at noon, bidding him wait until my return. I have been very busy ever since, and have forgotten him until now. Poor fellow. I must go and bring him home."

His friends urged him not to go. "The pleasure of the evening is just beginning," they said, "and no doubt the boy has gone home long ago. He would take it for granted that his father had forgotten him, or was too busy to come for him." "Ah," said the father, "you don't know my Henry! I told him to stay until I came, and he will."

So he left the charming company. And on the bridge, just where he left him, he found Henry—hungry, a bit cold and wondering, but faithful. I am sure his father was proud of him. And he may well have been proud of his father's confidence. If your father can trust you like that he is a happy man.

Henry grew to be a man, as boys have a way of doing. And the man was like the boy; he could be trusted. He became one of the great Christian soldiers of England. The queen sent him once to rescue a company of people who were cooped up in a city—men, women and little children, surrounded by a great army of cruel enemies. He had but a few soldiers, but they would follow where he led. If you want a splendid story ask your father to tell you how Sir Henry Havelock came to Lucknow just in time to save the city from massacre or starvation.—The Presbyterian.

JIMMY'S TEXT.

One day it was pouring down rain, and Aunt Carrie was getting just run out of stories. So Jimmy said:

"Let's play church."

There were five Bates children and four visiting cousins, so that made a congregation. They put rows of chairs together for pews, and the big arm-chair was to be the pulpit, with hassock for a step to get up.

The pulpit was so fine that each wanted to be the minister. But Jimmy said he ought to be the minister, because he knew the most texts, so he must be the "goodest."

"Why, Jimmie!" said Aunt Carrie.

But all the other children said he might, if they could all take turns passing the plate.

The plate was mother's card tray. They had a lot of buttons to put in as money. They began by singing a hymn very prettily.

Then Jimmy, with grandpa's old spectacles way down on his nose, mounted to the pulpit by way of the hassock. How they all envied him!

"My friends," began Jimmy.

"You should say 'brethren,'" said little Helen softly.

"And brethren," said Jimmy crossly, "my text this afternoon is, Do unto others as you would—"

"Oh, Jimmy," wailed a reproachful voice in the first row, "you can't have that. You know you took my bouncing ball away from me this morning, and I wanted it so."

Jimmy grew very red.

"Never mind," he said, hastily. "My text to-day is, 'Judge not—'"

"But Jimmy," piped up another voice, "you said this morning you guessed Benny Green played truant yesterday, because he wasn't in school."

Jimmy was getting pretty cross. He swallowed very hard, and thumping the back of the chair with his fist he said severely:

"Here's another, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'"

"Oh, Jimmy!" howled the whole congregation, "not that. You ate up the whole of the jam at the dolls' tea party, so we didn't have any."—Central Christian Advocate.

CAUGHT IN THE FLATTERER'S NET.

"Who knows anything about the flatterer's net?" asked Mrs. Blake, when the Pilgrim's Progress evening came around again, and the meeting was at Alice Blake's home.

Alice looked up, her cheeks flushing, and the bright tears flashing in her gray eyes. "You know that I do," she said softly.

Mrs. Blake smiled and laid a kind hand on her young daughter's arm. "That touches a pretty tender spot, Alice," she said, "and you needn't tell about it unless you want to."

"I do want to," said Alice, with just a bit of a choke in her voice; "it will do me good to tell it, and maybe it will do the others good to hear it."

"You remember, Miss Howard promised the first of the term that she would give one of Miss Alcott's books to the one who stood highest in English after the examinations. You know all about it, for you have heard me talk about it from morning till night for weeks past, and you know, too, how anxious I was to win. Not only because I wanted the book, though I like Miss Alcott and all her works very much, but because I wanted the honor of being first."

"Well, I've always made pretty good grades in English, and the first of the term I did do very well. The girls all noticed it, and began saying, 'Good for you, Alice,' and 'There's no show for us when Alice is around,' till I—well, I got too sure of myself, that's all."

"We had the final examination yesterday, and I intended to spend the evening before in hard study, but Emma Waters had a party, and the girls were all bound I should go. 'You don't need to study,' they said. 'You know more than all the rest of us already.'"

"And so I went; and yesterday I missed three questions; and to-day—Miss Howard—gave—the prize—to Carrie Lane. I suppose I ought to be glad." Alice went on, while the tears flowed freely, "for Carrie is a good little thing, and has worked hard. But I felt just like Christian caught in the flatterer's net."

Good Dr. Blake reached out his long arms and took his daughter into them.

"I do like girls that are brave enough to call their faults by their names," he said. "You are not the first by any means who has been caught in the flatterer's net, and if you learn to keep out of his way in future it will be worth more than a whole set of Miss Alcott's books."—The King Builders.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE—SOME OBSERVATIONS.

Dear Doctor Meek: May I ask the privilege of supplementing your most excellent report of the Millsaps Commencement in the Advocate of June 20th. While you have taken care of the "logic" of the situation and Brother Thames the "common sense," it has fallen to my lot these ten years to make reports on the grounds, buildings and general improvements, and at no session have you had occasion for better logic or Brother Thames for sounder common sense than had our committee for report on work assigned to them. With the exception of the few minor suggestions, the buildings and general improvements were found in most excellent condition. A few hundred dollars, which will be expended during the summer, will assure the greatest comfort and protection to those who may attend another session. This writer could but contrast the comforts and conveniences of the present-day college with those of his own generation. Water works, with bath and toilet conveniences in the buildings, and the electric lights, at small cost, make the college life of to-day a veritable joy. And I wondered how many young men who attend Millsaps enjoyed such conveniences and luxuries at home? There, some favorite resort on the nearby creek, or water from the deep well, and the coal oil lamp were counted a blessing indeed. For the first time in all these years not a complaint was made by student or home keeper as to conditions which must be remedied. While the campus has seemed slow to respond to the skill of the gardener, it is becoming in these latter years an attractive spot, with its sward of grass and forest of trees. The concrete walks traversing the grounds in all directions are suggestive of neatness and comfort. The athletic field is claimed to be one of the most attractive and best in the South. These are a part of the surroundings which should prove an inspiration to every young man seeking the advantages of college associations.

I am sure it is not out of place at this point to speak of the work and conditions at Founder's Hall, known also as the Training School department. That it was a stroke of wisdom to establish this department on the basis upon which it is now operated, there can be no question; and with Mrs. Joyce, the accomplished matron, at its head no parent need fear for the health, diet and comfort of his son. There was a time when we could not report so favorably of this building, but the transformation is too conspicuous to pass unnoticed.

Whence came these changes? or to whom may they be ascribed? Well, first, to that natural growth which enters into the enlargement and more permanent establishment of any enterprise; second, to a thoughtful general oversight which was evidently given by the president, but to nothing more than to the presence and attention given by our co-laborer and fellow-trustee, Brother W. N. Buie, who has given his time and thought to this department of the college life. All were impressed with the marked improvement in the physical surroundings, and with her new president put upon his mettle, because of his illustrious predecessors, we look for an upward movement which shall bring that three hundred and fifty pupils which you covet, Doctor.

While I would not detract in the least from the splendid work done by President Huil in his short administration, I must suggest that we do no injustice to others. You state that the enrollment of this session was the largest in the history of the college. By reference to the catalogue of four or five years ago, it will be seen that under the administration of President Murrah the high-water mark of 296 was reached, making only a few, it is true, above the figure of 1911-12. Like the old Roman Senator with his "Carthago delenda est," I must close by saying that Millsaps must have a Biblical Department in her faculty, if she is to meet all the claims of a Christian institution, and it should have it.

Dr. Moore is to be commended for his prompt and firm handling of this matter. The position which he has taken is unimpeachable and he will have the hearty endorsement of our preachers and spiritually minded people. preachers for the occasion, Dr. J. M. Henry, and Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

Rev. J. W. Harper, of Varnado, La., has recently been looking after the circulation of the Advocate in his charge, with gratifying success. We appreciate the good service which he has thus rendered, and extend to him our hearty thanks.

Brother J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., who is the Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Millsaps Board of Trustees, under date of July 3, writes: "We met in Jackson on July 2, and elected Prof. J. R. Lin to the Chair of History in Millsaps College."

Rev. H. W. Jamieson and Rev. F. R. Power, pastors in the Shreveport District, spent Sunday in New Orleans. Brother Jamieson was the guest of his parents, and Brother Power divided time with a number of companionable friends. The Advocate was honored with a brief call by these brethren.

We congratulate Brother and Sister O. S. Lewis, of Brandon, Miss. Our reason for so doing is set forth in the following message, just received from Brother Lewis: "Miss Ann Stevens Lewis first saw the light of day in the parsonage here last Sunday. Mrs. Lewis and the babe are getting along finely."

Rev. L. A. Sims, who served for four years as pastor of Epworth Church, New Orleans, and who has been in Centenary College for the past year, is attending Tulane University this summer. He will enter Centenary at the beginning of the fall term, from which institution he will be graduated next year.

The St. Tammany Circuit is prospering under the pastorate of Rev. T. V. Peters, who is deservedly popular. A new church building has been begun at Talisheek, one of the country appointments on the charge, and will be finished and paid for by Conference, if all the promises now in hand are redeemed.

Writing from Memphis, Tenn., Sister Amos Kendall sends us a subscription for a friend, and adds fifty cents for our "Help Fund." This elect lady is one of the Advocate's best friends, and lets no opportunity pass to lend it a helping hand. May the Heavenly Father continue to bless her and make her a blessing.

A largely attended song service was held at the First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss., last Sunday evening. The singing under the direction of Mr. H. M. Teasdale, according to the local papers, was exceptionally fine, and Dr. H. G. Henderson, the pastor, delivered a brilliant discourse on "The Ministry of Music."

We have received a catalogue of Grenada College for 1912-13. Like every thing else to which Brother Countiss puts his hand, it is a fine piece of work. This institution is in better condition to-day than ever before in its history, and the outlook for it is very bright. It should have the patronage and loyal support of the Methodists of North Mississippi.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, of Abbeville, Miss., favored us with several subscriptions a few days since. He has been taking a course at the University of Mississippi, and serving a charge at the same time. We are always pleased to see a young minister seeking the best equipment for his life work. Efficiency in the service of the Master is a thing well worth striving for.

We regret to learn of the accident which befell Margaret, the little daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Holmes, of this city, last week. While playing with her cousin, she was thrown from a small wagon and her collar-bone was fractured. She is doing well, however, and it is not thought she will sustain any permanent injury from the unfortunate occurrence.

In a recent communication to our office, Rev. K. W. Dodson, of New Iberia, La., thus referred to his work: "Our Sunday school has grown so that we need additional quarters. We are planning to construct another room at an early date. The attendance last Sunday (June 30) was the largest that we have ever had. We also had a record-breaking congregation at the morning hour."

The Seashore Campground School will open its session Sept. 12, 1912. While the school is owned by the Methodist Church (South), there will be no sectarianism in its work. The curriculum covers all college requirements and primary instruction has been provided for. The building is new, thoroughly modern, and contains a large auditorium for lectures and other public exercises.

In renewing his subscription to the Advocate, Dr. Edwin F. Arnold of Bellefontaine, Miss., says: "I am much pleased with the general improvement of the paper. I think articles like those Brother Lipscomb has been giving on doctrines will be productive of much good." We appreciate the commendation of this worthy layman, who is a man of information and the efficient health officer of Webster County.

Rev. W. S. Shipman is carrying our cause triumphantly forward at Indianola, Miss., where he is in high favor with his flock. Sister Shipman has been staying at Bell Buckle, Tenn., where the children have been attending the famous Webb School and making good progress in their studies. We are also pleased to know that Sister Shipman's health has been much improved by the salubrious climate of the Volunteer State.

Brother E. B. Troy was licensed to preach by the New Orleans District Licensing Committee last Saturday, and left Monday for West Monroe where he will supply the pulpit made vacant by Rev. W. Schulte's appointment to the presiding eldership of the Monroe District. Brother Troy is well prepared for the work of the ministry, and we predict for him success in this new field of labor to which he has been called.

In a note to the editor a few days since, Rev. R. W. Tucker, the resourceful presiding elder of the Ruston District, says of the work in his diocese: "We are having some good revivals and everything is hopeful." Brother Tucker has shown himself to be a true leader during his incumbency in his present office, and the various interests of the Church have prospered under his administration. His District Conference is in session at Gibsland this week.

Rev. B. T. Crews, our faithful pastor at Rayne, La., favored us with a list of six subscribers on July 2, for which we heartily thank him. We greatly regret to know that Sister Crews is seriously ill, and that much solicitude is felt concerning her. We pray that the Heavenly Father may be graciously present in this stricken household while the shadows linger in it. He knows and cares for his children, and is ever near them in the hours of need.

A letter from Mrs. J. D. Barbee, written from Rochester, Minn., on July 4, two days after Bro. Barbee had undergone a serious operation at the hands of Dr. William Mayo, stated that he was doing as well as could be expected, though he was extremely weak. The prospects of his recovery were considered good. This will be welcome news to his many friends in Mississippi and Tennessee, though they will continue to feel anxious until all danger is past.

A tent meeting was begun at Pontotoc, Miss., last Sunday under the leadership of Rev. Walt Holcomb, of Nashville, Tenn. Brother Wendel, who is our preacher in charge there, requests us to state that all former and near-by pastors are cordially invited to attend. He furthermore adds: "We had a very fine Decision Day recently. Five little girls joined the Church on profession of faith and one young lady by letter. Children's Day exercises were conducted at night."

Rev. M. L. White reports his work as progressing favorably at Prentiss, Miss. He will have Brother Scarborough, of McComb, with him in a meeting at Carson, beginning on the third Sunday in this month. Rev. I. L. Peebles will assist him at two points in August, and Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss., will aid him at Prentiss and Mt. Zion the last week in July and the first week in August. Brother White hopes to round out his quadrennium of service in his present field with a successful revival at every church.

In a note written from Haughton, La., on July 6, in which he enclosed two subscriptions, Bro. F. J. McCoy says: "I am at present with Rev. John G. Sloan at this place leading the singing in a meeting. Brother Sloan himself has been preaching since Sunday, and there is promise of a gracious revival. Rev. T. M. Finley, of Missouri, who has been engaged to conduct the services, is expected to-day. Much credit is due Brother Sloan for the building of the beautiful new church and parsonage here, and he is now bent upon having a season of spiritual refreshing among his people."

A number of preachers who attended the Divinity School last week are disposed to refer to the statement made by Dr. J. W. Lee, of St. Louis, that Rev. C. C. Miller, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, has in him the elements of true greatness, as the cause of Brother Miller's extreme fondness for Dr. Lee. Brother Miller was in New Orleans last week and gave his word of honor that the brethren are mistaken. He said, "That bunch of preachers don't know what they are talking about. The trouble with them is nothing less than 'green-eyed' jealousy." Possibly Brother Miller and his accusers are all in a measure correct in their conclusions.

From Shannon, Miss., under date of July 5, Rev. W. O. Wagoner, the pastor, writes: "We have just closed a successful meeting here—the best, some say, that the community has had in several years. Rev. J. H. Duke, of Nettleton, Miss., led the singing and also held an afternoon service each day for the young people. These afternoon meetings were very satisfactory and did great good. The rest of the preaching was done by the home pastors. We think it is well to use the resident and near-by preachers in our meetings in the small towns and the country churches. I wish to recommend Brother Duke as a leader of the singing in revival services. Any church would be profited by engaging him in that capacity."

The Okolona Messenger reports that the annual meeting of the Epworth Leaguers of North Mississippi in that city in June was a most successful and enjoyable one. About 100 delegates were said to be in attendance. The addresses of Dr. F. S. Parker, Rev. J. R. Countiss, and Dr. H. G. Henderson were especially commended. The following officers were elected for the next year: President, Dr. W. B. Baker, Houston; First Vice President, Miss Kate Cunningham, Boonville; Third Vice President, Miss Jennie Walker, Houston; Fourth Vice President, Mr. V. H. Stephenson, Boonville; Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. W. Boswell, New Albany; Assistant Secretary-Treasurer, Miss Elizabeth Hall, New Albany; Era Agent, Mr. John Valentine, West Point. The name of the Second Vice President is not given.

Rev. George Fox, of Bastrop, La., sends us the following marriage notice: "At the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Higginbotham, at this place, Miss Helen Higginbotham was united in matrimony to Mr. Edward F. Ayrand, of Donaldsonville, La., the writer officiating. The bride is a staunch member of the Methodist Church and a young lady of rare personal charms. Her place in the Sunday school at Bastrop cannot be easily filled, and it is with profound regret that we give her up, though we wish for her the happiness which her beautiful young life deserves. Mr. Ayrand is at present engaged in business at Benton, La., where he is popular and highly esteemed. We extend to him our heartiest congratulations upon having won so noble a young woman to be his life companion and the mistress of his home."

Rev. R. T. Pickett, of Carthage, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a meeting of unusual interest here. Rev. I. L. Peebles, one of our Conference evangelists, did the preaching for us. While there were not the visible results that we so much desired, we feel sure that abiding fruit will follow from such faithful preaching. No new-fangled methods to merely make a show and number those blessed were brought into use; the presentation of the plain, old-fashioned gospel was the method employed to reach the people. The interest increased until the close, and it seemed that the eight days were gone all too soon. I heartily commend Brother Peebles to those wanting help in meetings, and especially for places where the preaching of doctrines is needed. We have received a heavy pounding, since the revival services closed."

REV. R. B. DOWNER TRANSLATED.

Dear Brother Meek: Our precious brother, Rev. R. B. Downer, a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, passed peacefully away from earth to his home in heaven Saturday, July 6, at about 7:45 p. m., in the 74th year of his age. He was converted and joined the Church in early life. The quarterly conference that granted me license to preach in 1856, gave Brother Downer license in 1857; and the one which gave me a recommendation for admission on trial in 1857, gave him a recommendation in 1858. For fifty-three years we have been more or less intimately associated. For the past two years we have seen much of each other, both living here in Jackson, Miss. A better, purer, more consecrated man I never knew. Two years ago there were four superannuates living in the city of Jackson: W. L. C. Hunnicutt, W. T. J. Sullivan, Robert B. Downer and myself. Now I am the only one of the four left. Hunnicutt died in 1910; Sullivan in 1911, and Downer in 1912—all good and true men.

H. P. LEWIS.

Jackson, Miss.

HIS LAST MESSAGE.

Dear Brother Meek: At Brother Downer's request I wrote down the message given below, and was preparing to mail the letter when I received the news that he had passed away. His last hours were like the years of his life. He rests in peace. His memory is a benediction. The funeral will be from First Church, Jackson, Sunday, at 3 p. m., and will be conducted by Dr. A. F. Watkins and all our ministers who can attend from the vicinity. He will be buried here.

ALFRED F. SMITH.

The following is the message referred to by Dr. Smith:

To the Advocate: From this sick chamber, whence I confidently expect to pass shortly to my heavenly home, I want to send a last loving greeting to my brethren. Too weak to talk, unable to hear, I am enjoying unmeasured peace. Not a cloud is in my sky; a light of glory is on my path. Your brother,

ROBERT B. DOWNER.

Jackson, Miss., July 5, 1912.

Tidings From the Field

Indianola, Miss.

I am glad to report that our church affairs are moving along well. Indianola is having her first experience as a station, but seems determined to "make good." We commenced a protracted meeting here last Sunday. The preaching is being done by the pastors of the town. The prospects are encouraging. We have had fine rains and the farmers feel better.

W. S. SHIPMAN.

July 2, 1912.

Bell City, La.

We have just closed a revival meeting at Westlake, in which we were assisted by Rev. John Sholars, of Patterson. Brother Sholars is really and truly a godly man, and our work there was greatly helped by his good preaching. One of the visible results of the meeting is that our church has been treated to a new coat of paint, which adds much to its beauty.

LOUIS HOFFPAUIR, P. C.

Amory, Miss.

We desire to write some facts about our meeting at Amory. We held a meeting for two weeks. Brother Curtis, our pastor at Kosciusko, was with us the last week. There was not a dull service from the beginning to the end. Many times many were turned away for the lack of room. Often there was unusual power manifested in the services. The Church was greatly helped; many members were much profited; there were some professions of conversion in the Church and some reclamations. Brother Curtis rendered us fine service, and was earnest, faithful, clear and forceful in his preaching, and Brother James S. Duke, of Nettleton, led the song services and did it well. All in all, we had a fine revival in the church, but we are handicapped in our church work because of the need of more church room. We have a great Sunday School and we need a modern building most of all.

W. M. YOUNG, Pastor.

Blenville, La.

After receiving marching orders from Rev. R. W. Tucker, my presiding elder, January 4, 1912 found my family and me on our way from Haynesville to Blenville. Our train was four and one-half hours late. Some of the leading members met us at the station and carried us to the parsonage in a carriage. There we found Mrs. W. O. Campbell, Mrs. F. P. Warren, and Mrs. Wilson waiting for us with warm fires and a warm dinner. Our reception was more cordial than we have ever received. And such a pounding! The many tokens of their appreciation did not end with the pounding, for seldom a day passes but that we are brought under renewed obligations to these good people. To be sure, I determined to do my best for them by doing whatsoever my hands might find to do. We have built a new back gallery, placed a roof over it, and built new steps; bought new shades for every window; built new feed rooms at the barn, hung several new gates and built an altar platform in the church. (There has never been any kind of a platform in the church before.) The Ladies' Aid Society purchased a beautiful art square for the pulpit rostrum, three dozen new song books, and enough matting for the aisles of the church and the space before the altar. The following laymen made the church a present of a gasoline lighting plant which cost $25: A. E. Dewees, Charlie Ru-dalph, Wm. Webb, B. H. Scheen and F. A. Warren. Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Ruston, assisted me in our meeting, each of us preaching in turn. For two weeks we did our best. (At least, I am sure I did.) Brother Coleman did good, faithful, personal work and preaching. The result of our meeting was thirty additions to the Church by baptism and twenty-seven by letter. We have a good prayer meeting; our Sunday school has increased in attendance, and an individual communion service has been ordered. All that we have bought or had done we have paid for and have $15 in the treasury. We are going to canvass the entire charge for the Advocate.

W. T. WOODWARD, P. C.

PLAN OF WORK

(Adopted by the Mississippi Conference Epworth Leagues in their recent annual session at Hattiesburg, Miss.)

1. That the Mission Study as outlined at the last Conference be continued; that those who have not completed the text books, "Advance in the Antilles," or "Conservation of National Ideals," procure these first and complete same, supplementing with such work as the local chapter may deem advisable.
2. That the League Chapters continue the Cuban Mission effort as a special objective end, and that they endeavor to raise not less than $1,000 the coming year.
3. That each District Secretary be charged with the responsibility of holding district institutes in his district at some suitable time during the summer.
4. That it shall be the duty of each chapter secretary to send a quarterly report to the District Secretary, by whom its several items shall be transmitted to the proper Conference officers.
5. We further recommend that the District Secretary get a complete directory of the membership and Leagues of his district and place the same in the hands of the Secretary of this Annual Conference.
6. That we heartily endorse the Seashore Assembly and recommend that all Leaguers attend its sessions and avail themselves of its opportunities.
7. That this Conference appoint, through its President, two delegates with authority to act with delegates from the North Mississippi, the North Alabama, the Alabama, and the Louisiana Conference to any end that will promote the general good of our Conference, and that such necessary expenses as are incurred for the program be provided from the general treasury.
- (By way of explanation of the above paragraph, these delegates are to act at their own discretion in all matters, provided the major portion of the Conferences decide to have this additional assembly; they are to choose their own time of meeting and place, as well.)
8. We heartily recommend that the "One by One" campaign, as fully explained by Dr. Parker, be inaugurated, and that "Right Now" is the proper time for each League to set on this movement.
9. The co-operation of each chapter is desired as far as practicable in small matters, as well as large, and it is urged that every one exercise zeal to this end.
10. That the Conference hold its next session so as to begin the second Thursday in June, 1913, and continue through the following Sunday.

Those Three Grand Prize Trips

WE HEREWITH PRESENT THE FIRST LIST OF CONTESTANTS. HOWEVER THERE IS TIME YET TO ENTER.

"What will be the result of the present contest being conducted by the Advocate?" "Will you make it pay?" "Are there many objecting to the contest method of circulating the Advocate?" These are a few of the questions that our friends are asking us in regard to the Grand Prizes we are planning to give to the ladies who secure for us the largest number of subscriptions to the Advocate.

In answer to these questions we will say that thus far only one minister has voiced an objection to the plan, and he said that he just objected and that was all—he had no particular reasons. The contest is not objectionable, because it is merely a plan by which we will reward those who do the best work in behalf of the church paper, and by which we will remunerate all who secure as many as twenty-five new subscriptions. Will we make it pay? That is a question. If the readers of the Advocate will awaken to the fact that under the influence of a contest they can push the circulation of the Advocate high above any figure it has ever reached, we will make it pay in a dozen different ways.

First, we will have an army of readers that will inspire us to get out a greater paper, and will have sufficient money to enable us to make the paper better. Second, we will be able to overcome the loss we are bound to sustain because of the recent floods and unfavorable crop conditions, which otherwise would force us to take a precautionary step in order to tide us over the next year. Third, we will be directly responsible for giving to the Church an army of experienced public workers in circulating Christian literature; for every contestant will have acquired sufficient experience by next November in circulating her church paper to make her a valuable helper to any church where her membership may be. Fourth, we will be able to confer a lasting benefit upon each prize-winner by sending her to a great convention, or giving her a valuable present. There is no need of giving all the benefits this contest will bring the paper and the Church, if it is successful; these four

THE FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF THOSE WHO HAVE THUS FAR BEEN NOMINATED FOR OUR GRAND PRIZE TRIPS:

Mrs. Connie Lloyd, Carrollton, Miss.
Mrs. T. V. Peters, Golden, La.
Mrs. E. M. Henning, Alexandria, La.
Miss May H. Young, Lexington, Miss.
Mrs. R. H. Harper, Natchitoches, La.
Miss Belle Roberts, Franklin, La.
Miss Ada Parker, New Orleans, La.
Miss Bertie Mitchell, Laurel, Miss.
Miss Allie Adams, Beldon, Miss.
Miss Emmie Peairs, Slaughter, La.
Mrs. Rena Wood, Winona, Miss.
Mrs. J. D. Doyle, Silver Creek, Miss.
Miss Minnie G. Roberts, Van Cleave, Miss.
Miss Evelyn Price, Lake Charles, La.
Miss Ella Mai Leslie, Ruston, La.
Miss Allie G. Ford, Shreveport, La.
Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle, Shreveport, La.
Miss Iva Provost, Poplarville, Miss.

A number of others have been nominated, but on account of a request that their names be withheld until further notice, they are not printed in this list. It was our intention to publish at this time the number of subscriptions each had taken up to this date, but on account of having received so many requests to delay publishing the first list to accommodate certain candidates who, because of sickness, were unable to make their report in time for this issue,

I hereby enter the name of as a candidate in the New Orleans Christian Advocate's Contest, subject to the rules and regulations of said Contest as published by said paper dated May 30, 1912.

are sufficiently suggestive.

"What will be the result? That remains to be seen. We have printed here a list of nineteen contestants who have thus far entered. The contest is just now beginning. There is plenty of time for this number to be doubled. A live worker from a good field could enter to-day, and within a few weeks pass any worker in the field, if the present workers should chance to lessen their efforts. There is an element of chance in all contests. The leader in the list on this page may lose a week by sickness, and during that week you might secure fifty subscribers. As a pastor, the writer once secured twenty-nine subscriptions in two days in a town of four hundred population. A lady canvasser for a secular magazine in South Mississippi secured 287 subscriptions during the month of February. A canvasser for a secular daily paper is reported as having secured 1,100 subscriptions in two months. If these things can be done by workers in the secular world, what is possible for a church paper is greater than modesty permits us to announce.

If every pastor in the three Conferences embraces this opportunity and either puts a candidate in the field, or announces a preference for one of the candidates now in the field and then does his best to advance her interests, the good of this contest is incalculable.

We are, of course, depending upon the pastors at this time, and we feel that we can depend on them. No grander and truer body of men serve God in any field than the men who serve our churches in Mississippi and Louisiana. Will the Advocate contest fail when it is being managed by such a body of men? We think not. And because of our faith in these men we have assumed a tremendous financial risk in offering valuable prizes. Brethren and friends of the Advocate, this is a great opportunity to do a great service for God and the Church. Let us unite and make it a success! Secure a candidate or select one from the list and push for victory!

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Mr. G. W. Sentell's class of boys at Bunkie recently gave a splendid entertainment for the high school graduates and refugees from the overflowed country near-by.

The Crowley Men's Bible Class, which numbered 67 the first of June, has elected Dr. D. D. Minis teacher, to succeed Mr. M. S. Pittman, who was a teacher in the public school.

On May 3rd, the Crowley Sunday school observed Decision Day, and fifteen joined the Church, and others were left considering the matter for future action. Children crave the public recognition of their religion, and the Catholics in their first communion, and the Episcopalians in their confirmation services, have all these years seen the value of such a recognition. If Christ counts them members of the kingdom, surely the Church should early give them to understand that they have the privileges of the communion and other church rites.

On a recent "home coming" day in the First Church, Shreveport, there was an attendance of 1010, 622 being in the Adult and Intermediate Departments, and 388 in the elementary. The Baird class had 181, the Wesley (Dr. Scale's) 125, and the Baraca (V. L. Fulton's) 38. Two hundred new pupils were enrolled and a general forward move planned. The goal by Dec. 29 was set for 2000 in the main school, 500 on the Cradle Roll, and 200 in the home department. One hundred women volunteers began at once a canvass for the Home Department and Cradle Roll increase. This school is inquiring for the biggest one in Southern Methodism to measure itself by.

On "Home Coming Day" at the First Church, Shreveport, the box in the corner-stone of the old church was opened and its contents shown the congregation. The box contained copies of the New Orleans and Nashville Advocates; the Shreveport Times and other Shreveport papers, a hymn book, a Bible, and coins of various denominations. Mr. L. B. McCutcheon, who placed the box in the old church corner-stone thirty years ago, opened and showed its contents to the younger generation, who are now demolishing the church of the fathers to build a magnificent $100,000 structure in its stead. Mr. McCutcheon was the most liberal contributor to the old building.

The Sunday schools of San Francisco have an Athletic League. At a recent meet there were 242 entries, the honors being won by the First United Presbyterian Sunday school. The report is that the league has proved a great help to the Sunday school cause. The Y. M. C. A. and colleges long ago learned the value of athletic contests and have profited by making them a part of their work, but up to the present the Sunday school has been slow to see this arm of strength. Through the social department of the Adult Bible classes, along with the same committee of the Epworth League and other young people's organizations, athletics is becoming a part of the social life of the Church, and now promises to be an influential means for ingathering. In our District Sunday school Conference we have a fine field to cultivate and to utilize the contest spirit in the social life of our scholars. While waiting for this to be developed, let our superintendents and teachers use their organizing ingenuity and get up some games among their classes. The world has had charge of the social pleasures of our young people long enough.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Mr. W. C. Pearce says the Sunday school stands for teaching God's Word, for religious education and for training hearts.

An organized Bible Class in every church, based on what the 30,000 classes now organized are doing, would mean five million men won to Christ in a year. This would not only evangelize America, but would shake the wicked old world to its deepest foundations.

One pastor of a rural church discovered a nine-year-old girl who intensely desired instruction and illumination along mission lines. He tried to interest her parents and Sunday school teacher, but to no avail. Realizing the possible education and of winning a bright missionary soon to be, he paid for literature and had books sent to her, and is giving her personal instruction. Thus he is preparing a consecrated missionary or a fine Sunday school teacher for his own or somebody's use, and is doing wisely.

"Christian conquest and Christian civilization are absolutely dependent on religious training." No country, no matter how favored by nature or circumstances, can long endure without religious education. The Sunday school is the only institution for the religious education of all the people in this country. Do not emphasize and illustrate patriotism and neglect your Sunday school. Abandon public schools, and our vast and beautiful country would settle down into ignorance and return to superstition. Abandon, or even neglect the Sunday school, and our children will drift into heathenism.

Mr. Hubert Holmes, of Senatobia, Miss., collects money for his Sunday school literature and expenses by personal request from people in town. Each Sunday he has not only all the data in regard to the attendance of his school placed on the blackboard, but one of the church's needs—as missions, superannuates, etc., is emphasized. Beforehand, he has selected some class member who is prepared to, in a simple and direct way, explain to the school the benevolence of that special day and why a liberal donation should be secured. Mr. Holmes is a very progressive superintendent and has developed his school most successfully along the line of the Church's benevolences. Children and grown-ups, as well, really need a liberal amount of instruction along this line.

The rural Sunday school asks help of the town and specialists in regard to its problems, but they will never be solved until the rural community sets a premium on punctuality and preparation. Thirty people met in such a good community not long since. The older folk read carelessly and by verse a chapter in the New Testament, and the young people giggled and talked on the back seats; and then a superintendent wonders why he can't hold and establish a good Sunday school. Write Smith &

Lamar and secure samples of literature; order what you need, and select teachers ahead of time to fill possible vacancies, and use your literature, good songs and prepared teachers. One country Sunday school superintendent said his trouble was "nobody thought they could do such work well enough to try." Possibly not. But ignorance can be easily and speedily remedied in this day of books, periodicals and telephones; and the honest and ambitious country worker has as vast and wealthy a continent to discover as had Columbus.

REPORT ON MISSIONS.

(Adopted by the Lafayette District Conference at its session which met at Lake Arthur on May 23.)

Your committee on missions desire to submit the following report:

We are gratified that this Conference has gone so laboriously and patiently into the missionary problems of the foreign and home fields.

The spirit of prayer and great faith has characterized this work in the past. Our prayer is that this Conference and our Church will continue in this devout and prophetic mind until this field, covering eleven parishes, in whole or in part, with a population of 300,000 souls, has been evangelized and become contributory to the needs of others at home and abroad.

The missionary obligation is supreme. Vast missionary fields in the Lafayette District are ready for the harvest. In some the voice of the reapers is triumphant; from other reapers comes the request for a better support. Other portions are neglected for want of men and means. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest."

With twenty-one charges, our Church occupies the best vantage in these fields. Some of our mission works are strategic and should be maintained. Perhaps others are of questionable importance. Other denominations are doing good work in this district. So pressing is the need of fields utterly neglected, that we should avoid entering into contests with other denominations whose work prospers.

Therefore, we make the following recommendations:

(1) We endorse every reasonable and practical effort looking to unity of the Master's forces here.

(2) We urge every organized congregation of Southern Methodists, individually and collectively, to undertake a more systematic study of the subject of missions, at home and abroad. Missions is one. Scanning every corner of the home field, let our people not rest until they have seen the needs of the heathen world—a lost world pressing upon the broken heart of Christ, and by his resurrection raised to the possibility of a world redeemed. Brethren, the world is one. We of South Louisiana are one with Korea in bondage, with China in famine, with India in sloth, with Japan in spiritual stagnation.

(3) We invoke God's continued blessing upon the Laymen's Missionary Movement. We thank Brother Fulton for his instructive and inspiring talks. We urge every congregation to install the duplex system of collections for all purposes. Let every Methodist contribute every week to the support of the ministry, and, at the same time, to the support of missions and other benevolences. Let the aim of all be (the smallest aim consistent with loyalty to Christ) more for others than for self.

Last year this district paid for a gospel for self $32,143, and for others $5,637. This disparity is appalling. Let us learn to think upon others' needs, supporting them with our prayers and gifts. The per capita contributions to foreign missions in this district ranged last year from one-tenth of a cent in one charge to 45 cents in another, the average being 16 cents. Two charges gave nothing. Let not the most liberal charge think itself to have attained the goal, but press forward and upward: Let the sluggards awake that Christ may shine upon them, for the unmissionary church is a dead church.

(4) We call the particular attention of pastors and people to these important paragraphs of the discipline: Nos. 384, 52, 79, 90, 94, 381.

(5) The wider circulation of missionary literature, leaflets, books and papers is very desirable. Let our pastors diligently use these means. We urge them to correspond with representatives of the Laymen's Missionary Movement at 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., and No. 1 Madison Ave., New York.

(7) To facilitate the work of the Board of Missions and save interest, we urge that collections for missions be taken and the money forwarded as soon as possible.

(8) We heartily approve the suggestion of our presiding elder, that a District Mission and Church Extension Society be formed. We endorse the work of the Church Extension Boards, and urge early collections in full for this cause. In the case of Church Extension as well as missions, this district has received more from the Board than it has paid in to its treasury. Yet the need is great. Churches are needed at Belle City, Houma, Mermentau and Esther; and also new churches at Eunice and Crowley.

As to Crowley, we desire to offer Brother Atkinson our heartiest god-speed in his great undertaking to erect a new $30,000 church, and to endorse his application to the Conference Board of Church Extension for a donation of $500.

(9) We highly endorse the work of the American Bible Society in this district.

(10) We call attention to the important work being done for missions by our women, and urge them to organize societies wherever none exist, under the latest provisions of the discipline.

(11) We want to lay anew upon the hearts of our Sunday schools and Leagues the needs of our French Mission field, with a view to securing monthly contributions from every such organization.

(12) We call upon every one of our pastors to hold at least one meeting and give the proceeds, above expenses, to the Mission Board to assist in the support of our Conference Evangelist, Brother Turner.

(13) We recommend to the Board of Missions for generous support the charges of Belle City, Vermilion Circuit, and Grand Chenier. Let them be cared for first. If possible, appropriations should be made for Sulphur, St. Martinville, Armandville, and Jennings.

NOT ONLY NOT INJURIOUS, BUT ACTUALLY BENEFICIAL.

Users of tea, coffee, cocoa and Coca-Cola will be interested to learn that these beverages, all of which owe their refreshing qualities to the presence of caffeine, are not only not injurious to health, but are positively beneficial. Aside from the delightful flavor and the nourishing qualities of these drinks, it is now demonstrated that the caffeine contained in them has the physiological effect of preventing injury from mental and muscular fatigue. "It is worry that kills," according to the teachings of the Medical Authorities and it has now been demonstrated that caffeine draws the sting from fatigue and worry. It is shown that exercise of the mind and the muscles is beneficial, but when that exercise is carried to the extreme and becomes exhausting labor, the effect is injurious. It is at this point that the caffeine-containing beverages come to our assistance and prevent the evil effects of wear and tear.

A similar condition obtains in reference to the exhausting effects of extreme heat, which are counteracted by the refreshing qualities of a cool glass of Coca-Cola or iced tea.

The annual consumption of caffeine in the form of tea, coffee, and cocoa, is given as follows: For the United States 16,248,221 pounds or 3.5 grains per capita per day; Great Britain, 8,059,123 pounds or 3.7 grains per capita per day; Germany 6,650,338 pounds or 2.85 grains per capita per day. As infants, children, and some adults are not consumers, it is safe to say that the average user of these beverages consumes approximately five grains per day. As practically every adult takes caffeine in one or other of the various forms, coffee, tea, cocoa, or Coca-Cola, and suffers no injury, as it were, we are inclined to regard the decision of the scientists as simply confirming what we already knew from actual experience.—Advertisement.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

ASK FOR CATALOGUE and SPECIAL DONATION PLAN No. 33. ESTABLISHED 1888
THE C. S. BELL CO. Hillsboro, Ohio

IN DEFENSE OF LODI CIRCUIT.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you allow me the privilege of answering Rev. R. A. Burroughs' letter concerning the Lodi Circuit. Fortunately all of the people of that charge are not dead; some of us still live and have many happy remembrances of the past, while we were members of that church.

If my memory serves me right, the people were not pleased with the changes that the Conference had made, but, as loyal Methodists, we accepted what was done and tried to do our duty. Brother Burroughs and family were warmly received by the community and an old-fashioned hospitality was extended them. Every Methodist family vied with each other in entertaining them. Lodi was a small village, and, no house being vacant, the stewards secured a farm home, close enough to walk to and from. The ladies were enthusiastic, and an Aid Society was organized, which did valuable work. The men were equally pleased; soon a building committee was formed, and a more pleasant year could not be imagined. The preacher and family were everywhere welcome. All was love and harmony; no one thought of trouble.

I heard Brother B. preach his farewell sermon. I am sorry to say he gave us a scolding instead of a sermon. I do not pretend to say that every one paid according to his or her ability, but I am sure the preacher erred by not always filling his regular appointment, and by showing at his other churches a lack of appreciation of the people at Lodi. We have been glad that Brother Burroughs has been so highly honored in the Texas Conference, and so far as my knowledge extends, the Lodi church has thought lovingly of him. We are sorry that those years he spent with us occupy an unpleasant place in his memory. We have no apology to make, for as we see it, we did our full duty.

LAKE, MISS.

Brother Dan Kelly held a sixteen days' meeting here in June. All the night meetings except on Sunday were held in the little schoolhouse at Merrill's Mill, one mile from town. The good people at the Mill appreciated the extra efforts of our going so far and the house was full every night. Brother Kelly is not well and gave of his strength to its limit, and God gave him power. Many souls were uplifted. Fifty-one in all have joined the Church; forty the Methodist Church and eleven the other Churches.

On Sunday, June 16th, the men at the Mill made the big plainer shed ready by seating it comfortably, carrying the organ over and otherwise preparing for the big crowd which attended both the morning and night services. It was estimated that over seven-hundred were seated under the big shed, where there were plenty of ice water and a most refreshing breeze. A splendid dinner was served on long tables, and the inspiring afternoon service was as well attended as the morning service. Brother Kelly won us all as his loving friends, as he wins all wherever he goes. Our earnest prayers go with him in his life-work of winning souls.

What indeed does not that word "cheerfulness" imply? It means a contented spirit; it means a pure heart; it means a kind, loving disposition; it means humility and charity; it means a generous appreciation of others and a modest opinion of self.—Thackeray.

Editorial

The Presbyterian of the South calls attention to the fact that Gov. Woodrow Wilson and Gov. Thomas R. Marshall, the Democratic nominees for the Presidency and Vice Presidency are both Presbyterians. After next November we shall be able to tell whether they belong to the class of the "elect" or "non-elect."

The International Bible Students' Conference, held a few days since in Washington, is reported to have adopted a resolution declaring that "there is no such place, state, or condition as a hell of fire and brimstone for the torment of the wicked." Possibly these speculators may some day be taught to think differently in the FIERY school of experience.

Every calling has its peculiar temptations. One of those to which pastors are especially liable is to visit and form their friendships among the well-to-do people in whose homes they find comfort and congeniality, to the neglect of the poorer classes. In many of our pastoral charges between those struggling for a livelihood and the Church there exists a great gulf that sympathy and love alone can remove. In the blessed work of obliterating it the preacher should lead. Our Lord lounged not in the palaces of the rich, but his ministry was chiefly to the stricken and the needy. And well may his representatives on earth follow in his shining footsteps.

The Hon. W. S. Howard, of Georgia, has introduced in Congress a bill to stop all work on the Sabbath in the District of Columbia, except that which is considered positively necessary. He affirms that Washington is setting the rest of the country a bad example, and that the Government is one of the chief violators of the day of rest. If Mr. Howard could procure the adoption of this measure and the various States in the Union would pass a similar law, such action would accomplish more toward safeguarding the welfare of the Republic than the carrying out of all that is proposed in our high-sounding political platforms. The problems that will most affect the future of the Nation are moral problems.

"Earth's children cleave to earth" (to life), but that is not the only thing to which they cling. Far too many of them hold with tenacious grip to various forms of evil. One would think that when a custom or business has wrought wreck and ruin and no good in the world for decades or centuries, that men would rise up and put it down; but not so. Though it is evil, and only evil, and that continually, and though it has left behind it in all lands and ages a trail of blood and sorrow, the saloon yet has many advocates. Thousands vote for it, fight for it, and insist that it would be a calamity to destroy it. Truly, it is from THEMSELVES that many people must be saved.

CHRISTIANITY'S BETTER OUTLOOK.

Human life brings with it perplexing problems from which there is no escape. To live is a tremendous responsibility. Every man must have relations with his fellow-beings, and in the course of nature these ties must be severed, bringing sorrow and heart-ache. Some of every circle must pass away before others, leaving those who remain lonely and grief-stricken. Nowhere can one be found who is not bound to the unseen realm by the sacred and enduring cords of love. Into its shadows have passed forms and faces that we long to see again, and we wonder if we shall overtake them when our days on earth are ended and we follow them into the grave and what lies beyond. Incapable of thought must be he who never fronts the unknown future and in his heart cries out for tidings of those who were with us here and who, after winning our love, went from us, but from whom has come no word to tell us of their fate. A pathetic instance of a bereft and solitary old man standing on eternity's brink and peering out into its darkness, craving to know its mighty secrets, is seen in the case of United States Senator Shelby M. Cullom, of Illinois, who has been much longer in the upper branch of Congress than any other member of that distinguished body. In the concluding chapter of his recently issued book, "Fifty Years in the Public Service," appears the following touching outburst of feeling:

"I have survived both of my wives and all of my children. As I think of it now, I do not know where I obtained the strength to survive all these sorrows. I have no great fear of death, except the natural dread of the physical pain which usually accompanies it. I certainly wish, beyond any words I have power to express, that I could have greater assurance that there will be a reuniting with those we love and those who loved us in some future world; but, from my reading of Scripture, and even admitting that there is a hereafter, I cannot find any satisfactory evidence to warrant such a belief. Could I believe that I should meet the loved ones who have gone before, I do not know but that I should look forward with pleasure to the 'passing across.' Not having this belief, I am quite content to stay where I am as long as I can; and finally, when old Charon appears to row me over the river Styx, I shall be ready to go."

The only cure for such harassing doubts and anxieties as these expressed by Senator Cullom is a full acceptance of the teachings of the Holy Scriptures and an experimental knowledge of the risen Christ. The intellect alone can bring no relief. The human reason can find intimations of immortality—nothing more. It is the Bible alone that speaks in clear and authoritative tones of the future. To be sure, the light that it sheds upon it is not as full as we should like, but it is enough to quiet the anxious soul and to awaken within it a sweet trust and a buoyant hope. We may safely assume that God has revealed in his blessed Word all that we need to know, and perhaps all that it is best for us to know.

It is the assurance that it gives of a future life and the comfort that it thus furnishes at times when we most need it, that makes the divine revelation so indispensable to mankind. Take it from us, and we have practically nothing left to sustain us when our loved ones pass away or when we ourselves stand facing death and the grave. Contrast, for instance, the uncertain and mournful words of Senator Cullom concerning his dead and the hereafter with the confident and triumphant utterances of St. Paul: "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain until the coming of the Lord, shall not precede them which are asleep. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." And again, "I am now ready to be offered and the time of my departure is at hand: I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Undoubtedly, humanity's most valuable possession is the Christian religion. Compared to its revealed and Spirit-attested truths, the boasted discoveries of man are insignificant. Without them the race would be orphaned, impoverished, ruined. How unsatisfactory and dreary, even when taken at its best, must be a life of unbelief!

"Alas for him who never sees
The stars shine through his cypress trees;
Who hopeless lays his dead away,
Nor looks to see the breaking day
Above the mournful marbles play;
Who has not learned in hours of faith
The truth, to flesh and sense unknown,
That Life is ever Lord of death
And Love can never lose its own."

THE ERA A MONTHLY.

After August 1 the Epworth Era will be issued as a monthly. The proposal to make it such is said to be meeting with very general approval. Referring to the change, Dr. S. A. Steel, its first editor, says: "The change of the paper from a weekly to a monthly seems to be a wise move. It will not only prove an advantage to the financial side of the problem, but will also enable the editors to make a journal better adapted in some important respects to the work it serves." The price of the new monthly, in clubs of ten or more, sent to one address, will be 50 cents; the price of individual subscriptions will be 75 cents. The editors are offering a choice list of prizes for the best contributions of certain kinds. This should have the effect of stimulating literary activity among the young people of the Church. We wish for the new Epworth Era a large circulation and a widening sphere of usefulness.

THE CLOSED CHURCH.

Many of the churches in every city throughout the country will soon be closed for the summer vacation season. While it is true that a large number, perhaps a majority, of the worshipers who frequent these churches are out of town for a time, it is deplorable that any church should be closed for any part of the year.

So far as has been discovered, there is no passage in Holy Writ which authorizes the closing of a church at any time of the year. It is not only proper, but necessary, that every minister of the gospel should have a rest from the work of his office at least once a year, for this work, if properly and conscientiously performed, is arduous and fatiguing.

The work which the pastor of a church does is not his own work, but God's. When it is necessary for a pastor to be away, some one should be provided to take his place. It is keeping everlastingly at it that brings success in all things, and there should be no cessation at any time in the carrying on of the religious work in any community.

Those who attend church regularly have already been reached, and are within the sphere of religious influence. There is always somebody who does not go regularly to church, some one who gives no thought to his or her spiritual welfare, and the effort to reach these should be unremitting for three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and every year on the calendar of time.—Albany Argus.

BIRTH-REGENERATION AGAIN.

By T. H. Lipscomb, B. D.

Since Dr. Featherstun insists on again "correcting the erroneous teaching" of his young brother, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, "concerning infant salvation," that same young brother likewise insists that in so doing Dr. Featherstun should regard two principles, the correctness of which he will doubtless concede:

1. To avoid all misrepresentation of my position by use of language which is ambiguous and misleading.
2. To agree upon the subject for discussion, and then stick to the subject fairly and squarely, without jumping to another or evading the issue by a return to ambiguities.

Neither of these principles has Dr. Featherstun hitherto regarded in taking issue with me; and it is neither pleasant nor fair to be misrepresented and evaded, and then advised to read up on the subject of "the salvation of infants."

I beg to remind Dr. Featherstun, as he very well knows, that never in my life have I questioned the salvation of infants. In discussing this subject with him two years ago, I specifically stated: "Now, we are all agreed that infants are born under a dispensation of grace equivalent to a justified state; free by the grace of God from the condemnation which the sin of humanity has brought upon us all as a race;" and, further, that "Children dying in infancy are sanctified, as well as saved, through Christ's atonement." Is it not then an evasion of the subject at issue and a wilful return to misleading ambiguities for him to entitle an article "Infant Salvation," and state the express purpose of it as being to "correct the erroneous teaching" of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb "concerning infant salvation?"

The question between us is plainly this: Are children born regenerate? I answer, no; he answers, yes. The further question, now immediately before us is, Does Methodism teach that children are born regenerate? Again he answers, yes; and again I emphatically answer, no. Neither Methodism nor any other Christian Church in any age has ever taught this doctrine of birth-regeneration, or pre-natal regeneration, as he now says it may be. With somewhat more of research than he gives me credit for, I have studied not only Methodist authorities but also histories of Christian Doctrine and of the Christian Church, and this being born-again-when-you-are-born, or before-you-are-born theory, has no mention, much less support, anywhere. Because the common sense of men, until of late, has ever recognized that when Christ said, "Ye must be born again," he referred to a birth subsequent to physical birth, and of a spiritual nature. One exception we must make, however, to this statement; for we find one F. G. Hibbard (the identity of whom three encyclopaedias reveal not) credited with teaching this doctrine, and refuted by Ralston in his "Elements of Divinity." It seems, then, that Dr. Featherstun is a Hibbardite, instead of a Methodist, in his teaching on this subject.

As for the teaching of Methodism, Watson specifically states: "They are not born regenerate." (Institutes, Vol. II, 57-60) Ralston refutes the doctrine of birth-regeneration, as taught by Hibbard, and states that children "are born in a state of pollution and legal guilt, but that, through the Atonement of Christ, all who die in infancy will infallibly be saved." Of the six principal theories which he names as having been advocated as to the state of infants, not one is that of birth-regeneration. Fletcher denies even that the Episcopal Church taught baptismal regeneration in infancy, except conditionally, and exclaims: "If by nature we are really and truly born in sin, our regeneration cannot be a mere metaphor or a vain ceremony; our spiritual birth must be real and positive." "How dreadful the error of those who imagine that all those whose faces have been typically washed with the material water in baptism are now effectually 'born again of living water and of the Holy Spirit.'" The characteristic Methodist attitude on this subject is well illustrated by Whedon, who cites from the life of the eloquent Methodist preacher, Sumnerfield, the following incident: "During one of his illnesses he was visited by two highly respectable clergymen, one of whom inquired, 'How old are you?' The suffering saint replied, 'I was born in Preston, in England in 1798, and born again at Dublin, in Ireland, in 1817.' On his visitors expressing surprise at his answer, he rejoined, in the language of Jesus to Nicodemus, 'Art thou a master in Israel and knowest not these things?'"

As for Wesley's teaching on this subject, to which Dr. Featherstun appeals, John Wesley makes impossible by direct utterance any claim that he believed that children are born regenerate. We read (Vol. I, p. 401): "Every one descended from Adam comes into the world spiritually dead, dead to God,—void of the image of God, of all that righteousness and holiness wherein Adam was created. * * * This, then, is the foundation of the new birth,—the entire corruption of our nature. Hence it is, that being born in sin, we must be 'born again.'" Again, in a series of morning and evening prayers for children, Wesley (Vol. VI, p. 423) teaches children to pray thus: "O Lord my God, I am taught by thy word that I am by nature born in sin and a child of wrath; and that except I am born again I cannot see the kingdom of God. O Lord, do thou teach me the meaning of the new birth, that I a child of wrath may become a child of grace." Do such utterances even remotely suggest that Mr. Wesley believed that children are born regenerate? Are they not on the other hand, if possible, extreme in their insistence on the need of a change of heart in later years?"

But coming to the words quoted by Dr. Featherstun, "It is certain that our Church supposes that all who are baptized in their infancy are at the same time born again," Dr. Featherstun does not even claim (no intelligent man would) that by "our Church" Wesley meant Methodism. It is simply an admission, such as Fletcher might have made also, that the Episcopal church to which Wesley belonged teaches baptismal regeneration in infancy, nor does it at all support the doctrine of birth-regeneration. It denies, indeed, that children are born regenerate through its very insistence that the re-birth takes place when the child is baptized.

Methodists have always denied the Anglican, Catholic, and Lutheran doctrine of baptismal regeneration in infancy, as Dr. Featherstun will admit; and surely he needs not to be informed that the distinction between Evangelical and Non-Evangelical Churches has largely hinged upon whether the doctrine of baptismal regeneration in infancy has been taught or denied, the form of their religious activities being directed accordingly along different lines. If children have already been born again when they were baptized (or born, as Dr. Featherstun holds), why then they need not to be taught to seek and obtain this through faith in Christ, but only to be instructed in the articles of religion and confirmed, as 'is the custom in non-evangelical churches. That Methodism has ever occupied a very different position is surely too well known to need emphasis. So we maintain that not only specific Methodist authorities, but the whole evangelical history of Methodism proves conclusively our statement: "Methodists have never taught regeneration in infancy (either at birth or in baptism), but that regeneration in the full Christian sense takes place only as, in conscious need, the soul cleaves unto Christ as a personal Savior."

As for the change in our Ritual for the Baptism of Infants, to which Dr. Featherstun again appeals, we have already discussed this at length in our article, "Are Children Born Regenerate?" in the Advocate of Oct. 27, 1910. However, a word further.

The language of the old Ritual, as Dr. Alexander states in his Introduction to the New Ritual, was thought by some to "squat at the Romish doctrine of baptismal regeneration," and because of it it has sometimes been charged that we teach baptismal regeneration in infancy. (We have never even been suspected of teaching birth-regeneration.) So the change was made, and we find the new Ritual, while asserting "Forasmuch as all men, though fallen in Adam, are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer;"—under a dispensation of grace as we have always held—omits the old allusions to and prayers for regeneration. Later, in the forms for Adult Baptism, the passage from John 3:1-3 is read in which Christ affirms to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again; that which is born of the flesh is flesh," etc., and the congregation is besought to "call upon God the Father, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that of his bounteous mercy he will grant to these persons now to be baptized with water, that which by nature they cannot have; that they may be baptized with the Holy Ghost, received into Christ's holy Church, and be made lively members of the same." Again, prayer is offered that "these persons may enjoy the everlasting benediction of thy heavenly washing."

If to eliminate language concerning regeneration as inappropriate and misleading in the order for the baptism of Infants, and then to read Scripture commanding regeneration, and to pray for regeneration in the order for the baptism of such as have come to years of accountability is to teach that we are born regenerate, why, then, we may despair of making anything clear. To a child, it seems, it would make plain that Methodists do not teach infant regeneration in any form; but rather that the birth from above comes when the heart is surrendered to God in faith.

Concerning Presbyterian teaching, it might be well for Dr. Featherstun to follow his own advice as to reading up a little before writing; for the clause which he quotes as indicating a recent change of sentiment in that Church concerning infant regeneration is identical, so far as reference to regeneration is concerned, with the statement of the Westminster Confession of Faith. The only change is concerning election; the old reading, "Elect infants, dying in infancy," etc.; the new, "Being elect, all infants dying in infancy are saved and regenerated through the Spirit of Christ." This is almost identical with my statement, to which Dr. Featherstun took exception at the beginning of this controversy: "We believe that children dying in infancy are sanctified, as well as, saved, through Christ's atonement." How Dr. Featherstun can approve the one and object to the other statement I cannot see. I am glad to find, indeed, such strong support for my position. Dr. Featherstun's thunderbolt turns against him.

One further difficulty removed and we are done. Dr. Featherstun represents Methodists as pitifully blind and undiscerning by stating, "Methodists cannot see the justice of regenerating dying infants and leave living infants unregenerate." He has evidently not read on this subject McClintock and Strong, the greatest religious Encyclopedia ever compiled by Methodists; for it says (Vol. VIII, p. 1017): "In the case of children dying in infancy, they, of course, need regeneration to fit them for the eternal world. And there can be no difficulty in conceiving that they are regenerated by the Holy Spirit, in virtue of Christ's death." We ourselves also, in a former article, sought humbly to enlighten Dr. Featherstun on this point. He asked, "Has a dead child more claim on God's love and grace than a living one?" We answered, "No, though one needs a different expression of God's grace from that which the other needs. The dead child cannot be led into regeneration and sanctification, as God will surely seek to lead the living one; so he must be lifted into such a state, and the transformation wrought without his volition, for it can exercise none."

Having sought again to give a reason for the faith that is in us, and "to banish and drive away erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word," we shall in conclusion refer Dr. Featherstun to a solemn paragraph from one of our Methodist fathers, with whom he thinks me unfamiliar. To it we pray that he may give heed; for we are convinced that this Hibbardite doctrine of birth-regeneration is destructive of the very foundations of evangelical Christianity; dismissing the command, "Ye must be born again," with the answer, "I was born again when I was born," without even honoring the Church and its sacraments, as do, at least, those Churches which erroneously teach baptismal regeneration.

Our quotation is from Ralston (Elements of Divinity, p. 417): "Regeneration is the grand focal point, occupying a central position in theology. Here all the important doctrines of the gospel meet; and any radical error in the theories of men may generally be detected. For it may well be said, that whoever is sound in his entire view of the doctrine of regeneration cannot be seriously erroneous in any essential doctrine of salvation; but, on the other hand, a radical error in this doctrine will not only extend its influence to almost every leading doctrine of Christianity, but it will endanger the salvation of the soul. * * But he that not only fatally errs on this subject, but 'teaches men' to follow him—it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the midst of the sea.' May the Spirit of truth enlighten our understandings, that on this important subject we may have correct thoughts and speak right words."

SHOULD STICK TO THE GOSPEL.

In this day it is not unusual for ministers bring politics into the pulpit. Not only are some clergymen taking the stump for the candidate of their choice for presidential honors, but they make bold to speak out at regular church services. This is not only a lowering of the dignity of the pulpit, but the loss of a great opportunity. A minister is an ambassador of Christ, commissioned to preach the good news of Salvation. The opportunities to proclaim Christ from the pulpit are none too many. In these days when so many Christians attend only one service a week and many others much less frequently, the hour of public worship is filled with solemn meaning for the preacher. In view also of the fact that at every service there are those needing salvation and many more hungering for comfort and guidance, how tragic it is that a pastor should face his people with a political speech or an ethical essay or any dissertation without the distinct note of the Gospel. We are perfectly aware that the Gospel is to be preached in its application to present-day needs, but this can best be accomplished by ministering to the needs of the soul. A man must be right with God first of all before the other interests of his life will be connected with lofty motives. Small wonder that congregations are small if the husks of political harangue and social clap-trap are dealt out instead of the true bread of life. They have a great deal to answer for who so pervert their high commission as to make it a means of airing their pet theories of political and social amelioration.—Christian Intelligencer.

THE WASHINGTON CITY CHURCH.

Mr. Editor:

A transaction of moment to the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference took place towards the close of the Commencement of Millsaps College. The Representative Church, Washington, D. C., was discussed by the Commission selected at Meridian during the Annual Conference. This committee met at the Edwards House, becoming guests at a luncheon presided over by Mr. J. L. Dantzler. Rev. George S. Sexton, D.D., the general manager of this enterprise, was with us, charged with his measure of fine humor and intelligent enthusiasm in his work.

With responses from the Conferences, what they have been before the Doctor's onset of eloquence and practical sense and fine humor, what would he have not accomplished from a hand-to-hand, house-to-house campaign? Saint John's Cathedral, N. Y., "a toy would appear."

Organization round the table at this luncheon resulted in the election of the writer for Chairman, and M. L. Burton, Secretary and Treasurer. Inquiring for business to be undertaken, the proposition and pledge of the Mississippi Conference of $5,000, payable in 4 years, as our share in this project was laid before us. Dividing this sum gave the Conference $1250 to be obtained this year. Mr. Dantzler promptly pledged his district for half the amount. Six districts remained to distribute the balance of the first installment among. A manager was appointed for each of these districts, with a request that he proceed at once to gather up what was allotted to his district. These managers are as follows: Meridian, G. S. Harmon; Hattiesburg, John A. McLeod; Brookhaven, Robert Selby; Jackson, T. B. Clifford; Port Gibson, E. J. Bomer; Newton, Literature suitable to inspire interest and make the plan to have this Representative Church at Washington appear desirable to our people was promised by Dr. Sexton, and has just been received. You were to be requested to give us space in the Advocate for a proper presentation of this cause.

Our object will be gained as soon as the project is made plain to the Methodists of the Mississippi Conference. Very small sums will be required from our charges—none will be hurt—and we will have pleasure in discharging our subscription towards a property that will cost a quarter of a million dollars, and proclaim to the world the amplitude of that hospitality which has its springs only in the Southland, and which must be at its best where we open a church for the world's worship.

THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Greenville District of the North Mississippi Conference opened its forty-second session in the Methodist Church in Greenville, Miss., June 26, 1912, with the reading by Presiding Elder Woolard of a lesson from the third chapter of Romans, beginning with the nineteenth verse, which was followed by a very helpful discourse on "Man's Guilt of Sin and His Need of a Regenerated Heart."

After the devotional service, Judge Percy Bell, on behalf of the local church, extended in a most happy manner a cordial welcome to the Conference. In the course of his remarks, Judge Bell reviewed some of the hardships of the early itinerants and also some of the difficulties under which our present preachers have to labor. He emphasized the fact that nothing but the Spirit of God could induce a true man to turn away from secular pursuits to become a minister in things sacred.

For the first time in a number of years all the pastors of the district were present. There are four new men in the Greenville District: T. M. Brownlee, E. N. Broyles, E. R. Smoot, and D. R. Wasson. This is their first year in the Delta, and the first year in the Conference for Smoot and Wasson. Brownlee and Smoot have suffered from overflow conditions, but their homes have been out of the water district. Wasson was at the head of the water; his entire charge was overflowed, and in some places to the extent of ten feet in depth. Broyles was in the center of the current; he could not get away from his home unless he went by boat. These pastors have uttered no words of discouragement to their people, but have at all times been examples of hope and good cheer. We feel really proud of these young fellows because they have behaved like veterans.

Quite a number of our laymen were present. We noticed that our laymen took a more active part in the deliberations of the Conference than they have been doing on former occasions. That is as it ought to be. Our laymen are capable of doing great things in the work, and we are glad to see them turn their hands to it. Mr. J. T. Mathis spoke to us on missions; Prof. Brinson and Mr. Dunn on the Sunday school work, and Mr. J. H. Sherard on hospital and orphanage work. All of their speeches were not only interesting, but helpful. Mr. J. H. Johnson of Clarksdale and Mr. H. R. Park of Merigold presented to the Conference very interesting papers on the financial condition of the district. Other laymen added much to the interest and success of the Conference by their presence and counsel.

The reports of the pastors showed that the whole district has been to a greater or less extent demoralized because of the recent high water. It is true, not all of the district has been flooded, but all the district lies close up to the levee. The people could not tell before the break where the crevasse would be, if there should be a break. They had to make preparations to take care of themselves, their stock, and their other possessions. They had to do all of this before the water came, because after the water overflows the country it is too late to make preparations, as some few found out to their great loss. Then, after the preparations have been made, there is the suspense that has to be endured before one finds out whether he will be in the overflow or out of it. The overflow does not depend so much on high or low land as it does on the place where the levee breaks. Thus, if the levee had broken a few miles north or south of the place where it did break, a different section of the Delta would have been overflowed. This knowledge of overflow conditions kept the whole district in suspense for quite a while before the levee broke. The pastors, however, stayed at their posts as Methodist preachers have always done when dangers have threatened their people. Rev. L. A. McKeown, of Cleveland, has half of his Conference collections in hand. He stands at the head of the district in that line. Brothers Garner and Young are doing well and lead in the circulation of our Conference organ, one of the most important duties of our preachers. Coleman, Ward, T. M. Bradley and J. T. Lewis reported progress in their respective charges; Stormont at Shelby has just finished one of the most complete little brick churches in all the Delta; Rev. J. H. Smith gave a good account of his Boyle people; Rev. J. J. Brooks, now the veteran of our district, is as genial and as faithful in the service as ever; and Rev. W. S. La-grone made a good report of the work of the Greenville church.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, our new President of Millsaps College, was with us and made a fine impression on the Conference; Rev. J. R. Countiss made us feel, while he was speaking that every girl in the district ought to be in Grenada College; Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick brought us one of her most helpful Sunday school addresses, and Rev. W. L. Duren gave us an eloquent missionary speech that was unique in its subject matter. Brother Duren is the new President of our Conference Board of Missions.

The Conference granted license to preach to Mr. Oscar Wynn of Shelby and Mr. L. P. Wasson of Tunica. Both of these young men have had more than ordinary preparation for the work. Brother Wasson was recommended to our Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The preaching at the Conference was done by Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Rev. J. R. Countiss, and Rev. L. P. Wasson. Their sermons were above the ordinary, and this scribe felt that if they preached that way all the time they were entitled to a seat among the mighty.

The Conference passed into history at high noon on Friday 28, with every member feeling that Rev. W. W. Woollard had presided over and directed the business of the Conference with all the grace and facility of a Bishop, and that Rev. W. S. Lagrone and his Greenville people were ideal Conference hosts.

OUR WOMAN'S WORK.

Items from the Holly Springs District.

The mid-week prayer-meeting hour of the Wood Street Church was turned over to the ladies of the Foreign Missionary Society on June 26. The president, Mrs. W. H. Hartwell, presided and made a very interesting talk. Others who took part in the exercises were Miss Lillie Hartwell, Mrs. T. J. Binford, Mrs. A. C. Yeager and Mrs. J. Mauldin. The pastor, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, closed the service with an appropriate talk, and called for an offering, which met with a favorable response. The talks were interspersed with beautiful music. Altogether, it was a most helpful and pleasant hour.

Mrs. J. R. Binford, the District Missionary Secretary, attended the recent session of the Holly Springs District Conference at Taylor, Miss., and addressed the body in the interest of the woman's work. She received offers of help from many of the pastors, and was much encouraged by their promises of assistance. Comparatively few of them, however, reported woman's missionary societies in their charges. Mrs. Binford will do her best to enlarge their number and increase the activity of those already in existence during the year.

Vicksburg, Miss., July 8, 1912.

THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference was held at Waynesboro, Miss., June 10-13. The consensus of opinion was that it was the most spiritual and one of the most helpful conferences ever held in the district.

The attendance was unusually good. There were present all the active clerical members except two—Brothers C. M. Martin and R. H. Kleiser, who were detained by the death of relatives. Nine local preachers and forty-eight laymen, besides seven participating visitors, were present.

Despite the bad weather at the beginning of the year, and the consequent late start in many charges, the reports of the pastors were good; all were cheerful, and the indications are hopeful. Financially, and in several other respects, the district is ahead of this time last year.

The presiding elder followed the order of the Discipline in the program; hence every interest of the Church was given attention, with special emphasis on missions and Sunday school work.

The matter of ministerial supply was also emphasized, and each preacher was asked to report prospective candidates. It was discovered that a number of capable young men contemplated entering the ministry.

Three young men were licensed to preach: John Edward Robinson, from the Enterprise and Stonewall charge; Charles Bethel Roberts, of Moscow, and Hugh Robert McKee, of De Kalb.

Four were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial: Albert Sidney Byrd, supplying Vinville; Algernon Sidney Oliver, supplying Matherville; Hugh R. McKee, of De Kalb, and Obed B. Matheny, of Matherville. William L. Spinks was recommended for recognition of elder's orders.

The following local preachers were passed in character and had their licenses renewed: A. S. Oliver, A. W. O'Bryant, H. J. Marshall, W. W. Moore, J. T. Griffith, O. B. Matheny, Alex Trotter, M. G. Matheny, J. R. Sasnett, Lowry Smith, Wm. Haywood, D. P. Yaeger, H. E. Raley, J. M. Robertson, J. T. Daws, L. B. Moore, and W. L. Spinks.

Those in orders who were passed in character were: A. S. Byrd, E. C. Sterns, A. C. Flowers, J. N. Broadway, J. N. Tucker, C. W. Campbell, R. B. Chisholm, and J. R. Zachary.

The lay delegation to the Annual Conference is L. P. Brown, D. S. Harmon, T. H. Nailor, and J. R. Huggins. Alternates: J. W. Beeson, T. G. Bennett, W. D. Hawkins, and W. E. Lathrum. W. E. Lathrum, of Waynesboro, was elected district lay leader. The licensing committee is composed of W. H. LaPrade, G. S. Harmon, C. N. Guice, John Paul, and the presiding elder.

The amount assigned to the district for the Washington City Church, $110, was readily taken up by subscription.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, Secretary of the Board of Church Extension; Robert Selby, Conference Secretary of Education; W. M. Williams, Manager of the Orphans' Home; John L. Green, Mississippi Children's Home Society; H. A. Gatlin and J. T. Leggett, representing Whitworth College, and Miss Daisy Magee, of the Sunday School Board, addressed the Conference concerning special work. The Woman's Missionary Society was represented by Mrs. W. H. LaPrade, Conference Corresponding Secretary, and Mrs. R. M. Hand, District Secretary.

Resolutions were passed expressing the gratification of the Conference over the election of Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., to the presidency of Millsaps College, and the re-election of Rev. W. M. Williams as manager of the Orphans' Home.

In proof of the abiding affection in which he is held, resolutions of appreciation of Rev. W. H. Lewis, the faithful, zealous and capable presiding elder, were passed, and a committee appointed to secure a more substantial token of regard.

The preaching was evangelistic, and gracious services were held, marked by the Spirit's presence and power. The pulpit was occupied by W. F. Baggett, B. W. Lewis, R. S. Stuart, W. H. LaPrade, G. S. Harmon, C. N. Guice and B. F. Jones in the order named.

The hospitality of Waynesboro was royally given, and the attentions of the pastor, Rev. W. G. Forsythe, and his committee of laymen, unremitting.

The next Conference goes to Quitman.

The New York Observer, which was one of the oldest Presbyterian weeklies in the United States, will be no longer issued.

Mrs. Mary Du Pre, an esteemed member of the Tulip Street M. E. Church, South, of Nashville, Tenn., who recently died, bequeathed that congregation a valuable house and lot for a parsonage.

The Methodists of Toronto, Canada, have a portable church which will seat 130 persons, and which has two Sunday school class rooms. It is said to be accomplishing much good in that great Methodist city.

It is stated that the recent Vanderbilt Biblical Institute was attended by nearly 250 preachers, who came from thirty or more Conferences. The exercises from beginning to end are reported to have been of an unusually high order.

A new Y. M. C. A. building has recently been completed in Birmingham, Ala., at a cost of $200,000. The structure is nine stories high and is equipped with every convenience for the carrying forward of the various branches of the Association's work.

The old Centenary College property at Jackson, La., which was formerly owned by the Methodists, has been acquired by the Baptists, who will establish a school there. The new institution will be known as Jackson University, and will open its doors for work next October.

The Methodist Church of Canada has declared its opposition not only to the use of tobacco, but also to the cultivation of the plant. We have long regarded the tobacco habit as a far greater evil than the present generation realizes, and we have no doubt that the opposition to it will increase with the passing years.

Mr. N. A. Clifford, of Lindsay, Cal., has given our church two lots and a house in Tulare, which will be sold and invested in a home for superannuates somewhere in the Fresno District. With this one, the Pacific Conference will have four such residences for veterans who have retired from the active service.

A Southern Methodist church was recently erected in a single rainy day at Dixieland, Fla., a suburb of Lakeland. The first nail was driven by Bishop H. C. Morrison, who also was announced to conduct the first service at the 8 o'clock p. m. the same day that the building was constructed. Truly, this is a fast-moving age.

The Publishers of the Missionary Review of the World have announced that the September number of that periodical will contain a sketch of the late Dr. Young Y. Allen, who as one of our missionaries in China achieved a world-wide fame. It will be from the pen of Dr. W. E. Griffiths, and will be profusely illustrated.

Along with the increase of endowment and other improvements at Trinity College, at Durham, N. C., there is talk of the establishment of a Woman's Annex, with first-class equipment and a curriculum unsurpassed in the South. A meeting in the interest of this enterprise was recently held by the citizens of Durham, and much interest and enthusiasm were manifested.

The New York Independent of July 11 contains the following in its "Literary Notes": "The Rev. James W. Lee writes a goodly sized volume to show that Christianity is The Religion of Science (Revel, $1.50), and so must be the faith of the coming man. The arguments are often fresh and original if not strictly scientific, and the style makes the book readable."

Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, the second daughter of the Democratic nominee for the Presidency, is a graduate of the Woman's College of Baltimore. It is said that she has contributed much toward making the church settlement in Philadelphia, called "The Light House," a success. She also has lately been chosen a member of the Board of the National Y. W. C. A.

From the Pacific Methodist Advocate of July 4, we take the following: "Rev. J. W. Byrd, who served the Hamilton (Montana) charge last year, and who since has been a student at Vanderbilt, has been placed in charge of our Church at Stockton, Cal., in place of Rev. I. D. Borders, the former pastor, who resigned." We are uninformally as to the circumstances that influenced Brother Borders to ask to be relieved of his work.

Since Dr. J. M. Buckley's retirement, the dean of Northern Methodist editors is Dr. Levi Gilbert, who for twelve years has occupied the tripod of the Western Christian Advocate, which is published at Cincinnati. He is a vigorous thinker and writer, and his paper ranks with the best religious weeklies issued in the United States. Dr. E. R. Zaring, the newly elected editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, was formerly Dr. Gilbert's assistant and received his journalistic training under him.

Dr. W. L. Wilson, of Ottawa, Kan., has been chosen Professor of Biology in Mississippi College, at Clinton, Miss. He is a native of Tennessee, but for a number of years has held a chair in the Ottawa University. At present he is on Puget Sound, collecting a fauna for his department. The campaign which is being conducted by the authorities of the Mississippi College to secure pupils for the next session is a vigorous one. An interesting feature of it will be a sixty-days tour of the State by the college quartet.

Dr. H. M. Hamill, the distinguished Superintendent of the Sunday School Training Work of the Southern Methodist Church, has the sympathy of friends all over the connection in his solicitude for his beloved wife, who has been seriously ill and who has had to undergo a surgical operation. Mrs. Hamill is a woman of beautiful Christian Character and a Sunday school specialist of national note. We trust that she will soon recover, and that both these capable workers may be able to resume their "loved employ" at an early date.

Dr. H. F. Sproles, one of the most widely known and best loved Baptist ministers in Mississippi, died at his home at Clinton on July 10, after an illness lasting about two weeks. He was born in Holmes County about sixty-eight years ago. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, and served through the whole four years of the Civil War. He attended the Baptist Theological Seminary at Greenville, S. C., and his ministerial career was a notably successful one. His first charge was at Carrollton, and afterwards he served with great efficiency the Baptist churches at Jackson and Vicksburg. At the time of his demise he was the teacher of the Bible and Homiletics in Mississippi College. For nearly a half century he had been an important factor in every moral and religious movement in his State. Dr. Sproles' gifts were solid rather than showy; though he did not possess the power of eloquence, he was a most interesting and helpful preacher. The greatest thing about him was his exalted and stainless character, which commanded universal respect. His obsequies were conducted in the college chapel at Clinton, and his remains were interred in the Cedarlawn Cemetery at Jackson.

Fort McHenry, near Baltimore, Md., has been abandoned as a fort, but will be preserved as an historic relic. It was the bombardment of this fort on Sept. 21, 1814, that inspired Francis Scott Key to write "The Star Spangled Banner." It is a worthy patriotic sentiment that thus preserves such a place for the observance of future generations.

A German merchant recently died and left his entire estate to the men working in his various factories. He based the distribution on the first annual wage of each employe multiplied by the number of years he had been with the firm. Thus, the laborers who had been faithful in service were raised to a position of ease by this good man's beneficence.

The amount of money now in the United States is $3,640,407,621. All of this is in circulation except $363,621,008, which is held in the treasury vaults as an asset of the United States Government. If all this money were pro rated, each person in the nation would have $34.26. Thus it may be easily seen how rapidly money must circulate in order to satisfy all the needs of mankind.

At its recent meeting, the school board of St. Tammany Parish voted to levy a special tax in order to pay the school children who live three miles or more from a schoolhouse and who reside in the second ward of that parish, twelve and a half cents per day for every day they attend school. This may be in the interest of education, but when it becomes necessary to hire parents to send their children to school, it is time to investigate the quality of the parents and possibly take legal action against them. We believe this act of the St. Tammany Board to be a very bad precedent.

Nearly two hundred cases of beer were spilled into the gutters in Greenville, Miss., last week. The liquor had been confiscated by the authorities while making a raid on "blind tigers." It is a good thing to destroy the foul stuff, but it seems like a shame to demoralize the tadpoles, crayfish, and other inhabitants of the gutters by a flood of such nasty stuff as beer.

On July 14 the National House of Representatives, by a vote of 222 to 1, adopted articles of impeachment against Judge Robert W. Archbald of the United States Commerce Court. Judge Archbald is alleged to have served his own interests while on the Federal bench to the jeopardizing of the interests of the United States. His case will now be tried before the United States Senate.

At a meeting in New York recently General Daniel E. Sickles, while speaking for the new Progressive party, gave as his reason for opposing the Democratic nominee is that he was a Southerner, and that no man born under "rebel" surroundings is fit to sit in the White House. If such a sentiment should in any way permeate the new party, its speedy ending would be a blessing.

Senator Hoke Smith, of Georgia, while recently defending a young man who had been arrested by a negro policeman, declared himself as against the employment of colored policemen in Washington, D. C., on account of it being necessary for so many Southerners to make their homes in Washington, and to most of them a negro officer is a source of annoyance. We concur with the Senator in this view.

The State Legislature of Louisiana, just adjourned, passed 258 measures and appropriated $9,341,983.70, which is $400,000 more than was appropriated by the most expensive session of the Sanders' administration. Some may look upon this as a sign of extravagance, but on the contrary, it is a sign that Louisiana is a growing State, and has a need of more money to meet the needs of its ever growing institutions.

Prof. Robert T. Sharp, A. M., Ph. D., dean of the graduate department and Professor of English at Tulane University, has been chosen acting president to fill the place recently made vacant by the resignation of President Craighead. Dr. Sharp is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College, and is in point of service and ability in every way worthy of the new honor thus conferred upon him. The election of a permanent president has been indefinitely postponed.

On July 1, the Minimum Wage Law creating a Minimum Wage Commission, went into effect in Massachusetts. The Commission's duties include the fixing of minimum wages for employes whenever it is found that laborers are being underpaid. Its greatest opportunity is that of making public annually the exact wages paid to the laborers in all the factories and public works of the State. If it proves to be a successful law, there will doubtless be created in every State in the Union Minimum Wage Commissions with similar duties.

It has been decided to establish a branch of the Juvenile Court in Baton Rouge. The cause of this decision is the fact that two lads under sixteen years of age are being detained in the jail there. It is claimed that the Reform School at Monroe has been unable because of a want of means to take care of all the boys who should be sent there; but the recent appropriation made by the Legislature has relieved that condition, and it is the desire of Superintendent Agnew to see all fit subjects for this reformatory sent to Monroe at once.

IMPORTANT REPORT OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

W. W. Pinson, General Secretary.

The constant financial aim of the Missionary Secretaries during the present quadrennium has been to maintain our missionary enterprise and at the same time reduce the indebtedness under which the Board found itself at the beginning of the quadrennium. It was apparent to them from the very beginning that, in order to realize this aim, it would be necessary to radically change the methods of the Board's financial administration. The most important change found to be necessary was that of directing the entire income of the Board to the support of a prescribed budget of annual expenditures. Heretofore, the Board had been operating under what was practically two distinct budgets. One of these was the appropriations based on the income from assessment; the other was made up of an indefinite number of independent specials authorized by the Board to be raised outside the regular income and having no direct connection with the support of the regular budget of appropriations. At the first called meeting of the Board in this quadrennium the General Secretary recommended that all items for which appeals were to be made during the year should hereafter be included in the list of appropriations and that no independent specials should be authorized. Such specials as were desired by individuals and churches were to be selected from the regular list of appropriations. There were several reasons for this recommendation:

The independent specials, it was found, had entailed a constantly accumulating deficit since, in many if not most cases, the entire amount of these specials was not raised and the balance was left to be paid out of the regular income, which was already taxed to its limit with the necessary and constant demands. Not only so, but these independent specials being a popular source of appeal multiplied missionary enterprises, while the regular income available for their support was almost at a standstill. This created a sort of financial fatty degeneration. In other words, it was a policy that the more successful it was, the more ruinous it became in the end. In the next place, this method, by the emphasis it required on the specials authorized, tended to divert attention from the regular needs and so leave them in the background. Then the freedom with which these specials were inaugurated brought about such a multiplication of them as worked confusion and mutual defeat.

Perhaps one of the greatest objections to that method was its failure to reach the rank and file of the Church, being essentially based upon special interest or unusual enlightenment, or some incidental relationship. Its educational value was for the few and not for the many.

The proposal of the Secretaries to provide for a united budget and so turn the entire income of the Board into the regular channels of support, naturally met a certain degree of skepticism as to its practicability. However, the one year that we have had to test this policy has not confirmed the fears of the skeptical. The very gratifying income of the Board during the past year has clearly indicated the favor with which this policy has been received by the Church. The number of specials has not been diminished. They have been correlated as a regular feature of our plan, and made to contribute to the orderly progress of the cause. The fact also that the Board was able to materially reduce its indebtedness, while at the same time supporting its enterprises, further justifies this first year's experiment on the new line.

At the session of the Board in May, 1911, a committee was appointed to consider and recommend a suitable and satisfactory financial policy for the Board to pursue. This committee reported at the recent session of the Board, as follows:

"We have considered Section 5 of the General Secretary's report, referring to the financial policy of the Board, and our report is as follows:

"A study of the facts convinces us that ultimate success in the missionary training and development of the Church, as well as the highest interests of our Missions and missionaries, are dependent on an orderly and well-regulated financial policy. Such a policy must set the whole missionary obligation before the whole Church and not rest its claims on temporary interest or enthusiasm for detached enterprises; nor should it rest its success on sporadic or independent appeals whose conditions and interests are temporary and special, rather than essential and permanent. If this great task is ever done it will be only when the Church as a whole is brought to realize its united obligation to the cause as a whole, and is brought to deliver its entire strength on definite and prescribed lines of advance. We, therefore, earnestly recommend:

"1. That this Board adhere steadfastly to its policy of a unified annual budget in which shall be included the objects to which the Church is to be asked to contribute each year, and that special objects outside this budget shall be undertaken only in cases of emergency, and then only after they have been considered and voted on by the Board in annual session.

"2. That all the departments of this Board and all those who represent the Board before the Church be required to limit their appeals to objects as above prescribed, and are earnestly urged to combine their efforts to insure the raising of the annual budget in full with as large a surplus as possible, that a steady and orderly advance may be maintained without the danger of incurring debt or of developing one field or enterprise at the expense of others equally worthy.

"3. That when special objects outside the annual appropriations are undertaken, under the authorization of the Board, the appeals therefor should be as far as possible limited to a prescribed section of the Church, in order that the confusion of multiplied and apparently rival appeals may be avoided and that attention may not be too widely drawn from the budget, and the total needs of the cause.

"4. We cannot too earnestly appeal to all our pastors, churches and members to co-operate with the Board in its policy, and that they concentrate their missionary giving on those objects and enterprises adopted and fostered by the Board, in order that the resources of the Church may be commanded for the task which the Church has in hand, and that they shall not allow new and spectacular missionary appeals from any source whatever to divert their attention from the authorized budget. The only constituency and source of support this Board has is the membership of the Church, and when the Board assumes a given amount of financial responsibility for that constituency it does so on the natural and necessary assumption that it can command the resources of the Church for that purpose. If by any influence these resources are diverted to other missionary enterprises and into other missionary channels, however worthy, not only confusion but ultimate injury must be the result. Our laymen everywhere are therefore earnestly requested to combine their energies and concentrate their liberality, not only on the cause but on the cause as represented by the whole Church through this Board, and through its authorized agencies and according to its prescribed methods.

"5. As a method of securing this desired unification of effort and of securing the larger liberality of the Church, we cannot too strongly recommend the 'Financial Method for Methodists,' and we would urge the adoption of this method in every congregation, believing that when this is properly done the problem of financial support will be solved and the desired unity and regularity will be secured."

Signed by A. B. Ransom, Mrs. H. R. Steele, E. E. Hess, W. R. Cole, W. W. Pinson, O. E. Brown.

This report was adopted by the Board without a dissenting voice. We believe its adoption marks a new era in our missionary finances and that it puts us on a basis not only of financial security and safety, but also one that is commending itself and will still more commend itself to the vast body of laymen in our Church and win their increasing support.

TAKES A DIFFERENT VIEW.

Dear Brother Meek:

Referring to the article in your issue of June 27th, in which you criticize the presentation of "Joan of Arc" by the students of the Mississippi Industrial Institute and College, I wish, with your permission, to call for additional discussion of this subject by yourself and by others, especially by the clergy. It is my opinion that such an extreme position will defeat the very purpose that you have in discussing the subject. It is, furthermore, my opinion that this great school for young women deserves high praise for the presentation of so elevating a drama. I know that President Whitfield is as true and zealous a Christian as is the president of any school in our State, whether denominational or not; and I am sure that the influences for Christianity at the I. I. and C. are unusually strong. It seems to me that there is a possibility that there are many who will not agree with your extreme views.

If you are right, I am wrong, and so are probably all schools of our two States, not excepting Church schools, for probably all present some sort of drama at times. I was at one Church school recently where preparations were being made to present a play. Here in Stanton College, in the study of Shakespeare the classes often dramatize parts of plays, and we have, in part, dramatized the Book of Job; and we consider this a highly effective method of teaching. The students of French often present dramas in French. Our seniors this year presented a beautiful Greek drama, "Endymion." If the I. I. & C. is wrong, we are wrong. If we are wrong, we ought to discontinue such practices. If we are not wrong, then we have been put in a false light before our students, and there is at any rate a confusion of standards.

Do not misunderstand me. If you had stated that a Christian should not attend the theatre, I should not be writing this communication. But I think that the presentation of "Joan of Arc" at a girls' school is a very different matter; and I think that the logic of your argument would forbid any teaching of the drama whatever in the schools.

Whitworth College,

BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

Miss Rowan is one of the most prominent educators of Mississippi. Read carefully her testimonial. Parents who are interested in the education of their daughters should write for catalogue; :

"It is a well-known fact that Whitworth College occupies a most conspicuous and important position in the educational advancement of South Mississippi.

"During the session of 1911-1912 I had occasion to observe the management of this institution and to note the training which the students receive. I have been forcibly and favorably impressed, not only with the thoroughness of the course of study, but also with the care which is expressed in guiding young ladies into avenues of usefulness and refinement. Especially do I commend the attention to the health of the students and the kind and sympathetic treatment shown them, along this line. Moreover, the painstaking care which is exercised toward bringing out all that is good within the young women who attend this College is a most praiseworthy feature.

"The harmony prevailing between faculty and student-body is a feature indicative of progress and advancement, under which Whitworth can but grow in usefulness.

"I cannot praise too highly the noble Christian spirit that permeates the atmosphere of this school, and to any young lady contemplating a college course, I unhesitatingly say that she will be amply repaid for all time and money which she might spend at Whitworth.

Respectfully,

"JEANIE ROWAN.

The Home Circle

THEY DIDN'T THINK.

Once a trap was baited
With a piece of cheese;
It tickled so a little mouse
It almost made him sneeze;
And old rat said, "There's danger,
Be careful where you go!"
"Nonsense!" said the other,
"I don't think you know!"
So he walked in boldly—
Nobody in sight;
First he took a nibble,
Then he took a bite;
Close the trap together
Went as quick as wink,
Catching mousey fast there,
'Cause he did not think.

Once there was a robin
Lived outside the door,
Who wanted to go inside
And hop upon the floor.
"No, no," said its mother,
"You must stay with me;
Little birds are safest Sitting in a tree."
"I don't care," said robin,
And gave his tail a fling,
"I don't think the old folks Know quite everything."
Down he flew and kltty caught him
Before he had time to blink;
"Oh, he cried, "I'm sorry,
But I didn't think."

A DOG STORY.

Some one has written a pretty tale about a dog, which we are told is a true story. One day when the famous poet Whittier was celebrating his birthday, he was visited by a lady who was a fine singer. On being asked to sing, this lady seated herself at the piano and began the beautiful song called "Robin Adair." While she was singing Mr. Whittier's pet dog came into the room, and, seating himself by the lady's side, he listened with unusual attention to her song. When she had finished, he came and put his paw very gently into her hand and licked her cheek. "Robin has taken that as a tribute to himself," said Mr. Whittier, "for his name is also 'Robin Adair.'"

The dog having heard his own name in the song seemed to think that it was all for his benefit. From that moment during the lady's visit, he was her devoted attendant. He kept at her side while she was indoors, and when she went away he carried her satchel in his mouth with every evidence of distress.—Apples of Gold.

RIDDLES.

Mabel went into the kitchen one day and asked, "Katy, do you know any new riddle or conundrum? They are all the fashion at school, and I want a new one."

"I know just one, and that is not a new one. I heard it in good old Ireland a long time ago."

"Well, I guess it is so old that it will be new to all of us, so will you teach it to me?"

"A question I will ask of thee,
Come, answer, if you please.
Tell in what chapter there's a verse
With three and fifty t's?"

When Mabel had learned the rhyme she asked Katy the answer.

"That's the hard part for me to remember. It's in the Bible sure but I forget where. I remember that the name of the book it is in is a girl's name."

Mabel went to her mother and found the answer to be Esther, the eighth chapter and ninth verse. Mabel's mother assured her the riddle was old enough to be new at school, and perhaps at many other places.—The Christian Intelligencer.

FROM SHOEBLACK TO SCHOOLMASTER.

There! you can see your face in that shoe! Now for the other one. It shall be ditto. No dingy, half-bright boots for me," soliloquized Ralph, the new errand boy at the hall lodge, as he brushed away at his master's boots, whistling an old school song.

"If I were a tinker I'd make it my pride
The best of all tinkers to be."

When Ralph went three weeks previous to this place, his mother, though badly needing wages, was distressed that her clever lad, who had passed the seventh standard, and was well grounded in the Latin grammar, should be nothing but what she called "a mere shoeblack."

The schoolmaster, too, was sorry to part with his promising pupil, but Ralph was firm. He knew what hard work his mother (who was a widow) had to find food for his little brother and sister, and he determined not to be dependent any longer, but to take the first place that offered.

He would naturally have liked to find some place where his good education might have been of more use than seemed likely in his present situation, where he had only to clean boots and knives and do odd jobs for the cook; but no other place offered, so he gladly accepted this place, and told his mother "it was only the bottom rung of the ladder; he meant to mount to the top before had done."

The opportunity came sooner than Ralph had dared to hope. One morning, as he was carrying the coal-box into the school room, he was surprised to find little Master Harry sobbing bitterly, with his head hidden in his elbow. Ralph put down the box, then said, respectfully, "What is it, Master Harry? Have you hurt yourself?"

Harry lifted a miserable little tear-stained face. "It's my Latin, Ralph. I can't learn it, and father says I may not go skating till it is perfect; and the ice bears, and Tommy Grenville has come for me, and I shall never get there." And Harry put down his head and burst out crying anew. Ralph took up the dog-eared Latin grammar and looked at the place.

"Oh, Master Harry, you'll soon learn this! It is really easy. If you like I can teach it you. I used to teach the boys at school sometimes."

"Oh, Ralph, could you? Do teach it me. I do so want to go skating." And Harry thrust his books again into Ralph's hand, and sat up with a more hopeful look on his face. Ralph really had a good method in teaching, and took great pains with his pupil, and Harry, little dunce that he was, tried his very best to learn that he might go to the skating. So, in a short time the lesson was learnt, successfully repeated to Harry's father, and the boy, to his great delight, was free to spend the rest of the day on the ice.

That evening Ralph was called to his master's study, and the result of the interview was that the errand boy had his wages raised, and was engaged to help Master Harry every morning with his Latin. It was one rung up the ladder, but others quickly followed, and now, if you were to visit our large national school at Farley village you would find the headmaster to be our old friend Ralph, once the "mere shoeblack," but now one of the most respected men in the parish.—Scottish American.

The subject of this sketch was born in Clark County, Ala., Jan. 20, 1825, and died at the home of his granddaughter, Mrs. Znella Johnston, in Alexandria, La., March 19, 1912.

His parents were Charles and Elizabeth Macon Johnston. They moved from North Carolina to Alabama in 1818. Both parents died the same day.

He was the youngest of the family, and united with the Church in 1837. The teachings of pious parents were deeply impressed upon his young mind, and he recalled with great pleasure the visits of Ebenezer Hearn and Granberry Garrett and their talks around his father's fireside. Thus there were implanted in his young mind the seeds of truth that, later, developed into the strong spiritual character of his ministry and manhood.

In 1850, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Moore, a most happy union, to which one son was born, Dr. Julius A. Johnston, who died in 1898. He was licensed to preach in 1860; was admitted to the Alabama Conference in 1864, and served appointments in that Conference for ten years. During those ten years his ministry was greatly blessed, over eight hundred being received into the Church in that time. He was transferred to the Louisiana Conference in 1875, and was an active and successful pastor for about twenty-five years. And even after failing strength forced him to rest, he was ever ready to preach or labor for the master to the limit of his strength.

Brother Johnston was a man of deep convictions, strong will, and indomitable courage. His son died of yellow fever, and in the absence of other preachers, he conducted the funeral service over that boy whom he loved almost to idolatry.

His loving wife died several years ago, and there seemed to fall over him a shadow that never lifted. His mind seemed to sympathize and suffer with the failing body. He suffered dislocation of his hip from a fall on April 11, 1911, and never walked afterwards. He was almost continually in bed for eleven months—till death brought release to the weary sufferer, and his freed spirit went to join the loved ones in the "land where there is no death."

Brother Johnston preached the funeral sermon of the father of this writer in 1882, having traveled thirty miles to do so, and after these years, by his request made years ago, I have prepared this tribute to his memory. How appropriate here are the words of the Seer of Patmos:

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; for they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them!"

SOME CHURCH STATISTICS.

A correspondent asks us to give the relative strength of the several religious denominations in Mississippi. This cannot be done with exactness up to the present date because late figures for all the Churches are not available. The best we can do is to take as a basis the Government statistics collected in 1906 and issued from Washington in 1909. They show that there were then in the State of Mississippi a total church membership of 657,831; of these 358,078, considerably more than half, were colored. The strength of the leading denominations was set down as follows: Baptist, 371,518; Methodist, 212,105; Presbyterian (including Cumberland), 22,471; Disciples (Campbellites), 9,864; Protestant Episcopal, 5,704; Roman Catholic, 28,576. Of the 371,518 Baptists, 240,392 were negroes, and 130,626 were whites. Of the Methodists approximately half were negroes, leaving a white membership of about 106,000. The white membership of the other leading Churches amounted to 63,127, the total in the State, barring the Baptists, being slightly less than 170,000, and including them, slightly less than 300,000. Two-thirds of the colored church members were in the Baptist fold, and it was to them chiefly that the Baptists owed their large lead.

The number of white Baptists and Methodists in Mississippi is probably not far from equal. The two white Conferences of the Southern Church in the State show an actually enumerated membership of about 110,000; to this must be added the whites in the Methodist Protestant, the Congregational Methodist, and the Methodist Episcopal Churches. The Baptist claims as to numerical strength are larger than are those of the Methodists, but because of their better facilities for gathering them, the statistics of the latter are considered more reliable. No Methodist Church is ever without a pastor and its membership roll is gone carefully over every year and an accurate report made as to any changes that have taken place. But Baptist congregations are frequently unshepherded and their system does not make it possible for them to obtain authentic reports so easily. Statisticians have frequently complimented the Methodist bodies upon the fullness and up-to-dateness of their statistical tables. No mean test of the relative strength of the two denominations is that furnished by the State colleges, where fully as many Methodist as Baptist students can nearly always be found, and often more.

In the United States the Methodist denomination easily stands first among the Protestant bodies, both in numbers and resources. All the reputable authorities unite in crediting it with the largest membership. The Government Bulletin, from which we have been quoting, shows that in 1906 the Baptists owned in the United States property to the amount of $139,842,656, and the Methodists to the amount of $229,450,996; that the seating capacity of the Baptist churches was 15,702,712, and that of the Methodist churches 17,053,392; that the Baptists had in their Sunday schools 2,898,914, and the Methodists 4,472,930.

We give these figures not because of any disposition to parade the great strength of our denomination, but because we have been asked to do so in view of extravagant statements made by others. In our judgment, numbers and material possessions are not the things most to be prized and relied upon by a branch of the Church of Christ. Far more important is it that it should hold and teach the truth in its purity and faithfully illustrate the spirit of our ascended Lord. Better a Gideon's band with the Holy Ghost in their hearts and their hands busy in unselfish service, than a vast multitude dominated by worldly sentiments and Christians only in name.

THE QUESTION OF COLLEGE THEATRICALS.

In a courteous communication, published in this issue of the Advocate, Mr. H. P. Todd, president of Stanton College at Natchez, Miss., expresses dissent from our recent editorial, entitled, "No Place for Theatricals." To the best of our ability, we have weighed the statements of our correspondent, and after doing so, we do not feel the least inclined to recede from the position that we have taken on this question, nor to modify to the slightest extent a single sentence that he has written concerning it. On the contrary, we reaffirm our conviction that public theatricals in our colleges are unwise and hurtful in their tendency, and we have no hesitancy in giving the reasons why we think so.

We are opposed to them, in the first place, because of the possible injury that may result to the students participating in them. As we see it, when young ladies and young men have been trained to engage in such public exhibitions, they are prone to form a fondness for them and to have their appetites whetted for the professional theatre. The dramatic instinct, when aroused and cultivated, is apt to continue to assert itself and demand gratification. Having themselves tried to impersonate characters, the young people are disposed to want to see how it is done by those who are considered masters of that difficult art. And in the case of those who find that they possess histrionic talent and who have heard the sweet notes of public applause, there is the additional danger of their becoming stage-struck and trying to embark upon a theatrical career. Instances of this are by no means rare. It requires a constant sacrifice of beautiful young women to keep the theatres going in our towns and cities, and we do not think that our institutions of learning should even remotely contribute their influence to so pernicious a cause. Few things dazzle and fascinate the young like the theatre. They need no encouragement in that direction. We make this affirmation after having had considerable opportunity to observe young ladies visiting in New Orleans, some of whom were students in Mississippi colleges.

Our second objection to public theatricals, such as that given at the I. I. & C. at Columbus, is that their educative influence upon the people who attend them is harmful. They tend to awaken among them a theatre-going spirit. The majority of the people are not philosophers; but few of them have the faculty of wise discrimination. Having seen "Joan of Arc" played under the auspices of a reputable college, when a traveling troupe comes along to play something that sounds inviting, they are more apt to take it in than perhaps they would otherwise have been.

Prof. Todd says that a high-class play at a girls' school is a very different thing from a performance given by professionals in an opera-house. To be sure, there is likely to be a difference in the characters of the performers, but otherwise the exhibitions are much alike. The one we referred to in our editorial was given before a large and promiscuous outside audience. Say what you will, the amateur theatrical tends to lead up to the professional theatrical, just as the private dance tends to lead to the public dance. It may be said that only young ladies take part in these college theatricals; that no gentlemen participate in them. That may lessen their power for evil, but it lacks much of doing entirely away with it. We have known teachers to argue that there is no harm in allowing young ladies to dance with one another while in college, and even to go further and contend that the exercise was wholesome and tended to develop grace and elegance of manner. But the trouble is, that when young ladies have learned to dance among themselves, they are pretty certain to find an opportunity to dance with young men. Far the safer course is never to teach them the vulgar Terpsichorean art.

Our correspondent suggests that the college theatrical is necessary to the proper teaching of the drama. A sufficient answer to that is that many of the greatest Shakespearean scholars—those who have been the best interpreters and expounders of his writings—have not been actors or men unusually closely connected with the theatre, but those who in the quiet of their libraries communed with the mighty Bard of Avon until they caught his spirit and could follow his imperial genius in its many windings and transcendent flights. And the same thing is true of those who have written most luminously concerning the productions of other dramatists. Moreover, in this connection, it is pertinent to ask when would Prof. Todd have the study of the drama to cease? Surely not at graduation. If therefore, theatricals are essential to the successful study of the drama in college, they must continue to be necessary to such study if kept up in after life. Such logic would go a long way toward justifying students of the drama in becoming lifelong devotees of the theatre.

We entertain a very high opinion of the Christian character of Brother Todd, and we are sorry to note that he has been having theatricals in his school. If by dramatizing the Book of Job, he means that he has been placing it on the college stage, as "Joan of Arc" was at the I. I. & C., we think that he has made a regrettable mistake. So far as our observation extends, all attempts to dramatize parts of the Bible and present them from the stage have resulted injuriously. Only last year Madam Bernhardt was in New Orleans to take the leading part in the presentation of Rostand's "La Samaritaine," and at the instance of the Christian people of this city the performance was forbidden. Even the "Passion Play," over which so many unthinking people raved, is now being presented in a professional theatre in Vienna, and doubtless we will soon have it on the stage all over the United States, unless Christian sentiment should exclude it. The proper study of the Bible demands a reverence and dependence upon the Holy Spirit such as are incompatible with a dramatic performance. It is only to the serious and prayerful mind that the Holy Scriptures yield their priceless treasures.

Prof. Todd declares that President Whitfield is "as true and zealous a Christian as is the president of any school in the State." We take no issue with him on this point. Nothing that we have said would imply that we think to the contrary. But it does not follow because Mr. Whitfield is a Christian gentleman that his judgment is infallible as to what is best for our young ladies. Often college presidents are so busy with the general management of the institutions under their care, that they leave the work of each department very largely to the teachers who have been placed in control of it. Perhaps it would be more pertinent for Prof. Todd to tell us something of the church affiliations and views as to the professional theatre of the elocution teachers and the other instructors who have been most active in promoting these theatricals. Possibly a little light turned on at this point might clarify the situation somewhat.

We are told that our "extreme position may defeat the very purpose we have in view in discussing this subject." We should be pleased to have it pointed out how it is likely to do this. It is quite the fashion nowadays for those who plead for a more liberal policy toward questionable things to talk about the harmful results of being extreme. In our opinion, one cannot be too extreme in letting alone practices that are calculated to exert a hurtful influence. We have never been a disciple of the philosophy that the way to overcome evil is by compromising with it. We think it is wise to watch the tendencies of things, and to remember "that a step too much toward a wrong course is the first step." Paul was an extremist when he exhorted the Thessalonians to "abstain from all appearance of evil, and when in writing to the Corinthians he said, "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth." We have little fear of going far astray so long as we keep company with the great Apostle to the Gentiles.

OUR METHODIST SCHOOLS.

The Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi have every reason to be pleased with their schools. A list of them with their places of location is as follows: Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La.; Centenary College, Shreveport, La.; Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss.; Port Gibson Female College, Port Gibson, Miss.; Grenada Female College, Grenada, Miss.; Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.; Mississippi Conference Training School, Montrose, Miss.; Seashore Campground School, Biloxi, Miss.

There is not one of these institutions that is not equipped to do well the work that it undertakes. Our people will make no mistake in patronizing any one of them. We have no hesitancy in saying that there is no better place for Methodist boys and girls anywhere than can be found within their walls. Methodist parents need especially to beware of two classes; educational "poachers," and educational "cheap Johns." When a school has to seek students far away from where it is located, usually it lacks standing at home; and instruction that is unreasonably cheap is apt to be of a very inferior quality.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, of Winona, Miss., is assisting Rev. John Ritchie in a meeting at Valden, Miss., this week.

The Jackson Daily News reports that Rev. J. M. Morse, pastor of the Capitol Street Church, of Jackson, Miss., visited his son at Seoba, Miss., last week.

Miss Belle Kearney, of Mississippi, who is one of the forceful advocates of the temperance cause in the United States, will spend the months of October and November lecturing in Missouri.

Rev. E. S. Lewis has lately spent ten days at Senatobia, Miss., assisting in a series of revival services. He reports that Brother Duncan, our pastor there, is in high favor with the people.

Rev. W. H. Lane, Harrisville, Miss., will soon start upon his round of revival meetings. The first one will be held at Braxton, where he will have the assistance of Rev. D. E. Kelley.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, the new President of Millsaps College, moved his family from Hattiesburg to Jackson last Friday. Those wishing to correspond with him may now address him at the latter city.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, the Colporteur for the Mississippi Conference, is attending the Aberdeen District Conference, at Houston, Miss. From there he will go to Aberdeen and Macon for a few days.

We make grateful acknowledgment to Rev. J. W. Dawson, our capable pastor at Morton, Miss., for several renewals sent in on July 8. No interest of the Church is allowed to suffer in the hands of this faithful worker.

Rev. E. H. Rook reports a fine meeting at Lambert, in which he had the efficient aid of Rev. S. L. Pope, of Itta Bena. There were thirteen additions to the Church. Brother Rook's account of this season of refreshing will appear in the next week's Advocate.

The press dispatches report the death of Mrs. Reuben W. Millsaps at her home in Hazlehurst on Saturday, July 13. The obsequies were conducted in the Methodist Church at that place last Sunday afternoon. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, of Crowley, La., who has been spending some time at the Seashore Camp Ground, occupied the pulpit of the Twenty-Fifth Avenue Church of Gulfport, Miss., last Sunday. The popular shepherd of this flock is the Rev. M. L. Burton, who excels both in his pulpit and pastoral work.

Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Forest, Miss., calls our attention to the fact that in the account of the splendid revival recently held at that place, which appeared in the Advocate of July 4, it was stated that a free-will offering of $130 was taken for Rev. D. E. Kelley. It should have been $230. We take pleasure in making this correction.

On August 1, the Woman's City Mission Board of New Orleans will open the Keener Cottage at the Seashore Camp Ground for the entertainment of working women and children of the city whose lives are such as to make a brief season of rest needful and helpful. Such work is calculated to do great good, and deserves hearty commendation.

Miss Daisy Magee, the faithful Sunday school worker of the Mississippi Conference, will have the sympathy and prayers of a host of friends in the loss of her beloved mother, whose death is announced elsewhere in this issue. This is indeed a great bereavement. When one's mother goes away, the world loses much of its beauty and brightness.

Mrs. Mary L. Hargrove, of the Scarritt Bible and Training School, has gone to England, where she will spend the remainder of the summer. Sister Hargrove easily takes rank with the most brilliant and useful women in Southern Methodism. We wish her a delightful stay in the historic Mother Country, and in due time a safe return to the States.

A telegram from Dr. J. W. Price, our pastor at Tutwiler, Miss., which was received last Tuesday morning, reads as follows: "The Lord is saving this town. Evangelist L. W. Cain is leading the services. He is great both in his pulpit and altar work." This is indeed good news. We hope to have a fuller account of this gracious awakening for our next issue.

Our latest news from Brother J. D. Barbee was that he was still improving. The physician was expecting him to be able to sit up some in a day or two and take solid food. Such was the report of his condition several days ago. As soon as he is well enough, he will leave Rochester and go to Waynesville, N. C., where he and Sister Barbee will spend the remaining hot months.

The Midland Methodist of July 3 says: "Prof. H. B. Carre spent last Sunday in McMinnville, Tenn. He preached in the Methodist Church at 11 a.m., and addressed a men's meeting at the Courthouse on 'Civic Righteousness' in the afternoon. This brilliant young Louisianian is making his influence strongly felt for moral reform in the Volunteer State, as well as in other ways.

Rev. R. A. Clark, the energetic pastor of the Second Methodist Church of Memphis, is having gratifying success in his work. He is also contributing largely to the progress of the Epworth League cause throughout the Memphis Conference. North Mississippians feel an interest and pride in the career of this gifted young pastor, who was born, reared, and educated among them.

We are pleased to state that Sister Snelling, the wife of Rev. J. G. Snelling, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church of this city, who underwent an operation at the Presbyterian Hospital last week, is doing well, and that the indications point to a prompt recovery. This will be gratifying news to the many friends of Brother and Sister Snelling throughout the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. George D. Booth, who for the past two years has been the pastor of the Napoleon Avenue Presbyterian Church of New Orleans, preached his farewell sermon last Sunday. He has accepted a call to Laurel, Miss. Brother Booth was highly esteemed by the Protestant pastors and people of this city, and was one of the most active and progressive Sunday school workers in Louisiana.

We regret to be informed that our gifted young pastor at Lexington, Miss., Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, has lately been physically indisposed, but we judge from the vigor exhibited in his discussion of the state of infants in this issue of the Advocate that he must be quite himself again. Brother Lipscomb is a graduate of Drew Theological Seminary, and is one of the most accomplished young theologians in the Church.

From Carrollton, Miss., under date of the 11th inst., Brother J. R. Bingham writes as follows: "In sending you the notice of Dr. Lin's election to the Chair of History in Millsaps College, I should have said that he is a graduate of Emory College and Vanderbilt University, and that he has just taken a Ph.D. degree at Cornell University. Having taught in several of our large towns, Dr. Linn is no stranger in Mississippi.

In a note to the editor, written from Jackson, Miss., on July 15, Bishop Murrah says: "It is my plan to leave here for San Francisco on July 23. From that port we will sail on August 3 for Japan. I cannot tell just how long I shall be away—as long, however, as the demands of the work may seem to require." It is our information that Mrs. Murrah will accompany the Bishop. We pray that they may have journeying mercies and a safe voyage.

Mrs. E. J. Legrand, of Meridian, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, takes time to write a few words commendatory of it. She has been a subscriber since 1861, and feels that she could not well do without it. We feel a special interest in the long-time readers of our paper—those who have given their patronage and stood loyally by it through successive administrations. May the Heavenly Father richly bless them every one.

From a recent issue of the Texas Christian Advocate, we clip the following: "Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D., has been elected president of Millsaps College. Dr. Watkins is known through the Church as an able and scholarly man, having filled leading places of responsibility in Mississippi. He has also been prominent in the General Conferences of the Church, and his election to this place of trust is a compliment to him and an honor to the institution."

Mrs. Jennie Gunn, of Collierville, Tenn., in remitting for her subscription, adds a dollar for our "Help Fund." This will send the Advocate for twelve months into some needy home into which otherwise it would not find its way. Who can tell how much others may be blessed by this kindly act? Such a sowing of good seed may result in a far richer harvest than any one dreams of. The power of religious truth, whether spoken or written, no finite mind can measure.

In a business letter to this office, Rev. W. J. Woods, of Potts Camp, Miss., gives the following news items from his charge: "We held our third quarterly conference on the 9th inst. Rev. R. A. Tucker, our presiding elder, was with us and preached an excellent sermon. We will start our revival campaign on the third Sunday in this month, beginning at Potts Camp. We ask the brethren to pray that we may be instrumental in winning many precious souls for the Master."

The new President of Drew Theological Seminary is Dr. Ezra Squier Tipple, who has been Professor of Practical Theology in that institution since 1905. Not the least of his qualifications for the place is his experience in the pastorate, in which he served for fourteen years. A lectureship on "Ecclesiastical Law and the Philosophy of Christianity" has lately been established at Drew. It will be filled by Dr. J. M. Buckley, formerly editor of the New York Christian Advocate.

Dr. and Mrs. E. H. Moulner, of Rolling Fork, are both at present in Memphis, Tenn., where the former has recently had a cataract removed from one of his eyes by Dr. E. C. Ellett. The operation was a success, and the indications are that Dr. Moulner's sight will be much improved thereby. Sister Moulner has lately been suffering from malarial troubles at her home in the Delta, and seems to have been much benefitted by her stay in the Bluff City, where she has been for about a month.

Rev. H. Mellard, our wide-awake pastor at Logtown, Miss., favored us with some renewals from his charge last week, remitting in full for them and charging no commission. It is needless to say that we highly appreciate his kindness and generosity. Referring to his work, he says: "Logtown is a fine place. It is the domicile of the H. Weston Lumber Company, and the members of the firm are constantly extending kindnesses to us and the local church." We have observed that lumbermen are usually possessed of big hearts and delight to do helpful things.

From Washington, Miss., on July 15, Rev. L. E. Wicht writes: "We are now in the midst of our meeting here at Washington and the prospects are good. Brother W. H. Saunders delivered two very strong sermons yesterday and the trumpet gave no uncertain sound. He put the mark of a Christian and a disciple of the Lord very high. We had the largest attendance at both services that we have ever had here, according to the opinion of those in a position to know. We will have a children's service sometime during the meeting, and are hopeful of successful results in this, as well as the other services. Will tell you more about the meeting after the close. Pray for us."

Rev. W. C. Carlisle, who never fails to give a good account of himself in any field, forwarded us a list of twelve subscribers last week, with a check to correspond. We take off our hat to our good friend, and make to him our best bow. Of his work, he says: "We have had many drawbacks, but everything is now in pretty good shape. We have received 42 members since Conference, and we hope to make a creditable report at Greenwood next December. Rev. A. P. Leech is in his usual health. He taught his Adult Bible Class and assisted me in the administration of the Lord's Supper last Sunday. He is a great help to me. I shall soon be engaged in our summer revivals, and I hope that you will pray that our efforts may be crowned with success."

In a business note, received a few days since, which brought us some names for our subscription files, Rev. E. M. Allen, of Escatawpa, Miss., gave the following account of his work: "I have held three meetings, and yet have one to hold. We had Rev. J. L. Neill, of Hattiesburg, with us at Orange Grove. He did some fine work. We had several conversions and one joined the Church. Our meeting at Escatawpa was good. Brother P. H. Howse, of Seminary, did the preaching, and did it well. There were twelve additions as a result of the services. Brother Ulmer, of Hub, was with us at Caswell Springs, and gave us some strong sermons. The church was wonderfully revived, and much good was done. Pray that we may have a successful year in every respect."

AN APPEAL TO THE PREACHERS OF SOUTHERN METHODISM.

In view of the fact that a vast area of the richest and most prosperous section of the Louisiana Conference has been devastated by the recent floods, rendering thousands homeless and destitute, and that this disaster has been followed by the "army worm," destroying vegetation in such localities as could be cultivated, thereby making it impossible for the people to give adequate support to the Church and its pastors; and in view of the fact that our preachers, without a single exception, have loyally and heroically remained with their afflicted people, suffering with them in their misfortunes and rendering every possible aid; and because they can look for no adequate support for their families during the period of rehabilitation, which will, in all probability, extend over two or three years; and in view of the fact that the Methodist Church is the only Protestant Church offering the gospel to the people in most of the affected territory, and that we cannot afford to abandon the field in the face of such a calamity; therefore be it Resolved:

1. That the members of the Monroe District Conference, in session at Calhoun, La., which represents the territory most seriously affected, do hereby issue an urgent appeal to the preachers in the great Southern Methodist Church to take collections in their congregations for the relief of the pastors in the affected districts of the Louisiana Conference, some of whom are now in great need of assistance.

2. That we join the Bishop and presiding elders in their appeal and urge the congregations unaffected by the overflow to take collections for our unfortunate brethren.

3. That all collections thus taken be sent to Mr. S. H. Meyer, 116 St. Charles Street, New Orleans, La., treasurer of the Board of Missions of the Louisiana Conference, and be distributed by the Board to those pastors in need.

4. That these resolutions and this appeal be published in the Nashville Christian Advocate, the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and other papers of our Church.

Signed: A. F. Vaughan, George Fox, D. C. Barr, Committee; Wm. Schuhle, Presiding Elder. Calhoun, La., July 13, 1912.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

As the darkness calmly, yet surely fades away at dawn, so on June 24, 1912, little RAPP OSBORN calmly and peacefully, and with no tremor of fear fell on sleep, to awaken from this dream of mortality to a new sense of life where light alone holds sway. He was loved by all who knew him. He was eight years, two months and twelve days old. He united with the Church last summer and was a devoted worker in the Sunday school. Weep not, dear parents, for Rapp is not necessarily lost to you. He has been transplanted to a better world and is safe in the arms of Jesus. That the good Lord cheer and comfort the hearts of the sorrowing loved ones, the dear parents, and the little brother, is my prayer.

GRANDMA.

JOHN F. MOULDS was born in Jasper County, Miss., January 31, 1850, and died May 18, 1912. Brother Moulds united with the M. E. Church, South, at Pleasant Grove, when quite young, and for many years before his death lived a consecrated life. He was married twice: in 1869, to Miss W. A. Sandies, who was the mother of six children, three boys and three girls, and who died in 1885; and in 1887 to Mrs. W. A. Ulmer. His second marriage was blessed with one son. He is survived by his wife and six children. May the loved ones all so live that they will be acceptable to the Heavenly Father and meet their departed relative in the sweet beyond.

D. D. VICKERS.

On June 12, the venerable J. O. HOWELL peacefully passed away at Slaughter, La., aged eighty years. He was one of our oldest members and was widely known. He had known and loved many of the older preachers and they had often found rest and cheer in his home. He had a clear, active mind, and his mental powers seemed strong almost to the last. He loved his Bible, and the many passages marked all through its pages told how he "delighted in the law." He lost his eyesight sometime before his death, but he quietly sat in the shadow and talked of the time when to him, "there should be no night." He loved the grand old songs of the Church, and often asked to have them sung, but the one he enjoyed most was "The Unclouded Day." As we sang it, his soul seemed to thrill with the thought of his friends by the tree of life, and his greeting with "the King in his beauty there." His aged companion, son and three daughters survive him. May his mantle rest on them.

His pastor, J. D. HARPER.

MRS. MARTHA PARKER (nee Harris) was born Feb. 26, 1860, and was married to Mr. E. C. Parker, Dec. 27, 1878. To them fourteen children were born; three of the fourteen preceded their mother to their eternal rest. On July 5, 1912, Sister Parker realized that her work on earth would be done before the setting of that day's sun and that her last conversation with her companion and children was soon to be ended. She called them and the many friends that were present and bade them all adieu. She then willingly committed her spirit to the God who gave it. Sister Parker was a patient sufferer for months. She gave her life to God and the M. E. Church, South, in childhood. She lived and walked in the true spirit and at last fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. May the Giver of all good and perfect gifts sustain the lonely husband and children, and help them to live as true disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Her Pastor, W. H. LANE.

IN MEMORIAM.

"There is no Death. The stars go down,
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled down
They shine forever more."

On the beautiful spring morning of May 18, 1912, the Angel of Death obeyed the summons of the Divine Master and wafted the sweet spirit of Mary Belle Henley to the beautiful land of heaven. Death is sad when it comes in the even-tide of life. How inexpressibly sad it is for us to see our loved ones leave us just as the day of a useful life has begun!

Mary Bell had only passed the thirty-sixth milestone of a gentle and unselfish life—a life given almost wholly for others. Her work on earth is finished and God has called her to a broader field of labor. He had other work for her to do, and only translated her from his earthly vineyard to heavenly fields.

Born in Egypt, Miss., Sept. 12, 1876, she spent the greater part of her early life there. Uniting with the Baptist Church at that place, she lived a consistent Christian life, ever ready to do the work of her Master. In later years she moved to Buena Vista, Miss., where she married Michael W. Freeman, Jr., with whom she lived a devoted, happy life until his death, Feb. 4, 1907.

Her home life was beautiful, being characterized by every virtue of noble womanhood. It was the writer's sweet privilege to have been closely associated with her during these years, and I have never known a more loyal and consecrated Christian. She was ever ready and waiting to lend a helping hand to any who were in need of a friend. It seems that her mission in life has been beautifully rendered—that of loyalty to the Master's cause. In her death, I have sustained a personal loss, and it is difficult to write of her and not allow the personal element to intrude.

In 1909 she was again married to Mr. W. F. Henley, of Prairie, Mississippi. Two children blessed this union, one of whom preceded her to the heavenly home a year ago.

We pray God's richest blessings on the sorrowing husband and bereaved family. While our hearts are bowed in grief, we do not question God's will. We can only bow in humble submission, for we know, "He doeth all things well."

Sometime, but not today—

"And you shall shortly know that lengthened breath
Is not the sweetest gift God sends his friends,
And that some-time the sable pall of death
Conceals the fairest boon his love can send.

"Sometime, when all life's lessons have been learned,
And sun and stars forever more have set,
The things which our weak judgments here have spurned,
The things o'er which we grieve with lashes wet,

"Will flash before us out of life's dark night,
As stars shine most in deepest tints of blue;
And we shall see how all God's plans were right,
And how what seemed reproof was love most true.

"And if through patient toil we reach the land
Where tired feet with sandals loose may rest,
Then we shall clearly see and understand—
I think that we shall say, 'God knew the best.'"

Tidings From the Field

Gainesville, Miss.

We recently held a series of services in the historic town of Gainesville, Miss., which resulted in four accessions to the church and the baptism of five children. I was entertained in the home of Mr. Jesse Lot and cannot speak too highly of the kindness of this estimable family. The daughter, Miss Amelia Lot, was one of the members to unite with the church. I am also indebted to Rev. J. F. Miller, pastor of the Baptist Church, and his flock, for appreciated courtesies during the meeting.

H. MELLARD.

Bayou Pierre Ct. (Miss. Conference).

Our Children's Day service was held at Pleasant Valley Church on June 30. It was a marked success, which was largely due to the faithful work of the pastor's wife, Mrs. J. L. Smith. The regular program was remarkably well rendered, and the children reflected credit on their trainers. The decorations were tasteful and beautiful. Owing to the threatening weather, the congregation was not as large as it would otherwise have been, and the collection suffered somewhat in consequence. Sister Smith in the work of preparation was ably assisted by the young people of the church.

J. G. AINSWORTH,
Superintendent.

Vancleave, Miss.

This is my third year on this work and I believe it is the best. The congregations are much larger than before, and the people are more spiritual. We held our annual Children's Day service at Mt. Pleasant Church on the third Sunday in June, and it was the best and most spiritual I ever attended. The superintendent and his helpers deserve great credit for the work they did in getting up the program. We began our meeting with the Children's Day service and continued until Thursday night. The meeting was a success, bringing the people of the church closer together than they have been in many years. We hope to be able to put the Advocate in every home in our charge, and have a young lady working to that end now.

JAS. M. LEWIS.

Poplarville, Miss.

I want to let the Conference know of some good work that has recently been done by our Sunday school and its workers. The school observed Children's Day on June 30th, and never has a better rendered program been presented in our town than on that day. The children were drilled by Miss Sophronia A. Hyde, assisted materially by Mrs. Robert F. Nimocks and Miss Iva Provost and others. There is not a more earnest and strenuous worker in the Conference than Miss Hyde. She superintended the Children's Day exercises last year, and it is now looked forward to, not only by our church members, but the town realizes that when she is successful success is sure to be the result. Yesterday afternoon a Mission Circle was organized with twelve members, and though the circle is small, we believe they will grow and hope to report soon from them soon. Miss Norwood was chosen President, Miss Young, Secretary, and Miss Holmes is doing the work.

Shuqualak (North Miss.)

Dear Dr. Meek:

The Methodist Church at Shuqualak has just been finished inside with the finest paper, and the plan is to place new lights at an early time, and to repaint the church. Sixty people were added to the churches of this charge last year, and to date of this, 1912; twenty-five of the sixty joined in Shuqualak. The town is one of the oldest on the M. & O. R. R., and a good rival of Macon, the next place north. The Methodist Church here gains as the years pass, and takes one-half of the pastor's time. There are five Sunday schools, four of which report Children's Day services. The church debts are paid and the property value is $10,000, with the parsonage valued at $2,000. The Methodist people appear to lead the Christian forces of this territory, though the Baptists have a good church at Shuqualak, and the same is true of the Presbyterians. Our very greatest distress is the non-helping church element. Of this we have a somewhat unhandy per cent.

The Artesia church of this very fine Columbus District classes first on church support, so said the lay leaders. One hundred per cent of that membership pay on church expenses. Such conditions at Shuqualak would make it at once a great pastoral charge, the splendid Christian worker and true church supporter being already well represented, and the salary this year raised to $1,000. The previous deficits have very much weakened the "holding power" and "drawing strength" of these churches. Small payments on church expenses are sometimes interpreted in the "cabinet" as a bid for small men in the pulpit, and even prominent Christian denominations are in position ordinarily to meet such a demand.

Our third quarterly meeting has just passed, Rev. J. E. Thomas, presiding elder of the district, discoursed from the words, "Be of good courage," on Saturday; on Sunday morning he discussed on "The beasts of Revelation," and mentioned also "The white horse," and "the angel" and "having the everlasting Gospel to preach."

The Cooksville people entertained the occasion. They dispensed a charming hospitality, and do eminently a work of excellence as a church.

A. H. WILLIAMS.

A CORRECTION.

Dear Dr. Meek:

I have just returned from a most delightful session of the Hattiesburg District Conference which convened at Sumrall, July 9. Our presiding elder invited me to give a talk concerning the Woman's organized work in the Hattiesburg District. In doing so I stated that since the Woman's Home Mission Society was organized in the Mississippi Conference, eighteen years ago, that 66 parsonages had been helped, and that $4,343 had been donated for this purpose. This was a great mistake. The W. H. M. Society has helped 66 parsonages and donated $6,343.80 since May 28, 1893.

Sincerely,

MRS. J. R. ELLIS,
District Secretary, Hattiesburg Dist.

STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Louisiana State Epworth League Conference was given a warm welcome by the young people of the Lake Charles Chapter, whose guests we were from June 18th to 21st. About twenty-five delegates were present—a good attendance considering the flooded conditions of a large section of our State.

The principal addresses of the Conference were made by Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary, whose strong personality and Christian character, as well as his depth and range of information, make his presence a blessing to any assembly.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, of the "Advocate", and Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle, who has given to us such loving and faithful service as Field Secretary, and many of our ministers who attended the Conference added much to the pleasure and profit of the meeting by their helpful talks. Rev. H. W. Jamieson, who has been the efficient President of the State League for a number of years, asked to be relieved of this responsibility, owing to his many duties as pastor of the Queensboro Church, Shreveport, and as a student in Centenary College. Mr. Robert A. Steele of Ruston, former Vice President, was elected in his stead. The following is a list of the newly elected officers:

President, Mr. R. A. Steele, Ruston; 1st V. P., Mr. J. A. Stockwell, Lake Charles; 2nd V. P., Miss Crissie Dyer, Lake Arthur; 3rd V. P., Miss Miriam Atkins, Shreveport; 4th V. P., Miss Horne, New Orleans; Recording Sec., Mr. L. P. Hoffpauir, Rayne; Treasurer, Mr. E. P. Griffin, Mansfield; Junior Supt., Miss Nellie Cunningham, Rayne; Era Agent, Mr. H. C. Shepherd, Leesville; Corresponding and Field Secretary, Mrs. Crow Girard, Lafayette.

Dr. Watkins' Election.

Whereas, Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D., has been elected President of Millsaps College; be it resolved by the Meridian District Conference, in session at Waynesboro, Miss., June 13, 1912:

1. That we are highly gratified that a member of the Mississippi Conference has been honored with the presidency of Millsaps College.

2. That we congratulate the Board of Trustees upon their wise choice, feeling assured that Dr. Watkins will render valuable service to the Institution.

3. That we pledge to Dr. Watkins our hearty co-operation and earnest prayers in the administration of the office committed to him.

Commending Rev. W. M. Williams.

Resolved, that we do hereby express our sincere gratification at the action of the Board of Directors of our Orphans' Home in continuing our Brother, W. M. Williams, as the manager of the Home, and we do hereby pledge him our hearty endorsement and support.

In Appreciation of Rev. W. H. Lewis.

Whereas, this is, by the time limit of our Church, the last year that Brother W. H. Lewis can serve the Meridian District as Presiding Elder, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That his preaching has been sound, spiritual and instructive.

2. That his presidency in our quarterly and district conferences has been impartial, courteous and encouraging.

3. That his general administration of the affairs of the District has been wise and faithful.

4. That his personal influence has been spiritual, strong and Christian.

5. That we place on record our respect for him as a man and our love for him as a Christian, with the assurance that our prayers shall follow him to his future fields of labor.

DISTRICT LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Annual Conference of the Lafayette District League was held at Lake Arthur, La., on June 21, 22, 23, immediately following the State Conference at Lake Charles. Nine leagues out of the eleven in the district were represented. Many of the delegates who had been to Lake Charles, and others along the main line of the railroad, stopped at Mermentau, where they were met with boats by a delegation from the Lake Arthur League. After a delightful ride down the Mermentau River, the Leaguers arrived at the picturesque little city of Lake Arthur, situated by the lake. Here the delegates were made to feel welcome in the homes of their hosts.

A very interesting program was carried out from day to day along the lines of work taken up by the League. Many helpful and inspiring talks were made by Dr. F. S. Parker, General Secretary of the Epworth League, who was present on this occasion, and by others who stand at the head of the various departments.

The third vice president of the local chapter and his committee showed their efficiency by their excellent entertainment of the visiting Leaguers. A reception was tendered them on the night of their arrival at the Lake Arthur Country Club, which proved a most enjoyable affair. Music was rendered by the local members, which added much to the pleasure of the evening.

After a brief session on Saturday evening, the Leaguers adjourned to the public wharf, where a boat was awaiting them, for a ride on the lake. The closing sessions of the Conference on Sunday were largely attended. A special missionary program was arranged for Sunday afternoon. At this time over $100 was pledged by the Leagues represented for the French mission cause. After a powerful sermon and reconsecration service on Sunday night, the Conference adjourned and each one in attendance went home with the determination to make this the banner year in the history of the Lafayette District League.

The officers elected for the next year are as follows:

President, E. A. Hoffpauir, Lake Arthur; first vice president, L. W. Hayden, Crowley; second vice president, John Trotter, New Iberia; third vice president, Miss Kate Robinson, Lafayette; fourth vice president, E. J. Hoffpauir, Estherwood; secretary, Miss Quintilla Morgan, Lafayette; treasurer, Miss Ruth Coles, Estherwood; Era agent, Lloyd Crandler, Rayne; junior superintendent, Miss Alice Grant, Lake Charles.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

Interesting replies are coming to our Elementary Superintendent from the letters recently sent our pastors relative to the Elementary work of the Sunday schools. Next week we will give a summary up to date.

A letter from the presiding elder of the Meridian District says that the churches in Meridian have raised more money for Children's Day this year than the entire district did last year. He stated further that EVERY church in the district will observe the day.

The revival season is on us. It would be interesting and good history to observe the conversions and additions to the Church. How many of these come from the Sunday school? It would not be amiss to poll the congregation some time and find out how many received their first religious impressions from the Sunday school teacher.

The following news item has reached the office of the Sunday School Board—though from the writer's own school, we are sure it will be read with interest and profit: "The Elementary Department of our school entertained at a mothers' meeting the other afternoon. In spite of a hard rain, over fifty persons were present. The program was rendered by the young ladies of the Intermediate Department, and the members of the Young Ladies' Organized Class. Dainty refreshments were served by the teachers of the Elementary Department. The occasion was interesting and profitable."

We are sure the Sunday school workers of the Mississippi Conference will join us in prayers and expressions of sympathy for our efficient Elementary Superintendent, Miss Daisy Magee, who has been called to mourn the death of her mother. The sad event occurred Wednesday, July 10, at 2 a.m. Miss Magee was absent on Sunday school work when her mother was taken ill, but reached her before the end came.

Our Tour Contest Still Open

Preparation for the World's Sunday School Convention in Zurich, Switzerland, in July, 1913, is going steadily on. Beginning in London in 1889, these conventions have thus far been held: In St. Louis, 1893; London, 1898, Jerusalem in 1904; Rome in 1907, and Washington in 1910. They have all been great gatherings, but the next one promises to be by far the greatest. Among the speakers already engaged for the occasion are Rev. F. B. Meyer of London, Gypsy Smith, the Evangelist; Bishop John H. Vincent of Chicago, Rev. Carey Bonner, D. D., Secretary of the British Sunday School Union; Rev. Frank Johnson, D. D., editor of the Sunday School Chronicle of London; Marion Lawrance of Chicago, and others. It is expected that Bishop Burt of Buffalo, N. Y., Bishop Hartzell of Africa, and Bishop Nuelson of Zurich, the Bishop for Europe, will be present.

It will mark an epoch in one's life to be present at this great meeting. Would you like to go? The opportunity is before you. The Advocate is offering, free of cost, a trip to the lady in Louisiana (single or married) who secures the most votes in the contest. A number have already entered the field, but there is yet room for more. Send in your name at once and go after this grand prize. It is certainly well worth striving for.

TWO CHAUTAUQUA TRIPS.

Besides the trip to Europe, the Advocate is offering two free trips to Lake Chautauqua, which is one of the most attractive places in the Western world. These trips will also allow stop-over privileges along the way; they will be strictly first-class in every particular. And besides, a prize will be given to every contestant who secures as many as 25 new subscriptions to the Advocate.

Candidates are urged to begin at once, by writing letters to their friends soliciting them to get busy and help them. Don't forget that while you are working for these grand prizes you are doing untold good by circulating your Church paper.

Fill out this blank at once, enclose your own subscription or renewal, and you will receive from this office full instructions how to proceed and win a valuable prize, possibly the first. The contest will close October 31, 1912.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

At Trout the attendance is 95 per cent of the Sunday school enrollment, and a teacher-training class meets at the prayer-meeting hour on Wednesday night.

Prof. A. B. Peters, late president of the Mansfield Female College, was the president of the Liverman Bible Class. He goes to his wife's farm near Nashville, Tenn., to spend a year recuperating.

Mrs. Barnett Wright, widow of the eloquent Barnett Wright, who died some two years ago in Arkansas, and was for several years a member of our Conference, is spending the summer with her sister, Mrs. Frank Bolton of Alexandria, and is teaching a class of young ladies in the First Methodist Sunday school.

We are under obligations to Bro. A. I. Townsley for the following notes (We would appreciate a similar kindness from any pastor or Sunday school workers):

The Doctor Scales Bible Class of First Church, Shreveport, is using "Hamill's Outlines of Gospels and Acts" as supplementary studies at the class hour. This is appropriate, since our lessons are from the Synoptic Gospels. At the suggestion of Dr. Pinson the class is also spending $100 to publish Chinese medical literature.

The Murrah Men's Bible Class of Arcadia has been honored by a request for the class photo for an Adult Magazine, by the First Baptist Church of Boston, Mass. Boston may be styled the "Hub of America," but the hub seems to be asking the "fellies" (the part that moves the fastest) for some oil to prevent friction.

The Wesley Adult Bible Class of Noel Memorial, Shreveport, recently had a record-breaking attendance of ninety-four. A. Inman Townsley, of Arcadia, addressed the class on the "Biggest End of the Sunday School." This growing class also observed its first anniversary with a moonlight picnic and trolley ride.

The Balrd Bible Class of First Church, Shreveport, is the largest Bible class in the Methodist Church in Louisiana. The enrollment is something over 200, and the attendance on a recent Sunday was 161. In addition to many other works of charity, this class supports a child in our orphanage at Ruston.

The total attendance, composed of all the denominations in the city of Shreveport on a recent Sunday, there was 2961; the four Methodist churches furnishing 1634 of this number. Methodism still believes in training her young for Christ.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Rev. J. D. Simpson, of Pickens, writes of having an interesting Children's Day with splendid results. He is also preparing other services of great interest along Sunday school lines.

Pastors are utilizing the great opportunities of mill communities, and are helping the operators and being helped themselves. An Adult Wesley Class, well organized, would work wonders among mill men.

Specific work is being done to prepare every Sunday school in the Conference to be an "Evergreen School" during the coming winter. A good Sunday school insures a good church, and an evergreen Sunday school is the greatest force for moral uplift in the rural community.

If there chances to be a Union Sunday school in any locality and there should be an objection to Children's Day, which cannot be diplomatically and prayerfully surmounted, just announce that a specific collection on a certain day will be taken up for this purpose and send it in with proper explanation to Brother Gladney.

The Gaines' Chapel Sunday school on the Corinth Circuit had a delightful Children's Day service June 23. Hon. Frank Worsbam, teacher of the Galloway Memorial Class of First Church, Corinth, made the address and it was a splendid one. A bountiful and well prepared dinner was served and a fine spirit of fellowship generated. Mr. Frank Moss is superintendent of this Sunday school, and Mr. Arthur Boone the general "booster."

A large Men's Class has been emphasizing the bringing of Bibles to the class-room. Seven Bibles were counted the first Sunday after the movement was begun and there were twenty on the third. A Bible in every man's pocket before the summer is over, is the definite aim in view. man's pocket before the summer is over, is the definite aim in view.

A GROWING SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS.

Some of the readers of the Advocate will be glad to hear, I am sure, of the good results of a recent campaign made by the Clisby Adult Bible Class of West Point, Miss. For quite a good many years the good woman for whom this class is named has taught a splendid class of average size in our school. Some time in February of this year it was decided to organize this class and make an effort to increase its membership. A lawyer's office near the church was secured as a place to meet, and afterward exchanged for the Y. M. C. A. Hall, just half a block in the rear of the church. The class set to work to reach one hundred members by the first of July. The growth was gradual, but sure. Last Sunday was a red-letter day with the class. A great effort was made during the previous week. Eighty-two had been enrolled up to the fourth Sunday in June. The class was advertised and every reasonable thing done to get people out. When all were counted it was found that 63 new scholars were present, making a total enrollment of 145. One hundred and twenty-six of these were present and ten others not members of the class, making a total present of 136. The morning offering was $7.25.

We are greatly encouraged over the good results. Our school now has enrolled in all departments 556, almost equal to the membership of the church. We had present last Sunday

HOLLY SPRING DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Holly Springs District Conference met at Taylor, Miss., Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock, June 18, 1912. The attendance was well up, if not better than the average. It was thought that, owing to the condition of the crops, that the attendance of the lay delegates would be small, but such was not the case. We have busy men who will lay down their business and attend to the business of the Church. Some thought that Taylor was too small to entertain the Conference, but she spread herself and no District Conference was better entertained, and no Conference host was ever more equal to the occasion than Rev. A. S. Raper, the popular pastor at Taylor.

The session was harmonious and profitable. The presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Tucker, was a new man in the chair, but his presidency did not indicate it. There was no haste or strain and everything was run on schedule time; he abundantly fulfilled his office as the representative of the Bishop.

The sermons by Rev. R. O. Brown on "Growth in Grace"; Rev. J. R. Countiss, on "The supremacy of the Spiritual"; Rev. W. W. Mitchel, on "Let us not be weary in Well Doing"; and Rev. T. H. Dorsey, on "Discipleship," were strong and helpful.

Every pastor was in attendance except one, and their reports, all, had the ring of progress. Generally speaking, the pastors' salaries are well up, but the benevolent claims are not as well up as usual. The country churches have had a very difficult year up to now. The usual revival season has not opened yet, but more than 150 additions were reported, and many of these were on profession of faith. A large number of the preachers in the district are young men who are taking the regular literary course in either Millsaps College of the State University, and the work in their charges is prospering.

H. B. Miller, Jr., G. C. Gregory, A. M. Odom, and J. L. Brazell were granted licenses to preach. The first three will go to school. J. D. Wroten, W. W. Bruner, and J. M. Carpenter were granted an application for admission on trial into the Annual Conference; all three are supplying works in the district. Rev. W. J. Wood was granted a recommendation for Elder's Orders.

M. G. Bubard, H. T. Smith, R. X. Williams and J. G. McGowan were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference with M. S. Oswalt and J. B. Williams as alternates. W. W. Mitchel, T. H. Dorsey, W. M. Langley and W. L. Broom were elected as the Licensing Committee.

Quite a number of the Conference connectional men visited the conference in the interest of their several causes. W. S. Lagrone, President of the Conference Board of Church Extension, was there fresh from the meeting of the General Board, with a stirring message. He has some interesting charts for all the pastors, and is afraid that the preachers are not going to ask him for them. W. L. Duren, President of the Conference Board of Missions, was there and he was well loaded. W. M. Williams, Manager of the Orphans' Home; H. M. Ellis, Field Secretary of the Memphis Tri-State Hospital; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of the Faculty of Millsaps College, and J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, represented the works with which they are connected as in a flourishing condition. Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, Field Secretary of the Sunday School Board, conducted a Sunday School Institute and Round Table Discussion on Tuesday afternoon. When the report from the Committee on Sunday Schools was brought in the Conference made a subscription of $100 to the Board to help carry on the work. The district will also pay the expenses of one girl from the Orphans' Home at Grenada College.

In view of the fact that the dormitory at Millsaps College has been given over as a domicile for the Millsaps Training School and that there is now no place where cheap board may be had on the campus, the Millsaps students in the Conference presented a resolution, that was adopted, that the trustees take steps toward building a dormitory.

When the question of where shall the next District Conference be held, was called, Taylor said come back again, and invitations were extended from every side, but the Conference voted to go to Tulsa.

W. M. LANGLEY,
Secretary.

COMMENDS IT HIGHLY.

Dear Doctor Meek:

I have read with a great deal of interest, pleasure and profit Bishop Candler's book, "Wesley and His Works, or Methodism and Missions." In this book we have ten addresses which were delivered by the Bishop on various important occasions. They are presented in the Bishop's own unique style of pith and power, giving the germ-thought of Wesley and his works. Methodism and her work, especially her duty to missions. It is a very helpful book for any one to read—instructive, inspiring and uplifting. Reading it inspires more love for our Church, more love for those for whom Christ died, and more love to Christ. I trust every Methodist will read it. K. W. DODSON

FROM SISTER RANDLE.

Dear Advocate: We are in Manchaca, Texas, where we have been assisting our son, Ross, in revival meetings. We close one here last night. The house was crowded with people anxious to hear the "Old Louisiana War Horse," as they call my husband. He held up well until we received a letter announcing the death of my brother, R. R. Ross, who died in New Orleans on June 22. He was buried in Monroe; the funeral was held from the home of our sister, Mrs. S. J. Newton. While attending Conference last year he took us, together with the late Dr. S. S. Keener and wife and Mrs. McHenry of Monroe, La., to the Grunewald Cave Restaurant. Little did we think that it was to be our last time together on this earth. Dear Brother Keener has gone to the great District above, and my own dear brother, Tobe (Richmond Randal Ross), is now in that glory world. Pray for us. Our dear brother was so kind to his family and stood by us so nobly when we needed help. He has gone, but, thank God, we can say, "Thy will be done." God bless his dear children, who miss him so much.

There are but four of our family now living. There were ten of us once, and but three girls and one brother remains. We have had so many sad letters this year. We received one to-day saying that our little friend, Rapp Osborne, from the Magnolia Sunday school, had died. We will see him again. Mrs. Hicks another friend from Gilbert, La., and my brother-in-law's sister have each been called away.

We like Texas; the people are so kind to us, and our sick ones are so much improved. We expect to stay in Texas, but our hearts often sigh for the dear friends of our home State. We raised 75 crates of onions. There is no sale for them here. If I had the money to pay the freight on them, I would send them to our friends in Louisiana. Pray for us, that we may find the means to finish paying for our home. We had expected the onions to help us in this way, but the poor market blighted that hope. However, we enjoyed gathering them—the experience was a new one. We know the Lord will provide, so we have trusted our financial affairs to him. We are now within the bounds of the West Texas Conference, just ten miles south of Austin, where our son, a local preacher, is supplying a charge. I still want all my sons and grandsons to be preachers, and my daughters and granddaughters to marry preachers.

"DESTROYING THE DESTROYER WITH TWO WEAPONS."

The above is the title to a little book of 100 pages, which the prohibitionists have published and are proposing to put into general circulation to counteract the tons and tons of liquor literature which the mails convey into Mississippi. The liquor trade claims to have the name and address of every voter in this State.

This little book contains the very choicest gems from the brains of Congressman R. H. Hobson, Bishop C. B. Galloway, Dr. J. B. Gambrell, and H. W. Grady touching the liquor traffic, some jurists on the bench concerning its work in this State, a chapter on scientific temperance, and strong prohibition expressions from the Catholic clergy. It also contains an excerpt of the principal anti-liquor laws of Mississippi in brief form.

Some Christian young ladies and young men are distributing the books, and thereby doing good for the cause, and at the same time making their way through college. They are endeavoring to put this book into every white home in the State. The good people will doubtless both appreciate the book and the efforts of the brave girls and boys to obtain an education. It is laudable in them, and the people appreciate their pluck. It is a lively book from beginning to end, and will do worlds of good. It is intended to counteract the liquor literature, and it will do it. The Anti-Saloon League Board hopes that all Christian people in the State will aid in every way possible in giving this book to the people during July and August.

It seems to us that it would be a good plan for B. Y. P. U., Epworth League and Christian societies to take hold of the book, push its sale and put the commission into their treasuries. The pastors are anxious for its distribution. We believe it will largely solve the problem now in Mississiippi. It would be a good thing for pastors and others who know of persons who would handle the book to write to the Anti-Saloon League, Jackson, Miss.—G. W. Eichelberger.

(Resolutions adopted by the Prentiss Miss. Quarterly Conference.)

Whereas, Brother L. M. Applewhite, who has been an official member of this charge for forty years, is very ill at this time, therefore be it, by the members of the quarterly conference, Resolved:

(1) That we extend to him and his family our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of affliction, and point them to Him who is able to comfort and sustain them, and assure them that we remember them in our prayers.

(2) That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Advocate for publication, a copy sent to the family, and that they be spread on the minutes of this quarterly conference.

Age is no barrier to health and this offer is open to all Old People, as well as middle-aged and young men and women. Thousands of persons, old and young, have sent for Bodi-Tone on trial, without paying a penny, and found it put new flesh on their bones, new vigor in their minds, new vim in their muscles, and new vitality into every vital function, and we want you to try it, to see if it will do so much for you.

All you need do is tell us you will try it and a dollar box will be handed to you.

It makes no difference who, where or what you are. Bodi-Tone takes all the risks, and asks no pay if it does not benefit. You don't need to write a long letter, don't need to fill out any elaborate blanks, don't need to send money or stamps. All you need do is clip the coupon, which tells us you want to try Bodi-Tone, fill in your name and address, and we will send Bodi-Tone to you. This is how Bodi-Tone wants to be tried by old and young, this is how it wants to prove its curative powers. We are glad to send it to you without a penny, glad to give you a chance to try it, to learn about this medicine which has brought new health and vigor to so many sick, suffering and feeble persons, old and young, glad to show you how health can be created at all ages with the right medicine, made from the right ingredients. If Bodi-Tone benefits you as it has thousands, pay us a dollar for it. If not, don't pay a penny.

Bodi-Tone

does just what its name means—cures disease by toning all the body, and we want you to try a box at our risk and see what it will do for your body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round tablet, that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five of these tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so that you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how it works in the body, how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ of the body. Tono is a little word, but it means a great deal, everything in health. When all the organs are doing their part, when each is acting in a perfectly natural way, when all the functions are healthy and performed with natural vigor, when the energy, strength and power of resistance to disease are all at a natural point, then the body is in proper tone. When disease has attacked any part, the tone of the entire physical body should be raised to the highest point, to make all the body help to cure. This is the power which Bodi-Tone offers you to help you get new health.

Not a Patent Medicine

Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Rhubarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such valuable ingredients guarantee its merit and power.

When you use Bodi-Tone you know just what you are using, know it is good and safe and know you are taking the kind of medicine to provide real help for the body. It contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs, nothing that your own family doctor will not endorse and say is a good thing. It does not depend on killing pain with cocaine, opium, morphine, or other dangerous drugs. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures its disorders with remedies Nature intended to tone and cure the body when that power was given them. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force, Lithia aids in the kidneys, Gentian does invaluable work for the stomach and digestive forces, Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire system, Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. A remarkable combination that does wonderful work for the body's health. Each of these ingredients adds a needed element from nature to the body. We claim no credit for discovering the ingredients in Bodi-Tone, each of which has its own well-deserved place in the medical books of most of the civilized world. We simply claim the credit for the successful formula which we invented, for the way in which these valuable ingredients are combined, for the proportions used, for the curative force which thousands of sick have found in Bodi-Tone. Many of its ingredients are regularly prescribed by doctors, either separately or in combination with such drugs as each doctor may favor, for there are wide differences of opinion among the doctors of various schools. The exact combination used in Bodi-Tone is what makes Bodi-Tone cure where doctors have failed and gives Bodi-Tone the curative and restorative power that makes possible the remarkable cures experienced by Bodi-Tone users.

You Need It

If you are tired of ceaseless doctor bills and wearied of continual dosing without results, you need Bodi-Tone right now. If your local doctor is doing you no real good, if you have given him a chance to do what he can and the ordinary medicinal combinations he used have failed, give this modern, scientific combination of special remedies a chance to show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women with chronic ailments who had good physicians without lasting benefit, and for this reason all chronic sufferers are invited to try a box at our risk.

Bodi-Tone offers its valuable services to you right now, if you are sick, if you need medicinal help, if your bodily organs are not acting as they should. If your body is not in right, natural and normal tone, this is what Bodi-Tone is for, to help Nature restore tone to the body, to restore health, vigor, vitality and strength.

If there is anything wrong with your kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your nerves, your blood, your liver, your bowels or your general system, the health-making ingredients in Bodi-Tone go right to work and keep on working day after day, producing results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone helps to eliminate the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the kidneys, stomach and blood, thereby preventing a continuance of Rheumatic poison and putting new activity into muscles, nerves and joints. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from any Female Ailment, for its splendid toning properties have been found of special value in such ailments.

We Risk All

Why delay another day, when a trial of this proven medicine is yours for the asking? Why keep on suffering, when by clipping the coupon, filling in your name and address and mailing it to us, you can get a twenty-five days' treatment of this great remedy which has already restored thousands to health, which thousands everywhere are talking about? It just costs a stamp and you don't pay a penny unless it benefits. The powers of Bodi-Tone have been amply proven by three years of glorious cures. It has been tested by thousands, in a great variety of ailments in both sexes at all ages. Persons suffering from Rheumatism, Stomach Trouble, Kidney, Liver and Bladder Ailments, Uric Acid Diseases, Female Troubles, Bowel, Blood and Skin Affections, Dropsy, Piles, Catarrh, Anaemia, Sleeplessness, La Grippe, Pains, General Weakness and Nervous Breakdown, have tested Bodi-Tone and fully proven its remedial value in such disorders. Read the reports, send for a box and try it.

Your Own Opinion Decides! When you use Bodi-Tone on this trial offer you take absolutely no obligations to pay one penny unless it satisfies, nor to buy any medicine at any time. We leave it all to you—your opinion decides it. You will know if you feel better, if you are stronger, more vigorous and active, if your limbs and back do not pain you, if your stomach or kidneys do not trouble you, if your heart or liver does not bother you. You will surely know if your organs are acting better than they did before using Bodi-Tone, and if health is returning. If you are not sure, don't pay.

CARLETS, GA.—I had been diseased for fifteen years with what the doctors called Systemic Catarrh. I had pains all through my body, in my bowels, stomach and back, and my heart would flutter and smother so it appeared that I could not live. I had indigestion and constipation, with blind spells. Everything I ate soured on my stomach. It seemed I could not stand it much longer. I tried all the doctors in my settlement and three specialists of Atlanta, Ga., and most of the patent medicines I heard of, without any relief, until I got Bodi-Tone. By the time I had taken a treatment of Bodi-Tone I could eat anything I wanted, and there was not a pain in my body. Bodi-Tone did more for me than all the doctors. I am seventy-five years old. J. F. PERRY.

LANFANA, TENN.—I had Rheumatism for twenty-five years from my Neck to my Ankle, Catarrh of the Head for about twenty years and a bad Stomach. I had a terrible swimming in my head, and last Winter I took a terrible cough and spit up quantities of mucus, which the doctors said was Bronchial Asthma. They doctored me all winter with but little benefit. I saw Bodi-Tone advertised, sent for a trial box, and I got my cure from this medicine. I am stouter this Winter than I have been in thirty years and seem to be entirely cured of all my troubles. I have gained thirty-two pounds since taking Bodi-Tone, and can walk ten miles in a day. I am sixty years old. I owe all my good health to Bodi-Tone and believe it saved my life. MRS. EMILY DRIVER.

WATSON, OHIO.—Bodi-Tone has done wonders for me. Last Fall I was so run down that I could hardly get up and down. I doctored and received only temporary relief. I tried everything and had about made up my mind that there was no help. I could not eat and didn't seem to crave anything. Everyone thought I would not live through the winter, and I really thought so myself. My kidneys and bladder were so bad, and my stomach also. I had such weak spells with my heart that it was not safe for me to start out to walk, as I could not stand on my feet a little while. My head was dizzy. I saw the Bodi-Tone offer and decided to try once more. I have not felt so well for years as I do since I used Bodi-Tone. I am in my seventy-second year and can do a day's work. Everyone is surprised to see me as well as I am now. A. SAMS.

Editorial

A writer observes that our high officials in this day are not men of power. He is mistaken. Some of them seem to be showing quite an excess of PARDONING power.

The easy way in life is to let things alone and move along the lines of least resistance; the heroic way is to grapple with existing wrongs and strive to make the world better.

The New York Independent has pledged its support to Mr. Taft for re-election to the presidency. Perhaps this is because, being a Unitarian, he is religiously the least orthodox of any of the candidates. The Independent's penchant for heterodoxy is one of its most marked characteristics.

The Roman Catholics of New Orleans have an organization known as the "Militia of Christ." We much prefer the designation "Soldiers of Christ;" however, there may be some that the new name will fit better, since militia are expected to render only light and temporary service. There are far too many in our Churches who seem adequate only to an occasional public parade.

Senator Heyburn, of Idaho, is now endeavoring to depreciate the statesmanship of Thomas Jefferson. In the Senate a few days ago he declared that Jefferson did not write the Declaration of Independence, and that the Government ought not to purchase and preserve his home at Monticello. It occurs to us that Mr. Heyburn has missed his calling. He ought to have been a preacher and a "higher critic," so that his iconoclasm could have a wider field for its exercise. It is a pity that such talent as he exhibits for shattering the traditions and vagaries of the past should be restricted to so narrow a sphere as that furnished by the American House of Lords.

It is said that Dr. George R. Parkin, the organizing representative of the Cecil Rhodes Scholarship trust, is seeking to induce Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, and other wealthy Americans to duplicate the Rhodes scholarship scheme in such a way that English students could be sent to American universities, as students from this country are now sent to Oxford. It strikes us that such a reciprocity would be most admirable. Doubtless it would prove highly beneficial to Great Britain to have some of her bright young men come into touch with our democratic institutions and catch the American spirit of independence. There is scarcely a nation on the earth from which other countries may not learn valuable lessons. An interchange of thought among the various peoples of the globe is the world's most profitable commerce, and whatever aids in extending it contributes to the welfare of the human race.

UNSEEING CHRISTIANS.

The need of many Christians is the seeing eye. The Master on one occasion, noting the lack of perception on the part of his disciples, propounded to them the question, "Having eyes, see ye not?" They had taken no bread with them on the ship in which they were crossing the Sea of Galilee, and when he warned them against the "leaven of the Pharisees (their doctrines)," they thought he was calling attention to their lack of food and began to be troubled about having none. Observing this, he chided them for their lack of discernment, reminding them of how he had taken five loaves and fed five thousand persons, and seven loaves and fed four thousand, and how in each instance after all had eaten there was a considerable overplus. Though walking daily with Jesus, they were strangely blind to the real meaning of his utterances and the great outstanding truth of his deity. They were under the domination of material things; they needed a clearer and stronger spiritual vision.

And the followers of Christ in this day are not unlike them in this respect. There are yet those among them who have only a faint and murky apprehension of the things that God would have them know. In nothing do Christians differ more than in their capacity to see the spiritual. One finds the hidden manna in the Divine Word and feeds upon it and grows strong, where another discovers nothing but dry and unhelpful husks. In events where some see only the remorseless sweep of inexorable chance, the man of vision sees the Heavenly Father moving in "a mysterious way his wonders to perform." Blessings, rich and full, abound on every side for the sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, if they would but discern and appropriate them. O that our eyes were opened to behold the wondrous things that the Lord hath prepared for those that love him!

But it is not our own privileges and opportunities alone that many of us fail to see. With equal blindness, we overlook the open doors of service that invite us. The measure of the worth of every Christian life is its helpfulness to others. In all that has been written concerning him, no more beautiful eulogy has ever been pronounced upon the earthly career of our Lord than that set forth in the brief and simple words of St. Peter: "He went about doing good." "She doeth little kindnesses," wrote Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes in his touching appreciation of his beloved wife. And so might we all, if we had the quick sight to discover the opportunities as in succession they present themselves and pass speedily away. Nor are these commonplace and unheralded acts trivial and unimportant. To carry sunshine into darkened homes, to lighten the heavy burdens borne by tired and aching shoulders, and to smooth the rough road for worn and weary feet are tasks fit for angels. Such a ministry of blessing is possible to every one who has a heart to love, eyes to see, and even a small capacity to plan. A practical illustration of what a little thought and tact may do toward brightening the sad and dreary lives around us is given in the following clipping from a recent issue of the Times-Democrat:

"Among the devices for helping a shut-in this seems one of the cleverest. One of the wealthy girls in a large town invited twenty of her girl friends to an afternoon tea and proposed a plan which went right to their hearts. She knew of an elderly lady, a bright, cheerful woman, who had dearly loved her kind and was interested in the outside world, and who had been shut up in her room through an injury to her hip. What a blessing a telephone would be to her, and it might be put in her room if each one of the girls would pledge ten cents a month. Of course it was done without delay. The phone was on a table at the invalid's elbow, and the girls called her up and talked to her a little while each day, and told her the news, and she called up old friends who had almost forgotten her. And so it was like perpetual fresh air and sunshine in that dull little room. And it was so easily done. One did not have to be wealthy to do it—one only had to think, or to be told."

THE DEMOCRACY NEEDED.

One of the most important truths that Jesus taught was that of the value of a human being. Nothing on earth is truly great but man, who is akin to God in his nature and immortal. The worth of all other creatures and things is measured by the service that they render humanity. In helping the masses of the people, governments, colleges and churches have their only opportunity to perform a noble and enduring work. If they concern themselves with the few, to the neglect of the many, they have turned aside from the path to lofty achievement. Satan ever seeks to thus lead the world's workers astray. As Christ's representatives, our mission is to all mankind. We have no right to restrict it. The possibilities of the weakest and most ignorant of the race are beyond the highest conceptions of the finite mind. Perhaps our most urgent need to-day is the democratization of our institutions, both secular and religious—so to shape them that they will reach and help the needy multitudes. It is not democracy of government that is most important—that is not always best; it is for democracy in service that we plead.

What an inestimable privilege is prayer! It dignifies the Christian life and lifts it immeasurably above that of the ungodly man. To be able to go to the Heavenly Father in the morning and have him fill the soul with a strange, sweet peace; to ask for his guidance through the day and to feel assured that it is given; to bend the knee in fervent devotion at nightfall and realize that the great Protector still is near and that his sleepless eye will watch over one's couch through the hours of darkness—these are blessings rich beyond the world's most valued treasures. The person who has found the way by which his spirit may enter the Divine Presence and become strengthened, ennobled and inspired, has learned the secret of true happiness and lofty living. Not to pray is to turn away from the open door that leads to God and all that is highest and best in time and in eternity.

Our Monthly Sermon

THE DIVINE PROPRIETORSHIP.

By Rev. E. S. Lewis.

Text: The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein. —Psalm 24:1.

The fact of God's lordship over the world is a self-evident proposition. Holy Writ contains no doctrine that is more conclusive. It is as well authenticated as that Caesar crossed the Rubicon, or that Luther went to the Diet at Worms. It is not an inference drawn from nature, or from providence, or from the course of history, but it is a truth declared in God's word.

"The earth is the Lord's." Many things would be just as true if the Bible did not contain them, but for our sake God has given us a revelation. When Jesus came to the hour of his glorification he lifted up his eyes to heaven and prayed, "Father, glorify thy name." Then there came a voice from heaven saying, "I have both glorified it and will glorify it again." Some of the people who stood by said it thundered; others said, "An angel spoke to him." Jesus answered and said, "This voice came not because of me, but for your sakes." God does not propose to talk to men in signs and symbols, and then refuse them light enough to understand what those symbols mean. Revelation—God's way of making known Divine truth to men—declares that the Lord is the proprietor of all things. "This book—this holy book, on every line marked with the seal of high divinity, on every leaf hedged with drops of love divine, and with the eternal heraldry and signature of God Almighty stamped from first to last"—this book declares that the whole earth with all that belongs to it is God's.

I.

It is a sovereignty of law. God reigns in the material world by the laws which he has made for its government. The sun shines because that is the law of its life. The flower blossoms in obedience to the same law. The stars twinkle in the far-away heavens because God has set them at their appointed tasks and they cannot do otherwise. God only can suspend these laws. Nobody ever heard of the sun refusing to shine, or of a star which was displeased with its task. These laws are greater than those things which obey them. There are, therefore, no discords, no broken harmonies in the heavens, no strikes, no "shut-outs." The stars repeat but one chorus—

"Forever singing as they shine,
The band that made us is divine."

I love to think that in the heart of all matter is God; that he is in the dewdrop and in the ocean wave; that he is in the lowly violet and is King of the vast realms above us. He reigns everywhere and the Lord our God is one Lord. Some men have the idea that God made this world and set it to going, gave it certain laws for its guidance and then withdrew, and left it to run its own course. Jesus assures us of God's profound concern for the world and its welfare by asking if two sparrows were not sometimes sold for a farthing—about one-half of a cent in our money—and yet he declares that no sparrow ever falls to the ground without the Father's notice. The argument is that if God would concern himself about so valueless a thing as a sparrow—worth only one-fourth of a cent—does it not follow that he would not be indifferent to those made in his own likeness and image? If he watches the blooming lily and gives to it a garment more royal than that which Solomon wore, is it reasonable to think that God has left this world to be preyed upon by blind fate and hopeless chance?

The law by which God reigns in the material world is not the law of caprice or fate, but it is the law of wisdom, goodness and love. The material universe is the expression of what God is in terms of material things, and little by little we are learning to spell out the great alphabet of the world's wonders. Kepler, as he learned the secret of the stars and gazed into their bright faces, exclaimed, "O God, I am thinking thy thoughts after thee!" Some one has said that when God thinks in terms of matter he thinks in planets. When God thought of man's need of light the solar system sprang into being to meet that need. As we learn more and more of God's heavens, the moon and the stars which he has ordained, we are constrained to cry out with deeper and yet more adoring accents, "Great and marvelous are thy works, O Lord!" David sang in his day of God's glory as revealed in the stars, but with what new rapture of adoration would he have sung if he had known that the few stars which he could see were but a handful as compared with the unseen army of stars far away in the heavens! How he would have shouted if he could have known the depth and glory of the Milky Way, that great river of stars. Some writer has said: "The material universe is only the outer court of the great temple of God; the spiritual realm is the Holy of Holies." So it is.

II.

It is a sovereignty of grace. God's sovereignty may be said to be based upon his ownership. "The earth is the Lord's." He made it. He redeemed it, the whole of it, the wayside weed, the pagan pine, the gentle oak, and man with all that man holds dear. The earth wholly is redeemed. God gave it laws and fixed upon it certain limitations. Whatever we may think of the world as to its purpose and value, we cannot forget the Divine Proprietor. He is our Father.

"This is my Father's world:
He shines in all that's fair;
In the rustling grass I hear him pass,
He speaks to me everywhere.

"This is my Father's world:
From his eternal throne,
He watch doth keep when I'm asleep,
And I am not alone.

"This is my Father's world,
Now closer to heaven bound;
For dear to God is the earth Christ trod,
No place but is holy ground."

The sense of ownership is one of the strongest sentiments of the human heart. Ownership carries with it the idea of concern for the thing owned. It not only suggests love and interest in the thing owned, but it creates interest. Witness the girl with her first doll; the boy with his first dog or gun. In all kingdoms and under all skies this is true—that ownership carries with it the idea of concern for the well-being of the object owned. Our God is not only rich in houses and lands, but the world is the Lord's, according to the Psalmist, and they that dwell therein. Man is the center of God's creation and represents the highest expression of his skill. He was made only a little lower than the angels, or as otherwise translated, he was made to come only a little short of God. God's estimate of man's value is suggested by the question, "For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world and lose himself?" Man represents the real riches of the world. God's thoughts are said to sleep in rocks, crawl in serpents and stand upright in man. Some one criticized Wellington by saying that he was a very little man, but a British private made the triumphant reply that he was biggest at the top. Man is not only the biggest thing in God's world, but he is highest at the top. However, man's highest value is not the physical, for the Scriptures tell us that God takes no pleasure in the legs of a man. Neither is the intellectual nature the highest. Mind is not the greatest thing in man, unless it includes the immortal part of him. Then we may conclude that the highest value is found in man's moral nature, in his affections, his judgment, his will. One of the greatest arguments in behalf of the Christian religion I know is the fact that religion appeals to what is highest in man—his affections, his reason, his judgment, his will; while sin attacks him in the lowest and weakest elements of his nature—his passions and appetite. Then if man is God's masterpiece, what must be the love with which God broods over him! The grace which came by Jesus Christ has provided richly for all human wants, and the providence that operates in this kingdom is not blind nor heartless. "Nothing with God can be accidental."

God is the most potential force in our world. Where God and man work together there is no power on earth or in heaven that can defeat them. So many people leave God out when they write the equation of life. They write it: John Smith, plus fate, equals destiny. How much truer is the conception of the man who feels that if God be for him, who can be against him? God has shown by providence and by miracle that he is interested in man's welfare. When man fell, God gave his Son to redeem and restore him. He had no richer gift to offer. When man wanders now, God sends his Spirit to bring him back. The Spirit takes the things of Christ and shows them unto us. The Athenian orator when he found his audience listless would arouse them by shouting, "Marathon! Marathon!" This was the magic word. It carried them back to the days when Miltiades defeated the Persian hosts at the very gates of Athens and thus saved Greece. A large Persian army had crossed the Aegean and landed at Marathon. Miltiades by a swift movement soon put the Asiatics to rout and achieved a signal victory. The swiftest runner in Greece bore the good news to Athens, twenty-two miles away. He told his story and then fell dead in the street. The name of Marathon never failed to stir the Athenians' pride and arouse their enthusiasm. The name of Jesus is the magic word in all languages and lands. It is the common bond between all peoples and races, and is the hope of the world. At the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, every tongue unloose, every lip praise. He is the Elder Brother, the heir who divides his Father's estate with his younger brethren.

God is at work through his providence carrying into execution his world-wide plans and policies. He makes the wrath of men to praise him. The stars in their courses still fight against Sisera. Victor Hugo said in reference to Napoleon: "Was it possible that Napoleon should win the battle of Waterloo? We answer, No! Because of Wellington? No. Because of Bleucher? No. Because of God. For Bonaparte to conquer at Waterloo was not the law of the nineteenth century. It was time that this vast man should fall. He had been impeached before the Infinite. He had vexed God. Waterloo was not a battle. It was the change of front of the universe." Napoleon declared in explanation of his overthrow at Waterloo that God is on the side of the heaviest battalions, but the testimony of history is against his conclusion. God saves by minorities more frequently than by majorities. Noah and his family were a small minority. The majority went down. Lot and his two daughters were saved, but big, wicked Sodom went down. Elijah won on Carmel and Daniel in the lions' den. Thus it goes on from age to age. "There is no restraint to the Lord, to save by many or by few." It is not by might nor by power but by God's Spirit that victory comes to us. How poor and empty must the life of that man be who has no God to whom he may turn in the time of sorrow, no God for the hour of storm and stress, no Christ to bless and save! Life fails and the heart faints if Christ be not our friend, but if he be given the chief place, then 'tis heaven where Jesus is!

"The night has a thousand eyes
And the day but one;
Yet the light of the whole world dies
With the dying sun.

"The mind has a thousand eyes
And the heart but one;
Yet the light of a whole life dies
When love is done."

THE EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE.

On June 20-21 the Conference of representatives of Annual Conference Boards of Education was held in Wesley Hall, Vanderbilt University. Twenty or more Annual Conference Boards were represented by delegates, and, in addition, a good number of visitors were present, and were invited to take part in the discussions. Dr. Stonewall Anderson, General Secretary of Education, presided during the sessions of the Conference and Prof. W. E. Hogan was elected Secretary.

The Conference was called for the purpose of considering educational questions of general interest to the Church, and to bring into closer relations the Annual Conference Boards and the General Board of Education. The general topic of the first day was "The Annual Conference Boards of Education," and for the second day "The Development and Correlation of the Agencies for Ministerial Education." Some of the questions discussed were: "The Annual Conference Board's Relation to the Educational Enterprises of the Conference," "The Board's Relation to the General Board of Education," "The Board's Financial Policy," "The Organization of Conference Boards of Education," "The Contribution of the Church College to the Training of the Ministry."

The mind of the Conference concerning certain educational questions was expressed in a number of resolutions adopted, the Conference going on record as declaring "That all these resolutions simply express our views as an unofficial body, and are merely suggestions in the various directions indicated."

Concerning the unwise multiplication of Church educational institutions, the Conference recommended "such change in the organic law of our Church governing our educational work as will forbid the establishment of any school or Annual Conference Preachers' Institute in the future that is not first endorsed by the Annual Conference within whose bounds it is to be established, and is also endorsed by the General Board of Education." Special emphasis on Christian Education at the Annual Conferences was requested of the Bishops, and it is urged that anniversaries or other mass meetings be held at each Conference session. The suggestion that a Department of Sunday School and Christian Work Methods be included in the curriculum of our colleges, wherever possible, was approved.

The resolution passed by the General Board at its last session, that the assessments made by the General Conference and Annual Conference educational assessment be combined as one assessment, and the amount collected divided pro rata between the two boards, was indorsed. The Conference appointed a Commission consisting of Dr. H. N. Snyder, Dr. J. A. Rice and Dr. Stonewall Anderson to formulate a statement as to the present educational policy of the Church and to report the same to the General Board of Education and the Conference for Education in 1913.

It was decided that this Conference of representatives of the Annual Conference Board of Education be held annually in connection with the meetings of the General Board of Education. Each Annual Conference Board of Education was requested to embody in its report to the next session of its Conference the resolution adopted by the Conference of June 20-21, and to report the same to the General Secretary, that something definite may be known regarding the mind of the Church as preliminary to General Conference legislation. A constitution and by-laws for Annual Conference Boards of Education was adopted. This document is, of course, only suggestive, and will be submitted to the Conference Boards for whatever action these bodies may take. The resolutions and constitution adopted will perhaps be published in full in the Church papers, or they will at least be furnished to the Annual Conference Boards of Education.

THACKERAY'S "CLERICAL SNOBS."

By Wightman F. Melton, Ph. D.

In The Book of Snobs, "By One of Themselves," Thackeray ridicules pretension and vulgarity with caustic but kindly satirical humor. The book ends with a sentence which may well be said to sum up the author's career: "If Fun is good, Truth is still better, and Love best of all."

Thackeray began with fun: burlesque, farce, and parody. Then, with truth, in the form of satire, in Vanity Fair, he became famous. Afterwards, with sincere fun, we find him "Speaking the Truth in Love," in Esmond, and The Newcomes. Finally, as editor of The Cornhill Magazine, he produced, "with all the old grace and with new gentleness," in Roundabout Papers, good fun; better truth, and best love.

Thackeray defines a snob (Chapter ii) as "He who meanly admires mean things." In chapter xxxii, he says, "To be arrogant is to be a Snob." In the last chapter, "Concluding Observations on Snobs," he says, "I believe such words as Fashionable, Exclusive, Aristocratic, and the like, to be wicked, unchristian epithets, that ought to be banished from honest vocabularies. A Court system that sends men of genius to the second table, I hold to be a Snobbish system. A society that sets up to be polite, and ignores Arts and Letters; I hold to be a Snobbish society. You, who despise your neighbor, are a Snob; you, who forget your own friends, meanly to follow after those of a higher degree, are a Snob; you, who are ashamed of your poverty, and blush for your calling, are a Snob; as are you who boast of your pedigree or are proud of your wealth."

A few examples of Thackeray's keen and, at times, almost merciless satire, will suffice to show that he was fearless when it came to handling a snob. Of the "Snob Royal," he says, "He invented a shoe-buckle (this was in the vigor of his youth)." Of Lady S. de Mogyn's son (before they came to town the name was plain Muggins) it is said that he wrote a little volume of spoony, puny poems, * * * fainted when he kissed the Pope's toe at Rome, * * * and sleeps in white kid gloves. Of the "University Snob," President Crump, of Saint Boniface, serves as a dummy for the rebuke, "He roars out the responses (at Chapel service) as if it were an honor to heaven that the president of Saint Boniface should take a part in the service." Of a certain "Continental Snob," Thackeray says, "The only good action he ever did in his life is the involuntary one of giving an example to be avoided."

If a Methodist preacher were to read of all the other snobs first, reserving Chapters xi, xii, and xiii, especially xi, to the last, he would be sure of merciless caricature, for there is a reference, in Chapter vi, to the place "where Methodist preachers are holding forth to three little children in the green inclosures." In the same chapter is mentioned "a fat steady coachman who is a Methodist." In Chapter xiii, there is a reference to a Dissenter, "an unfortunate gentleman who (on a tub) was preaching an exceedingly desultory discourse to a skeptical audience of omnibus-cads and nurse maids." This "unfortunate gentleman," however, seems to have Thackeray's sympathy, since he is brought into the story for the purpose of showing another side to the snobishness of Mrs. Chuff, who had been taught to honor her Church and her King and cannot bear a Radical or a Dissenter.

Let us see, now, just what the great uproarious, English humorist makes of the "Clerical Snob." He admits, to begin with, that there are some Clerics whose claim to snobishness is undoubted; but that, if there are some stray delinquents who do wrong, straightway there are a thousand newspapers ready to cry, "Fie upon him!" while those same papers take very little notice of the tens of thousands of honest preachers who lead Christian lives, give generously to the poor, rigidly deny themselves, and live and die in the discharge of duty without so much as a newspaper paragraph in their favor. Thackeray wishes that he and his friends might do the same. And then he whispers his belief that of those eminent philosophers who are loudest in their criticism of the parson, few of them get their knowledge of the church by attending it.

The humorist then remembers the days of his childhood, when he heard the village bell and walked to church on a sunny Sabbath morning. He has seen the parson's wife at the bedside of poor sick folk, and the town clergyman climbing the dirty stairs of foul alleys, going about his sacred business. If one of these, he says, should fall away, do not be one of the yelling mob that howls after him, for any man can yell and howl.

Thackeray then refers, without calling names, to seven or eight Irish bishops, who had recently died, leaving some two hundred thousand pounds apiece. He follows them to the gates of Paradise, sees them with their probates of wills in their hands, and thinks their chance is * * * but he scurries back to earth lest Saint Peter might ask him some awkward questions about his own favorite vices.

The author then advises against the popular prejudice that clergymen are overpaid and live in luxury. He observes that the wage is commonly small, and that the demands upon the dismal income are such as most philosophers would grumble to meet; the parson's wife must dress neatly, he must "look like a gentleman," and the six big hungry boys must be reared.

The next paragraph is a keen two-edged instrument that doubtless smote many a fun-loving reader of Punch. It is on the irresistible temptations a preacher has to spend his money. One moralist or philosopher, cannot resist purchasing a box of cigars because they are extra fine; another a fancy clock because it is a great bargain; and another, a box at the Opera because the singers are "divine." Thackeray suggests that these gentlemen fancy how difficult it must be for the parson to resist the temptation to buy food for the hungry, medicine for the sick, or to treat his small boy, "whose breeches are sadly out at elbows," to a suit of corduroys.

Now, let Thackeray's concluding paragraph be given, just as he wrote it for Punch:

"But what is this? Instead of 'showing up' the parsons, we are indulging in mandlin praises of this monstrous black-coated race? O saintly Francis, lying at rest under the turf; O Jimmy, and Johnny, and Willy, friends of my youth! O noble and dear old Elias! how should he who knows you not respect you and your calling? May this pen never write another pennyworth again, if it ever casts ridicule upon either."

Pancoast, concluding his sketch of Thackeray, says, "He . . . showed us that beauty of holiness which can

'Redeem nature from the general curse,' that fair flower of simple goodness which, blossoming in tangled and thorny ways, sweetens for us the noisome places of the earth."

The Southern Presbyterians now number 292,845. The additions on profession of faith reported last year footed up 14,103.

The Methodist Recorder (London) announces that the leader of the band that played "Nearer My God, to Thee," while the Titanic was sinking, was a Yorkshire Methodist, who had been a member of the Church for twenty years.

Both Gov. Woodrow Wilson and Mrs. Wilson were born in a manse, the father of each being a minister. Should they enter the White House next March, as now seems likely, it will be another triumph for the children of clergymen and Christian home training.

The centennial of the birth of Henry Ward Beecher will be celebrated in the famous Plymouth Church of Brooklyn, in June, 1913. Gutzon Borglum, the noted sculptor, has been engaged to complete a memorial statue of the great preacher by that time.

The new building at Andrew Female College, at Cuthbert, Ga., known as Cuthbert Hall, is going steadily up, the brick work being about finished. This institution is prospering under the administration of Dr. J. W. Malone, its capacity having been taxed to the limit during the last session.

There have been rumors afloat that Dr. J. H. Jowett, the brilliant pastor of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church of New York, would not be averse to returning to England. But the Doctor denied this in England, where he is visiting, a few days since, declaring that his work in New York is proceeding well and realizing his expectations.

It is stated that Dallas Hall, the building which the city of Dallas, Tex., is erecting as its gift to the Southern Methodist University located there, will be the largest single school building in the South. It will cost $300,000, and a contract for its completion within the next nine months has already been made with the Fred. A. Jones Construction Company.

Dr. H. M. DuBose, the brilliant pastor of St. John's M. E. Church, South, of Augusta, Ga., recently made a trip to Atlanta in the interest of pending temperance legislation in that State. Though decidedly literary in his tastes, Dr. DuBose is a man of practical affairs and may usually be found at the front in every movement that seeks to promote the moral and social betterment of the people.

Dr. G. C. Rankin, the editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, has a volume now on the press entitled "The Story of My Life." Though an autobiography, it touches upon the lives and characteristics of other Methodist celebrities and deals graphically with many events of surpassing interest. Over eight hundred volumes have already been sold. The price is $1.25. Orders may be sent to the author at Dallas, Texas.

Rev. H. F. Harrigan, a Roman Catholic priest of Greater New York, in a sermon recently characterized the "turkey trot" and some of the other later styles of dancing as "not only immoral, but criminal!" He is by no means the first representative of the Roman Church to take a stand against the modern dance. In fact, it is easy to show that all the Christian denominations have in some of their councils condemned this hurtful form of amusement, which unhappily has long been too common.

Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, celebrated his seventy-eighth birthday on Tuesday, July 23. He is said to be in good health, and when asked to express his opinion concerning Senator J. W. Bailey's statement that if the present trend of things should continue in the United States there will be a revolution here similar to the famous French revolution within thirty years, he expressed a strong dissent from that view. He said, "I have more confidence in the people of this country than to believe that such a state of affairs will come to pass."

Bishop J. H. McCoy has lately been doing some fine field work in West Virginia, in the course of which he has been pushing his way out to some of the interior localities. A recent issue of the Clendenin Herald thus referred to his visit to the town in which it is published: "Bishop McCoy is the first Bishop of any branch of the Methodist Church to visit this place. Though a young man, he has splendid ability. His sermon was on faith, and was regarded by all who heard it as an able, scholarly discourse. It might be better if all our Churches would oftener use their best talent in the small towns."

Bishop Thomas Bowman, the Senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was ninety-five years old on July 15. It is stated that he still possesses considerable physical and mental vigor, and that he may be seen on the streets of Orange, N. J., almost any day in good weather. He was graduated from Dickinson College in 1837, and has been a licensed preacher for nearly seventy-five years, and a Bishop for nearly forty years. When a small boy he was very frail and delicate, and it is claimed that a daily walk of three miles to school did much toward strengthening him and establishing his health.

The Seventh Day Adventists for the past ten days have been holding a camp meeting at Baton Rouge, La. The press dispatches state that people have been in attendance from New Orleans, Monroe, Alexandria, De Ridder, Lake Arthur, Hammond, Woodlawn, Jennings, Welsh, Jena, Shreveport, and Lake Charles, as well as from the near-by country. The statistics of this denomination were given out in Washington on July 15, and are as follows: Members, 108,975, of which 60 per cent are in the United States; institutions owned, 242; value of the same, $11,000,000. Of this property, three million dollars' worth is in other countries. The chief characteristic of this sect is its intense opposition to a legal recognition of Sunday as a day of rest and worship, and its propaganda is doing great harm.

Dr. J. R. Miller, one of the best known Presbyterian ministers in the United States and one of the world's foremost writers of devotional literature died at his home in Philadelphia, in the seventy-third year of his age, on July 2. He was a successful pastor, always building up the churches to which he ministered, and for many years had been the editorial superintendent of the Board of Publication and Sabbath-school Work of his denomination. But it was through the deeply spiritual books that he wrote that he wielded the widest influence, and these productions will not soon let his name be forgotten. They have found their way into thousands of homes and libraries, and will be read for decades to come. It may be interesting to those who have been blessed by reading Dr. Miller's helpful writings to know that his favorite hymn was, "O Love that will not let me go."

NOT A DROP.

United States Senator Beveridge says: "I never touched a drop of liquor in all my life, for any reason, and never will. Early in life I faced the question squarely, considered its probable effect on my brain, character and body, saw how it affected others, and then concluded that I couldn't afford, under any consideration, to touch one drop of the product of either distiller or brewer. I have never regretted that step, I can tell you. Later, I began more fully to comprehend the economic and political phases of the traffic, and the result is that I now view it as the most important issue before the American people today."—Methodist Recorder.

WILL YOU ASSIST HIM?

We desire to call the attention of our readers to a case of peculiar interest. A young man in Louisiana who is preparing himself for the ministry, has worked his way through school for two years. He has yet two years of study before he will be graduated. On account of the young man's health and the extra work he will have to do during the next two years, it is unwise for him to continue to work his way through school. His mother is a widow without the means to pay his way. In view of the deserving nature of this case we make the following appeal: Let any who may have the means and are willing to assist this young man for the next year, send such amount as they may see fit to the Advocate and it will be properly applied. About $200 will be needed.

The American Institute of Homeopathy has resolved to raise a fund of $1,000,000 for advertising purposes. When the doctors begin advertising, and the gauntlet is let down to the entire profession, we may expect some sensational and promising literature.

Certain doctors of a leading Southern University claim to have discovered a certain cure for malaria, yellow fever and other tropical diseases. The mere announcement that such a cure has been found is encouraging, but the average suffering "Thomas" is disposed to wait until the doctors have announced that these maladies have yielded to their treatment.

The State Board of Equalization at Baton Rouge reversed the action of the Calcasieu Police Jury, which reduced the assessment of the sulphur interests of that parish from $10,000,000 to $2,500,000, and placed the assessment at the original figure, claiming that the volume of business done by the sulphur companies warranted such an assessment.

A twelve-story sky scraper, to be constructed of steel and compressed brick, will be erected on Camp Street, New Orleans, within two blocks of the Advocate office. Camp Street is rapidly becoming one of the most important streets of the Crescent City, and the Church's four-story building, in which the Advocate is published, is becoming more valuable every year.

The first five buildings of the new State Normal College at Hattiesburg, Miss., are now nearing completion and are reported to be among the most thoroughly equipped and finest school buildings in the State. It is said that there is no equipment that would facilitate the cause of education or that would be conducive to the best interests of the pupils that has been omitted.

Des Moines, Iowa, is the first city under the commission form of government to erect a municipal building. The building is notable for two things: It cost $48,000 less than the amount appropriated for its construction, and its main office room is built like a modern banking house, so that all the city officers are in one big room together. This does away with secret bossdom and facilitates the transacting of the city's business.

According to the interpretation of certain legislators, the sale of fabrics under a false label is as reprehensible as the sale of food under a false label. A bill has been introduced in Congress the purpose of which is to compel all manufacturers to rightly label their goods. Thus, if a piece of cloth is "mixed," it should not be labeled "wool." This law is in the same class as the pure food law, and deserves the support of all legislators.

It is claimed by leading medical authorities that the house cat is the most dangerous of the domestic animals; that next to the wolf it is of all animals the most frequently afflicted with rabies; that it is a frequent sufferer from tuberculosis, and that it is a transmitter of almost every kind of contagious disease. This is rather a severe indictment, but one that deserves the careful consideration of every person who holds the health of the family dear.

The United States has issued an order prohibiting absinthe from being imported and sold in this country after October 1, on the ground that it is a dangerous and hurtful poison. We are pleased with this order. It is a step in the right direction. If the Pure Food Commission will just issue an order prohibiting the sale of all other hurtful poisons as beverages, it will be time for the Temperance Societies of the country to hold a jubilee, for whiskey and all other alcoholic beverages would fall under such an order.

In Kansas City, Mo., the Street Railway Company has adopted a novel method of preventing men from smoking while on a car. If a man insists on smoking, the conductor stops the car and refuses to proceed until the man has finished his smoke. If any of the passengers are in a hurry, they are permitted to use their influence to cause the smoker to desist. Several lively fist-fights have already resulted. The street car people are justified by the law in their course, and the public will have to suffer the consequences.

Last year 10,594 plants, employing 593,779 men, were affected by strikes. The millions of dollars worth of damage caused by these strikers has not even been estimated, but in most instances the laboring man was successful in his contention. Even if it should be granted that the laboring man is often abused at the hands of capital, and that most strikes have sufficient cause, it would seem that some system might be devised by which labor could receive its just dues without having to jeopardize both the peace and prosperity of the country.

It has been decided that Governor Deneen of Illinois has no right to name a successor to Mr. Lorimer, whose seat in the United States Senate has been declared vacant. The legal ground for such a decision is based on the opinion that if Mr. Lorimer held his seat by fraud, he legally never occupied it; therefore no one has thus far been elected to the Senate to fill the term that he fraudulently attempted to fill. One other question is also of some interest: If Mr. Lorimer has not been a Senator, is it not necessary to purge the Congressional Record of all votes cast by him, and of all the words spoken by him while acting in that capacity? We do not presume to answer this question.

Great Britain has taken a radical stand against the United States allowing vessels engaged in coastwise trade to pass through the Panama Canal without paying toll. In answering the British contention that this country has no right to thus control the canal in favor of American vessels, President Taft very wisely says: "We own the canal. Our money built it. We have the right to charge tolls for its use or to dispense with them at our own pleasure. These tolls must be the same to all nations, but when dealing with our own ships, the practice of many governments of subsidizing their merchant vessels is so well established that a remission of tolls cannot be taken to be a discrimination in the use of the canal."

The postal authorities throughout the Union are taking steps to prevent the postoffice being used as a means of flirtation. Orders have been issued preventing postmasters from renting boxes to young ladies whose parents have boxes or home delivery numbers. Certain postmasters have started a campaign to prevent ladies from securing mail through the general delivery window regularly, who have a daily delivery of mail at their homes. Both of these orders are wise and timely. The use of the United States mail service to promote flirtations has too long contributed to the making of unhappy homes and the blighting of human lives. No woman, with a pure purpose, is ashamed to have her mail delivered at her home.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George, of England, who is the father of the famous Insurance Bill that recently went into effect in Great Britain, which provided for the Government to aid all laborers in securing protection for their families in sickness and in death, thus states his reason for framing this measure: "To make provision for keeping the household from poverty, the worker and his family from pauperism in the dark days of sickness, and to guard against suffering from unemployment for which the workman is not responsible. It will help the mother in an hour of need, and will inaugurate a great national campaign against consumption. Instead of devoting our strength altogether to fighting our neighbors abroad, we are organizing armaments to fight social evils at home." That the practicing physicians of that country have declined to respond to calls from patients who expect treatment under the provisions of this law, is evidence of the need of the law. Doubtless there will be created in England a class of national physicians whose business will be to look after the ills of the laboring classes.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

By H. Walter Featherston, D. D.

Pulpit and platform engagements called me to Montrose on the late commencement occasion of this fine school. I was absolutely charmed with the sylvan shades, the rural quietness and the sweet home-likeness that pervaded everything there. The high religious tone of the community, the strong church-spirit, and the elevated spiritual life are equally favorable to the best school-work. The boy or girl who does not learn at Montrose would not learn anywhere.

Bro. G. H. Galloway, the President, and his co-workers have wrought well. I had known "George" as a successful pastor and presiding elder, but had never thought of him as a school man. It is by no means common to find a first-class pastor and an efficient presiding elder equally at home in the schoolroom. The President of the Training School never wrought better than he is doing now. Other places call loudly for such men; but the Training School at Montrose must not be robbed of Galloway.

He is planning larger things for the coming term. We must rally to him and help with all our might. The man and the cause have strong claims on us. Our prayers, our encouraging and helpful words, our patronage and financial support are due this combination, this fine man and this excellent Training School. Nor must we forget that this institution, now more than a half century old, is ours by a strange providence that put it so long ago into our hands for support and guidance. We shall not be true to the God of that providence if we forget this charge.

A TIMELY MOVEMENT.

By Rev. Jno. W. Ramsey.

In the Advocate of June 20th, under the above caption, there appeared an article relative to the action of the Brookhaven District Conference in the adoption of a certain preamble and resolutions looking toward the promotion of a revival throughout the bounds of the district.

I desire to say that I approve with all my heart that preamble and every one of those resolutions, especially the fourth one, which says: "That in dealing with erring members of the Church, we will gently and patiently admonish them to refrain from their evil ways, and that in the case of obstreperous offenders who defiantly persist in conduct wholly unbecoming members of the Church, we will call them to account before the proper tribunal of the Church, and expel them from membership in the same."

Now, since it is stated that these resolutions were unanimously adopted, I presume the presiding elder also gave them his endorsement. If so, the above resolution is in line with a suggestion I made through the Advocate some time ago. That suggestion was to the effect that we need a return to the enforcement of discipline. The Church is encumbered with the dead weight of godless members who disregard the rules of the Church, who have no respect for the authority of their pastors, and they have brought reproach upon the cause of Christ till the Church, in some places, stands for nothing in the world.

But one pastor singly and alone cannot exercise discipline. If he attempts it he would be removed, entailing suffering on his innocent wife and children. What then? There must be unanimity of action by all the pastors. But how can this unanimity be secured? Only by taking the district as a unit; for discipline can be enforced only as the presiding elder is back of the movement, giving the pastors the assurance that he will stand by them in the cabinet and elsewhere. To this end, let the presiding elder re-read Book of Discipline, paragraph 117, page 68, where it is stated that one of the duties of the presiding elder is to enquire whether "the preacher in charge enforces moral discipline."

I know a movement of this sort would cause a revolution in Church circles, resulting possibly in disaffection and defection in the membership of the Church and the waning of the popularity of the pastor, but the final outcome of it all would be that the pastor would regain his old-time authority as a spiritual adviser, and a revival of great power would sweep over the Church.

When the heart of Asa, the king of Juda and Benjamin, became burdened for the sins and idolatry of his people, and with the words of Oded, the prophet, falling on his ears, "he took courage, and put away the abominable idols out of all the land." The immediate result was a great revival (Read II Chron., Chapter 15).

The greatest need of the Church and of this age is an old-time revival of old-time power. This fact is in the thought of our church leaders, in the minds of the ministry, and in the minds of those among the laity who are spiritual. To this end, our Bishops and the editors of our church papers, and others, have been exhorting us for many months. For this same reason, the hearts of faithful pastors have been burdened, and their sermons have been flashing with new life and new power; but, mark my words, though we may preach with the authority of the old prophets, and though we may pray earnestly for the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, the revival will not come till we either bring the godless membership of the Church to repentance or rid the Church of their baleful influence. The Psalmist said: "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me;" nor will he hear our cry for a revival if we regard iniquity in the Church in the presence of worldly minded members. These must go, if the revival is to come.

The plan of King Asa is the only plan (read it in II Chron. 15). Go and do as he did, and as sure as there is a God, the revival will come.

Asa wanted a revival, and wanted it bad—was deeply in earnest about it; but he had to clean up before he got it. So, if we want a revival, we must open the back door of the Church and begin a general house-cleaning. If we don't want it bad enough to do that, then let's quit writing and talking and "resolving" about it.

I repeat, the only way is by unanimity of action by our pastors, taking the district as the unit, with the presiding elder aggressively back of the movement, assuring the pastors that he will stand by them to the end, let the results be what they may. The action of the Brookhaven District Conference is indeed "a timely movement" and a movement in the right direction. Here is an entire district of pastors and of many leading laymen, led by a determined presiding elder. It seems to me something ought to be doing soon. I am listening to hear of the repentance or expulsion of some ungodly church member, and consequently a revival sweeping over the Brookhaven District. I trust this movement may not stop in "resolving," but that other districts fall into line till it goes beyond the bounds of the Mississippi Conference and affects the whole Church. "O Lord, revive thy work in the midst of the years."

In closing I would put all possible emphasis on this statement: The card-playing, dancing, theatre and circus-going church members, those "obstreperous offenders who defiantly persist in conduct wholly unbecoming members of the Church," must go out if a genuine revival is to come in power. Will the Brookhaven District Conference do it, or will it be satisfied with the passing of resolutions? We shall see what we shall see. Utica, Miss.

BREEZES AT BILOXI.

As it was my good fortune to spend a week at the Seashore Divinity School, I may be permitted to say a word about the outlook for usefulness of this enterprise. It is a place of beauty and delight. In simple truth, the joy of life along the coast almost interferes with the serious study of the great questions that are discussed daily. But I can bear testimony to the diligence of the young ministers at the Seashore Divinity School in their work, and in the general interest in the lectures by the audience. I found very great pleasure in the addresses of the various brethren, and was much impressed with the great work the Seashore Divinity School is doing for the Methodist ministers of the lower South. President Robert Selby managed the program and all the details with ease and success. He deserves hearty support from his constituency. If he gets that in full measure, there is no telling to what the School may go. I have grateful memories of the many courtesies that I received from the Methodist leaders and laity while in Biloxi. I was greeted as cordially as if I had been a Methodist.

Louisville, Ky.

A. T. ROBERTSON.

BROTHER GORDON'S QUESTIONS.

While I do not see just what Brother Gordon in his questions wishes to know, yet as they can be answered simply, I am quite ready to answer.

"1. Is it not a fact that John Wesley died a member of the Church of England?" It is. Although he was a Methodist, the first and the chief Methodist, yet for some time after his death there was no Methodist Church in England for him to belong to.

"2. When did he preach the sermon from which you quote—before or after the Methodist Church was organized?" Long before.

"3. When he said 'our Church,' did he not refer to the Church of England?" He did.

Mr. Wesley at the time believed with his Church in the baptismal regeneration of infants. When he prepared the Articles for the Methodist Church he did not seek to commit Methodism to that belief. Possibly he had ceased to believe it. He was a great man, wise enough to change his opinions when convinced that he had been holding erroneous ones. He evidently changed his views about several matters.

I alluded to Wesley's statement not to endorse it in toto, much less to "involve our great leader in some difficulties from which it is impossible to deliver him," but simply to prove, contrary to Brother Lipscomb's statement, that Methodists, even the first and chief Methodist, with others, have believed and taught the doctrine that infants are regenerated.

Mr. Wesley never claimed infallibility—nobody ever claimed it for him. He was right in teaching the regeneration of infants—he was wrong in admitting that it was a baptismal regeneration. That is all there is of it. Mr. Wesley is not the only great man who was sometimes in error. Mr. Watson was in error when, contradicting Wesley and Fletcher, he denied infant regeneration. At another and early day I propose to show in these columns—if the Editor does not forbid—that Jesus, John and Paul most positively taught the regeneration of infants.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The thing that will make this last session of the Hattiesburg District Conference remembered was the excellent preaching. Every sermon was great. This cannot be said of all conferences, even Annual. The following brethren, G. H. Thompson, Dr. I. W. Cooper, and L. Carley, rose to the occasion, and Bishop Morrison preached grandly twice. The last sermon of the Conference was a sermon by the Bishop. It was the most powerful service I have witnessed in a long time. Several came forward and expressed a desire for a higher and better life. The spirit of God rested upon the Bishop and his power was felt in every heart.

The ladies were represented by Mrs. Ellis, of Mt. Olive, and Mrs. LaPrade, of Meridian. Their presentation of their work was very forceful, and I feel that they made lasting impressions upon the minds of the preachers.

We had several visitors with us, and were glad to welcome them. G. W. Bachman of the North Mississippi Conference; T. M. Evans, of the Seashore District; W. H. Van Hook, president of the Seashore Campground School; Dr. I. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College; Robert Selby, secretary of the Conference Board of Education, and W. M. Williams, of the Methodist Orphanage, made up the list. Brother Williams made the longest and best speech of his life. No one ever tires of hearing of this wonderful work.

The Spirit of God rested upon the Conference and it was a good place to be. We wish to thank Brother L. E. Alford for his kindness to us all. He was a host indeed and in truth. The people of Sumrall are a noble and lovable people; their hearts and homes were opened to us, and the warmest of welcomes was ours. It was learned that they were to build a seven-thousand dollar church, and we certainly pray God's blessings upon them in this noble enterprise. Another feature of the Conference was the large attendance of laymen. There were twenty-seven voting for lay delegates, while many had been called home before the hour of election came. This, we think, is a sign that the laymen are taking a healthy interest in the affairs of the Church.

"TEACHER!"

A girl that goes to school with me,—
Her name is Mabel Danby,—
When Teacher asks, "What's twelve times three?"
Jus' keeps as still as can be;
But when it's, "What is three times two?"—
As loud as any preacher
She calls out, "Teacher, ask me, do!
Oh, Teacher, Teacher, Teacher!"

In Joggerfy she's awful! Say,
F'r instance, "Where's Damascus?"
An' watch her look the other way!
But jus' let Teacher ask us
"Is Earth a globe or only flat?"—
An' that'll surely reach her;
She'll call out, "Teacher, I know that!
Oh, Teacher, Teacher, Teacher!"

I had a funny dream las' night;
I dreamt a sort of fable:
The Queen of Fairies, all in white,
Held out her wand at Mabel
An' changed her to a "teacher-bird,"
A tiny feathered creature,
An' when it whistled, all you heard
Was, "Teacher, Teacher, Teacher!"

Woman's Home Companion.

SO EASY TO MISJUDGE.

A story is told of a pretty young girl in a dainty dress of white, who rustled into a street car and sat down. The car was crowded, as it was the going-home hour. Among the passengers were some Italian laborers of the kind who are now doing the rough work in many of our cities.

"I think it is dreadful," she whispered to her companion; "just see this man. He will ruin my dress if I touch him, you know. Why, just see how he stares at me!"

And so he did; his great eyes lightening and softening as they fell on the girl's fair beauty. And then he arose and, leaning forward to catch the strap, fairly bent over her. The girl grew restless.

"He is very impertinent," she said. And when the conductor came around she motioned to him, "Won't you make this man move?"

"Move up!" said the conductor, sharply.

"Yeas," the Italian answered; "but see ze oll! Ze bootiful lady—see!"

The girl looked up and saw that the oil lamp directly over her had begun to leak, and that the oil would have dripped all over her had not the man she despised seen it and reached forward his arm so as to catch the drip on his sleeve. He had kept her costly dress and hat from ruin.

A guilty flush spread over her face as she bowed her thanks to him and murmured to her friend, "It makes me so ashamed to think that while I was scolding him and he knew it, he should have taken such pains for me."—Sunday School Advocate.

BILLY.

One day Billy was a stranger; at the end of a week he was as much at home as any boy on the street.

"We are glad he came," Teddy Farr said. "We like him."

And the other boys said pretty much the same thing.

"Why is this Billy such a favorite?" Mr. Farr asked Mrs. Farr.

"I don't know yet," said Mrs. Farr. "I am watching to find out."

When three weeks more had passed, she thought she knew.

A group of boys were out in front of her gate one afternoon, and she heard one of them say: "Pshaw! What can we play? I wish the snow hadn't all gone into mud."

"We had just finished our fort," said another, "and were ready to begin, but it washed down in the night."

"Anyway, we had fun making it," said Billy. "Let's not waste the whole afternoon. Let's start and play something that doesn't need snow."

When Mrs. Farr looked again, they were sailing ships down the gutter, and discovered the Mississippi with great excitement.

Another time, Teddy had to go on an errand, and asked the others to keep him company.

"Oh, we can't" objected somebody; "we've got it all planned to walk out in the other direction and see the place where the fire was last night."

"Why wouldn't it do," said Billy, "to go with Teddy first? We needn't come all the way back, need we? There ought to be some short cuts, I should think."

Well, when they had put their heads together, they remembered that there was.

Then there was the day when Joe Hail lost his arithmetic. Joe and Billy were the best in the school in Arithmetic. Joe hated to miss any of his lessons.

"Never mind," said Billy. "My book will do for both until yours turns up. We are pretty quick at it, you know. We can manage."

When the mud froze hard and the snow came again, and the boys brought out their sleds to go coasting, Billy appeared with the funniest homemade one that was ever seen. "It isn't very pretty," he said cheerfully, when the others were trying to be polite and look as if they saw nothing different in it, "but it will do. When you go scudding downhill on it, the feeling is just the same."

"If," said Teddy, during a rainy recess. "Will Pritchard had only come to school to-day, we could try that new game he was telling us about."

"Let's try it anyway," said Billy. "We can play all we remember, and make up the rest. That will do until we get the real thing."

On one sad afternoon, when they were having a game of ball in the school-yard, Billy broke a cellar window. After a crash there was a pause of dismay.

"We must have kept getting closer to the house without noticing it," said Billy.

"How would it do," suggested Joe, "to be quiet until we are asked about it? Maybe Mr. Nevin will think that the street boys did it. They broke one."

"It wouldn't do at all," said Billy quickly. "It wouldn't be fair."

He told Mr. Nevin, and paid for the pane; and after that he was short of money for some time, for Billy was poor.

After the three weeks, Mrs. Farr said to Mr. Pharr: "I think I know why the boys like Billy."

"Why?"

"Because he has a delightful habit of getting the best for himself and his friends out of what he has at hand. He makes things 'do' except the things that won't do at all. I like Billy myself," she said, smiling.—Sallie Campbell, in Evangelical Messenger.

MOTHERS AND SONS.

It has been said that the cradle of Methodism was in Susanna Wesley's nursery, and if one looks to see what happened there one finds the busy mother of nineteen children, twelve of whom survived infancy, who found time to give to each child an hour's private converse and instruction each week. Long after he left home, says a writer in Harper's Bazar, John Wesley, then a fellow of Lincoln College, wrote back to his mother to ask her to keep his hour in prayer for him and think of him every Thursday night, as she had been wont to do.

Susanna Wesley is as much the founder of Methodism as was her son. Not only did he inherit her tendencies, but by most carefully planned and arranged intercourse did she strengthen and develop his latent growth.

Scott says of his mother: "She joined to a bright and happy temper of mind a strong turn to the study of poetry and works of Imagination," and he remembers how, as a little lame boy, she would make him read aloud to her Pope's translation of Homer.

Browning writes of his mother: "She was a divine woman," and although the poet's intellectual training was apparently the work of his father—for who can forget those games with parlor furniture of the Trojan War?—yet he inherited his musical talent and artistic temperament from his mother.

One man tells of his mother arousing his determination and energy by teaching him "Hera-kles," and by his remembering to repeat "Harder and Higher" to himself when temptation to go easy arose.—Youth's Companion.

FOREIGNERS IN OUR CITIES.

The Census Bureau has given out a statement showing the population of the two hundred and twenty-nine cities of this country having a population of 25,000 and over. The aggregate population of these cities is 28,543,816, a little less than one-third the total population of the whole country. More significant than this statement, even, is the relation of native-born citizens to foreigners found in these cities by the census enumerators. The white population of native parentage numbers 10,149,115, or 35.6 per cent. The number of white persons of foreign or mixed parentage is 9,219,007, or 32.3 per cent of the whole. The foreign-born population numbers 7,479,033, or 26.2 per cent. In all these cities there are 1,625,640 negroes, 5.7 per cent of their total population. For the whole of continental United States the per cent of white population of native parentage is 53.8, the total number being 49,488,441. Those born of foreign or mixed white parents number 18,900,663, or 20.6 per cent, while there are foreign-born white persons to the number of 13,343,583, or 14.5 per cent of the whole population. The negroes number 9,828,294, or 10.7 per cent. New York City contains 921,313 persons of native parentage, 1,820,147 of foreign or mixed parentage, and 1,927,713 persons foreign born. The stranger is within our gates, but the land and the privileges are his as well as ours whose fathers came earlier.—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

MAIL CARRIED BY DOGS.

Not everybody knows that the United States has a 2000-mile mail route operated by dog sleds during a good part of the year. But such is the fact, over the trail between Cordova and Nome, in Alaska. But for these mail facilities the dwellers of the bleak northern peninsula during the long winter months would be without mail service, owing to the close of navigation.

Even as it is, the accumulation of Alaskan mail in the Seattle postoffice, pending the first steamer's departure for Nome this season, weighed an entire ton. How soon the iron horse will take the place of the sled is a question; but Uncle Sam is looking seriously in that direction. And this may even be the last year for the sled, if Congress gives him power to put his Panama digging outfit to account for railway building in Alaska.—Wall Street Journal.

MINISTERIAL EQUIPMENT.

We believe with all our heart in a divine call to the ministry and that without an experimental knowledge of Christ the most scholarly man in the world would be unfit for the work of the pastorate; but let us not on this account depreciate the value of intellectual training and equipment to the preacher. Though divine power is pledged to assist him in the task of winning souls for the Master, his own capacity as the human agent used is an important factor in determining the measure of success achieved. There have been instances where God wrought mightily through feeble instruments, but usually he uses large men to accomplish large results. It is the duty of every minister to seek to improve his talents and strive for the highest skill and efficiency in his holy calling.

The young man entering upon a ministerial career ought by all means to take a college course, if possible. And he is fortunate if he can also prosecute his studies at a theological seminary, where there are wise and godly men to instruct him as to the essentials of the Christian religion and thoroughly ground him in the faith. Such training will prove a blessing both to him personally and those to whom he ministers in after years.

Every clergyman should cling tenaciously to his habits of study; should bestir himself to keep abreast of current thought. How can he hope to have success as a "fisher of men" unless he can view things from their standpoint, unless he knows how to approach them, and to cast a line into the intellectual waters in which they move? We do not believe there has ever been a preacher that was a great spiritual force who was not mentally alert. Moody, Spurgeon, and Sam Jones were not scholars, but they had vigor of mind, insight into what was going on in the world, and a message not made up of platitudes. Wesley is sometimes referred to as a "man of one book," but in fact he was vastly more a man of all books. He utterly derided the idea that his workers should read the Bible only. One of the most imperative calls to preachers to-day is to stir up the intellectual gift that is within them. Among the gravest dangers that now confront them is that of allowing their multiplicity of duties in the modern pastorate to shorten their hours for meditation and solid intellectual work. A few days at a chaumauqua are a miserably poor substitute for continuous and systematic study.

THE BEALL ANTI-FUTURES BILL.

Some of the New Orleans papers are growing vehement in their utterances against the Beall Anti-Futures Bill which passed the lower house of Congress last week by a vote of 95 to 25. The States, in discussing it, says: "Ostensibly in the interest of the Southern cotton farmer, the bill would unquestionably deal a blow to Southern prosperity and put the farmer himself at the mercy of the British market. * * * It would destroy the New Orleans Cotton Exchange which has been the chief bulwark of defense against profitless prices. And Congressman Dupre is quoted as saying: 'The measure is nothing more nor less than the nostrum of a legislative quack. It is clearly unconstitutional. It would destroy a lawful and useful institution. It would do more damage to the Southern cotton growers than all the boll weevils the South has ever heard of.'"

All this is not a little amusing. What a misguided people we have been not to know that the men who howl in and around the pit of the Cotton Exchange are the true saviors of the Southern States; that but for them, wreck and ruin would long since have overtaken us! No wonder they grow excited and frantic when they see the heartless Britons trying to swoop down upon and plunder our helpless Southern farmers and know that there are none except themselves to rush to the rescue. Gallant and unselfish soldiers of the common good are they.

In answer to Mr. Dupre's fiery utterance, it is only necessary to state that Mississippi had some years ago a Senator whose splendid ability impressed the whole nation. He was a large cotton planter, a successful business man, and so great as a constitutional lawyer that when he died Senator Platt, of Connecticut, said in a public address, that if he had lived in the day of John C. Calhoun he would have been considered the abler man. His name was J. Z. George, and the business of dealing in cotton futures never had a more uncompromising opponent than was he. He regarded it as a great evil and a hindrance to Southern prosperity, and worked for years to destroy it. The two Senators now representing Mississippi are both large cotton growers and good lawyers, and, if we mistake not, their present attitude toward cotton futures is precisely the same as was that of Senator George. Mr. Dupre ought to make it a point to call on these gentlemen as a missionary worker and enlighten them on this important subject.

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The forty-first Seashore Camp Meeting was held last week at the Seashore Camp Ground, in Biloxi, Mississippi. The attendance was smaller than at previous years, due doubtless to the floods and crop failures of the year. However, those who were there report that this is one of the most spiritual meetings that has been held for many years. The preachers for the occasion, Dr. Moore of New Orleans, Dr. Hawkins of St. Louis, Mo., and Dr. Grogan of Mobile, Ala., are all strong men, and are possessed of unusual ability in evangelical preaching.

There were several conversions and the Christian people were greatly edified by their attendance upon the various services. The largest crowd attended the meetings on Sunday, when it was reported that more than a thousand gathered under the commodious Tabernacle. Besides the preaching and various prayer services, there was a splendid spirit of hospitality and fraternity manifested among the campers on the ground.

This was my second trip to this place to attend a camp meeting, and I am now of the same opinion that I was two years ago. The Camp Ground is a great place, and a beautiful and valuable property. To attend the camp meeting every year is a privilege that too many are missing. There on the coast is an ideal place for both a summer outing, and to get close to God. So far as the camp meeting is concerned, the present arrangement, three men preaching in turn, is not, perhaps, the best method of stirring up a great interest. I believe that any one of the three men on the program this year could have individually conducted a more successful meeting from a spiritual standpoint than the three of them together did. There is a tendency on the part of the campers to discuss the preachers and the sermons in comparison, and one likes one preacher and another likes another best, and some are disposed to hear their preference and none other. Thus there is a danger of the meeting being treated by the audience as a preaching bout, instead of a great effort to save lost men.

A TRIUMPHANT PASSING.

The accounts which have reached us of the death of Rev. Robert B. Downer, of the Mississippi Conference, have led us to recall Mr. Wesley's famous words, "Our people die well." A great peace and with the utmost trustfulness, he approached life's tragic end. He had no doubt that the Lord who had been with him through all his years would be with him at the last. Brother Downer was a man of deep piety and a rich and full experience. He lived daily in the ennobling fellowship of the risen Christ. His career was one of large usefulness; even after he had retired from the active work the service rendered by his pen and his prayers was of inestimable value. Never was there any uncertainty in his witnessing for the Master; his dying, like his living, testimony rang with genuineness and confidence. He wrought well, kept the faith, and has been gathered in from the storms of time and sheltered in the Father's house. His memory is cherished by many, and long will his influence abide.

REV. E. S. LEWIS.

We give our readers this week an excellent sermon by Rev. E. S. Lewis, our pastor at West Point, Miss. Brother Lewis was born in Chicaw County, about forty years ago, being a son of Mr. J. A. Lewis, now a member of the Mississippi Legislature, and a brother of Rev. T. W. Lewis, the pastor of the First Methodist Church of Memphis, Tenn. He was educated in the common schools and at the Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., where he won the orator's medal and was graduated with the A. B. degree. He joined the North Mississippi Conference in 1890, and was married to Miss Mamie DeLoach, of Grenada, Miss., in 1895. Brother Lewis has filled a number of leading appointments in his Conference, among the latest being Kosciusko, where he wrought with great success for four years, and the presiding eldership of the Winona District, which position he filled for a full quadrennium with marked efficiency. He is now stationed at West Point for the second time, and held in high appreciation by the people, both a preacher and pastor. From 1906-10, he was the president of the North Mississippi Conference Board of Education, and is at present one of the trustees of Grenada College. He is genial, affable and gifted, and is one of the most useful and promising Methodist ministers in his State.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Bishop H. C. Morrison was expected to spend last Sunday in Vicksburg, Miss.

Dr. and Mrs. Felix R. Hill, of Shreveport, La., have been spending some time at Monteagle, Tenn.

Among the visitors at the recent session of the Aberdeen District Conference at Houston, Miss., were Rev. W. S. Lagrone of Greenville, and Rev. J. H. Felts of Corinth.

At Monteagle, Tenn., a few days since, Bishop E. E. Hoss delivered a lecture on "Revolutionary Heroes." He is an accomplished historian as well as theologian, and his address on this theme was highly appreciated.

Rev. J. E. W. Cox, of Birmingham, Ala., has been called to the Emmanuel Baptist Church of Alexandria, La., which was formerly served by Rev. C. T. Alexander, now pastor of the First Baptist Church of New Orleans.

Dr. J. W. Moore, who was compelled to return to New Orleans from the Camp Meeting last week on account of sickness, has recovered, and was able to return to the Camp Ground and deliver a sermon to the Seashore Assembly last Sunday.

Prof. Dabney Lipscomb, of the Industrial Institute and College at Columbus, Miss., who is one of the foremost educators of his State and a Methodist layman above reproach, visited his brother, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, at Lexington, Miss., last week.

A meeting was held at Flagg's Chapel, Jackson, Miss., last week, the pastor, Rev. B. F. Crook, being assisted by Rev. J. F. Campbell, of Fannin, Miss.

Miss Fannie Burney, of Ebenezer, Miss., has forwarded us $3 for the benefit of the flood sufferers. She also reports the destruction by fire of the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Forbus, the family barely escaping. We regret to learn of this loss.

We are grateful to Rev. W. H. Ledbetter, of Standard, La., for a list of subscribers sent in recently. His good work in behalf of the Conference organ is especially appreciated in this season of financial dearth, when the music of clinking dollars is seldom heard in the Advocate office.

Rev. E. B. Troy, who but recently took charge of the West Monroe (La.) Circuit, during his first week as an itinerant minister visited every family at one of his appointments except two, received five into the Church, and baptized three infants. This is a good start. May his enthusiasm never wane, nor his ministry be less fruitful.

Dr. C. M. Hawkins, who was one of the preachers at the Camp Meeting at Biloxi last week, won for himself a warm place in the affections of the pastors who attended the services. A number of the brethren invited Dr. Hawkins to leave his St. Louis (Mo.) home and transfer to one of the Coast Conferences, assuring him that he would be heartily welcomed.

Rev. E. C. Sullivan, our worthy pastor at Ebenezer, Miss., has again brought us under obligations for looking after the interests of the Conference organ within the bounds of his work. He serves a good people, and we are pleased to number quite a number of them among our readers. May the Lord prosper this faithful shepherd and flock in all good things.

Rev. W. G. Burks, of Byhalia, Miss., favored us with a nice list of subscribers a few days since. This is only one of several lists that he has sent in during the year. It is needless to say that we appreciate his kindness and the good service that he has rendered. In next week's Advocate he will tell our readers briefly of the status of things in his most desirable charge.

Rev. J. B. King, of Vaughan, Miss., writes us of the sudden death of Mrs. J. C. Ewing, which occurred at the family residence at that place on July 15. She was forty-two years of age, a woman of most exemplary Christian character, and a useful member of the M. E. Church, South. We extend our deepest sympathy to the sorrowing husband and other bereaved loved ones.

In the absence of Dr. E. H. Mounger (who is undergoing medical treatment at Memphis, Tenn.) the Rolling Fork (Miss.) charge, of which he is pastor, is being taken care of by Rev. J. G. Cammack. Brother Cammack's services are said to be much appreciated by the people on this work. It is thought that Dr. Mounger will be able to resume his pastoral labors in the course of ten days or two weeks.

A card from Rev. G. W. Strickland, written from Greenville, Miss., instructs us to send his paper to that city instead of to McCool, Miss. We infer from this that Brother Strickland has temporarily at least given up his work at the latter place. His own health, which of late has not been good, is somewhat improved, but Sister Strickland, who has been ill for some time, is no better. Let prayer be made for this stricken family.

Rev. I. T. Reames, pastor of the Opelousas (La.) church, began a revival meeting last Monday night at Olive Branch, on the East Feliciana Circuit. Brother Reames and his wife joined the Church at that point nearly twenty-seven years ago, and are remembered to-day with a great deal of pleasure by many of the inhabitants of that community. Much preparation has been made for the meeting and a great awakening is expected.

Rev. J. W. Faulk, pastor of the East Feliciana (La.) Circuit, has just closed a successful revival meeting at South Union Church. There were sixty conversions and reclamations, and thirty-two united with the Church. In spite of the heavy rains during the meeting, the crowds tested the seating capacity of the church on several occasions. Brother Faulk reports that on one night every person in the house was a penitent at the altar, either seeking conversion or a restoration of the joy of salvation.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Utica, Miss., sends the following good news: "I have just closed a successful meeting on the Hamburg charge, which resulted in the organization of a new congregation, with encouraging prospects for the future. A committee has in hand the building of a new church. I have just entered upon a revival campaign, which, so far as dates are concerned, will close with my meeting at Pelahatchie."

Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, our strong and resourceful pastor at New Albany, Miss., reports a gracious revival at that place, in which the preaching was done by Rev. Curtis S. Shugart, a Baptist Evangelist of Birmingham, Ala., and the singing was conducted by Rev. J. M. Springfield, of the same city. Nineteen joined the Methodist, nineteen or twenty the Baptist Church, and four or five the Presbyterian Church. A fuller account of this season of refreshing, from the facile pen of Bro. Lipscomb, will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

Under date of July 19, Dr. B. F. Jones, of Shubuta, Miss., writes as follows: "I neglected to apprise you of the great meeting Brother J. A. Bowen, of Birmingham, Ala., held here in May. He completely captured all my people, and moved them as they have not been moved since I have known them. Bowen is a power. He is modest and unassuming, yet courageous and aggressive. He is as guileless as a child and as gentle as a woman—a most lovable brother. We had fifteen accessions to our church membership."

That most courteous Christian gentleman, Rev. J. M. Wyatt, added a few days since six names to the already fine list of subscribers we had from the Ackerman (Miss.) charge. In his letter to this office, among other things, he says: "The work on our new church building is progressing nicely. It will be a pretty structure, conveniently arranged for Sunday school work and preaching services, and adequate to all demands." We predict that before many years this will be one of the most desirable appointments in the North Mississippi Conference.

In renewing her subscription, Sister N. E. Jones, of Hickory Flat, Miss., adds: "I expect to renew for it as long as life shall last. I look forward to its weekly visits with great pleasure, and I am never too busy to sit down and read its columns. I have a little grandchild who also loves to read it; her name is Faye Brannon." Thanks for these kind words. They are not unwelcome to an editor, who is so often shot through with the arrows of hot displeasure, and who cannot afford to return the fire. Anybody can abuse Bishops and editors with impunity. They are public targets.

In a note received from Rev. T. M. Bradley, on July 17, he stated that he was in the midst of a meeting at Hillhouse, Miss., in which the preaching was being ably done by Rev. W. W. Woolliard, presiding elder of the Greenville District. He also informed us that Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Smith, who are leading members of our Church at Hillhouse, were in West Texas at the bedside of their brother, Mr. Claude Smith, who is seriously ill. We regret to hear of the trouble which has come to these choice workers, and we pray that God may be consciously with both the stricken one and the anxious watchers in the sick chamber.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, professor of chemistry in Millsaps College, writes as follows from Houston, Miss.: "I have been out in the interest of the College much of the time since the Commencement, and the prospect for the fall opening is good. A number of splendid young men will go from here. Three young men were licensed by the Aberdeen District Conference yesterday, and all of them will attend Millsaps College. There was never a greater need of a loan fund for worthy young men than to-day, because of the more general appreciation of the need of a college education."

We regret to learn that Dr. M. O. Shivers, formerly of Greenville, Miss., but now practicing medicine at Colorado Springs, Col., has recently been ill; and that he has had to undergo two surgical operations. We are gratified, however, to state that he has now recovered and is able to take up his work again. His many friends in Mississippi will be delighted to know that every trace of the threatened pulmonary trouble which necessitated his going West, has disappeared. As a physician and surgeon Dr. Shivers ranks very high, and he is a loyal Methodist and a deserving Christian gentleman. He is much missed in the State of his nativity.

In the recent reorganization of the Levee Board of the Lower Mississippi District, Mr. C. R. Smith, of Cleveland, was elected president, and Mr. Robert Somerville, of Greenville, was again chosen one of the engineers. Wiser selections could not have been made. Both of these gentlemen are possessed of a high order of capacity, and are members of our Church. Another good Methodist on the Board is Dr. J. C. Brooks, of Deason, Miss., who is a prosperous planter and a most capable business man. We are also pleased to note in the list of new members the name of Dr. J. C. Atterbury, of Estill, than whom the Delta has no better or more progressive citizen.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Lexington, Miss., has promised to go to Mashuaville, Miss., his first pastoral charge, to conduct a meeting which will embrace the fourth Sunday in July. The week following he will assist Rev. J. H. Bell in a series of revival services at Black Hawk, Miss., and he also has an engagement to do similar work the week succeeding that. We are pleased to see our young friend stirring up the evangelistic gift that is within him. What is ministerial equipment for, if it is not to be turned to account in saving souls and extending the boundaries of the divine kingdom? Would that the hearts of all our young preachers of superior education were aflame with evangelistic fire!

Rev. A. M. Bennett, our pastor at Pleasant Hill, Miss., reports the death of Brother P. M. Clifton, which occurred at that place on the morning of July 15. He had been ill with pneumonia and a complication of diseases arising therefrom for over three months, and his decease was not unexpected. The remains were laid to rest in the Pleasant Hill Cemetery. Mr. Clifton leaves behind a wife, a daughter, and two sons, one of whom is Dr. W. L. Clifton, president of the Southern University, at Sutherland, Fla. We extend sympathy to the bereaved, and pray that the Heavenly Father may comfort and sustain them in this trying hour.

Writing from Pickens, Miss., on July 17, Rev. J. D. Simpson says: "On July 11 there passed away the oldest member of our church here, and perhaps the oldest person in these parts—Sister E. A. Wilburn. She reached the ripe old age of 93 years; she had been a member of our Church for 65 years. She lived in touch with the Master and died in the faith. She leaves four worthy sons who represent in their lives her great qualities. Her sleep is one of peace." We do not doubt that death to this saint was an ascension and a coronation. The sons whom she has given to the Church are among our choicest laymen in Central Mississippi, and through them her influence will continue to be graciously felt. May the Divine Comforter, the Holy Spirit, be with them and all others upon whom the shadow of this bereavement has fallen.

Rev. W. F. McCrory, our pastor at Rocky Springs, Miss., in a note to the Editor, makes the following reference to his charge: "My work is progressing nicely. We have had several additions to the Church by letter, but none as yet on profession of faith. All of my revival meetings will be held during August. So far, I have not been able to engage any help, and I should be glad if any of the brethren who could give me a Sunday during that month, or even aid me during the week time, would write me to that effect at once. They need have no fear as to the matter of expense, as that will certainly be taken care of." We hope that some of our preachers will arrange to go to the assistance of this hard-worked and deserving pastor. Doubtless his call opens the way to gather up some precious sheaves for the Master.

Bishop Morrison, who has been holding some District Conferences in Mississippi within the past few days, has been proving himself to be a most efficient worker in the field. His presidency over the Hattiesburg District Conference greatly pleased the brethren, and his preaching there created a profound impression. Last week he held the Aberdeen District Conference at Houston, and in a letter to the editor a correspondent thus refers to his work there: "The Conference closed last night with a powerful evangelistic sermon by Bishop Morrison, whose services have been greatly appreciated all the way through. As a result of last night's discourse, one of the business men of the town has professed conversion and will join the Church Sunday, and his family will follow." This sounds like olden times when Marvin, Kavanaugh, and Pierce were wont to stir the people with their fervent appeals and bring them in penitence to the altar.

A most deplorable tragedy occurred at Jackson, Miss., on Thursday night, July 18, resulting in the death of Mrs. Jean McLaurin Womack, the wife of Dr. W. C. Womack of that city, and the youngest daughter of the late United States Senator A. J. McLaurin. Dr. and Mrs. Womack had been out for an automobile ride and returned home after dark. While he was putting up the machine, Mrs. Womack entered the house, and in undertaking to turn on the light, was instantly killed by an electric shock, the wires having been crossed by a rain storm that afternoon. The whole community was horrified by the accident, and many were the manifestations of deep grief. The remains were carried to Brandon, the family home of the McLaurins, where the obsequies were conducted in the Methodist Church and where the interment took place. The deceased was a young woman of brilliant attainments and noble character, and her early and tragic end is, from a human standpoint, most lamentable. We pray that God may give strength to those crushed by this blow and gently lay his healing hand on every bleeding heart.

On the morning of June 19, 1912, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Parker, and claimed for his victim little SADIE, aged 1 year and 10 months. She was sick only a few days, but when her condition became serious the doctor and loving hands did all in their power to relieve her suffering, but all the assistance was in vain. God's ways are always just, and he came and took little Sadie home to Jesus, where suffering is no more. The funeral service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. T. V. Peters, at the family cemetery. ONE WHO LOVED HER.

ROSCOE, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus McDaniel, who came to brighten our home January 1, 1911, was a pet of the household for eighteen months, but the love of father, mother, brother and sisters could not stay the hand of death. On June 20 the little darling went to sleep to awake in heaven, where there is no more sickness, pain or sorrow. We rest with this great assurance "The Lord hath given and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." There is one who never makes a mistake and is always ready and willing to comfort those who mourn. Oh, how papa and mamma will miss their little darling's good-night kiss. His little chair is still vacant; we cannot see why he was called from our midst so early, but we humbly bow in submission; we know he is resting near the great white throne.

PAPA AND MAMMA.

MRS. ELLA COLSON WILLIAMS was born January 6, 1847, and died March 20, 1912. She was married to Mr. D. R. Williams February 27, 1862. They journeyed along the path of life happily together until Feb. 20, 1890, when the angel of death separated them. God gave to them fourteen children, eleven of whom live to mourn a mother's death. These are all grown and were all around the mother's death-bed. Mrs. Williams made a profession of faith in Christ early in life and joined the M. E. Church, South. So far as is known she lived a consistent life until death. She was sick for two days and was unconscious the last day and night. However, we feel that all is well with her, for she said before losing consciousness, "Children, I want you all to know, if my time has come, that I am prepared to die; I am prepared to meet my God." This, together with her quiet, unassuming Christian life, leads us to believe that she is at rest with the people of God. Mr. Williams having preceded her to the grave by some twenty-odd years, the burdens and cares of life fell heavily on her until the younger children grew up. But, notwithstanding this, she was always pleasant and to all appearances happy. Besides her children she left nineteen grandchildren, two brothers and two sisters; also numerous friends and other relatives to mourn her death; one of these brothers has since followed her across the river of death. To one and all I would say, weep not, we believe that your loss is her eternal gain.

J. L. BOYD.

My beloved brother, THOMAS WESLEY PORTER, departed this life June 30, 1912, at his home in Winona, Miss. He leaves a grief-stricken wife, five small children, one sister, five brothers, and many relatives and friends to mourn his going. The precious Word of God tells us that "the path of the just is as a shining light, that shines more and more unto the perfect day and that the memory of the just is blessed. The departed illustrated the truth of these verses numberless times, and though dead, still speaks with ever increasing influence, the limits of which can never be measured until time shall be no more. When the writer of this sketch received the awful news that her darling brother had passed from earth to heaven, her call to mourning was the deepest she had felt since her mother went home to God. My heart aches to think that he died away from the only sister he had and one that he loved so much. Then a voice speaks to me, "Let not your heart be troubled. If ye believe in God, believe also in me." He joined the Church in 1873; we were hand-in-hand in church work, and our hearts were knit together in all good works. My grief is very great. But when this life is ended, I know where to find him. He was stricken with paralysis on June 26. After four days of suffering he quietly passed to the home beyond. All was done by loving hands that could have been done, but death claimed our precious one. He was 55 years old. Dear wife and children, we know that your sorrow knows no bounds. But look to Jesus and all will be right. Farewell, my darling brother! We shall meet some sweet day. His heart-broken sister, ALICE.

Died, in Uvalde, Texas, April 25, 1912, at the home of her grandson, G. W. Patterson, MRS. SARAH WREN, nee Bridges, aged ninety-nine years and five days. From the fly-leaf of her Bible we find, written by herself, that she was born in Greene County, Ga., April 19, 1813; moved to Putnam County when six years of age; was converted in July, 1828; was married to George W. Wren in September, 1828; was "sanctified" in September, 1848, and moved to Louisiana in 1851. She was the mother of eight children, had twenty-nine grandchildren, and many great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren. She was the mother of Hon. G. L. P. Wren, who served in the Louisiana Legislature for a number of years, and the mother of the wife of Rev. J. F. Patterson of the Louisiana Conference, now residing at Uvalde, Texas, and grandmother of Rev. J. W. Medlock, deceased, who was a member of the Louisiana Conference for many years. Only two of her children survive her—Dr. D. Wren, of Prescott, Ark., and Mrs. J. F. Patterson. She was a woman of such great strength of character that the remark was often made by those who knew her, that if she had been young in this, the woman's century, she would have been a conspicuous figure. Her home was always open to the preachers and their families, and the church at Minden was sure of her help and support as long as she lived at her plantation home near there. Alas! not many of the old-time preachers, who knew and loved her, remain on earth. A few friends only, who knew and appreciated her great worth, survive her. She outlived most of them, and for several years had longed to "go home" and be with her Lord. For three or four years she had necessarily been a great care, and God's richest blessings will be with the devoted daughter, son-in-law, grandchildren and great-grandchildren who were with her to the last, and who made her last days comfortable by their tender ministrations. She fell asleep so gently that those around her scarcely knew when she really left them, and that her heart's desire had been granted. May her many descendants so live that they may hear the Master say, as I am sure she did, "Well done thou good and faithful servant." Her granddaughter, FRANCES MEDLOCK.

On May 12, 1912, MRS. VICTORIA WADE PICKENS was called away from her home on earth, to spend eternity with her heavenly Father. Mrs. Pickens was the daughter of J. W.

Wade and Mrs. Mary Ellen Wade, nee Herbert. She was born in Greenville, Ala., June 14, 1833. She had one brother, who died in young manhood, and one sister, Miss Octavia Wade, who survives her. Since 1850, every year on Christmas eve, they have gone together and watched the sun go down, each time recounting God's blessings to them. She was married to James Jackson Pickens, January 26, 1853, near Richland, Miss. To them were born four sons and four daughters, but the three eldest sons preceded her to the better world. She also had nine grandchildren, eight of whom are still living. Her husband died Oct. 14, 1876, and she then moved to Brookhaven, Miss., that she might give her children the advantages of Whitworth College. In the fall of 1891 she moved from Mississippi to Goldthwaite, Texas. In 1894 she moved to Brownwood, and later, to Temple. She returned to Brownwood in 1905, to make her home with her youngest child, Howard. She came to visit her daughter, Mrs. T. E. Butler, in December, 1911. She was soon taken sick, revived for a few days, and relapsed. For nearly five months she was an intense sufferer, but was tenderly and lovingly cared for by her children, friends, and her devoted son-in-law, Dr. Butler. Very seldom have I seen such devotion to one as I saw in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Butler. This love given her tends to show what a great woman she was, for only great mothers give to the world loving children. Her four sons-in-law hold her memory beautifully sacred, and all of them testify, with Dr. J. H. Gambrell, "she stood by the side of my own mother with me." Early in life, she was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Her proclamation of love to Jesus was no idle dream nor fancy, but an eternal verity that took hold upon her life and became a part of her existence. Day by day she tried to live so that each day, as she watched the sun go down, she might, if need be, arise with the Lord on the other shore. Day by day, she walked with God, in his strength gaining new love and devotion. The graces of love, peace and joy were ever hers, and to live so that she might become a blessing to the world was her chief purpose. She was kind and agreeable with every one. Hers was to do justly and to walk humbly before God. She was beautiful in person and accomplished in head and heart—a valiant soldier of the Cross of Jesus Christ. She was always found in her place at church. Her church home was as sacred to her as her marriage vow, and everywhere she went, her church letter went with her. A devoted Christian woman, a loving sister, a tender wife, a kind mother, and a faithful friend has gone to her eternal home; but we can see her again on the other shore, where parting and suffering are felt and feared no more. Oh one and all we pray God's greatest blessings. Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Dr. W. E. Boggs, and the writer, amidst a host of friends and flowers. The Rev. Mr. Hammock concluded the services at the grave. E. V. COX.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION.

Mr. Editor: Sometime ago I sent you an article with reference to the pastor's duty, which was entitled: "A Voice From the Pew." Perhaps, as some in our congregations read the article, they said, "That is so!" Of course, it was so. But there is never an effect without a first cause. Then there is reason, good or bad, for our pastors neglecting some of their duties. Why does the pastor of the city charge fail to pray with his people when making pastoral visits? Is it because he has adopted modern methods and practice? or, is it because of the fact that as he comes into the homes of his people the mothers send their children out and he is not permitted, oftentimes, to even speak to the children, and does not, therefore, care to pray with the parents alone? In the good old times when the mother called the children in from their work or play when the pastor came, it was no trouble for the minister to read and pray with the family. But under modern conditions it is discouraging for a pastor to offer to pray with the family. Then, who is to blame, the pastor or the people?

Of course, this does not excuse the pastor for neglecting his duty, but makes others equally responsible with him. "But," says one, "this is not the case in the country." But there are other things there as bad, if not worse. One of the duties often neglected by the country pastor is that of visiting his people. And often there is also a reason for that. Our preachers usually have families to support and horses to feed. A man's first duty is to his family. When the stewards fail to think of the needs of the pastor's family when he leaves to fill his appointment, it may force him to return early from his appointment in order to seek out some other way to supply his family's needs, thus being compelled to neglect the visiting of his people for the time. This may greatly hinder the pastor in his work, yet the people fail to see where the trouble is. Often when members are asked to pay something for the support of the pastor, they answer, "I can't now, but will do something next fall." They forget that a preacher's family desires three meals a day through the spring and summer as well as the fall and winter. These same people are often the ones who grumble because the pastor does not visit them as often as they think he should. Now, I would not excuse the preacher for neglecting his duty, yet I would uncover the faults of the people as well, and not make the pastor bear all the blame. Let each one bear his own burden in this case. Let each one of us examine himself and see if he is neglecting his duties. Let us, pastors and people, pray for the power of the Holy Spirit to guide us into all truth and righteousness, and then go forward in the faithful discharge of our several duties; and the work of the Lord will prosper in our hands. OBSERVANT METHODIST.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS.

(By request we publish the following resolutions adopted by the Hattiesburg District Conference in its recent session at Sumrall, Miss.)

Concerning the Millsaps Presidency.

Resolved, by the Hattiesburg District Conference: (1) That we express our great confidence in the action of the Trustees of Millsaps College in the selection of Dr. A. F. Watkins as President of that institution. (2) That we recognize in Dr. Watkins a Christian minister of stainless reputation, a scholar of accurate and extensive information, and a brotherly, broad-gauged man.

(3) That we pledge Dr. Watkins our co-operation and prayers in his new field of labor.

Concerning Rev. M. B. Sharborough.

Whereas, Rev. M. B. Sharborough is in his fourth year as presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, and whereas, he has been faithful in the performance of duty—being active in every good work, preaching with ability, maintaining brotherly relations, both with ministers and laymen—therefore, be it Resolved:

That we part with him with regret; pray God's blessings on him and his home, and commend him as a faithful minister and a Christian gentleman.

Concerning the Railroads and Sabbath Observance.

Resolved: (1) That while we appreciate all the civilizing agencies and influences of our railways, and whatever courtesies they extend to the ministry of the Church in facilitating their travel, we most emphatically condemn all needless work and traffic by them on the Holy Sabbath.

(2) That we protest against the running of freight trains on the Sabbath day, that we especially condemn Sunday excursions, by which the people of our State are allured by the offer of cheap rates to neglect their religious privileges and violate the Christian Sabbath.

(3) That we urge upon all our preachers to condemn such practices from their pulpits, and that we call upon all Christian ministers throughout the State to join with us in this expression of condemnation; and that we likewise condemn the patronage of these excursions and call upon the Christian people of Mississippi to set themselves with all their moral force against them.

(4) That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and to the newspapers in Jackson, Hattiesburg, and Gulfport, for publication.

A TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

This is a sketch of a typical character. Wm. O. Jones of Calie, Miss., was one of a noted family of brothers who were among the first to settle in the vicinage of the Inverness charge. The life of my personal friend is a part of the community history. Brother Jones was the type of man that is needed in every vicinity. Not a very prominent, but a most important man he was. This brother was a substantial planter and a citizen loyal to his neighborhood. Such personal characteristics as the following made him necessary. His was the integrity that every man relied on. He was honest to the uttermost farthing, and his word in business was his bond. The geniality of the man was striking. As far as known he was well liked by everyone. He was known for his good nature and sociability. Always jovial and cheerful, he was a contented man. For more than twenty years, he was a loyal member of our Church and one I, while his pastor, always counted on. While not at all tired of this life and exceeding loath to leave the faithful wife and four children, he was (at the heyday of maturity) fully resigned to pass on to a new field of labor. Would that we had many men like him!

A NOTE TO THE LOUISIANA LEAGUERS.

Mr. Editor: I desire to thank the Leaguers and others who so kindly gave me their support and their prayers during the three years I was field secretary of the Epworth Leagues of Louisiana. I am a stronger Christian woman because of this experience and I shall ever love the League, for I owe my development in Christian work to the League, and I am sure the Master has called me to a life of service among the young people of our Church. I am truly grateful to the presiding elders and others who have co-operated with me in the League work, because of this I was inspired to attempt greater things for the Master, knowing that they approved and sympathized with me in my efforts.

I trust my successor, Mrs. Crow Girard, will have your most hearty support—even to a greater extent, if possible, than you gave it to me.

I shall be active in the League work, whether in or out of office. I hope you will continue to remember me in your daily devotions.

Yours, "All for Christ,"

OUR CHAIR OF RELIGIOUS PEDAGOGY.

It may not be understood by all that the pro rata of our Children's Day collections that goes to endow the Chair of Sunday School Pedagogy in Vanderbilt University is not turned over to the University, but is held and invested by the Sunday School Board. Should the pending suit to quiet the Church's title to the University be settled adversely, the money will, of course, not be given to that institution, but invested in our own theological school, wherever that may be. So there is no possibility of the money not being safely secured to the Church. If we succeed this year in raising the balance of the $50,000, it is the plan then to add this 30 per cent to the 60 per cent applied at present to our local work, thus giving our Conference Board more ample funds for enlarging the scope of their enterprises.

P. O. LOWREY.

A MODEL LOCAL PREACHER'S REPORT.

Dear Doctor Meek: The report submitted herewith was read by Brother O'Bryant at the Meridian District Conference, held at Waynesboro a few days since, and some one suggested that it be published in the Advocate as a model report for a local preacher. It is to be hoped that many of the local preachers in your patronizing Conferences will take heed and profit by it.

G. S. HARMON, Secretary.

The report referred to is as follows:

"I have preached twelve times at the following places: Hopewell and Cooper's Chapel, DeSoto Circuit; Andrews' Chapel, Matherville Circuit; Cross Roads Protestant Methodist Church and Harwood Schoolhouse. I have failed to fill three appointments, one on account of sickness, and two on account of not having anything to ride. I have held prayer in ten homes, have made eight visits to see the sick, have been instrumental in erecting two family altars, have made one talk on negligence, one on missions, and one on prayer, have distributed twelve copies of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and have solicited subscriptions to the same, but so far I have failed to secure any. I have read the following books: Methodist Armor, Doctrinal Methodism, Infant Baptism, Wesley's Sermons on Justification by Faith and the Witness of the Spirit, Our Church Discipline, and also my Bible considerably. I stand ready and willing to do anything that my Presiding Elder and Pastor may see fit to have me do.

"Hoping to have merited your prayers, I ask for continuation of the same. Signed, A. W. O'BRYANT."

METHODISM ALIVE AND GROWING.

Dear Dr. Meek: There is an article in the Baptist Chronicle, published at Alexandria, La., about the conditions at Washington, La., which would lead those who do not know the true condition to think that the Methodist Church was either dead, or had abandoned the place. The article referred to is an appeal to a thousand Baptists of the State to contribute one dollar each for the purpose of building a Baptist Church at Washington, a Catholic town, where there are several Baptists without a church, and a few Methodists.

The facts are as follows: There are eight Baptists in the town, one of the eight has had her children baptized and has signified her intention of uniting with the Methodist Church. The M. E. Church, South, has a membership of seventeen loyal members, a Sunday school with a membership of forty-five, which is still growing in membership and interest, and a Wednesday night prayer meeting which is well attended. The people have comfortably furnished a house for the pastor and his wife. We are planning to build a parsonage. We expect to begin a revival meeting here soon.

We are also planning to build a church at Ville Platte. At Bethel we have a loyal people and a live Sunday school. We expect to begin a revival meeting there the first Sunday in August. Chicot is beginning to revive. We are planning for a revival there soon.

You may expect some subscriptions to your valuable paper from this charge.

GUSTAVUS A. MORGAN,
Pastor.

Washington, La., July 8, 1912.

AN APPRECIATION.

Dear Dr. Meek: Please grant me space in your valuable paper for a few words of appreciation of my dear sister, Mrs. MARY WEST HOPPER, who entered into rest the 26th of June last, at Waynesboro, Miss. Mr. Hugh L. Hopper, her son, wrote me every few days, keeping me advised of her condition in her last illness. Naturally, I thought I was prepared for the sad intelligence I was daily expecting, but when the news of her demise came I was overwhelmed with grief. The fortitude I expected to sustain me in this affliction was not apparent.

My sister was a remarkable woman, exhibiting a strong, sweet character from girlhood to the end. Our parents reared seven children and she was the jewel of the family, so regarded by us all. Dr. T. S. West, our elder brother, tenderly loved and adored this sister, and were he alive would testify to her helpfulness to him during his entire life. She was the mother of six children and step-mother to four. Eight of these are living and are exemplary members of the Methodist Church, due to their mother's godly example and instruction. All these children rise up and call her blessed. When a girl at a boarding school, my father, on account of her weak eyes, decided to take her away for a while, but so potential was her example for good among the pupils that the whole student body, with the faculty, petitioned her father to allow her to remain, feeling that her influence in the institution was indispensable. Thus it was throughout her entire pilgrimage. Neighbors, friends and all with whom she had to do felt benefited by the contact.

Being the youngest child, my parents were growing old, and I was left largely in care of this sister. Her earnest prayers, wise counsel, and thorough discipline tended to make me a much better man than I am. If there is any merit whatever in me, it is because of the faithful attention of my beloved sister. If those who were intimately acquainted with her were called upon to name the most consistent Christian they ever knew, doubtless most, if not all of them, would say Mrs. Mary Hopper. I am ready to exclaim with Lemuel of old, "Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all!" Dear sister, I will not see you here again, but, by God's grace, I intend to meet you in the sweet by and by.

COMMON SENSE VS. SENSATIONALISM.

Every day the newspapers bring forth a new fad or theory to entertain the public. Yesterday it was a Chicago professor who advanced the doctrine that "Bathing produces disease." To-day it is a doctor who proclaims that "Tomatoes cause cancer." To-morrow we will learn that "Sodium Chloride (which is only another name for common salt) is a deadly poison." Every crank in the world seems to consider himself specially appointed to propagate some fad that contradicts our common sense.

Where do all these foolish theories come from? Strange to say most of them originate from distorted facts. For example, if you will inject enough salt into the veins of a guinea pig, or a man for that matter, death will result.

The trouble is that "facts" do not necessarily lead to "truth." Truth depends upon a correct interpretation of facts. In arriving at the truth from any given facts it is well to use a little of the old-time Common Sense upon which the public has had to rely for guidance since the world began.

One of the latest fanciful theories of the alarmists was that Caffeine, as contained in coffee, tea, Coca-Cola, etc., was an enemy to health. The idea seems to have originated from the fact that if you will inject a barrel of Caffeine into a mouse the mouse will die.—Advertisement.

Our Tour Contest Still Open

The contest is on. Of course the hot days are depressing and it is hard to get out and secure subscriptions for any paper. A great many are away on summer vacations, and a great many have made promises but have not yet turned in the money. We have received encouraging letters from almost all of the candidates since the list was published two weeks ago, and it appears that all are working. Of course some have not secured many subscriptions as yet, but they are planning their field and will be in the race in good shape in the near future. There has been but one candidate withdrawn, and several new ones have entered since two weeks ago.

We are publishing the list of candidates again this week, in the order of their standing as to first, second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth places. Below that we have not attempted to keep any order. No candidate has a large list to her credit. In fact there is not a contestant in the entire list, but who, if she would devote one week to house-to-house canvassing of Methodist homes, could pass the leader's present vote. It is to be noted that the three leaders in the contest are in Louisiana. This means that in the two Mississippi Conferences there is a very small lead taken by any one for the Grand Prizes. One of our Grand Prizes is bound to go to each of the three Conferences. A young lady in either of the Mississippi Conferences could begin to-day and put herself in the lead for a grand prize before next Sunday night.

Now is the time for active work. Let the pastors look over the list below and pick out one of the candidates, notify her that you will support her in this contest, and also notify this office of your endorsement of such a candidate and then push the Advocate in your work. If you see that there is no candidate close to you, enter one and pre-empt the field and go to work for your own candidate.

THE LIST.

- First Place—Miss Ada Parker, New Orleans.
Second Place—Miss Bell M. Roberts, Franklin, La.
Third Place—Miss Emma Peairs, Slaughter, La.
Fourth Place—(Three with equal numbers.)
Mrs. Sudie Lingle, Shreveport, La.
Miss Iva Provo, Poplarville, Miss.
Miss Bertie Mitchell, Laurel, Miss.
Fifth Place—Miss May Young, Lexington, Miss.
Sixth Place—Mrs. T. V. Peters, Isabel, La.

The following names of Candidates fall below the above places and are not published in the order of their standing:

- Mrs. T. D. Lipscomb, Slide, La.
Miss Zou Eddie Boyett, Valden, Miss.
Mrs. Connie Lloyd, Carrollton, Miss.
Miss Mable Ash, Centerville, Miss.
Miss Allie Adams, Beidon, Miss.
Mrs. J. D. Doyle, Silver Creek, Miss.
Miss Allie G. Ford, R. F. D. No. 2, Shreveport, La.
Miss Katie Hall, Grenada, Miss.
Mrs. R. H. Harper, Natchitoches, La.
Mrs. E. M. Henning, Alexandria, La.
Miss Ella Mai Leslie, Ruston, La.
Mrs. Ward Moore, Pontotoc, Miss.
Miss Gertrude Roberts, VanCleave, Miss.
Miss May C. Selis, Lyman, Miss.
Mrs. Rema Weed, Winona, Miss.

The above is a splendid list of contestants. However, there is room in the large territory that we have to support three times that number and each contestant win a prize. Now, do not forget that the winner will be sent by the Advocate to the World's Sunday School Convention in Zurich, Switzerland, next year, and will have the privilege of stopping at a number of the most interesting places in Europe; that the leader in the two Conferences not winning the first prize will receive a free trip to Lake Chautauqua, Niagara Falls, and many other of the most interesting places in the United States; that every contestant who secures as many as twenty-five new subscribers will receive a valuable prize; that you can win one of these prizes if you but just try.

Now, let every candidate take the field, canvass every Methodist family in the town where you live. Seek new subscriptions, they are as easy, and more so often, to get as old ones. After you have placed an Advocate in every home in your town, go elsewhere. There is not a pastor in Mississippi or Louisiana but would welcome you into his charge. Get your home church in full if possible. You can do it if you try. If by no other means, give an Advocate social and apply the proceeds towards sending the Advocate into each home in your home church. The time has come for active work. If you are already in the contest, press your claims for a first prize. If you have not yet entered, fill out the following nomination ticket and go to work.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Mr. Eugene Middleton, one of our Methodist boys of Stonewall, La., has just graduated from the Vanderbilt Medical School as the third man in a class of sixty-five and has been appointed to a hospital privilege in Knoxville, Tenn. One of his sisters is a student at Mansfield, and the family are efficient workers in our Sunday school at Stonewall.

In the after-college change of Sunday school teachers at Mansfield, Mrs. Taliaferro, but recently come from Bunkie, takes the Baraca Class formerly taught by Miss Schuler; Mrs. J. L. Logan succeeds Miss Ensign as superintendent of the Elementary Department, and Mrs. J. B. Williams takes charge of the Junior boys, Mrs. Morris, their teacher, having gone to Chicago to spend the summer with a daughter.

Rev. D. C. Bennett, of the Longville and Merryville charge, has organized two new Sunday schools this year, and Rev. I. T. Reames has organized one at Lawtell on the Frisco railroad. Some of the other brethren are "holding their own" when they should be following these examples of enlarging their borders, projecting the kingdom into the regions beyond, "where as many as ten persons" may be enrolled as students of the Word.

In seeking to be like the Master in service, in season and out of season, our consecrated Sunday school folks should not overlook "our brother in black." He believes in religion, in the Church and in the white man, and holds out beseeching hands for help. What he needs most is teaching, and he is making commendable efforts to acquire knowledge, and that is what his white neighbor is most able to give him. Suppose our pastors and Sunday school workers plan some institutes for the teachers and promising young people of their colored neighbors' churches—what work would yield half the results and please our heavenly Father more?

One of the surest and most practical ways of shepherding our Sunday school pupils when either the teacher or the scholar is away from home or out of the reach of personal conversation, is to do like Paul—write them a letter. There is a fine opportunity for employing this method during the summer outings, and while students are off at boarding schools. A love letter to one of these disciples from the teacher carries an influence almost beyond computing. Especially is this so if they have achieved success in some undertaking, or have met with misfortune, or are striving in some worthy undertaking. The teacher's influence should reach farther than the recitation room, and the wise teacher and true shepherd will see that it is so. Try a few minutes of time and a two-cent stamp as an investment and see if it pays.

One of our Sunday school boys, Mr. J. Fisher Middleton, was a successful Vanderbilt debater this year in the inter-collegiate contest with the University of Georgia. His father, Dr. J. M. Middleton, is the superintendent of our Sunday school at Many, La. Mr. Middleton is scarcely out of his teens, and his successful place on so important a program is a source of gratification to his former pastors and friends generally. Following both his home and church training, he offers the world capable and consecrated service, law being chosen as his profession. Mr. Middleton took the training course at Webb's School and his academic at Vanderbilt, where he also begins the study of law. His father was educated at our Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., and his mother at our own Mansfield Female College. Thus our Methodist schools are producing princely laymen for our pews, as well as strong preachers for our pulpits.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

On the new Salem charge, at Marie, there is a fine Sunday school of 72 members, with a Wesley adult class with 72 enrolled.

At Merigold there is a splendid school. The attendance is good and enthusiastic interest in the school is manifest.

Save your Children's Day programs and forward them to mission lands. All cards, programs, periodicals and books are gladly welcomed by missionaries.

Mr. Will C. Hall, a layman, has organized a school near Dubbs, with 22 members. They have no Bibles and little of anything to assist, but he is making a strenuous effort to make and keep a good Sunday school and thus to make over the community.

One young pastor once insisted on family prayers being held in a certain family, and finally told the reluctant father that if he would hold prayers every day for a month and his home and life was not improved, he would give him 25 cents a day for just trying. The daily prayers resulted in the conversion of the children and a beautiful Christian rejuvenation in the entire family. That same pastor belongs to and helps direct a Law and Order League, and is earnestly and intelligently trying to meet the problems of his charge.

There are 37 men to every 63 women in the Churches of the United States. If you take the woman out of educational institutions, two-thirds of our schools would have to close their doors. More young men are outside of religious influence than in all the standing armies of the world. Now organized vice is after the boys and you will never save the world by merely saving the men. The solution of the boy problem is the solving of the most pertinent question of the age. The best institution for the salvation of the youth of this age is the Sunday school, and the greatest present need of the Sunday school is good fathers to lead and help these boys.

These questions are so often asked: Can an ordinary teacher do as well with graded as with ungraded lessons? Can a teacher of ordinary ability, who has only ordinary opportunity for training, hope to fit effectively into this new system? To both questions, an emphatic "yes" is the encouraging answer. Graded lessons make the teacher's task more simple, more definite, more direct, and they are more inherently interesting to the pupils. Further, the graded lessons and lesson helps provide within themselves a method of self-training in the art of teaching. The graded lessons are a recognition of the actual interests of growing children and youth. In a properly graded system not only is the topic for a year or for a quarter adapted to children of a particular age, but each lesson therein is chosen with reference to a particular interest characteristic of this age. Note the following outline from the Graded Lessons for the First Year's Work for Beginners (the thoughtful teacher will see at a glance why these lessons are practical and helpful and can be made applicable to the lives of little children, three, four and five years old):

1. The Heavenly Father's Care.
2. Thanksgiving for Care.
3. Thanksgiving for God's Best Gift.
4. Love Shown Through Care.
5. Loving Care of Jesus.
6. God's Care of Life.
7. Our Part in the Care of Flowers and Birds.
8. Duty of Loving Obedience.
9. Love Shown by Prayer and Praise.
10. Love Shown by Kindness.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER LEWIS.

For some time I have been silent, or at least, have not been heard through our Conference organ. Long years ago I was talking one day to a preacher who had been two years in one of our first stations; and he said, among other things, "I am out of soap-grease," meaning he had told his flock all he knew about Jesus and His love, and was ready to be moved. Perhaps he had not fallen into the habit, not a bad one by any means, of overhauling, rehashing, and giving his congregation the benefits of his best thoughts in new or different language. Some sermons are worth repeating more than once.

A preacher of my name, but of a different Church and family, more than fifty years ago, after having labored hard for a long time trying to convince his congregation a man could not fall away from God, said, as he concluded his sermon: "I am as empty as a gourd, I have told you all I know." On another occasion, while laboring hard trying to prove it was impossible for one to "fall from grace," he jumped too high and stamped just a little too hard, thus causing the floor of the pulpit to give away and fall to the ground. He crawled out from under the house, went around to the door, and re-entered the church, then finished his sermon, perhaps a wiser man, if not a better man. If he did not fall from grace he fell from the pulpit. I find myself somewhat like the brother who ran out of "soap-grease."

For some time I have been away from home visiting my children and others. At Carriere (Seashore District) I found my son, Henry P., confined at home nursing a case of typhoid fever. For more than six weeks their baby boy, little "Don," has been very low with typhoid fever. While there I preached twice at Carriere and once at Picayune. Henry has matters well in hand, and I was told that he is doing a fine work. His people love him. But how hard it seems for a poor Methodist preacher to be compelled to make two long, expensive moves in little more than a year's time; then after almost building a new parsonage before the family could live in any comfort, to have it followed by a long siege of serious sickness. But God knows what is best for us all. "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom He receiveth." Again, "No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruits of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby." The 12th chapter of Hebrews is a good chapter to read while under the chastening rod. What God does is best. He is too wise to err, too good to do wrong. The Psalmist said, "Before I was afflicted I went astray; but now have I kept thy word." Again, "It is good for me that I have been afflicted; that I might learn thy statutes." (Ps. 119, 67th and 71st verses.)

We spent a week in Brandon while Brother W. B. Hogg, of Madison Circuit, was running a meeting there. Brother Hogg did some fine "evangelical" preaching to large congregations. Good seed was sown and much good realized. The membership was greatly revived. The pastor and his wife are held in high esteem by the people of Brandon. Considerable improvements have been made on the parsonage.

From Brandon we (wife and I) went to Enterprise, where we stayed ten days and had a good time. I preached three times while there; once at Stonewall and twice at Enterprise. I enjoy preaching as much as I ever did. I felt better Monday morning, after preaching twice the day before, than I have felt in quite a long while. Monday we came home, stopped off in Meridian a few hours, took in part of the city, and met Harvey McNell, a son of Rev. J. W. McNell, who joined Conference with me in 1857. The Enterprise preacher is doing a splendid work both at Enterprise and at Stonewall. That God may abundantly bless all our preachers, both old and young, in their work, is my earnest prayer.

ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

The superior quality and durability of the piano which is now being offered to members of the Advocate Piano Club is shown by the following letter from one of the earliest purchasers of the Ludden & Bates Piano, away back in 1883. Mr. H. V. Coarsey, of Braddentown, Fla., writing under date of February 1, 1910, says: "I am the owner of Ludden & Bates piano No. 111, in rosewood case, and I take pleasure in mentioning that it has a good clear tone and a smooth, even touch, notwithstanding it was bought of you twenty-six or twenty-seven years ago, during which time, it has had constant service, considered by some an extraordinary amount of hard usage. This instrument has served two generations in our immediate family in a most satisfactory way and we have no idea of parting with it for any other piano."

If you would like to join the Club write for club catalogue and full particulars. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

IN MEMORY OF DR. S. S. KEENER.

Since the last meeting of the Monroe District Conference God has called from our midst our beloved friend and brother, SAMUEL SPENCER KEENER, the presiding officer of the Conference. Doctor Keener became a minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in December, 1878, joining the Louisiana Conference, which he served acceptably up to the time of his death. During his ministry he had charge of many of the most important positions of responsibility and honor in the Louisiana Conference. The last three years of Doctor Keener's ministry and up to his death he spent as Presiding Elder of the Monroe District, which he served most faithfully and satisfactorily, always active in the interest of the churches and preachers in his district. He was especially alive to the business interests of the various charges, looking carefully after the erection and repair of churches and parsonages, the payment of debts on the church properties, and the support of the pastors in his jurisdiction; in short, he was always about his duty in his field of labor.

If only the business phase of Dr. Keener's service to his Church were considered, its value might be pronounced as inestimable; but he was much more than a business man—he was a man of a great and warm heart, and intense devotion to his Church and to humanity. In his methods Dr. Keener was open and direct, always ready to take a definite stand for the right, and willing, if need be, to take the stand alone, and to fight it out to a finish. He was never known to shirk a duty. We have lost a strong leader—a man whose loss we daily feel; but we have satisfaction in the thought that he has been called to his reward and is now in the house prepared for him; that he is waiting and looking for us and will welcome us when we are called home; that his going only strengthens the connection between us and heaven. Be it therefore resolved:

1. That we do most sincerely deplore the loss of our beloved leader and friend, but rejoice that he is with Him "who doeth all things well," and that we shall see him "when the mists have rolled away."

2. That we do extend to Sister Keener our heartfelt sympathy, and for consolation in her hour of bereavement, we commend her to Him who comforts the widow and the fatherless in their sorrow.

3. Be it further Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Conference, a copy sent to Sister Keener, and a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Mrs. MATTIE M. LIDDELL HUDNALL was born July 2, 1838, and died at her home near Mineral Wells, Miss., May 5, 1912. Mrs. Hudnall was left an orphan in early girlhood. The responsibility of caring for and training her younger sisters and brother falling on her, she nobly took it up, and by her wise and godly counsel and noble example, she prepared them for noble and useful manhood and womanhood. The two sisters were with her in tender and loving ministrations during her last illness, and when she passed away paid loving tribute to her memory as to the only mother they had known. "Miss Matt," as she was called by almost all who knew her, was married to Mr. J. S. Hudnall, of Mineral Wells, Miss., October 9, 1867. Thus in the dark days of Reconstruction and amidst the mournful scenes of wreck and ruin wrought by cruel war, the gallant, unconquered ex-Confederate soldier formed a life partnership with this noble Christian woman. And while their capital consisted simply in true manhood and womanhood, with high purpose, so wise and prudent was she in the management of her part of the partnership that her husband attributes his splendid financial success more to her than to himself. Brother and Sister Hudnall being denied the blessing of children of their own, the mother instinct of Sister Hudnall ran out to the children of others. And no less than ten orphan children found an asylum in the home of this choice couple for a longer or shorter time. And each found as real a home and as tender love and care as if they had been their own children. And this same loving interest followed them out into their busy, useful lives for which they had been fitted in this home. And one had but to see these wards return at the call of suffering, and with anxious hearts and tender ministrations hover around the sick bed, to know what Sister Hudnall's influence had meant to them. Sister Hudnall gave her heart to Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, in early girlhood. Her life of loving service to her kind was but the expression of the consecration then made. Her love and loyalty to her Church grew stronger to the end. For about five years she had been a cripple from the effects of a fall, and had to walk with a stick; but her place in the church was seldom ever vacant, and her duties in the affairs of the home were never neglected. She fell ill again on the 15th of March, which gave such a shock to her system that she never recovered. She seemed to have a presentiment that the end had come; and while all that loving friends and skilled physicians could do, was done, she steadily grew worse. And on the evening of the 5th of May she fell asleep in Jesus and her spirit passed away. The funeral service was conducted from the home by the writer and Brother Hassell, of the Memphis Conference, after which we laid her body to rest in Bethlehem Cemetery to await the resurrection of the just. May God's Spirit and grace comfort and sustain the bereaved husband and other loved ones, and may they so live as to meet her in the haven of eternal rest.

R. W. EVANS.

The subject of this sketch, MRS. MYMA TRAYLOR, was born Aug. 7, 1832, and died June 1, 1912. She was married to Mr. W. W. Traylor, of Jackson, Miss., March 16, 1902. God blessed their union with three precious children. They lived happily in each other's love, enjoying the comforts of a good home in Jackson, Miss., until Mr. Traylor's death about two years ago. Mrs. Traylor and their children, after her husband's death, had a good home with her father, Mr. Frank Smith, at Courtrell, Scott County, where she died. Just before death came to mother, she drew her sweet precious children to her and said, "God is going to take mother from you. I want you to be good, sweet children." She then committed them to the heavenly Father's love and to the care of her father and his sister, Mrs. Gome, who together will furnish the comforts of a well ordered Christian home for them. Sister Traylor was an affectionate wife and devoted mother. She loved her home and lived for her family and others. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at ten years of age and lived a useful life, rendering valuable service to the Sunday school and her church when health would admit. She had a burning ambition to serve others, and while the range of her activities was circumscribed, she will be greatly missed in her community. Her remains were laid by those of her husband in the Cedarlawn Cemetery at Jackson to await the resurrection of the just. The earthly chain is broken, but let the children live so as to have an unbroken family in heaven.

A. M. BROADFOOT.

The death of little VIRGA HERRING, on April 21, produced a feeling of sorrow in the hearts of all who knew her. To the sorrowing family and friends our hearts go out in sympathy, and we pray that God may comfort them in this sad hour. Virga was 11 years and a few months old. Her attractive ways won the affections of every one. May her last kind, sweet words influence her friends to yield to the will of God and think of her as one in that celestial home, and may her presence there make heaven nearer to us here. Knowing of her present happy abode in a measure dispels the dark clouds of grief and sheds rays of sunshine on our path. God, in his infinite mercy, seems to furnish ministering angels to guide his children through life's last battle-death, so that they are able to say, "All is well."

J. S. MILLER, of Lauderdale, Miss., died in Meridian, on July 5, 1912. He was born near Lauderdale Oct. 17, 1878, and never lived anywhere but in this community. He was married to Miss Lula Moore June 9, 1900. To them were born two daughters and one son, all of whom survive him. He joined the Presbyterian Church when quite a boy and remained a member of that Church until six years ago, when he joined the Methodist Church. He was truly a good man, and let his light shine through his daily intercourse with men as manager of one of the largest mercantile establishments in Lauderdale. He was a public spirited man, and was always willing to help in everything which tended toward the betterment of society and the uplift of humanity. His home life was also beautiful; he was one of the gentlest and most affectionate of husbands and fathers. His family, the Church, and the community for miles around will miss him greatly. May God comfort his sorrowing ones. His mortal remains sleep in the cemetery at Lauderdale to await the resurrection of the just.

T. H. NAYLOR.

MRS. EFFIE GOODWIN (nee Turnage) was born April 2, 1838, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Chunky, Miss., when she was about twelve years old. She was married to Mr. R. E. Goodwin in November, 1910, and died June 30, 1912, at the home of her parents, at Mahan, Miss. Sister Effie was an obedient child and a faithful and consistent member of the Church. She was the mother of one child, a little boy, but he did not live to brighten the home but a few weeks; he went on in advance of his mother to welcome her at the beautiful gate of the city of the paradise of God. She leaves a father and mother, two sisters, three brothers, a husband, and two step-daughters to mourn their loss. Dear loved ones, weep not, but rejoice in that you have treasures in heaven and that if faithful you may unite with loved ones where there will be no more sorrow, pain nor parting. Then dry your tears, loved ones, it will not be long until it will all be over.

W. A. MANGUM, Jr., P. C.

BROTHER C. M. BROOMFIELD was born Aug. 20, 1821; died May 15, 1912, and was buried in Old Salem Cemetery. He removed from Louisiana at the age of 15 to Mississippi and was said to be the oldest man in Rankin County. At the age of 25 years he was happily married to Miss Caline Chapman, and of this union were born twelve children, five of whom preceded him to the glory world, and seven of whom survive to mourn the loss of a faithful and affectionate father. He joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of 25 and at the age of 30 years he was gloriously converted. For about 71 years he lived a faithful, consecrated life. He filled the office of steward, class leader and Sunday school superintendent, and in these various places he always proved faithful to the trust committed unto him. In his home he was kind and affectionate and the fires were always burning upon the family altar. His home was the home of his pastor. We had the privilege of being with him a few days before he passed away, and his testimony was that he did not think any man could be mistaken about his relationship to God, and that he was ready and willing to go when it pleased God. So he died in the triumphs of a Christian faith. Let us not mourn as those who have no hope, but let us look to him who doeth all things well, and who will bring us at last to the haven of rest.

His pastor, W. E. DICKENS.

LAMBERT, MISS.

We have just closed our meeting at Lambert. It ran eight days. The Church was greatly revived, and the unsaved brought to a degree of seriousness never before, perhaps, experienced in Lambert. There were thirteen accessions to the Church here by letter, vows and baptism. We have had eighteen accessions in all this year. Rev. S. L. Pope, of Itta Bena, was with me from Monday night, and did the preaching. It was well done. Nothing sensational was preached, but just the pure, earnest, honest gospel, and by it Christians were comforted, sinners warned, and the cause of Christ honored and built up. God bless Brother Pope and give him many years of usefulness! We have a new church here, with some debt on it, but of course, that will be paid. Our people here were few and in limited circumstances financially, and were compelled to go in debt some. But we have a band of as noble women here as can be found and they are working like Trojans and will soon liquidate the indebtedness on the organ and pews. Men ought to be ashamed of themselves halting at difficulties that women conquer.

A REMARKABLE HONOR.

In 1840, 7 members of Congress from North Carolina, 94 members of the State Legislature, and the Mayor and 42 leading citizens of Raleigh, N. C., united in presenting a petition to the Director of the Medical Bureau of the U. S. Navy, which closes with the following words: "While all can testify to the high reputation this medicine sustains in the respective counties we have the honor to represent, many of us know by happy experience in our own families its efficacy; therefore, we can with much propriety, and do with great pleasure, give Dr. Gray our names in support of his truly valuable ointment." For three generations Gray's Ointment has held first place in the treatment of boils, carbuncles, chronic sores, festering cuts and wounds, and in the prevention of blood poisoning. THE TWO WAYS.

A contemporary says: "It costs lots of money to keep the school of experience going." So it does; and it also costs a constant sacrifice of things vastly more valuable than silver and gold. Yet, strange to say, there are some who can be taught in no other school.

In a recent issue The Outlook heads an editorial with the query, "Can Newspapers Tell the Truth?" We believe that they could if they would, but we fear that some of them do not try very hard to do so. We respectfully suggest that they ought to be careful as to their statements since there are not a few people who are disposed to believe everything they see in print. Such implicit confidence on the part of the public ought not to be abused.

Christianity is pre-eminently the religion of hopefulness. There is no human need that it does not meet; no human woe for which it does not furnish a remedy. The far-reaching effects of the Adamic Fall are everywhere manifest, but Jesus came "to make his blessings flow as far as the curse is found." We may have strife and disappointment and heart-ache here, but if we are disposed to become despondent, let us remember the inspiring words of St. Paul, written under the influence of inspiration: "For I reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed to us-ward." Redemption completed will fully vindicate the divine wisdom and amply justify the vast outlay and the tremendous struggle necessary to accomplish it. Nothing hazardous is taking place on earth. The mighty and inscrutable purposes of God are here being worked out.

We hear much in this day about "great preachers." What is meant by this expression? Do we mean ministers who are scholarly, logical, and eloquent, and who in the pulpit can please and impress an audience and send the people away wondering at their powers of mind and speech? Alas! we fear that this is too often the case. But we dare say that if we had the Master's roll of "great preachers" it would differ not a little from those of both the world and the Church. One of Satan's most effective strokes in battling against Christianity has been the secularization of the ideals of its disciples. The one true test of preaching is the extent to which it brings the transforming power of Christ into the hearts and lives of men. If that be lacking, no matter how it may thrill and charm and overwhelm, it is "as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." Gifts, graces, and acquirements are valuable aids to a successful proclamation of the Word, but vastly more important are the eye single to God's glory and an unbroken connection with the spiritual forces working for human redemption.

There is a way that grows brighter and brighter to the perfect day, and there is a way that grows darker and darker to eternal night. The former is the way of the righteous; the latter is the way of the ungodly. One who is observant cannot but be impressed that the Christian life is one which becomes increasingly better. It is beautiful in its beginning; rich in its noonday splendors, and still more radiant and glorious in its twilight hours. Heaven seems to bend more closely above the aged saint as he approaches the end of his earthly pilgrimage, and larger foretastes of the joys awaiting him are given during his last days. Having lived uprightly, he is not haunted by the memories of evil deeds or wasted years, and the prospect before him is one which thrills and inspires his trusting soul. The world has yet to hear of one who walked in the shining way of virtue lamenting it at the last. Through the centuries the farewell words of those who accepted Christ and spent their strength in his service have been notes of victory—not the wails of defeat, nor expressions of regret.

Exactly the reverse of this is true of those who pursue a sinful course. It is increasingly disappointing. Its pleasures are for only "a season;" they soon lose their power to charm, and others must be found, which also in their turn pall upon the senses and cease to please and fascinate. Indulgence in evil is a violation of the laws of one's physical and moral well-being.

Both the body and the soul rise up in protest; there is a mutiny of the moral faculties which allows no peace; as the good man is satisfied from within, so also from within in a large measure comes the punishment of the bad man. Milton represents Satan as saying, "Myself am hell." Every sinner kindles in his own bosom consuming flames which nothing but the precious blood of Christ can extinguish.

The broad way of evil is a way of defeat and weariness. None boast of having trodden it when its menacing end rises into view. It is a significant fact that the irreligious in crossing the dark river send back no exclamations of triumph. On the contrary, their wails of despair come not only from deathbeds, but also often from the lips of the living. Before his death at 36 years of age, the dissolute Lord Byron, who Pollock says "drank every cup of joy and heard every trump of fame," wrote:

"My days are in the yellow leaf,
The flowers and fruits of love are gone;
The worm, the canker, and the grief
Are mine alone."

Not infrequently the votaries of sin find the ills that they have brought upon themselves so unendurable that they prefer to fly even into black unknown rather than brave them longer. A striking instance of this is seen in the case of the noted Mississippi duellist, Alexander K. McClung. He was born of good parentage, being a nephew of Chief Justice Marshall, of the United States Supreme Court; he was well educated, a gifted writer, an eloquent speaker, and an accomplished politician; his bravery was unquestioned, having brought him distinction in the Mexican War. But he was dissipated, licentious, and killed several antagonists upon the so-called "field of honor." Life grew darker as the years passed; his conscience would not let him rest, and it is said that he got so he would not let his light go out at night, and that he slept but little. When in the army, so weary was he of living that he sought by a reckless exposure of himself to the enemy to be killed, but, like Cain, he was not destined to be struck down in such a manner. Finally one day in the city of Jackson, after taking a bath, he carefully clothed himself in an elegant full-dress suit, with a shirt to match, a white tie, black hose, and a pair of patent leather pumps, and having stretched himself upon a bed in his room at a hotel, and having placed his head upon a neatly planed plank procured for the occasion, so that it would carry off the blood and not allow it to touch his spotless garments, he sent a bullet crashing through his brain. And pinned to the pillow of his bed the following mournful lines were found:

"Sweetly speed o'er the waste of time,
Spirit of death;
In manhood's morn, in youthful prime,
I woo thy breath;
For the glittering hues of hope have fled,
Like the dolphin's light;
And dark are the clouds above my head
As the starless night.
Oh, vainly the mariner sighs for the rest
Of the peaceful haven;
The pilgrim's shrine for the saints of the blest,
The calm of heaven;
The galley slave for the night wind's breath
At burning noon;
But more gladly would I spring to thy arms, cold death;
Come soon; oh, come soon!"

The municipal authorities of Los Angeles, Cal., have decided that after the next thirty days no saloon in that city will be allowed to serve a free luncheon to its patrons. This is a step in the right direction. The cheap and inferior food used by dramshops to extend their sale of intoxicants greatly strengthens their hold upon the poorer classes and immensely increases their power for evil. New Orleans stands urgently in need of a similar regulation. And it will come in the course of time.

A camp-meeting preacher in Illinois is reported to have cried out vehemently while delivering a sermon: "Oh, God, send us another Bob Ingersoll to arouse the people!" This is the first time we have heard it suggested that Mr. Ingersoll was an instrument of blessing to the Church and the cause of Christianity. If memory serves us right, the kind of arousal he produced in his day was not very highly regarded by the ministers who were contemporaneous with him. But perhaps they were too old-foggyish to see that the brilliant and blatant skeptic was a blessing in disguise.

WHO IS MY NEIGHBOR?

Thy neighbor? It is he whom thou
Hast power to aid and bless,
Whose aching heart or burning brow
Thy soothing hand may press.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis the fainting poor,
Whose eye with want is dim,
Whom hunger sends from door to door—
Go thou and succor him.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis that weary man
Whose years are at their brim,
Bent low with sickness, cares and pain—
Go thou and comfort him.

Thy neighbor? 'Tis the heart
Bereft of every earthly gem;
Widow and orphan, helpless left—
Go thou and succor them.

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE.

(An extract from an address delivered by ex-Vice President C. W. Fairbanks at the anniversary of the General Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church during the recent session of the General Conference of that denomination in Minneapolis. Mr. Fairbanks is one of the most distinguished Methodist laymen in the United States.)

I have sometimes feared that we do not appreciate sufficiently the importance of the Christian college as it touches our religious and secular lives; it seems to me that it is impossible to emphasize too strongly its importance as one of the wholesome factors in our national life. It is not only essentially a recruiting station for our ministers and missionaries, but it is also sending into the rank of the laity men who will fill the trades and the professions and politics with the best standards of Christian ethics; men who will make for peace, good order and progress at home, and whose potential voice will be for peace among the powers of the earth. All these things are worth while, they are the crowning glory of civilization.

* * * There are many of our Christian colleges which have a lean and hungry look; there are many of them with underpaid faculties; and, according to the modern standard, inadequate libraries and other equipment; nevertheless as a rule they are making substantial contributions to our great national advance. There is something that is morally and intellectually wholesome in the atmosphere of the Christian college, no matter how meagerly it is endowed. Its riches do not consist in an elaborate physical equipment, but in the power to fashion the characters of those who attend it.

We must recognize the fact that the tendency of the day is toward consolidation, and increased power in every department of human effort. The contest is on among educational institutions, and those which can offer the largest and most attractive opportunities for an education must draw to their lecture halls the larger share of the youth of the land. It is essential to the larger national interest that the Christian college should not be allowed to fall behind in this contest. It must not fail to expand so as to meet the growing needs of the day; young men and young women must not be obliged to turn from the halls of the Christian college because they are unable to meet their needs, and because there is more opportunity elsewhere. If we starve the aspirations of our young people for larger knowledge within a distinctly Christian atmosphere, we shall in a degree starve the Church itself.

A large share of our missionaries graduate from Christian colleges. Their efforts have a direct bearing on our nation as respects its standing and good name in the Orient and elsewhere. The Far East has become the theater of greatest interest in recent years, and the future there looms large with problems of a religious, political, social and industrial character. * * * There is one potent fact, and that is that Christianity must play a large part in the future affairs of the Orient; for it has set in motion the forces that are overturning ancient customs, destroying heathenish practices, and giving play to the larger hopes of millions and hundreds of millions of the human race. Liberty is, indeed, the child of Christianity. In the presence of Christianity fetters upon the bodies, minds and souls of men fall, and they come into an enjoyment of an increased measure of their inalienable rights. The process seems slow in the Far East, yet those who have watched, waited, prayed, and worked there observe that it is nevertheless sure. There is more advance crowded into a year now than in centuries before. The map of the world's activities is always changing; a state of absolute rest in the affairs of mankind would be a contravention of the purpose of the All-Wise Creator. The faces of the millions of the Far East are turned toward the United States as toward no other country; we are more than any one else their guide and hope; they are more and more studying our political institutions. We owe it to them, to ourselves, and to Christianity to send them missionaries to aid in the great work which concerns the welfare of so large a share of the human race, and which in the long reach of time will always concern in a greater or less degree our Republic itself.

The Christian college justifies itself in the fullest measure in the contribution it makes to the missionary field in Japan, Korea, China, India, and Africa; in short, in every land where Christian missionaries have been sent. The fruit of their effort has a very substantial bearing upon our nation in its larger international aspects.

Without the Christian college, what would become of our pulpits? They must be supplied with strong men, leaders in the best sense of the word. The times demand much of the Christian Church, and she must commission the ablest men in her exalted service. They must be capable of expounding the gospel so as to win men to its acceptance; they must be many-sided, so as to be able to co-ordinate the Christian forces of the community for the advancement of its religious, temporal, and social well-being. Where shall we go to find such men except to the halls of the Christian college?

THE NATIONAL "CONSCIENCE FUND."

Probably the largest business man in the world is "Uncle Sam." He has in the various departments of the Government an immense army of employes, and the financial transactions carried on aggregate billions of dollars. In spite of the great caution exercised, dishonest persons in the public service occasionally manage to steal money and escape detection. Some of these in after years have been stricken with remorse and without giving their names have returned the amounts stolen. In such instances it is the rule of the Government not to seek to ascertain the identity of the refunding parties. This has led to the keeping of a record in the Treasury Department, known as the "Conscience Fund." In this connection, the following statement sent out from Washington, D. C., a few days since, will probably be read with interest:

"The still, small voice of conscience, pleading with Americans who in various ways had defrauded the United States Government, brought to the federal Treasury during the fiscal year of 1912 just closed, a total of $6,514. This amount came from several hundred people, the identity of all unknown, and makes an aggregate of $431,800 thus paid into the Treasury. While it is popularly supposed these contributions are placed in a separate fund or what is familiarly known as the 'Conscience Fund,' there is in reality no distinct account piling up in the vaults of the Government. As the money is received it is immediately turned into the general fund of the Government and expended the same as any other receipts.

"The contributions to the 'Conscience Fund' range from a few cents to thousands of dollars. The largest amount received during the fiscal year just ended was $2,000. The largest amount ever received was $35,000, some years ago. The first contribution was received in 1811; the second in 1827. Ever since the latter year they have been coming in with increasing frequency."

PROGRESS OF OUR JEWISH MISSION.—AN INTERESTING REPORT.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

I have just received the following most interesting report from Rev. Julius Magath, our missionary to the Jews in the South.

In the very nature of the work a great number of conversions can not be expected in a day; the work must move from individual to individual. Nor can we expect, or desire, a Jewish Church; the true policy being to have our Jewish brethren, when they are converted, join the most convenient Church of the Gentiles to them. The work is making cheering progress, and it deserves the sympathy and support of all among us who love the Lord Jesus in sincerity.

As Brother Magath remarks, the Wesley Memorial Church in Atlanta, Ga., houses the Mission in the matter of its central headquarters, but the work is not local. It is hoped that Jews all over the South will be reached through the Mission and that many may be brought to Christ. A Committee supervises, as far as is necessary, the work, and takes account of its finances. Mr. W. B. Wilkerson, a member and an official of the Wesley Memorial Church, is the Treasurer.

Two men, Brothers Magath and Zeit, are now engaged as missionaries. As the work advances and as resources may permit, others may be added to the force, and, perhaps, other centers occupied.

But let us see what the report says. It is as follows:

Atlanta, Georgia, July 17, 1912.

Bishop W. A. Candler,
President Hebrew Mission Committee,
Wesley Memorial Church,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Bishop Candler:

As Missionary in charge of this important work of our Church (The Hebrew Mission, while having its logical headquarters at the Wesley Memorial Church, is nevertheless intended to serve the whole Church in this field.) I am glad to be able to report progress of more than ordinary kind. At the last fall Conference I was able to report several conversions among the Jews; since that time, with the Conference year about one-half gone, I am thankful to say that two Jews have joined our Church, as the direct result of this mission. The first case is that of a young man, Joseph B. Zeit, and his conversion shows God's wonderful plans for the salvation of men, and illustrates clearly the fact that it is our's to sow and to water, but it is he that gives the increase. Some two years ago, the preachers at San Antonio, Texas, passed a resolution asking your Missionary to come to that section of the country, as two young Jews had manifested an interest in Christianity. The pulpits of San Antonio, as well as those of other Churches, were freely opened to me, and I had many opportunities to preach Christ to my own people according to the flesh, among whom were the two Jews mentioned. After my leaving, these two sons of Abraham, who had been greatly impressed by what to them was a new exposition of Christianity, continued to study the great question with the result that one of them, Mr. Stone, was soundly converted and joined our Church in San Antonio under the pastorate of Brother Groseclose. He is now in the Philippine Islands, a consistent Christian, a business man, and an active worker in the Y. M. C. A. Both Brother Groseclose and I have had several letters from him. With the other young man I kept up a correspondence for quite a while, and last December he came to Nashville and entered our Missionary Training School there. In January, I was asked to come to Nashville to make several talks to the winter missionary gathering there. Remaining there over a week, I had a good opportunity to study the character of the young man. I found him to be well versed in Talmudical and other Jewish studies; and in many earnest conversations with him I found that it was his desire, if the way opened, to devote himself to Hebrew missionary work. He applied for Church membership and was baptized and received as a member of our McKendree Church at Nashville about three months ago. I was successful in securing funds for him to enable him to stay at the Training School to the end of the term; and he is with me now in Atlanta, assisting in the work, and I trust that he will prove to be a useful, as well as a consecrated helper in this great work. His name is Joseph B. Zeit, and he is a native of Warsaw, Russia (Poland).

The third is in many respects extremely pathetic and touching, and yet it is so typical of the trials and the triumphs of many Jews who have taken up the Cross of Christ in order to follow him. About one month ago, Dr. Lovejoy, the presiding elder of the Atlanta District, wrote me that a Jew, who was intensely concerned about his soul, needed me and was very anxious to see me. As soon as the letter reached me, I went to La Grange, Georgia, where it seemed I was needed. There I found the man who was anxious to see me. He was a Jew past middle age, and he had a very heart-rending story to tell me. It seems that some time back he had been taken sick and had to keep his bed for quite a while. He had been accustomed to a life of activity, but now he had to lie there and think. Naturally and by training a religious man, he came to realize that in America, where it was impossible for him to observe the ceremonial law, he could not be a Jew at all, as all his religion at home was made up of an effort to observe the ceremonial law. So, while on his bed of suffering, the great question presented itself, demanding an answer. If he should die, what would become of him? He is a learned man, and had frequently lead in the prayers of the Synagogue; but now to this question of all questions he could not find a definite answer, and like many a Rabbi of old, standing on the brink of eternity, he did not know which way he was going. A Christian minister about that time gave him a copy of the New Testament—a book he had never seen before. His mind doubtless was in a receptive state, and his cries to God to give him light were answered. He saw, dimly it is true, that Jesus Christ was his promised Messiah and Savior. He got well and moved from Florida to La Grange, Ga. The seed of truth remained in his mind and heart, and he began to talk to his family about Christ. His wife, though she had been in this country several years, is still bound to the ways of the old country; and her idea of Christianity is that it is a religion of idolatry—the forms of which she had observed in the old country. His two daughters, who have learned only the outward thing of civilization, mistaking it for Christianity, have absorbed only the worldly things with their frivolities and vanities. To them religion has no meaning, and, as one of them expressed it, "a man dies like a beast and there is an end of it."

So it can easily be seen that he could get but little sympathy or help from his own family. Meantime, his acquaintance being mainly among the lower class of Gentiles, keeping as he does a small store patronized by negroes and the less intelligent class of white people, he could not get much encouragement and information. So he thus reasoned with reference to myself: "Here is a man who has been through the same experience I have known, would he come and help me?" I was only too happy to do so. We spent many hours together. His first pointed question to me was: "You have been a Christian all these years; has Christ given you the desire of your soul, and can you unhesitatingly say that he has saved you?" I was glad to testify for Christ to this man of Israel, and tell him of the unspeakable joy and comfort he has been to me all these years, and how happy I was even at that time to point a brother of mine to the Savior, whom I had found. These hours of communion were very precious to both of us. Toward the evening, I went to the parsonage. After supper Mr. Buck (that's the man's name) came to the parsonage. He seemed greatly moved. He said to me: "I have considered it all, and I know what it all means. I expect persecutions from my family and from the Jews; but I believe in Christ and he says, 'Believe and be baptized.' You have come here in answer to my agonizing prayer, and if you will, I will be glad if you will baptize me and receive me into the Church."

Brother Ledbetter, the pastor, was present at the simple but impressive service. He, as well as myself, was profoundly moved, and he said he never realized before what it meant for a Jew to accept Christ. I have received several letters from Mr. Buck since. He says that, while his family are persecuting him terribly, and while in the very nature of the case few Christians can understand what he is undergoing, yet he has that peace in his soul which Christ has given him, and which none can take away. He has settled the greatest of all questions. There are many such cases, but it takes the severing of all ties and untold suffering for a Jew to take the step. May God bless that man!

To my mind there never has been a brighter outlook for the Hebrew Mission, and the Church has never had as great an opportunity to preach Christ to his own kinsmen according to the flesh.

Financially, there is not a more struggling Mission in the whole Church. Most of what I have under God been able to do, I have done through much self-denial and sacrifice. My nominal salary is many months behind; and in order to give the bare necessities to Mr. Zeit, I have to give him more than one-half of the meager appropriation made for the Mission by the two Georgia Conferences. I am not complaining. God has been wonderfully good to me, and many friends are being raised up to support the Mission. Wesley Memorial Church is the logical headquarters for the Mission, but from here information, influences and blessing to the Jews should radiate all over our beloved Church. Methodism has done as much to spread the gospel far and wide. Is it not time that something worthy should be done for this great work? Like Dickens' army, our Hebrew Mission has consisted for many years of one man, who not only has had to do the work, but has also raised most of the funds used in it. The increase in the personnel has been done at an increase of self-denial of the one missionary. It is gratifying that both the preachers and the lay members of the Church are manifesting greater interest in this work than ever before. God has yet a great work for Israel, and I pray that we, as Methodists, may have a great share in bringing the seed of Abraham to their Savior and ours.

Superintendent of the Mission to the Jews in the South.

WHY IS IT?

By Fannie E. Burdine.

In observing the cuts and descriptions of modern churches which are being erected in this progressive age, furnished with superb organs and electroliers costing untold thousands, that dazzle the eyes and daze the mind, we are tempted to exclaim in the language of the preacher: "Vanity of vanities! All is vanity!"

At the same time our thoughts wander far away across the deep to a few lone, weary workers endeavoring to worship in a dark, poorly ventilated room, or to the many millions who are worshipping wood and stone by the roadside, who are sitting in midnight darkness, whose lives are a living torture and whose souls are passing out, one by every tick of the clock, into everlasting punishment with no one to rescue, no one to save.

"O Church of God,
What wilt thou say,
When in that awful judgment day,
They charge thee with their doom?"

"If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death and those that are ready to be slain; if thou sayest, 'Behold, we knew it not,' doth not He that pondereth the heart consider it? And He that keepeth thy soul, doth He not know it? And shall He not render to every man according to his works?"

RELATION OF INFANTS TO THE CHURCH.

By Rev. W. H. Huntley, D. D.

The writer well remembers Uncle Simon Peter Richardson once reminiscing over his exploits and experiences. Uncle Simon was a member of the first General Conference of the Southern Methodist Church. To him and others of a commission was given the service, amid fresh adjustments of positions and doctrinal statements, of declaring the relation of children to the Church. As Uncle Simon recalled the incident his quizzical expression cannot be pictured, for he was unique in facial and verbal manners. His face spoke all over—he was so vital and mental as to suggest speech like an atmosphere.

This is the substance of what he said, chuckling often, sometimes serious, often bending forward for emphasis: "I was chairman of the committee. And I was pleased with the business; I had long wanted clearly to state what was the true position of the Church as to infants. No one could do it better; I had studied the matter and knew all about it. I decided to dispense with the other committeemen. I would go to my room at night, and with no one to bother me, write out just what ought to be written. Then later, I would call the others to my room, read them my statement, get them to subscribe their names and, report the matter, thus closed, to the Conference."

I got my paper ready and some pencils, and sat down in the quiet of my room. I looked for a good way to begin. The first sentence is always more or less trouble, and I found it that way. I knew well enough what I wanted to say, but found it hard to get started. After a while I concluded I was tired from the day's work in the Conference, and would sleep over it. Next day, with a fresher head, it would work out right. I had no hesitation about that. But the next day gave me trouble too, and I put it off again. Then, after another failure, I began to think that some difficulties I had not noticed were in that question. I remembered also the other members of the committee, and felt it no more than polite and brotherly to call them together, and guide them along to a proper conclusion." Here memory clouds up, but I seem to recall his air of rueful humor, as Uncle Simon admitted that the committee never did act.

Far be it from me to triangulate the discussion warmly and intelligently passing between Messrs. Featherston and Lipscomb. With each onset the feathers fly, and the comb shows a gash; it is the season for warmth in everything.

But, reading what these gentlemen write, I have travelled back to a session of the worthless of the ancient Church, who for six eloquent months discussed the relation of infants to the Church. It was a long session, you remember, the Trent Council. Was it fourteen or twenty years they sat—the patriarchs, silver-bearded bishops, delegates and ablegates from all lands—there in old Bologna? The daily courier ran between the Vatican and the Council, with dispatches and advices from the pontiff, his fine Italian hand dealing with the statement and re-statement of the entire propaganda.

It is interesting history indeed—but the children fared sadly at the hands of that wise and venerable council. It split into factions over that

OUR ANNUAL CONFERENCE SESSIONS.

There seems to be an impression in some quar- ... that the average session of an Annual Con- ... does not measure up to all that it should ... In its issue of July 5, the Christian Advo- ... of Nashville contained an article entitled, ... "Wanted—A New Annual Conference Program," ... which was written by Rev. C. C. Selecman, of ... City, Mo.

Brother Selecman advances four objections to ... the present method of conducting the Confer- ... First, he objects to the verbal reports ... from the charges by the pastors; second, he be- ... lies that the connectional men are being ... third, he fears that the most important ... reports are delayed until the close of the ses- ... and fail to receive due notice; fourth, he ... has observed that many preachers go home with ... saddened hearts and low spirits because of the ... constant pulling of presiding elders, the statis- ... secretary, and others who are urging them ... to settle up. He would correct these four al- ... leged evils as follows: He would do away with ... verbal reports in toto, use the extra time thus ... gained to hear the inspiring addresses of the con- ... nectional men, and sidetrack all business in or- ... der that these great speeches of the special rep- ... resentatives may be heard; hammer out most of ... the work now done in committees on the floor ... of the Conference in order to bring out discus- ... sions and give every preacher a chance to relieve ... himself; and finally he would have "such conse- ... cration, evangelical and educational meetings as ... will uplift, encourage and animate."

These several proposals seem to fall far short ... of solving the issue at hand. We are sure that ... if there is any reform needed in our Annual Con- ... ference sessions (of which we are not fully per- ... suaded), it is one that will relieve them of dry- ... ness, inject in them inspiration, and cause them ... to bear fruit in the hearts and lives of all who ... attend them. This being the case, certainly no ... program could come farther from accomplishing ... such an end than the one suggested by Brother ... Selecman. In the first place, when he has turned ... the connectional men loose on the regular ses- ... sions of the Conference he will have the privilege ... of seeing most of the preachers quietly retire to ... the ante-rooms, or go out doors and consume ... the hour in visiting the brethren until the speak- ... er finishes. We know of no plan that would chlo- ... roform a Conference session quicker than to re- ... sign it to the tender mercies of the connectional ... men. We do not say this as a reflection on the ... splendid men who are at the head of the differ- ... ent departments of the Church, but because it is ... so. The pastors have read the reports of the ... General Boards, are in sympathy with the for- ... ward movements of the Church, expect to do ... their best for the forwarding of the interests of ... the Kingdom, and do not need to be exhorted, ... crammed with statistics (possibly harangues), and ... finally bored to make a subscription, thus pay- ... ing the way for more collectors at future ses- ... sions to nag them for a settlement.

Again, if the business that is now done in com- ... mittees should in the future be transacted on the ... floor of the Conference in order to allow the ... brethren to "extinguish the sparks by a breath ... of air (hot air, possibly)," and each little detail ... should be the occasion for a flood of oratory, ... we do not doubt that our ministers would soon ... become a militant band, but their fighting jave- ... lins might be more often hurled toward their ... brethren than toward sin. And, furthermore, by ... the time the details should be threshed out on ... the floor of the Conference, it is to be feared ... there would not be time left to sing "Am I a Sol- ... dier of the Cross?" before reading the appoint- ... ments, to say nothing of "evangelical, consecra- ... tion and educational meetings."

Should it be the policy of our Church to deny ... the pastors the privilege of making a verbal re- ... port at the sessions of the Conference? Certain- ... ly not. The man who has toiled all year in the face of difficulties deserves the time of the ... Conference while he tells of his struggles and ... triumphs. Deny the pastor the opportunity of ... making his report, and the probabilities are he ... will not be so earnest in his efforts to report. "In ... full Bishop," Seal the itinerant's mouth and un- ... loose the tongue of the special pleader at our ... Conference, and you will do the cause of the ... Church more harm than good.

The official board of St. Paul's Church, Spring- ... field, Mo., where the next session of the Southwest ... Missouri Conference is to be held, has voiced the ... sentiment of many in the Church, we think in a ... resolution recently adopted and presented to the ... pastors of that Conference. The resolution pro- ... poses that the morning sessions be given to busi- ... ness; the afternoons to connectional men and ... anniversaries, and the evening services to spiri- ... tual sermons and exhortations. A CORRECTION AND SOME VICKSBURG NOTES.

Dear Brother Meek: In my Treasurer's report ... on missions published last week Woodville is ... credited with having paid $50, when it has paid ... nothing on this claim. Also, you will find that ... in making up the total for that same column ... somebody's arithmetic is wrong. Both these mis- ... takes may be mine, but you will please correct ... them, that the record may be kept straight.

Bishop Morrison has just left for his home in ... Florida after spending four days with Brother ... Saunders and me. His ministry in the pulpit at ... both hours on Sunday had the old-time ring, and ... was an inspiration to the two large congregations ... which heard this gifted preacher of the pure gos- ... pel of our Lord. His stay among us was an in- ... spiration to our people and will mean much to the ... Church in this city. It is my candid judgment ... that Bishop Morrison was never more effective ... or meant more to the Church than now, in the ... social circle, in looking into the business inter- ... ests of the Church, and in every relation in which ... he touched our city, he captivated the people.

Brother Saunders will enter at once upon the ... construction of an elegant $70,000 church. We ... are going to have some gracious results to report ... to the Annual Conference. Our tent meeting ... proved a great success. Quite a number of con- ... versions resulted and some improvement in ... church attendance. Some were received into the ... Church. Our finances, in the face of the unusual ... financial depression, are equally as well up as ... they were this time last year. And there are ... other indications pointing to a more satisfactory ... settlement along all lines by the end of the Con- ... ference year.

Dr. F. L. Wiseman, the newly-elected president of the British Wesleyan Conference, has announced that during his incumbency in that office he will strive especially to promote the religious development of the young people. His plan will be worked chiefly through the Sunday schools, Junior Societies, and the Wesley Guild. The last named organization corresponds to the Epworth League of American Methodism.

Secular News and Comment

The United States Senate has endorsed a measure creating a Department of Labor. This means that in the future there will be a new member of the President's Cabinet, known as the Secretary of Labor, whose business will be to look after the interests of labor and capital.

Sulphur has been discovered near Leesville, La. It is claimed that the vein was found while workmen were drilling a well, and the specimens brought up proved to be pure sulphur. Already Southwest Louisiana has millions of dollars invested in sulphur mining, and it now seems that the sulphur deposits extend at least half-way along the western line of the State.

The Emperor of Japan is reported dead. It is said that during his recent illness, while suffering intense pain, he spent his days in dictating to his secretary lines of poetry of his own composition. It is claimed that in this way he wrote several poems each day. At times he called for the national court poet and discussed with him his favorite theme. Critics claim that he was a great poet, as well as a great ruler.

"A national leprothorium—a hospital or sanitarium for the treatment of lepers—is the only way of avoiding complications and legal embarrassments and of stamping out the disease," says Surgeon General Rupert Blue, of the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service of the United States. He desires to make all lepers the charge of the National Government. There is merit in his contention.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has announced that from now on no liquor will be served in their buffet and dining cars. This will put an end to all drinking on their trains, and will make travel much more pleasant over that road. This act, coming as it did at the instance of the management of the road, and not by the demand of the people, is looked upon as a decided indication of the improvement in the future morals of corporations.

The Senate Committee has reported favorably a bill granting more power to the States in dealing with the shipment of liquor into dry territory. It will be possible, if the measure is finally passed, for a State to confiscate all liquor shipped into its territory, when it is evident that said shipment is intended for private distribution. The law does not intend to prevent licensed druggists or physicians from securing liquor for medicinal or mechanical purposes.

An army of 29,670 locomotive engineers are demanding a raise of wages. Their demands are now being heard by a board of arbitrators in New York City. Whatever may be the outcome of the controversy, it remains evident that a great responsibility rests upon the engineer. The lives of tens of thousands are daily trusted to the engineers and train dispatchers of our railroads. These men need pay, and the wage of the engineer should be made high enough to attract to the craft the best quality of men.

The first American woman to be invited to the International Peace Congress is Mrs. Elmer E. Black, of New York. Mrs. Black has worked earnestly for the establishment of Unity Sunday, as she calls it. Her message for the peace of the world is: If the whole nation relaxes from its toll one day out of each week, the nerve strain on American manhood will be so reduced as to cause a lessening of the spirit of contention in men; therefore, the world will be more at peace. God-speed her message, and may greater honors than even the one she has just had bestowed upon her come to her in the future.

Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh has announced that the nickel is to appear in the future with the buffalo in the place of the head of the Goddess of Liberty, the image now on that coin. Why this change? Have the American people grown tired of the present design of the nickel? Who has heard any complaint? It seems to us that our national officers are given to taking too much liberty with the designing of our money. Not long since we experienced the Lincoln penny fiasco, and now it is passing rapidly into disuse. "In God we trust" was about to be taken from the dollar coin not long ago. Such tampering with the designs of American money is like child's play.

Representative Sabbath, of Illinois, has introduced a bill in Congress to prohibit the sending of racing news by telegraph, mail or otherwise for public distribution. The measure will doubtless never be heard of again. But Mr. Sabbath has stimulated the public mind to thinking about the character of news that is flashed by wire over our country. The average press dispatches contain either accounts of murders, scandal or sporting news. The daily press is dependent on these reports for what it prints. The result is, our papers contain pages of "stuff" that is not fit to be read. Mr. Sabbath's measure should become a law, and with it there should be also a law making it a misdemeanor to report a murder, a scandal or a robbery by wire unless it concerns the safety of the general public.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

TO LOUISIANA METHODISTS AND OTHER FRIENDS.

Dear Brethren: Do you know that we have the greatest opportunity of Methodism in Louisiana—the only college for girls in the whole State west of the river? And do you know that just three circuits, Many, Grand Cane and Jena, furnished more than half of the boarding students last year?

Your president has spent six weeks in travel, and has visited five District Conferences, has traversed the State from Lake Arthur on the South, to Jones on the Arkansas line, has, with his wife's help, sent out 900 catalogues, 1500 circulars, 500 letters and 60 postal cards. We have advertisements in nine Parish papers, also in New Orleans and Nashville Advocates. We talk Mansfield College by day and dream Mansfield College by night. Brother N. E. Joyner has been a great source of help and inspiration and he and his good wife have helped to make glad every day of the summer.

We have been sowing. We need your help to water and God will give the increase. Just now is the crucial time in the college life of our girls. They are to decide definitely this month where they are going next year. Many have already begun their college work in other States and in other than our church schools. Many more are going to State institutions, not knowing that we offer Normal and Domestic Science courses and that our graduates do not have to take examinations except in the Theory and Art of Teaching. Furthermore, we take girls under fifteen, while the State does not. We offer home conditions; the State dormitory conditions. We can do things religiously that the State can never do. We have small classes and can learn the peculiar needs of each pupil. There is the personal contact of teacher and pupil that cannot be had in large and crowded institutions. Our teachers are really educators and not merely instructors.

Among the elect women of the State, none are esteemed more highly than the Alumnae of Mansfield College. Many men prominent in parish and State affairs have married her cultured and refined daughters; and one Bishop of Methodism found his helpmeet here. It ill becomes the ignorant critic to speak at all of Mansfield College. Her friends know her honorable history and can point with becoming pride to those noble women who are the princesses and queens in Dixieland, or speak lovingly of our departed "whom we have loved long since and lost awhile."

There may have been a time for camping, now is the time for the march; there may have been a time for thinking, now is the time for action; there may have been a time for pessimism, now is the time for optimism; there was a time for prayer, but now for service. The night of doubt gives way to day of hope. The world's heroes never looked back, and shall Christ's militant and triumphing hosts fear and falter and fail?

The next few weeks is indeed a time for united, earnest effort. In the home and store and bank and church, on the road or farm or wherever you are, talk Mansfield College and the education of our girls.

We have beautiful grounds, fine brick buildings, a cultured, efficient, Christian faculty. We need the girls, and with your loyal support, we are going to have them. "Faith without works is dead."

Yours for M. F. C.,

R. E. BOBBITT, President.

"BIRTH REGENERATION RATHER THAN DEATH REGENERATION."

By H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

Brother Lipscomb thinks that I do not state the issue fairly when I suggest that to deny infant regeneration means to deny infant salvation. Do I state it unfairly, indeed? By nature inherited from Adam, every infant is lost. We both agree to this, I am sure. By the grace of our Christ every infant is saved. He believes this he insists—so do I. Can a lost child of Adam be saved without regeneration? Christ says that he cannot. Saved and yet not regenerated? Is that my brother's doctrine? In answering my query: "Has a dead child more claim on God's love and grace than a living one?" he answers: "No, though one needs a different expression of God's grace from that which the other needs." What does he mean? What "different expression," and why? Does he need regeneration? Is the question. I care not about "expression"—it is regeneration we are discussing. Do both the living and the dying infant need regeneration? Do both get it? This is the question. He adds here: "The dead child cannot be led into regeneration and sanctification, as God will surely seek to lead the living one; so he must be lifted into such a state (a state of regeneration), and the transformation wrought without its volition, for it can exercise none." If these words mean anything, they mean that God regenerates the dying child and leaves the living one unregenerate. So Brother Lipscomb believes in infant regeneration—when the infant is a dead one. We will not permit the issue shifted. It is not birth-regeneration we are discussing—I mentioned that incidentally, and can attend to that in its time and place.

I alluded to Wesley's words in his sermon xiv, not to endorse them, but to show only that Wesley believed in the Regeneration of Infants. Does Brother Lipscomb represent me fairly here? Let him re-read his utterance and mine, and answer.

I cited him to Fletcher, to Bishop Cooke. At another time I cited him to Bishop Tigert, who in Summers Systematic Theology, Vol. II, pp. 35-44, teaches the regeneration of infants. Dr. Wilbur Fisk once wrote unequivocally: "All are born free from condemnation." (This is very nearly "Birth-Regeneration.") Dr. Whedon wrote: "Justification by Christ overlies the condemnation at birth." If Justification, why not Regeneration? Again, in his Commentary (Eph. ii, 3) he says: "If, however, we must say that infants sinned in Adam," let us be consistent, and add, "but they also became justified in Christ." Certainly that is the Apostle's teaching. Dr. Miner Raymond says: "Man comes to conscious being sustaining the relation of a justified, pardoned sinner." I do most heartily agree with these great Methodists. I cannot conceive that a just God could will that any baby should have entailed upon it the sin of Adam, and then refuse it the antidote, the regeneration bought by Christ, until it is old enough to exercise faith. What if he takes care that in case this infant dies, "he must be lifted into such a state?" Has the living babe not the same right to Christ's grace as the dying child? Is this Death-Regeneration more reasonable than Birth-Regeneration? I prefer a hundred-fold to believe in Birth-Regeneration.

"Ye must be born again," he insists shows that Regeneration must be subsequent to birth. I am astounded that my learned brother does not know that "another" does not mean "at a subsequent time." The R. V. says, "anew." Jesus, in verses 5-8, explains that he means a spiritual, distinct in nature from the physical birth.

I cannot understand how my Brother can endorse the words in our Discipline, "All men though fallen in Adam are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer," and yet refuse to accept Infant Regeneration, unless it be Death-Regeneration. He insists that the Ritual does not purpose teaching this doctrine for which I contend. I was in the last General Conference and on the Committee on Revisals that recommended, and on the sub-committee that framed, the change; and do know that the matter was thoroughly discussed both in the sub-committee and the whole committee; and I do know that we did intend the Ritual to teach Infant Regeneration. Birth-Regeneration, if you please, but not Brother Lipscomb's doctrine of Death-Regeneration. The change was fully explained to the General Conference by Dr. E. W. Alderson of Texas; and was passed overwhelmingly. Whatever vague influences my Brother may draw from certain prayers and from the order for Adult Baptism, which has absolutely nothing to do with this question, it is a fact that the new order for Infant Baptism does teach, and was intended by its revisers to teach, Infant Regeneration, the doctrine of Fletcher, and Whedon, and Raymond and Tigert—yes, the doctrine of Christ and Paul, and of many, many learned Methodists and others.

I concede to my Brother that Watson and Ralston—the latter left our Church before he died—taught with him and a few other good, but much mistaken Methodists. I do not know, however, that the learned men named above would agree with him in his doctrine of Death-Regeneration.

COMMENDS THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

After seeing as much of Mobile as could be crowded into six hours, I made my way to the Seashore Divinity School, where I delivered seven lectures. This is, perhaps, the largest of the Preachers' Institutes which meet anywhere in our Church. Rev. Robt. Selby, of Brookhaven, Miss., is the President of the Divinity School. The Alabama and the Louisiana Conferences and the two Mississippi Conferences unite to support the School. The Directors of the Divinity School from the Alabama Conference, are Rev. Dr. H. H. McNeill, Rev. R. R. Ellison and Rev. J. Northcutt; from the Mississippi Conference, in addition to the President, are Rev. C. C. Chrisler and Rev. H. M. Ellis; from the Louisiana Conference, Rev. W. W. Holmes, Rev. R. H. Wynn, Rev. W. H. Coleman; from the North Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Rev. J. C. Park and Rev. H. S. Spragins.

The young ministers meet at the Divinity School and pass their examinations rather than at the Annual Conferences. * * * It must be clear to everyone that it is far better to have the young men come to a meeting place like that in the summer time and pass their examinations than at the several Annual Conferences when their minds are so much absorbed in collections, reports, etc.

They had for the lecturers Dr. Robinson, of Chicago, on the Old Testament, and Dr. Robertson, of the Baptist Seminary in Louisville, on the New Testament. In addition to these, they had Drs. W. F. Tillet, Andrew Sledd and Bishop E. E. Hoss.

They have built on the Seashore Campground, at an expense of about $6,000, the finest tabernacle I have seen. It accommodates about 1500 people. There were present at the Divinity School at the evening lectures perhaps as many as 500 people. This included the ministers and the people camping on the ground and from the surrounding villages.

After attending the Preachers' Institute at Fayette, Mo., and the Seashore Divinity School at Biloxi, Miss., I came away with the conviction that such annual meetings should be established all over our Church.—Dr. J. W. Lee, in the St. Louis Christian Advocate.

UNCLE SAM'S YOUNG ARMY.

We are Uncle Sam's young army,
And we're twenty million strong—
All together we are marching,
Marching, marching, right along!
Not one coward is among us,
Every heart is staunch and true;
And although we are but children,
Yet there's something we can do—
We can guard our country's colors,
Raise them high with cheer and song!
For we're Uncle Sam's young army,
And we're twenty million strong.

Well we know the splendid stories
Of the brave deeds of the past,
And our country we have promised
That such bravery shall last.
Loyal we will be and love her,
True in every word and deed,
That we may be worthy of her
When it comes our turn to lead.
Now we can but guard her colors,
Proud that to us they belong—
For we're Uncle Sam's young army,
And we're twenty million strong.

A NATURAL CONCLUSION.

Little Willie, being a city boy, had never seen a cow. While on a visit to his grandmother he walked out across the fields with his cousin John. A cow was grazing there, and Willie's curiosity was greatly excited.

"Oh, Cousin John, what is that?" he asked.
"Why, that is only a cow," John replied.
"And what are those things on her head?"
"Horns," answered John.

Before they had gone far the cow mooed long and loud.

Willie was astonished. Looking back, he demanded, in a very fever of interest:

"Which horn did she blow?"—Texas Christian Advocate.

A PEACEMAKER.

A little girl said to her mother one evening:
"I was a peacemaker to-day."

"How was that?" asked her mother.

"I knew something that I didn't tell," was the reply.

There are many boys and girls who could be peacemakers every day, if, like this little girl, they wouldn't tell some of the things they know about others. Repeating a bit of evil gossip about somebody else has led to many a quarrel, and sad misunderstandings have often arisen from some careless remark which has been told by one to another.

Jesus said, "Blessed are the peacemakers," and surely it is worth while trying to be one of those upon whom our Savior pronounced his blessing.

Next time that we hear anything unkind about another, let us be careful not to repeat it, and in this way we may show ourselves peacemakers.

BURYING THE HATCHET.

Rob, with a box in his arms and a spade over his shoulder, had slipped quietly around the house and into the garden. He hoped Dot would not discover him until her unfortunate chicken, which lay in the box covered with roses and clover blossoms, was safely buried.

The chicken, during its brief life, had not been a source of unmixed joy to anyone but Dot; for it was a motherless chick that she had found and brought into the house, and, as soon as it was strong enough to run about, it followed her everywhere with its ceaseless "Chirp! chirp!" in a way that was very inconvenient. It was constantly underfoot, endangering its own neck and making people uncomfortable; but, as Dot's pet, it was tolerated by everybody but the cat. Tabby failed to see any reason for treating it with respect, and so one day she pounced upon it and choked it out of existence.

Dot had covered her favorite with tears and flowers; and Rob, at his mother's suggestion, had tried to spare the small maiden the grief of witnessing the burial. But the attempt was vain. A shrill voice called: "Rob, what are you doing?" And in a moment Dot's inquisitive eyes were taking in the whole scene. Fortunately she found it so interesting as to lighten in some degree its mournfulness.

"I'm glad you're making it in such a pretty place, Robby," she said. "I s'pose chicky was a good deal in the way. Mother says so. And, anyway, she'd have been a big hen pretty soon, and that wouldn't have been so nice. But I'll never like Tabby again, not one bit!"

"O, see here now, Sis, Tabby didn't know any better!" said Rob, in good-natured expostulation. "She's only a cat, and she didn't understand that you'd made a pet of this particular bunch of feathers. Being cross at her won't bring chicky back again. So you'd better bury the hatchet and be friends."

What would I bury a hatchet for?" asked Dot, more impressed by that strange advice than by her brother's reasoning.

Rob laughed. "That means to stop quarreling—not to be angry any more. When Indians have been at war with each other and are ready to be friends, they bury a hatchet. That's a sign that they're willing to stop fighting."

"Do folks always stop fussing after the hatchet is buried?" asked Dot.

"Of course. That's what it means."

Dot watched the smoothing of the ground with thoughtful face, and walked back to the house by Rob's side in unusual silence.

The family had finished dinner when Fred, Rob's senior by two years, came to the door with a sharp call.

"Rob, where have you put the ax?"

"Nowhere. I haven't had it," answered Bob, promptly. But the reply did not satisfy Fred. You must have had it, if you'd only take the trouble to think. You're always carrying off things and forgetting where you put them. Come out and hunt it up!"

Fred was in a hurry, and decidedly impatient; and Rob's face flushed at the order.

"Hunt it up yourself if you want it. I tell you I haven't had it, and I don't know anything about it."

"Boys!" interposed the mother's grieved, reproving voice. But anything more that she might have said was drowned in a wail from Dot.

"It didn't do it! I tried, and it isn't true! Rob said, if you buried a hatchet, folks wouldn't quarrel any more. I couldn't find any hatchet, so I dragged the ax down and buried it 'side of chicky. And you boys fuss worse'n ever!"

The boks looked at each other with a shamefaced smile gradually displacing the flush of anger.

"Where did she put it?" asked Fred, in a tone that had lost its sharpness.

"I'll show you," Rob answered.

There was very little trouble in finding the missing implement, for Dot was not a success at digging. Then Fred met his brother's eyes and laughed.

"I'm afraid she didn't get it deep enough for a lasting peace. But I say, Rob, we might be a little better tempered without hurting ourselves. I'll try it, if you will."

"Agreed," said Rob.

And to this day, when clouds arise in the Lincoln household, someone is sure to ask, "Isn't it about time to drag the ax into the garden?"—Kate W. Hamilton, in Christian Uplook.

MR. MOODY'S DEATH.

Early on the morning of his departure from this world his eldest son was sitting beside his bed. He heard his father speaking in a low tone of voice, and he leaned over to listen, and these were the words that he heard: "Earth is receding; heaven is opening; God is calling." "You are dreaming, father," said the son. "No, Will, this is no dream. I have been within the gates. I have seen the children's faces." The family were summoned. Mr. Moody rallied. A while after he began to sink again, and he was heard to say: "Is this death? This is not bad; there is no valley. This is bliss. This is glorious." "Father," said his daughter, "you must not leave us. We cannot spare you." The dying man replied: "I am not going to throw my life away; if God has any more work for me to do I will get well and do it; but, if God is calling, I must up and off." He rallied again. He gained sufficient strength to rise from the bed and walk over to the window, and sat down in a chair and talked with his family. He began to think he would recover, and was contemplating sending for his pastor to pray for his recovery; but beginning to sink again, he asked them to help him back to bed. As he was sinking, his daughter knelt by the bed and commenced to pray for his recovery, but he said: "No, no, Emma; don't pray that. God is calling. This is my coronation. I have been looking forward to it," and the heroic warrior swept into the presence of the King.—Dr. R. A. Torrey.

A NEW DEPARTMENT PROPOSED.

The Sunday School Magazine for August contains a very interesting discussion entitled "The Handicap of the Sunday School, and a Suggestion," by Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D., of Lexington, Miss. The writer claims that the modern Sunday school is doing a great work, and that the Church is justly proud of it. He points out, however, that it is unjust to our fathers and mothers to think that the religious instruction of the young was entirely neglected in their day; that their method of giving it was chiefly in the home, instead of through an adjunct organization of the Church. The defect of this system, he declares, was that it provided no Christian teaching and training for the children of irreligious parents, and he points out that when the Sunday school was first instituted it did not seek to reach the young people in Christian families, but only "waifs and the neglected ones."

He insists that now, however, the point of emphasis is changed, that but little stress is laid upon home teaching, and that the Sunday school at present is expected very largely to take care of the great work of religious instruction. He concedes that, if properly equipped, it can exercise an immeasurable influence for good upon its pupils, leading many of them to Christ and enriching and ennobling their characters. But he holds that the Sunday school has a serious handicap in the fact that these influences touch vitally the life of the child for only a brief period each week; that they should be more continuous to reach the highest degree of efficiency and accomplish the largest results. He expresses the view that the time has come when there ought to be "readjustment of emphasis as between the Sunday school and the home," such as would bring them into a fuller co-operation and make them more adequately re-enforce each other.

As to how this can best be done he makes the following suggestion: That the Sunday school Board be merged with the Epworth League Board, and the two organized into a larger "Department of Religious Instruction," having general supervision of the teaching and training of our young people. In addition to the work now being done through the Sunday school and League, he would have an effort made to build up and render more potent the religious influences in the home. He thinks the creation of a vigorous literature looking to this end would probably exert a beneficial effect in this direction.

As to the amount of good that would result from the adoption of this scheme, we confess that we are somewhat in doubt. That the handicap in our Sunday school work of which Brother Lipscomb speaks is a real and unavoidable one, seems to us to be conclusive, and we are also of the opinion that the lack of effective home training is one of the greatest weaknesses of our twentieth century Christianity. But that a departmental readjustment would remedy the situation to any great extent, we are by no means convinced. It is our deep conviction that the one and only cure for nine-tenths of the ills that afflict the Church to-day is a deepening of the spiritual life of our people—a sweeping and widespread revival that will give religion its rightful place of ascendancy in the home, as well as in every other sphere of human activity. But the proposed change would have the merit of unifying our forces, lessening the amount of our machinery, and it might possibly prove to be a decidedly better arrangement than that now existing. At any rate, this suggestion is worth the careful consideration of our ecclesiastical statesmen.

THE SITUATION IN KOREA.

Dr. Cook, one of our missionary secretaries at Nashville, received a few days since the following cablegram from Dr. W. W. Pinson, who is in Korea: "Reports are encouraging. The judge has strong prejudice against the accused. Trial has been suspended pending a petition for the removal of the judge."

A long letter from Mr. J. L. Gerdine, one of our leading workers in Korea, was published in last week's Nashville Advocate. It represented the situation as being very grave, the methods of the authorities in proceeding against Dr. Yun and the other missionaries accused being high-handed and secretive. The testimony against them is stated to be very undependable, much of it having been obtained under duress.

Five representatives of Protestant Foreign Mission Boards had conferences in Washington with Government officials this week regarding the status of American missionaries in Korea and the conditions of Christians in that country. Bishop Candler of Georgia and Rev. Dr. Cook of Nashville, represented the Methodist Church, South.

The delegation called first upon Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, and then they saw the Secretary of State.

Mr. Knox summarized the conference, which lasted an hour and a half, as follows:

"The representatives of the Missionary Boards of the Presbyterian Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, North and South, called upon me this morning to express their deep interest and concern about the Korean Christians under arrest in Korea charged with conspiracy against the life of the Governor General. Their call was partly one of courtesy and was also to inform the department that, reports to the contrary, they had no complaint to make arising out of the Korean situation for diplomatic action upon the part of this Government. They said, however, that they would be glad to have the department advise them as to what they should do in the interest of their Korean friends involved in this trouble; to which I replied that they had been pursuing the correct course, in my judgment, by manifesting their solicitude for their friends in the Japanese Government through the Japanese Ambassador here."

THE SEASHORE ASSEMBLY FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

The Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers closed its fourteenth annual meeting at the Seashore Camp Ground last Monday night. An appropriate consecration service was conducted by Dr. F. S. Parker, after which the workers returned to their several homes feeling that they were better equipped for the important work of the Sunday school and Epworth League. Among the many distinguished speakers who addressed the Assembly were Drs. F. N. Parker, F. S. Parker, S. H. Werlein, A. F. Watkins, G. B. Winton, J. M. Henry, A. F. Smith and J. W. Moore, Andrew Sledd, and Judge Thomas, of Montgomery, Ala.

A forward step has been planned by which it is hoped more closely to affiliate the Assembly with the League Work in Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana. To this end Commissioners have been named from all but the North Alabama Conference, whose business it will be to attempt to interest the five Annual Conference Epworth League Boards in the three States in the Assembly, in order that it may accomplish greater good in the future. The officers for the next year include Dr. F. S. Parker, President; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Vice President; Miss Ellen Jackson, Secretary, and Rev. W. L. Doss, Treasurer.

NO VOTES ON CLUB RATE SUBSCRIPTIONS.

We have received a number of subscriptions to the Advocate at the club rate of $1.25 per year, and with the subscriptions were requests to cast the votes for certain candidates in our contest. By referring to the rules of the contest as published in the Advocate, May 30, it will be seen that no votes will be allowed except on renewals or new subscriptions paid for at the rate of $1.50 per year, except in cases of ministers or their widows, to whom we allow a special rate of $1 per year and to whom we grant one hundred votes on each year's subscription.

THE CHURCH EXTENSION HAND BOOK.

We are in receipt of the Church Extension Hand Book for 1912. Dr. McMurtry has always given us a good annual, but in this instance he has outstripped his former record. The volume is neatly bound, contains a full account of the proceedings of the Board, is aptly illustrated, and is brimful of interesting matter from the first page to the last. It shows what is being done under the leadership of our great Secretary to plant churches all over the country, and the achievements which it records are enough to make the heart of every loyal Methodist swell with gratitude and pride. Write Dr. W. F. McMurtry, 1025 Brook Street, Louisville, Ky., for a copy. Hours may be spent profitably with this informing book, which contains 528 pages.

COPY FOR THE ADVOCATE.

We desire again to ask persons who send us matter for publication to take the time and pains to put it in proper shape. They ought to endeavor to have it ready for the printer when it leaves their hands. When one speaks through the columns of the Advocate, one is addressing an audience of 25,000 or 30,000 people, and the utmost care should be exercised as to what is said and the manner of saying it. It is an unfair imposition upon the editor for contributors to expect him to do their punctuating, paragraphing, and often their spelling, besides frequently naming their articles and making them legible for the linotypist. The burden of this work is at times well-nigh overwhelming.

We wish also to state that, while we are pleased to receive communications for the paper, we prefer that they should be brief. Long articles take up too much space and are much less apt to be read. We have sometimes thought it would be well for a religious weekly never to carry a contribution more than a column and a half or two columns in length. At any rate, extended reports and lengthy discussions should be rare.

We will add that we can publish only a fraction of the matter that is sent us. If our paper were double its present size, we could not meet the demands made upon us for space. The best that we can do is to select from among the communications we receive those which we think are the most meritorious and important. In view of this fact, no person should feel offended if what he writes is not printed. Selfishly to insist that his copy should always be given the preference is both unchristian and unreasonable. The hard lesson for some to learn is that there are others with rights and claims equal to their own.

Rev. J. W. Booth, of Algiers, La., is spending this week in Baton Rouge, La., where he is engaged in revival work.

Prof. E. Y. Burton, of the chair of Mathematics and Astronomy at Millsaps College, left Jackson last week to join his family at Tulsa, Okla., where they will spend the remainder of the summer.

Rev. C. M. Chapman, the new President of Port Gibson Female College, is making an active canvass in behalf of that meritorious institution. He thinks the outlook is encouraging for a fine opening in September.

Rev. H. G. Roberts, our pastor at Crenshaw, Miss., who has been recuperating on the Gulf Coast, returned home last week. We trust that his season of rest has effected the complete restoration of his health.

We make grateful acknowledgement to Rev. W. W. Mitchell, our popular pastor at Oxford, Miss., for a nice list of subscribers. Our Church work is prospering at this intellectual center under Brother Mitchell's guiding hand.

Dr. F. S. Parker, who has been in constant attendance at the Seashore General Assembly, of which he is the president, has left Biloxi for Corpus Christi, Texas, where he will attend the great Texas Epworth League Conference.

On page 7 of this issue will be found a short advertisement sent in by Miss Berta Wall, of Forest Home, Ala., that is worth the notice of parents who may be contemplating securing a private teacher for their children.

Dr. Oscar Dowling, who as President of the Louisiana State Board of Health is making such an admirable record, is the son of an Alabama Southern Methodist preacher. Much of our country's best history has been made by sons of the parsonage.

Mr. Marion Morse, who is engaged in the practice of law at Gulfport, Miss., spent Sunday, July 21, with his father, Rev. J. M. Morse, in Jackson, Miss. Mr. Morse is a graduate of the Millsaps Law Department, and is a young attorney of much promise.

Rev. S. S. Bogan, of Sicily Island, assisted Rev. S. D. Howard, the pastor, in a meeting which began at Blackwater, La., on July 19. We have not yet learned the results of the meeting, but doubtless the people of Blackwater were greatly edified by the preaching of Brother Bogan.

Rev. J. M. Massey reports an interesting revival at Centerville, Miss., in which he had the assistance of Rev. I. L. Peebles and Rev. Ira B. Robertson. There were eight accessions and the membership of the church was greatly revived. A fuller account of the meeting will appear in our next issue.

Rev. T. J. Warlick, of Lake Charles, La., has just returned from Cooper's Wells, where he spent a pleasant vacation. Brother Warlick was somewhat run down in health before taking this season of rest, but is reported as having returned in splendid health. He will doubtless round out the year in good shape.

The Jackson News reports that Rev. W. W. Simmons, of Gloster, Miss., was at the Mississippi capital last week to see his brother who had there undergone an operation for appendicitis. We have had no later news from the stricken one, but we hope that ere this he is well on the way toward recovery.

Prof. H. B. Hines, who has been the Principal of the Abbeville, La., High School for the past two years and who is a local elder in our Church, honored this office with a brief call last Wednesday. We regret that we were not in at the time, and we hope that he will find another opportunity soon to look in on us at our sanctum.

Dr. J. M. Walmsley, who formerly was the Professor of History in Millsaps College, has been elected to a chair in the Winthrop Normal and Industrial College, at Rock Hill, S. C., which is one of the largest schools for young ladies in the South. Dr. Walmsley has been spending the summer studying at the University of Chicago.

We are pleased to note that Sister Wynn, wife of Rev. J. F. Wynn, of Crowley, an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, and the mother of Rev. R. H. Kynn, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, is convalescing from a serious attack of illness. May she fully recover, and may her life be spared to her honored husband and children for many years.

On July 7, a nine-pound baby girl arrived at the parsonage in North Carrollton, Miss., to make glad the hearts of her proud parents, Brother and Sister W. A. Bowlin. Brother Bowlin is now engaged in a meeting at Enon that promises success, and is planning to hold a tent meeting during August in North Carrollton, during which time he will have the assistance of Rev. L. W. Cain.

Dr. F. N. Parker is announced to fill the pulpit of the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, one Sunday in August. Dr. Parker has a host of friends in New Orleans, where he has spent most of his life, and he will doubtless be greeted by large audiences.

The pipe organ at the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church of this city, is being thoroughly overhauled. This work is expected to make it practically as good as new.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Vicksburg, spent last Sunday with Rev. R. T. Nolen at Anding, Miss., and is assisting him in a meeting there this week. Brother Saunders is in much demand for revival work.

The annual camp meeting at Topisaw, Miss., will begin August 9. Those from a distance desiring to attend these services should go by rail to McComb City, where they may secure conveyance to the camp ground.

There will be a camp meeting held at the Henington Camp Ground near Crystal Springs, Miss., beginning August 22 and lasting eight days. Rev. W. M. Sullivan and Rev. W. B. Hogg have been engaged as preachers for the occasion.

Rev. R. A. Gatlin, Field Agent for Whitworth College, assisted Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson in a meeting at Scooba, Miss., last week. The concluding services of the revival were to be conducted last Sunday by Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder of the Meridian District.

A note from Rev. W. D. Wendel, our pastor at Pontotoc, Miss., written on July 25, stated that the union meeting conducted there by Rev. Walt Holcomb was a great success, and that the indications pointed to 100 accessions to the Churches. He promised a more extended account for our columns later.

Rev. W. W. Holmes has recently closed a revival meeting at Hackley, La., where he assisted Rev. J. W. Harper, the pastor. The community surrounding the Hackley church is mostly composed of Christian men and women and a great ingathering was not expected, but the church was greatly revived during the meeting.

Rev. C. V. Breithaupt will be in his pulpit at Houma, La., next Sunday, at which time he will introduce as his helper in that important French mission field, Miss Iles, who was made a deaconess last May. Brother and Sister Breithaupt have been in Chicago for the past month, where Sister Breithaupt's health has been greatly improved as a result of having taken special medical treatment.

We are grieved to hear of the serious illness of Sister Crews, the faithful wife of Rev. B. T. Crews, of Rayne, La. On account of the serious condition of her health, Brother Crews has resigned his work and has moved to Shreveport, where he will make his future home. He was much loved by his people at Rayne, who rendered to him every possible assistance during the illness of his wife.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer has returned from the Denham Springs (La.) charge, where he has been assisting the pastor, Rev. R. V. Fulton, in a meeting at Live Oak Church. He reports having preached twice a day for a week and that many professed conversions and were added to the Church. Brother Fulton is closing his second year on the Denham Springs work, and is in great favor among his people.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir has just closed a very successful meeting at Estherwood, La., in which he had the assistance of Rev. Martin Hebert. Twenty-five were added to the Church, and the whole community was greatly benefitted. Perhaps there is not to be found a congregation of its size in Louisiana that comes nearer measuring up to its every opportunity of extending the kingdom of God than the one in Estherwood.

On July 21 Bishop W. B. Murrah dedicated the beautiful new church in Crawford, Miss. He is reported as having preached an intensely spiritual and powerful sermon on this occasion. Among the many visitors present were Dr. T. C. Weir, Rev. J. E. Thomas and Rev. W. C. Carlisle. Rev. J. Mark Guinn, the pastor, is to be commended for the wisdom and energy he has manifested in making ready for this dedicatory occasion.

A union meeting, to be participated in by the Methodists, Presbyterians and Campbellites, was commenced at Nettleton, Miss., to-day. The preaching will be done by Rev. W. H. Bowles, a Campbellite evangelist, of Evansville, Ill. This is the third summer in succession that such union services have been held, each denomination taking its turn in selecting a preacher for the occasion. A first-class choir director also is always arranged for.

Brother P. D. Hardin, of McComb City, informs us that Rev. R. S. Gale, pastor of the Summit and East McComb charge, is seriously ill at his home in Summit. He is receiving every attention that can be secured in the way of medical skill and trained nursing, yet his family and friends entertain some fears as to his recovery. Let earnest prayer be offered that this trusted messenger of the Lord may be spared to his family and to the Church.

Sister E. R. Kennedy, who has been an officer in the Woman's Missionary Society in Louisiana for many years and president of the united society since its existence as such in the Louisiana Conference, and who was recently chosen honorary life president at Natchitoches, is spending a few weeks with relatives in Mount Vernon, N. Y., where correspondents may address her. The Lafayette Church, of which she is an active member, finds her place hard to fill while she is away on her summer vacation.

We were delighted to receive last Monday morning a letter from Brother J. D. Barhee, written with his own hand and posted at Rochester, Minn., on July 25. He stated that he was extremely weak and quite thin, but that he was hoping the physicians would dismiss his case that day. We are happy to know that our friend is considered out of danger and that he will soon be able to journey southward. We feel sure that the bracing mountain air of the Old North State will soon work wonders for him.

Elsewhere in the Advocate is published an announcement by Rev. H. R. Singleton that Dr. S. A. Steel will lecture in Parker Memorial Church, New Orleans, in Ruston, Shreveport, New Iberia and many other points in Louisiana. All who have heard Dr. Steel lecture know that he ranks with the best as a lecturer and orator. His powers of description and ability to make his auditors see with his eyes are truly wonderful. Louisiana Methodists, who are afforded the opportunity, should not fail to hear Dr. Steel next fall.

In writing to this office, Brother J. H. Foreman, pastor of the Bogue Chitto (Miss.) charge says: "The home of Brother D. B. McCollom was made sad and lonely on Tuesday, July 23, by the death of his wife. She leaves to mourn her going besides her husband, two small children, a father, mother, brothers and sisters and a host of friends." We are sorry to hear of this sad bereavement. May the stricken family and loved ones find consolation in this sad hour in Him who "is touched by the feelings of our infirmities."

Mrs. D. B. Fullington, a much beloved member of our Church at West Point, Miss., was stricken with apoplexy on July 26, and died shortly afterwards. She was 59 years old, and had been a consistent and devoted Methodist from childhood. The press dispatches state that she had served as organist of our church in the city where she lived for forty-five years, which is certainly a remarkable record. The obsequies were conducted last Saturday afternoon by Rev. E. S. Lewis and Rev. W. M. Campbell in the presence of a large gathering of friends and acquaintances. We extend sympathy to the bereaved.

The heavy rains, which made the roads impassable and greatly retarded farming operations, have caused a falling off in the results of church work in North Mississippi. Especially has this been true in the Aberdeen District, but the energetic presiding elder, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, is doing all he can to aid his preachers in overcoming the effects of the unfavorable seasons. He will spend the entire month of August in the charges that need him most, and we doubt not that his presence among the brethren will be greatly appreciated and that he will do much toward helping them bring up creditable reports.

From the Jackson Daily News of July 22; we take the following: "Bishop W. B. Murrah and Mrs. Murrah will leave Wednesday over the Illinois Central for Chicago, from whence they will make the journey to the Golden Gate of San Francisco Bay, from which the Bishop expects to sail early in August for the Orient. Bishop Murrah expects to be absent and busily engaged with missions in the Far East for several months, and does not expect to return to the United States until early in the coming year. He is one of Jackson's most popular and lovable citizens, and leaves with the heartiest wishes of all in the community for a successful mission and a safe return with his charming wife."

The Woman's City Mission Board of New Orleans decided at its meeting on Wednesday, July 24, to conduct the St. Mark's Mission in its present quarters for another year, the owner of the property agreeing to make certain needed repairs. There had been some talk of procuring another place for the work, and the old Girls' High School building situated in the same neighborhood was under consideration for a time. There will be no meeting of the City Board in August, but the regular meeting in September will be held at the Mary Werlein Mission, where a reading room has been provided, which it is desired that all members of the Board should see. Dr. J. W. Moore, the superintendent of the mission work connected with First Church, will arrange for the formal opening of the room at that time.

On April 22 the soul of little ANNIE BELL WALKER took its flight to the spirit land where God and all his saints dwell. She was two years and six months old. She was a sweet and affectionate child, and all who knew her loved her. Weep not, dear papa and mamma, for your loss is her eternal gain. She awaits your coming at the judgment seat of God, where there will be no more parting, and where you may dwell in peace and happiness for ever and ever.

R. C. KENNEDY, P. C.

On July 9 the death angel visited the home of Brother Willie Whitner, of Brannfield, Miss., and took from it the only child, little J. B. WHITNER. He was one year and ten months old, and was as sweet as a child could be. Every one who knew him loved him, but God saw fit to take him unto himself. God bless the bereaved ones and help them to meet their little one in the great beyond, where there will be no more sorrow.

R. C. KENNEDY, P. C.

AUNT DOROTHY HAMMETT passed to her eternal home on June 28, at the ripe old age of 84 years, 3 months and 14 days. Aunt Dolly, as she was called, joined the M. E. Church, South, in early life and lived a devoted, helpful life. Her work for the Master is done, and she has gone to her heavenly home. She was the oldest member on the Wesley Circuit. Before she died she expressed a willingness to go; then thanking her son and family for the many kindnesses they had shown her, she quietly waited with joyous anticipation her translation. Rev. J. H. Montgomery conducted her funeral. May her children meet her in that home on high.

THOMAS J. MARTIN, P. C.

MRS. ADDIE GARDNER DANIEL, the subject of this sketch, was born June 2, 1886, and died June 16, 1912. She joined the Methodist Church in Fernwood, Miss., under the ministry of Rev. W. W. Simmons, March 11, 1906, and was a consistent member of the same during the years of her Christian life. For a long time she was the faithful and efficient secretary of the Sunday school, and was also a member of the Woman's Missionary Society. Miss Addie, as everyone called her, had an amiable disposition and was admired by a host of friends. She was steady and sober-minded, and absolutely free from the giddy, shallow frivolity characteristic of many young women. She was happily married to Mr. Fred Daniel May 29, 1912, just two weeks and three days before her death. Little did the writer think that night when it was his privilege to unite this happy young couple in the bonds of holy matrimony, that the bride was so near the end of her journey on earth. Truly do we realize that "when we are in the midst of life," we are also "in the midst of death." That Sister Daniel was highly esteemed on earth and greatly mourned after passing away was evidenced by the large concourse of people who crowded the Church at the funeral service and who gathered around her grave at the cemetery. She died at peace with God and left to her family the legacy of a good name, which is "rather to be chosen than great riches."

Her pastor, D. SCARBOROUGH.

IN MEMORIAM.

On May 20, 1912, SAMUEL ELIAS COMEAUX passed suddenly from time into eternity. Surely, with him "Sudden death was sudden glory." He was born at Baton Rouge, La., April 14, 1872. The writer of this reminiscence was a close personal friend of this servant of God. We were connected as brothers, indeed, in church and church work. A nobler, truer soul never lived. To know him was to love him. My first acquaintance with him began in a mission work started in Baton Rouge about twenty-five years ago. I suppose about the year 1885. The mission originated in a cottage prayer meeting and grew into a regular mission point, with a Sunday school combined. For a number of years this mission was domiciled alternately in the homes of Brother and Sister Coates, and Brother and Sister Bryan. The writer found this work a great blessing to him, and it proved a blessing to many others, one preacher being sent out from its ranks—Brother S. S. Bogan, now a member of the Mississippi Conference. Brother Comeaux became interested in the mission and was one of its staunchest supporters. He was truly in earnest, willing to pray, to hold gospel services and to give his testimony whenever opportunity was offered. He always stood firmly for what he believed to be right, and I can say that this was a leading characteristic with him at all times. When he fell, he fell with his face heavenward. He was advised to apply for local preacher's license, which he did, and filled the office well and faithfully to the end. He was also Sunday school superintendent and one of the stewards of the Second M. E. Church, South, and was president of the Epworth League. The dear brother will be sadly missed by that faithful band of workers. It was mainly through his efforts that the Second Methodist Church was built, and he was, indeed, the main-spring of its life and success. We loved each other. In after years I was employed by him in his store and was treated by him and his dear family with the greatest kindness and consideration. Nothing was too good for their friends. Time rolled on and we were separated. I moved with my family to Mississippi—my present home. We kept in touch with each other; there was no severing of the brotherly ties existing between us. I would hear of his faithful life and purpose in well doing. It might be said that he kept store for a living, but his real business was to be religious. If his books were inspected to-day you would find that he kept a strict tithe account with and for the dear Lord. Brother Comeaux was self-made, he came up through many difficulties, being a poor boy, left with only the support of a widowed mother (an excellent Christian woman), who laid the foundation for the noble Christian man into which he developed. He has left a devoted wife (formerly Miss Emma Fredericks, to whom he was married on December 11, 1890), and ten children to mourn what might seem to us an untimely loss. He leaves a host of friends, both in the Church and community. He was a member of Live Oak Camp No. 14, Woodman of the World, where he was held in high esteem by his brother members. But I must close this article. I could go on enumerating bright and good things, and then could not do justice to his blessed memory. I thank God that it was my privilege to know him, and look forward to a happy reunion in the blessed heavenly home. Our sincere and heart-felt sympathies are extended to his dear family, and our prayers will continue to go up to the All Loving and Merciful Heavenly Father in

Tidings From the Field

Byhalia, Miss.

We are serving a royal people on the Byhalia charge, and the work is progressing nicely. Congregations are good, Sunday schools are flourishing and a fine spirit pervades the charge.

At our third quarterly Conference, recently held, reports were better than had been expected. Rev. R. A. Tucker, our presiding elder, is in fine favor here, both as a preacher and presiding officer. It is a constant source of delight and profit to be associated with Rev. R. M. Davis and his family, who reside here. We have reported a number of additions to the church already, and are planning for revival meetings soon. Mr. Editor, you are cordially invited to visit us at your convenience.

W. G. BURKS.

Vinton, La.

Brother Sam Holiday, assisted by the pastor, Rev. A. J. Bonnett, has just closed a ten-days' meeting in the Vinton Methodist Church. Twenty-one were received into the Church and all the Christians in the church were greatly revived under the inspired preaching of this man of God, whose all-absorbing thought is to lead men and women to Christ. He expressed a burning desire that all the followers of Christ should allow their profession and practice to go hand in hand. May God help us to do that. A few Christians from other denominations encouraged us with their presence and their prayers. May God bless them. The limits of one church could not contain Brother Holiday's great heart, which went out in yearning love and fellowship to all Christians. His earnest appeals, hallowed by the light of peace, faith, hope, and holy resignation shining from his face were, indeed, powerfully potent in leading his hearers into a higher and nobler Christian life. Though the weather was warm, we had fine congregations, and much good was done. May this man of God, who made such earnest appeals to the people of Vinton, live long to preach the gospel to a dying world.

MRS. R. M. DAVIS.

New Albany, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek:

We have just closed a great union revival meeting here, the preaching having been done by Rev. Curtis S. Shugart, a Baptist evangelist from Birmingham, Ala. His leader of song was J. M. Springfield, of the same place, who is a Methodist preacher. They are a fine combination; Brother Springfield sings, prays, talks and leads, preaches to the children, and is a stirring, whole-souled, capable worker. Brother Shugart is one of the sanest, safest evangelists I have ever seen. He has been a terribly wicked and lost sinner, but now God is using him to save many another from the snare. He has no objectionable, clap-trap methods by which he springs sensations and works people up into a phrensy of excitement, but he preaches the old gospel interpreted in the light of modern facts and conditions, and runs the motive and power of a Christian life into every day living and business affairs. He knows his business as an ambassador of the King, and he knows men. You don't hear him but a little while till you will feel that his great soul is on fire with moral earnestness and compassion for lost men.

All churches and Christians went into the meeting to do something for God. As a result, the town and surrounding country had a great awakening. Nineteen joined the Methodist Church; about nineteen or twenty the Baptist Church, and four or five the Presbyterian Church. Nearly all our people felt the need of godliness and righteousness in their life, character and business, that all might come to the worthiest, happiest and truest issues in the now and by and by.

L. M. LIPSCOMB.

A NOTE FROM PELAHATCHIE.

Dear Dr. Meek:

On last Saturday Dr. W. B. King died suddenly. He was a local deacon, but never preached much. He was best known as a physician, and probably his best work was when he preached at Trenton, Miss., from twenty to forty years ago. He was about seventy-eight years of age. The writer conducted the funeral service Sunday morning, assisted by Brother Roberts, the Baptist pastor. He leaves a widow and several children.

We have lost three Sunday school superintendents in less than a year by removals from our town. At present I act as superintendent, and am glad to say the school is doing well. Since the revival here, conducted by the Baptist pastor, our young men have taken hold of the prayer meeting, and when needed, conduct it in turn. It is truly encouraging to see our young men at work as they are.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, our P. C., is in his fourth year. We are sorry at the thought of losing him. He is growing on the people all the time. I do not see how a pastor could be more faithful than he is. We are delighted with the election of Dr. A. F. Watkins to the presidency of Millsaps College.

RESOLUTIONS AGAINST WORLDLINESS.

Adopted by the Aberdeen District Conference, July 18, 1912.

Whereas, There is a growing tendency to worldliness in the Church, and a disregard of Church vows; and,

Whereas, Bishop Morrison's presence and admonitions have pointed out the spiritual peril of worldliness, and that this evil may be cured by a wise, painstaking administration of discipline; therefore, be it

Resolved by the Aberdeen District Conference here assembled, that we heartily concur with the Bishop in his position and views, and that we hereby pledge ourselves as ministers and laymen to faithfully administer the discipline of the Church, courageously, but humbly and in the fear of God, with the interest of souls upon our hearts and consciences, and with the hope that great grace may be upon the whole district, that worldliness may be purged from the Church, and a great revival come to all our people.

GEORGE J. MORTIMER DEAD.

Brother George J. Mortimer has gone home. Many of your older readers knew him well. For fifty years he was a subscriber and devoted reader of the Advocate, and an occasional contributor to its columns. He passed away July 11th, in his 84th year.

Visitors to the Hennington Camp Meeting at Crystal Springs will miss his familiar face, for he was a regular attendant at these meetings for many years, and none enjoyed them more than he.

Blessings upon the bereaved widow and children.

MEETING OF THE MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Monroe District Conference met in Calhoun, Louisiana, July 9th, 1912. Nearly all the preachers and a goodly number of laymen were present. It had been feared that the attendance would be small this year on account of the overflow and other causes in certain sections of the District, but a large number responded at the first roll call and others came in later.

The death of Dr. Keener has thrown a shadow over the entire district, and when the brethren assembled for the first session of the Conference there was a deep feeling of loneliness and sorrow as they realized that the familiar face of this loyal servant of the Church would be seen no more in this life. Brother Schnhle, in his opening remarks to the Conference, expressed the heartfelt sentiments of the people of this district when he spoke of the faithful and earnest service of Dr. Keener. It was a most solemn hour of the Conference when the Committee on Memoirs read its report on the death of Dr. Keener and those who had known him for years expressed their great love for him and admiration for his splendid service; and then with tear-stained eyes they joined in singing, "Jesus Lover of My Soul."

The Conference was presided over by Rev. Wm. Schnhle, recently appointed by Bishop Monzon presiding elder of the Monroe District. He conducted the business with ease and dignity and impressed everyone as being well qualified for this great work. By his modest, brotherly spirit he has already won his way into the hearts of the people of this district. The brethren predict for him a useful career as presiding elder.

The reports from the various charges indicated that our Church is in a discouraging condition at some places. Following the overflow the farmers began planting corn and cotton, but in just a short time the "army worm" made its appearance, making it impossible to raise a crop of any sort this year. In the charges not affected by the overflow the situation is more encouraging. The pastors are planning for an aggressive campaign and are now in the midst of their revival meetings. With all the discouragements the preachers are looking forward to a rich harvest of souls. Brother Staple's stated that while his charge had suffered greatly from the high water, the people seemed more interested in the Church. Perhaps this may be the one ray of light that will draw people closer to God.

It was a source of much regret when the Conference learned of the illness of Rev. H. O. White. He has been forced to give up his charge, which is being supplied by Rev. S. B. Colvin and D. C. Barr. Brother White was able to attend the Conference for one day. In a speech that was full of devotion to the Church and gratitude to God for having been permitted to spend so many years in the ministry, he urged the younger brethren to give themselves faithfully and earnestly to the work of the ministry.

A number of visitors favored the Conference with their presence, among whom were: Rev. C. B. Carter, of the Alexandria District; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Sunday School Missionary Secretary; Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan, Superintendent of the Orphanage; V. L. Fulton, Lay Leader of the Louisiana Conference; R. E. Bobbitt, President of Mansfield Female College; Rev. A. I. Townsley, of Acadia, representing the State Epworth League Conference, and Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Boston, representing the Missionary Department of the Sunday school. All these brethren made speeches, and good ones.

The Woman's Missionary Society was represented by a large delegation of women from Monroe, and the Conference was favored with an address by Mrs. S. S. Keener. There are not many missionary societies in this district, but it is hoped that the way will soon be open for this good work.

The laymen elected as their delegates to the Annual Conference at Monroe, Robt. O. Randle, W. L. Calhoun, C. M. Noble and C. H. Peavy; alternates, W. R. Baker and G. F. Shepherd. Robt. O. Randle was elected lay leader for the district.

The good people of Calhoun were untiring in their efforts to entertain the Conference. Their homes were thrown open and every visitor was given a cordial welcome. A feature of the entertainment that was specially enjoyed was the dinner served every day in a large hall built by the Woman's Civic League of Calhoun. It was a real dinner, too, and afforded the brethren a splendid opportunity for social fellowship.

The Conference adjourned Thursday afternoon, July 11th, to meet next year in Bastrop. A. F. VAUGHAN, Secretary.

RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Ruston District Conference convened at Gibbsland, La., on July 17 and 18, with the presiding elder, R. W. Tucker, in the chair. On the night of July 16, E. K. Means, of Minden, preached a thought-provoking sermon which was a key-note for the entire session. In opening the devotional exercises on the first day of the Conference the presiding elder urged the necessity of having a revival spirit in our charges in order to meet the exigencies of the times. The Conference throughout was a harmonious meeting in which many took part in the various discussions. The attendance upon the Conference was very good, especially on the part of the laymen, an unusually large number being present.

Every part of the Church work was carefully considered. In a number of charges a marked increase of interest was noted and a large number of gracious revivals were reported. Likewise several new churches have been built. The cause of the orphanage at Ruston was presented by R. W. Vaughan, who said the institution was in a flourishing condition and all we needed was the full co-operation of the brethren in raising the entire assessment. The Sunday school interest was presented by our Field Agent, P. O. Lowrey, in a well chosen address on "The Standard of Excellence for Every Sunday School." He also had with him a most excellent exhibit of Sunday school paraphernalia which was well worth a trip to the District Conference to see.

Prof. R. E. Bobbitt, president of Mansfield Female College, delivered an address on "The Need for Christian Education among Girls," in which he presented the claims of our own Conference College in a striking way which met the approval of all those who heard him.

V. L. Fulton, of Shreveport, the Lay Leader of the Annual Conference, presented in a satisfactory manner "The Laymen's Movement and What it should Mean to our Individual Churches." Here is a layman who has caught the vision and is applying it in his own charge and endeavoring by every possible means to stir up other churches and laymen to their full duty in evangelizing the world in this generation. Well would it be, if every charge would apply the methods suggested by this fully informed layman.

It was a gracious privilege for the Conference to have the presence, the wise council and the fatherly oversight of one of our most venerable superannuated preachers, Dr. J. A. Parker. The sermon he preached on the morning of the last day showed that he was still as vigorous in thought and clear-cut in the statement of great Biblical truths as ever he was. But he feels that he cannot stand the physical strain of much preaching. The communion service that followed this sermon was a great benediction to many hearts.

This makes the fourth year on the district for the ever faithful presiding elder, R. W. Tucker, who has been constantly diligent to bring the work of the Kingdom up to the highest standard. During his quadrennium there has been a marked advance on all lines and he will leave the district carrying with him the best wishes of every charge into which he has gone. By his lofty and soul-stirring sermons he has won the hearts of the people and he has seen Zion to prosper under his leadership.

The local preachers had their licenses renewed and those in orders had their characters passed. Joe W. Tucker and F. L. Tucker were licensed to preach and recommended for admission on trial into the Annual Conference. This makes three of Brother Tucker's sons who have entered the Methodist ministry. The young men begin with bright prospects and will no doubt in due time give a good account of themselves in the ranks of the itinerant ministry.

W. T. Woodward, who is doing fine work on the Bienville charge, was recommended for re-admission.

The Licensing Committee for the remainder of the Conference year are: W. J. Porter, W. H. Coleman, J. C. Price and L. A. Humphries.

R. T. McClendon was elected District Lay Leader. Athens was chosen as the next place of meeting. R. T. McClendon, J. L. Lay, A. Driggers and C. H. Henry were elected as lay delegates to the Annual Conference. Others who preached were W. H. Coleman and A. S. Lutz.

The people of Gibbsland proved themselves charming and most hospitable hosts, and the pastor, A. H. Parker, was untiring in his efforts to make the Conference a success in every way. ALBERT S. LUTZ, Secretary.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES

By E. P. Lott.

LAST WEEK had the following staff: Business Men's Class taught by Mr. E. P. Lott; Men's Class taught by Mr. E. P. Lott; Women's Class taught by Mrs. E. P. Lott; Young People's Class taught by Mr. J. E. Key. In every respect this is one of our best Sunday schools. Mr. E. P. Lott, for a number of years one of our traveling preachers, being the superintendent.

The question of saving the home and changing the environment of our people is one of no little importance. The child is not saved until he is saved on Monday as well as on Sunday, at home just as at church. Here, after all, that time at the church is the time that should be used, and not the meetings properly conducted, which do much good. Who among our home department superintendents is going enough to make a definite plan along this line? A dirty, fly-infested home, with no music, nor good reading, nor happy social environment, is a fit place to get young disciples of Christ. If we expect them to develop princely Christian character.

In the Cuba special, which is being raised by our Epworth Leagues to finance our mission work in Cuba, the Lake Charles League has six shares at $10 per share, and the young people have great delight in contributing this to the extension of Christ's Kingdom. Some such good work might be done by any of our Bible classes. How about educating a poor boy or girl, or a preacher or a missionary? These Leagues teach and some practice the Scriptural law of tithing, and so their giving is by principle rather than by impulse.

The apostle Paul in 1 Cor. 12:21 recognized the importance of having the service of every member of the body, the Church, even to the most "uncomely parts." This principle has its counterpart in the Sunday school's need of the most insignificant of its working members, especially in a workers' council. Some of our schools are dead or dying for lack of our superintendents, pastors, officers and teachers getting together in a teachers' council of some kind. The weak points could be strengthened, if only they had a united wisdom and co-operation. The genius who can run a successful school long by himself is rare.

A young lady who had visited in Texas for five months reported that she "never saw such a dead Epworth League." She said, "They never had a social meeting while I was there." As man cannot live by bread alone, so adolescents cannot attain their normal development and divine heart cravings upon the devotional meetings of League or class alone, but must have fellowship and activity, such as is provided in our Adult Bible Class programs of organization when properly carried out. Doubtless this young lady might have had an experience similar to that in Texas, had she spent five months in places where some of our Louisiana organized Bible Classes exist.

Our city and larger town Adult classes have a fine field for the social committee's work in supplying the social needs of the down-town hoarding house boys and girls, who have but little opportunity to meet one another unless some such provision is made. The girls have no parlors into which to invite their friends, and if they keep company at all, it must be while walking the streets or strolling in the parks. What a blessing if the Church can help them in this very important need, in bringing them together and in exercising a watch care over them! What class in Louisiana will lead in this field of service?

NEWS AND NOTES

By Miss Elizabeth Knapton.

There has never been such a wide spread and beautiful Sunday school movement in our Conference as now exists; and it is confidently believed that we can, with more prayer and organization, equal any Conference in the Church in Sunday school work.

The First Methodist Church of Corinth, observed Children's Day Sunday, July 14, and surely children were never loved so sweetly and more uplifting. Miss Laura Price and Mrs. Gibson, two of Superintendent Warriner's capable teachers, did all the training, and Mrs. A. M. Weaver presided at the piano.

Rev. Thomas Mills, of Kossuth, is preparing for an all-day picnic and lobby for all of his churches, and especially for his Sunday schools, on July 24. He wants to promote good fellowship, get all the people well acquainted, and generate a fine uplifting spirit of Sunday school enthusiasm. There are to be several short, pointed speeches from special Sunday school workers.

Miss Carrie Bowie writes from McCord of a fine preparation and enthusiasm for Children's Day, and a severe epidemic of whooping cough that destroyed all prospects for an immediate celebration of that day. When such unforeseen difficulties arise, just take a good collection for Children's Day and send it on to Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss., and that will keep your charge from being blank at Conference.

Mr. S. B. White, the progressive superintendent of the West Point Sunday School, sends in a report to delight the heart of every Methodist. There are 625 church members, and 550 of them are connected with the Sunday school in its various departments. Their aim is to have as many, at least, in Sunday school as there are on the church roll, and this will be speedily accomplished. Mrs. Clisby has a great Wesley adult class, called the Clisby Class, in her honor. On February 4th, they had 18 members, and had 145 on July 7. They had 128 present on a very inclement day recently. Their printed matter is attractive and up-to-date, and the members are interested and ready to assist their fine teacher in all her plans for them.

The small Sunday school has the two supreme things in educational equipment. These are the small class and the impassioned personality of the teacher. In the small class the thoughtful teacher often comes in close personal contact with each pupil, and if thoroughly consecrated, such a person is the most effective worker in the world. Equipment is a vital accessory, but it is a secondary matter to personality in education. People count most, not just books or chairs or brick and mortar. Some of the greatest educational, as well as spiritual and nation-felt achievements have been won in small rooms, small churches, and on rough benches.

The average school enrolls 96 pupils and officers, and the average attendance does not always reach 70. The real problem, therefore, is the small school, and the question arises, Is the Sunday school small from neglect, or on account of its situation? The answer can be as readily found as the least trace of fever can be detected by a thermometer. Many country homes are really lonely and the enrollment of any or all in any department of the Sunday school is a very helpful way to bind them to the church. Dr. McElfresh sums up the advantages of a small school in this wise: "The small school may be a successful school, a complete school, an enthusiastic school. It may be prompt in hours, reverent in worship, dignified and joyful in its song, educational in its teachings, helpful in Social service in its community, successful in winning its pupils to Christ, and strong in building character."

TRE ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The forty-third session of the Aberdeen District Conference, which convened in the Methodist Church at Houston, Miss., Tuesday morning, July 16th, and adjourned Thursday afternoon, July 18, was said by many to be the very best District Conference they had ever attended, and by all to have been a most inspiring and uplifting session. There was no discord; nothing but harmony and a spirit of brotherly love were manifest throughout the entire three days of the Conference, and those who attended went back to their homes and churches to do more and better work for the cause of Christ.

Bishop H. C. Morrison was present and presided over the Conference. His sermons on "The Spirit of the World," Romans 12:2, and "Our Likeness toward God," St. Matthew 5:44-45, were inspiring and uplifting discourses, and were filled with the power of God unto salvation. Those who have heard the Bishop in other days say that he is still a growing preacher. His presence was a blessing and a benediction to us, and his kindly spirit of brotherly love will be long remembered by all.

Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, was present throughout the Conference, and while in his report he had to say bad things about the weather and roads, he had only good things to say of the preachers in his district. He does his best to love all his men, and they cannot help loving him, thus it is seen that there is a happy condition existing in the District. When called to the chair by the Bishop he showed that he could preside there as naturally as over a quarterly conference, and the conference was proud of him.

It is doubtful if any district conference ever had any better preaching throughout than this one. The preachers seemed to forget where they were, and just preached, and did it well. Brother W. O. Wagoner, of Shannon, preached Monday night on the duty of Christians to serve their generation. Some say that Wagoner is a "progressive." Brother W. M. Young preached Tuesday morning on "Fruit-bearing," and his sermon will not soon be forgotten by those who heard it. Brother H. M. Ellis, our Hospital Agent, preached Tuesday night, stressing our duty to others. At the close of his sermon the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered, and the service closed with the benediction. Brother J. T. Lewis preached Wednesday night, his subject being "Faith." Rev. W. D. Wendel preached a sermon on "An Efficient Ministry" Thursday morning. His subject was chosen for him by the presiding elder, who wished it presented to the Conference, but Brother Wendel handled it as though he, himself, had chosen it from among a thousand other subjects. Bishop Morrison preached Wednesday morning and Thursday night.

Rev. W. L. Duren, President of the Conference Board of Missions, W. S. Lagrone, representing the Church Extension Board, Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick, Field Secretary of the Sunday School Board, Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Orphans' Home, Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College, and Rev. H. M. Ellis, of the Tri-State Methodist Hospital, were present and represented their work to the Conference. Mrs. T. M. Clark, of Verona, and Mrs. A. L. Roberts, of Amory, District Secretary of the Woman's Mission Society, presented the work being done by the W. M. S. The Bishop arose at the close of their addresses, and in a short talk commendatory of their work characterized as a "fossil" the Methodist preacher of this day who is not in sympathy with their work and activity in the Church. He urged the preachers to see that every charge in the District had at least one Woman's Missionary Society.

Of course, Brother Bachman was present with the latest and best books. It is possible to have a District Conference without a Bishop or even the presiding elder present, but none of us know anything of a District Conference with Brother Bachman absent. He is an important feature of the Conference, and we hope he will be spared to come to us many years yet. Other visitors to the Conference were: J. H. Felts, of Corinth, and W. L. Broom, of the Holly Springs Circuit.

The various committees appointed did their work well and faithfully. One, Rev. David Richard McDougal, was recommended for admission on trial into the Annual Conference; three, Oleria Beckham, R. B. Craig, and Robert Thomas Hollingsworth, were granted licenses to preach. The committee on local preachers reported that several local preachers had removed to other districts. They reported that L. G. Akers asked that his license be not renewed, and reported unfavorably on J. M. Davenport, local elder. The Conference instructed the presiding elder to demand his credentials. The licenses of the other local preachers in the district were renewed, and the characters of the local elders and deacons passed. The following committee on license to preach was elected: J. H. Holder, T. J. Durrett, A. W. Langley, and D. R. McDougal.

P. W. Snell, Dr. S. H. Lawrance, W. A. Boone, and W. T. Reaves were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, and Fred McDonald, Jr., and Dr. C. B. Baker were elected alternates.

Brother Neblett is a fine host, and saw to it that all had homes the moment they arrived in the town. And more hospitable people than those of Houston would be hard to find. The assistant pastor, Sister Neblett, had her share in the work of entertaining the Conference, and did it well, and little Robert Paine, Jr., shook hands like a veteran. The music throughout the Conference was delightful. In the face of all these things, it is hard to vote for the Conference to go to a different place, especially when the people of Houston said, "Come back," but Verona said that they had wanted it, and had not had it in a long time, so it was voted to go there. Verona and Houston were not the only places who wanted it, either.

After the final adjournment of the Conference, the ladies of the church tendered the members of the Conference and the visitors an informal reception, at which Bishop Morrison, J. R. Countiss, P. W. Shell, J. W. Bell, and Brother Bachman spoke briefly and happily. At the conclusion of these speeches, a hymn was sung, the benediction pronounced, and as the guests dispersed they were served with delightful refreshments, the Conference ending in this happy manner.

GREAT REVIVAL AT TUTWILER, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek:

A great meeting has just closed at Tutwiler, the results of which cannot be estimated this side of eternity. Nineteen members joined the Methodist Church, three joined the Presbyterian Church, and two the Baptist Church. Men of prominence in business and social circles were led to Christ and joined the Church; men who had been enemies for years "buried the hatchet" and embraced each other; crowds, such as had never attended a meeting in this part of the Delta before, gath-

WINONA DISTRICT NEWS ITEMS.

The following interesting notes from the Winona District are taken from a business letter from the efficient presiding elder, Rev. Ben P. Jacob, which bears date of July 24th: "Rev. S. L. Pope is beaming with joy because he will enter the new church at Itta Bena next Sunday. Greenwood has plans on foot for a considerable improvement of the church and parsonage buildings. Good revivals have recently been held in the Belzoni, Inverness, Webb, Minter City, Indianola, Lambert, and Tutwiler charges. Dr. Price and Brother Cain have done extraordinary work for Methodism at Tutwiler. Brother J. W. Raper, who was sick for some time and had an operation, is improving, but his son, Paul, has continued fever."

DR. STEEL TO LECTURE.

Dear Dr. Meek:

Rev. S. A. Steel, D. D., one of the most brilliant men on the American platform of to-day, is engaged for a series of lectures at Parker Memorial Church, in this city, during October. He is also to lecture at Shreveport, Ruston, New Iberia and a number of other points in the State—25 lectures in all. If any preacher or church wishes one of these lectures, I will be glad to take the matter up with them. In my own church the lectures are paid for by subscription in advance, the doors are thrown open to everyone, and a free-will offering taken.

In other places the same plan is followed, while others charge admission and sell tickets, sometimes making a considerable sum of money. Dr. Steel's "Pioneers of Methodism," delivered to a full house in any community, will do good, while his "Home Life in Dixie during the War" is the peer of any lecture I ever heard.

A REVIVAL AT STONEWALL, MISS.

Dear Brother Meek: I don't often, in fact, I never did, write anything concerning the meetings I have held, but there are some things concerning this one that are worthy of special mention. Early in the year I was invited by Brother B. W. Lewis to assist in a meeting at Stonewall. From the first it was evident that Brother Lewis had things well in hand and ready for the real revival which was the result of the meeting. There were some things in this meeting which reminds one of the wonderful manifestations of the Holy Spirit in the early days of Methodism where people really and truly died to sin. One woman, of considerable social standing, said to us while kneeling at the altar, just before the light of heaven came into her soul, "I believe I'm dying." It was but a moment until it was very evident that she was not dead, but very much alive unto God. The last two days were days of unusual liberty and power. Brother Lewis is, indeed, a fine man to work for, one who keeps a keen eye on every phase of the meeting and conserves every interest. Nothing is lost by Lewis; he follows up each service with tact and Godly judgment. Some of the visible results are seen in an increased attendance at Sunday school and prayer meetings; in fact, all departments of the church were quickened. There were fourteen accessions to the Church and the pastor's salary was raised five dollars per month. After having remembered us with a nice offering, about three weeks after the meeting a committee, headed by the pastor, drove up to the parsonage with a nice, rolling chair for each of our precious girls, the gifts of the good people (irrespective of denomination) of Stonewall.

Doctor, when kindness goes beyond you and into the sacred precincts of the afflicted room, it leaps beyond the power of speech and gratitude; for such kindness can only be expressed in tears—tears known only to those of like burdens who are the recipients of such kindness. In the words of the Master I would say to Brother Lewis and the good people of Stonewall, "In as much as ye did it unto the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me." C. M. CROSBY.

Meridian, Miss.

This is how Bodi-Tone wants to be tried by old and young, this is how it wants to prove its curative powers. If Bodi-Tone benefits you as it has thousands, pay us a dollar for it. If not, don't pay a penny.

Bodi-Tone

does just what its name means—cures disease by toning up the body, and we want you to try a box at our risk and see what it will do for your body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round tablet, that is taken three times every day. Each box contains seventy-five of these tablets, enough for twenty-five days' use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so that you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how it works in the body, how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ of the body. Bodi-Tone is a little word, but it means a great deal, everything in health. When all the organs are doing their part, when each is acting in a perfectly natural way, when all the functions are healthy and performed with natural vigor, when the energy, strength and power of resistance to disease are all at a natural point, then the body is in proper tone. When disease has attacked any part, the tone of the entire physical body should be raised to the highest point, to make all the body help to cure. This is the power which Bodi-Tone offers you to help you get new health.

Not a Patent Medicine

Bodi-Tone is not a patent medicine, for its ingredients are not a secret. It contains Iron Phosphate, Gentian, Lithia, Chinese Rhubarb, Peruvian Bark, Nux Vomica, Oregon Grape Root, Cascara, Capsicum, Sarsaparilla and Golden Seal. Such valuable ingredients guarantee its merit and power.

When you use Bodi-Tone you know just what you are using, know it is good and safe and know you are taking the kind of medicine to provide real help for the body. It contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs, nothing that your own family doctor will not endorse and say is a good thing. It does not depend on killing pain with cocaine, opium, morphine, or other dangerous drugs. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures its disorders with remedies Nature intended to tone and cure the body when that power was given them. Thus, Iron gives life and energy to the Blood, Sarsaparilla drives out its impurities, Phosphate and Nux Vomica create new nerve energy and force, Lithia aids in the Kidneys, Gentian does invaluable work for the Stomach and Digestive forces, Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root promote vigorous liver activity, Peruvian Bark raises the tone of the entire system, Golden Seal soothes the inflamed membrane and checks Catarrhal discharges, Cascara gives the Bowels new life in a natural way, and Capsicum makes all more valuable by bettering their quick absorption into the blood. A remarkable combination that does wonderful work for the body's health. Each of these ingredients adds a needed element from nature to the body. We claim no credit for discovering the ingredients in Bodi-Tone, each of which has its own well-deserved place in the medical books of most of the civilized world. We simply claim the credit for the successful formula which we invented, for the way in which these valuable ingredients are combined, for the proportions used, for the curative force which thousands of sick have found in Bodi-Tone. Many of its ingredients are regularly prescribed by doctors, either separately or in combinations with such drugs as each doctor may favor, for there are wide differences of opinion among the doctors of various schools. The exact combination used in Bodi-Tone is what makes Bodi-Tone cure where doctors have failed and gives Bodi-Tone the curative and restorative power that makes possible the remarkable cures experienced by Bodi-Tone users.

You Need It

If you are tired of ceaseless doctor bills and wearied of continual dosing without results, you need Bodi-Tone right now. If your local doctor is doing you no real good, if you have given him a chance to do what he can and the ordinary medicinal combinations he used have failed, give this modern, scientific combination of special remedies a chance to show and prove what it can do for you. Its greatest triumphs have been among men and women with chronic ailments who had good physicians without lasting benefit, and for this reason all chronic sufferers are invited to try a box at our risk.

Bodi-Tone offers its valuable services to you right now, if you are sick, if you need medicinal help, if your bodily organs are not acting as they should, if your body is out of right, natural and normal tone. This is what Bodi-Tone is for, to help Nature restore tone to the body, to restore health, vigor, vitality and strength.

If there is anything wrong with your Kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the Kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your Stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the Stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your Nerves, your Blood, your Liver, your Bowels or your General System, the health-making ingredients in Bodi-Tone go right to work and keep on working day after day, producing results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone helps to eliminate the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the Kidneys, Stomach and Blood, thereby preventing a continuance of the toxic poison and putting new activity into muscles, nerves and joints. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from any Female Ailment, for its splendid toning properties have been found of special value in such ailments.

We Risk All

Why delay another day, when a trial of this proven medicine is yours for the asking? Why keep on suffering when by clipping the coupon, filling in your name and address and mailing it to us, you can get a twenty-five days' treatment of this great remedy which has already restored thousands to health, which thousands everywhere are talking about? It just costs a stamp and you don't pay a penny unless it benefits. The powers of Bodi-Tone have been amply proven by three years of glorious cures. It has been tested by thousands, in a great variety of ailments in both sexes at all ages. Persons suffering from Rheumatism, Stomach Troubles, Kidney, Liver and Bladder Ailments, Uric Acid Diseases, Female Troubles, Bowel, Blood and Skin Affections, Dropsy, Piles, Catarrh, Anaemia, Sleeplessness, La Grippe, Pains, General Weakness and Nervous Breakdown, have tested Bodi-Tone and fully proven its remedial value in such disorders. Read the reports, send for a box and try it.

Read These Reports

CARTERS, GA.—I had been diseased for fifteen years with what the doctors called Systemic Catarrh. I had pains all through my body, in my Bowels, Stomach and Back, and my Heart would flutter and smother so it appeared that I could not live. I had indigestion and Constipation, with Blind spells. Everything I ate soured on my Stomach. It seemed I could not stand it much longer. I tried all the doctors in my settlement and three specialists of Atlanta, Ga., and most of the patent medicines I heard of, without any relief, until I got Bodi-Tone. By the time I had taken a treatment of Bodi-Tone I could eat anything I wanted, and there was not a pain in my body. Bodi-Tone did more for me than all the doctors. I am seventy-five years old. J. F. PETTY.

LANTANA, TENN.—I had Rheumatism for twenty-five years from my Neck to my Ankles, Catarrh of the Bladder for about twenty years and a bad Stomach. I had a terrible swelling in my head, and last Winter I took a terrible cough and spit up quantities of mucus, which the doctors said was Bronchial Asthma. They doctored me all winter with but little benefit. I saw Bodi-Tone advertised, sent for a trial box, and I got my cure from this medicine. I am stouter this Winter than I have been in thirty years and seem to be entirely cured of all my troubles. I have gained thirty-two pounds since taking Bodi-Tone, and can walk ten miles in a day. I am sixty years old. I owe all my good health to Bodi-Tone and believe I saved my life. MRS. EMILY DRIVER.

WARREN, OHIO.—Bodi-Tone has done wonders for me. Last Fall I was so run down that I could hardly get up and down. I doctored and received only temporary relief. I tried everything and had about made up my mind that there was no help. I could not eat and didn't seem to crave anything. Everyone thought I would not live through the winter, and I really thought so myself. My Kidneys and Bladder were so bad, and my Stomach also. I had such weak spells with my Heart that it was not safe for me to start out to walk, as I could only stand on my feet a little while. My head was dizzy. I saw the Bodi-Tone offer and decided to try once more. I have not felt so well for years as I do since I used Bodi-Tone. I am in my seventy-second year and can do a day's work. Everyone is surprised to see me as well as I am now. A. SAMS.

The Christian Guardian (Toronto) states "that a certain professor in the Chicago University is reported to have declared that a boy can get more ethical and religious training from a game of baseball, played right, than from sermons and Sabbath-school lessons." Perhaps the learned gentleman, in deciding the question, had in mind the kind of discourses and Sabbath-school teaching in vogue about the university with which he is connected. Some of the samples of this that we have seen would go a long ways toward justifying the professor's position.

We have been reading this summer a good deal about Christian people camping out. This is, perhaps, well enough if it is not overdone. But we should remember that we are the Lord's army, and that soldiers do execution not when in camp, but when in the field. We fear that there is danger of lessening our revival efforts in the summer because of so many chautauquas, assemblies, etc. It yet remains true in the Southern States that a large part of our evangelistic work must be done in the months of June, July and August. Let us see that we do not abate our activity in saving immortal souls. Seeking self-culture is well, but seeking the lost for our Lord is better.

We take the following from an address made to the Methodists of South Carolina, through the Southern Christian Advocate, by Bishop J. C. Kilgo, a few days since: "Recently, at the Knoxville District Conference, a preacher reported a revival in which he had more than three hundred conversions. On inquiry, I learned that it came after three whole nights of prayer. Only the preacher who prays much and prays long may expect wonderful outpourings of the Holy Ghost. Many men are writing articles and delivering lectures on 'How to Conduct a Successful Revival.' The secret is simple—much fasting and ceaseless prayer." This statement is worth meditating on many days and nights.

Why is it that so many lecturers at summer divinity schools take up their time hanging away at the "dead theologies of the past?" Is it not a waste of ammunition to be firing at the things which they say have been struck down and are no longer vital? Living evils are stalking through the land in far too great abundance; why do not these learned gentlemen train their guns on them? Wesley's theology may have been faulty, but with it he set England and other lands aflame. But if the hypercritical schoolmen of our time have kindled revival fires anywhere we have not heard of them. They are too busy apologizing for the Scriptures to proclaim them with that note of authority which makes them the power of God unto salvation. The gospel that saves must be one of certitude, and not of speculation.

A CORRECT CONCLUSION.

Mr. Mooney, the brilliant editor of the Commercial Appeal, in discussing in a recent issue of his paper, "Hell As An Influence Upon the Living," concludes his utterance as follows: "Take out of Christianity every article declaring against any sort of punishment for one who dies maliciously in sin, and we believe that the Christian system would fall to pieces in a half-dozen generations."

That this is a correct conclusion, we do not for one moment doubt. Nor is it the Christian system alone that would go down with the destruction of the belief that men will in the future be held accountable for their evil deeds: our present social order would likewise be struck a fatal blow and would topple to the ground. The world's mightiest moral restraint is the belief that the wicked will be severely punished after death. Some years ago after Mr. Ingersoll had affirmed in a public address that there is no hereafter and that suicide is a justifiable means of escaping the ills of life, several persons who had died by their own hands were discovered to have in their pockets newspaper clippings containing the utterance of the noted skeptic. This is a faint indication of what would follow if the people generally were to cease to believe in the responsibility of human beings to God for the moral quality of their conduct.

We are not inclined to the view that there will be a hell of material fire, but it is our conviction that it will be something inconceivably terrible, and that the Scriptures clearly teach that it will be eternal. Scholarship can throw no new light upon this question. Forever barred to the investigating human mind in this life are the stupendous secrets of eternity. Other than what is written in the Book of Revelation, we can never know until the cold hand of death tears away from the immortal spirit its fleshly vail and permits it to see for itself what lies beyond the tomb.

NOT METHODIST DOCTRINE.

Under the caption, "Is This Universalism," The Presbyterian of the South, of July 3, contained an editorial from which we take the following:

"A vigorous writer of our sister Church, the Methodist Episcopal, South, lately expressed himself thus, 'Methodists have never taught regeneration in infancy, but that regeneration in the full Christian sense takes place only as, in conscious need, the soul cleaves to Christ as a personal Saviour.' Another strong writer of the same Church takes him to task and calls this erroneous teaching. The discussion is of interest as showing how strongly Arminianism looks in the direction of universalism. If, as the second writer referred to maintains, all infants are regenerated at birth or preceding birth, then salvation is for all, or grace is no more grace. A regenerated person is a saved person, whether that regeneration takes place in infancy or in maturity, or the Spirit's work is vain. It is of the Spirit that one is born again. And if all are regenerated in infancy, 'at birth, or preceding birth,' as our brother claims that his Church teaches, then all are saved. We are certainly not prepared to believe that any Church possessed of as splendid an evangelistic spirit and composed of as earnest students and followers of the blessed Word of God, as is this sister Church, will allow itself to be put in such an attitude."

Our distinguished contemporary is correct in declining to accept "birth regeneration" as a Methodist doctrine. The position of the Methodist Church on this question is clearly set forth in the Seventh of her Twenty-five Articles of Faith, which is headed, "Of Original or Birth Sin," and which reads as follows: "Original sin standeth not in the following of Adam (as the Pelagians do vainly talk), but it is in the corruption of the nature of every man, that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam, whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness, and of his own nature inclined to evil and that continually." And in perfect accord with this is the Article which immediately follows under the heading, "Of Free-Will." "The condition of man after the fall of Adam is such, that he cannot turn and prepare himself, by his own natural strength and works, to faith and calling upon God; wherefore we have no power to do good works, pleasant and acceptable to God, without the grace of God by Christ preventing (aiding), that we may have a good will, and working with us, when we have that good will."

Such is the teaching of the Methodist Church as declared in her formal and official statement of her doctrines. No matter what individual theologians may have taught, this pronouncement must be accepted as authoritative, since it is written in the very constitution of the Church and is protected by the restrictive rules. Its revocation or modification is beyond the power of any General Conference, and whatever may be placed in the Ritual that conflicts with it is unconstitutional, and, therefore, invalid. Methodism stands side by side with the other Protestant Evangelical Churches in holding that human nature is universally depraved, and that the necessity of the "new birth" is correspondingly universal. And as our contemporary suggests, it is this that has been the mainspring of her marvelous evangelistic activity for nearly two hundred years.

DISTURBED THE SENATOR.

It is stated that Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, in looking over Senator Root's speech of notification to Mr. Taft, was much perturbed by discovering therein a split infinitive. We had thought that that distinguished gentleman was just now too much concerned about the split in the Republican party to pay attention to any other kind of a split. But it is difficult for a man of Mr. Lodge's culture to ignore or repress his scholarly instincts. And after all, the cleft infinitive is a thing well worth making war upon.

TWO TAVERNS.

By Edwin Markham.

I remember how I lay
On a bank a summer day,
Peering into weed and flower;
Watched a poppy all one hour;
Watched it till the air grew chill
In the darkness of the hill;
Till I saw a wild bee dart
Out of the cold to the poppy's heart;
Saw the petals gently spln,
And shut the little lodger in.
Then I took the quiet road
To my own secure abode.
All night long his tavern hung;
Now it rested, now it swung;
I asleep in steadfast tower,
He asleep in stirring flower;
In our hearts the same delight
In the rushes of the night;
O'er us both the same dear care
As we slumbered unaware.

THE SUPREME NEED.

If ever the baptism of the Holy Spirit was needed it is needed to-day. It is the crying want of the Church, and every earnest Christian soul is yearning for it and praying for it. It is so apparent that no one will undertake to deny that the spirit of worldliness has the upper hand not only in the market place, but, to a disheartening extent, in the holy place. The spirit of gain, which is pre-eminently the spirit of the world, is everywhere.

The only remedy for all this is a revival not gotten up by men, but sent down by God; in other words, a revival "of pure and undefiled religion," the result of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, who "convinceth of sin and of righteousness and of judgment to come."

Undoubtedly the great necessity which many Christians feel as a monstrous burden on their hearts is, that controlling, overpowering, everywhere-present worldliness be supplanted by spiritual-mindedness, by "the spirit of burning," as Spurgeon puts it. The spirit of burning is impossible without the Holy Spirit. It is the product of his gracious baptism. He comes into a man, and influences his spirit, sets it on fire, but not without prayer; not without being invited—even solicited by earnest supplication—to come in and dwell there in all the plenitude of his power. "Ask and it shall be given you . . . for everyone that asketh receiveth." Christ appealed to the instincts of fatherhood to illustrate the spontaneous, royal munificence of God. "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?" It is plain, therefore, that the gift of the Holy Spirit is conditioned on asking, on prayer.

The first Pentecost came in answer to the united prayers of Christ's disciples; and, in like manner, have come all the Pentecosts since that first one in Jerusalem, which have awakened, blessed, energized the Church of Christ on earth. Every outpouring of the Holy Spirit has commenced in prayer, continued in supplication and ended with thanksgiving. Prayer for His baptism, making effectual the Word of Salvation, which is now proclaimed unto all the nations of the world is the one all-comprehensive theme that should fill the minds and hearts and desires of God's people and find earnest expression in all their meetings for prayer always.

Let the keynote be struck good and strong in every prayer, in every hymn, in every sermon, in every service—Salvation through the mercy of God, by the blood of Christ, through the power of the Holy Spirit; then will men come into the Kingdom, not as hirelings, not from any temporal inducements, but from a sense of sin, from a depth of conviction which produces a conscious need of salvation and a breadth of comprehension as to the way of salvation, which will lead to an intelligent confession and service in the Church of Christ.

THE NEW MISSION TO AFRICA.

By Dr. W. W. Pinson.

There has long been a sentiment in the Church favorable to the opening of a Mission in Africa. Our relation to the colored people in our own land in general and in the C. M. E. Church in particular, has created a natural basis for this sentiment. This long slumbering desire began to take definite shape in the meeting of the Board of Missions May, 1910. This was previous to a uniting of the Board, and a communication came from the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions to the Board of Missions proposing co-operation with the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in the establishment of a Mission in Africa. The Board took favorable action and authorized a visit of one of the Secretaries to Africa "to study the conditions there with reference to one or more eligible sites for missionary work." The General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church also took action, giving their hearty approval to the proposed Mission on the basis of co-operation between the two Churches, at its session in Augusta, Ga., and adopting on the 10th day of May, 1910, the following resolution:

"Resolved, that this General Conference elect or empower the Bishops to appoint some prepared preacher, acceptable alike to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and our Church, to work in co-operation with the Mission Boards of our parent Church for the establishment of mission work in Africa."

Acting on this proposal of the Mission Boards and of the General Conference of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, our General Conference, in its session at Asheville, took the following action:

"We recognize in this movement not only the realization of the prayers and hopes of many years, and the logical fruition of our past history in relation to the negro race, but also the pledge of a better understanding and closer affiliation with our colored brethren in the fellowship of a great and worthy task."

"We recommend concurrence in so much of these documents as refers to the co-operation of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the opening of a Mission in the Dark Continent, and in the steps that have been taken by our authorities looking to this result."

Following this action, Bishop Lambuth and Professor J. W. Gilbert visited Africa during the past year and have made a thorough investigation of the needs and openings in that field. The enthusiastic and thrilling reports that have come to the Church from these pioneers of the Cross have been widely distributed and have done much to kindle the interest of the Church in the movement.

At its recent session the Board of Missions, after due consideration by a Special Committee, took the following action:

"Resolved, that this Board of Missions shall proceed to the establishment of a Mission in Africa at as early a date as practicable; that to meet the necessary expense a contingent appropriation of $10,000 be made, and in addition to this, the women of the Foreign Department shall be authorized to raise $5,000 for the inauguration of their work in that field in accordance with their generous pledge of co-operation made at their recent meeting in Washington; nor shall a larger sum than the said $15,000 be expended during the first year of the actual existence of the Mission. The Secretaries of the Board, in conjunction with the Bishop in charge of Africa, shall have authority to locate the territory to be occupied by us."

The actual basis of co-operation with the C. M. E. Church is yet to be determined. There will be no difficulty at this point. The relations of the two Churches are so cordial and we are so fully at one in this movement that it only needs that some proper definition and understanding shall be arrived at as to the method of their co-operation for the future guidance of the two bodies.

It will be seen that the Board of Missions is under the necessity of furnishing $10,000, in addition to what has already been pledged for Woman's Work, for the first year's expenses in opening the Mission. The action of the Committee, as quoted above, limits us to that amount for the first year. The interest manifested in this enterprise ought to guarantee the realization of this sum in a short time. Already enthusiastic friends of the movement have been sending in money for this purpose. Every dollar thus contributed will be credited to the African Mission Fund. There are certainly many people in the Church who have been waiting for this definite action and call for funds to respond with liberal contributions. We hope to be able to receive this amount by means of individual gifts. The offer of $5,000 at the session of the Woman's Missionary Council might well be duplicated by some other Methodist who has that much interest in the evangelization of Africa. Voluntary personal contributions, as much as $500 each, have been made already. Let those who wish to be represented in this first $10,000 send in their contributions to the Board in such amounts as they may see fit to contribute. Promptness and liberality in response to this call will put the Board in position to enter upon the work of establishing the Mission just so soon as the necessary preliminaries can be gone through with. In the meantime, let the Church pray earnestly that this new Mission may be started on a plan and in a way that will insure to it the greatest possible success in spreading the light in Darkest Africa.

THE LIGHT THAT SHINES FARTHEST.

Rev. Edgar I. Vincent.

In a dimly-lighted room a young man was busy weighing out leather for a dealer who had bought a heavy stock of the house which employed this clerk.

Standing on the other side of the counter, the dealer laid down a bill, and said: "You just have business down at the other end of the room for a moment or two. It will be all you will need to do. Then come back."

The young man looked up into the shrewd, tricky face which was turned toward him, an inquiring expression in his eyes.

"What will you do when I am gone, sir? I do not understand."

"Never mind that! The clerk that was here before you never did; why need you? It will not cost you anything if these scales give me good weight. I am paying a good price for this leather; ought I not to have a good fair weight?"

Quick as a flash the answer came back: "These scales shall never lie while I am here, sir! You will get what you say—good, honest, fair weight, but not a single ounce more!"

Dim though the light was in that room down in the basement, the whole place must have seemed radiant to the angel who was watching and noting all that was done there.

But the brightest light of all was the light that shone in the heart of that brave young man. It was the light set by the hand of God, and it is the light which will reach to the very shores of eternity.

They tell of some wonderful searchlights in these days. In the time of the Spanish-American War messages were flashed more than twenty miles by one of these wonderful lights; and in 1893 a searchlight was on exhibition at Chicago which threw a beam of light that could be seen eighty-five miles, while one might read fine print by its gleam eight miles away.

But all these lights have their limitations. There is a place where the golden glow of the most powerful lamp is lost in shadow; but there is no end of the reach of a brave, manly, honest deed. Who knows but it may have stirred something in the heart of that man who tried to tempt the young clerk in the leather store which never was there before? God himself will see to that. The thing for us to do is to hold up "the light which lighteth every man."

that cometh into the world," and leave the result to his keeping.—From the Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

"PREACHER IN CHARGE."

My son, you are a "Preacher in Charge." I congratulate you! In charge of what? Of four churches, constituting a circuit. You should be glad that they are country churches. Yet you will have work enough and problems of real difficulty.

Never forget for one moment that you have been placed in charge by the M. E. Church, South; and therefore, that you represent that Church in the territory covered by your circuit and that you are to do, or have others to do, the work which that Church wishes done in that territory. This means that you are responsible—you owe it to your Church to see that all the work is done and well done. Much of this work you will have to do yourself; some of it others can and ought to do; but you are held responsible for the doing of it all. I trust that you have carefully read and re-read the section in the Discipline relating to the duties of Preachers in Charge. (Chapter III., Section iv.)

Observe, the Church has sent you to this circuit to do and have done certain things—not to take observations and determine whether or not it is easy, wise, or practicable to do these things—not to find out whether or not the folks would like to have these things done. In the most democratic of governments some things must be done. True, there are some other things you are asked to do if practicable, and you are to be judge in the case; but there are some things the Church requires to be done, and she does not say "if practicable."—she assumes that they are practicable, wherever there is an organized church. Let us consider some of these:

You are required to have a Sunday school wherever "ten persons can be collected for that purpose." "No children" is not an excuse, the law says, "ten persons;" not one of these may be a child. "No man to superintend," is not an excuse if a woman can be found, and generally one can be had.

2. "Let Epworth Leagues be organized in all our congregations," says the law, and you, on your circuit, are the man charged to do this. Observe, the law requiring Leagues is just as binding as the law requiring Sunday schools. "Suppose I have no leader?" Develop a leader. If you really cannot find a man or woman to help you to look after the young people in an Epworth League, that fact greatly discredits your ministerial efficiency. Re-read the last sentence! I mean what I say in it. Bestir yourself in prayer and study until that inefficiency be remedied. If you will not do this, my son, your Christian fidelity is discredited. I speak thus plainly because I love you and the young people on your circuit. I am sure that you will not fail in this matter.

3. You are commanded to see to it that Children's Day be observed. If the superintendent opposes and the teachers refuse to help, what then? You and the children can have Children's Day. Talking and singing and giving with prayer can be so arranged that interest and profit will result and you can arrange it and the children will be helpful and happy in it, a great lesson will be taught the unfaithful ones and the spirit of the law will be met.

4. You are required to see that every Sunday school be constituted a Missionary Society. Nobody has any right to forbid this; nor have you any right to neglect it. To take collections monthly for missions does not meet the need of the case, nor the demand of the law. The purpose of the organization is primarily educative. See Discipline, Par. 254.

5. You are required to hold a Church Conference in each of your churches once every quarter. You are not advised to do this. You are commanded. Do not try to excuse yourself by the disloyal sneer about the "fifth wheel" in our machinery. Do not arrogate to yourself the censorship over the General Conference! When you get to be delegate to one, you may try, if you wish, to have the Church Conference abolished. I hardly believe you will attempt such a thing; for you will find that the men who go to General Conferences rarely find fault with this part of our machinery. I have not failed, as a pastor, for many years to hold regularly, as the law directs, Church Conferences that were interesting, well-attended and valuable. Do not talk your Church Conference to death as some good brethren do; and do not let anybody else do it. Follow the Discipline, Paragraphs 91-96. Keep the law!

6. You are commanded to hold Public Worship by a certain definite "Order," in which some things are optional, e. g.: the Apostles Creed and the Gloria Patri, but as these are put in, it is evident that the Church wishes them used, and if you are truly loyal, you will not leave them out. Some items of this Order are not optional. One of these is, "Singing from the Common Hymnal, the people standing." For the sake of good music, sound doctrine and real Methodism, as well as fidelity to your vows and the law of the Church, sing from the "Common Hymnal," not from "Glad Praises," nor "Bugle Notes," nor any other little, flat, cheap book of silly songs set to rag-time music—not even the Young People's Hymnal—the Publishing House issuing the thing does not set aside the law of the Church. The saddest thing that has come to our Methodism is the painful degeneracy of her music. Some preachers never use the Lord's Prayer, others rarely do. Why? Alas, alas! Some mend the Benediction. My son, read Rev. xxii. 18, 19 and then find the Apostolic Benediction, II. Cor. xiii. 14, and when you dismiss the congregation, pronounce the Benediction as Paul wrote it:—just as Paul wrote it—and as the Church directs and do not try to mend it!

These are some of the things your Church requires of you. You stood at God's altar and before your brethren promised, yes, solemnly vowed "not to mend our rules but to keep them." What if some preachers fail to observe these things? Their recreancy will not abate the gravity of your offending in like manner.

My son, forty-five years in the Methodist ministry give me courage to say this to one I love: keep your vows and thus be true to your Church, or "step down and out." TUUS PATER.

HOW TO OPEN THE WAY FOR UNION.

It would seem to us that the wisest step toward union would be to bring about the most friendly relation between the churches. We know of a village with a population of four hundred people trying to support three Methodist Churches, each with a small, struggling congregation and a poorly paid pastor, whose most laudable ambition is to get away from a town in which there is room but for one Methodist Church which, with the united congregations, could be a marked moral and spiritual force in the community; as it is, the divided congregations of the same faith are an occasion for untold friction and bitterness. If we are in earnest about union, why could not authorized representatives of the three Methodisms get together, and by giving and taking make such adjustments as to make such unseemly rivalry impossible, or at least agree upon such principles of federation that such a thing in the future as building "altar against altar" would be unknown? These are practical things that could be done, the doing of which would greatly strengthen God's Kingdom and bring the three Methodisms unspeakably close together. What an opportunity the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have to show to the world the genuineness of their spirit of fraternity and brotherly love by an exhibition of such unselfish activity in Southwest Virginia and East Tennessee, where there is crying need for adjustment of local conditions!

We may be pardoned for saying that we do not think the establishment of an episcopal residence in Atlanta, by the Minneapolis General Conference, in a section where there is but a small membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, but which is in the very heart of the territory occupied by our Church, where we have had a resident Bishop for years, is the highest expression of fraternity. It looks as if such a movement would encourage the building of "altar against altar," notwithstanding the florid and fervid rhetoric which is uttered against the wrong of such things.—Baltimore Southern Methodist.

FREE SCHOLARSHIPS FOR YOUNG PREACHERS AT VANDERBILT.

Young preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who are college graduates can secure free scholarships that will cover the cost of board in the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University. A loan fund is available for those who cannot secure scholarships. Tuition and room rent are free. An Employment Bureau aids students in seeking remunerative work such as may be carried on in connection with their University studies. There were one hundred and thirty-four ministerial students at Vanderbilt University last year, fifteen of this number being students in the Academic Department. Of the 119 theological students in the University last year, 78 held academic degrees, and 27 others had college training, though they were not college graduates. Forty colleges and universities were represented in the student body. About 750 former students of the University are now preaching in the various Annual Conferences of Southern Methodism, or are teaching in the schools of the Church. A large proportion of the foreign missionaries of the Church are former Vanderbilt men. Millsaps College has four representatives in the student body, and Centenary one.

The large number of courses of Biblical and theological study offered to students, the many distinguished preachers and lecturers that annually visit Nashville, the splendid opportunities offered by Nashville for studying the problems of the modern city, the commodious and well arranged building of the Biblical Department (Wesley Hall) and the ample and beautifully wooded Campus of over sixty acres, the opportunity to come in social contact and daily fellowship with a hundred or more young ministers from all the Conferences and colleges of Southern Methodism, and to study all the great connective interests of the Church that are centered in Nashville—these are some of the many reasons that make it desirable for every young preacher of the Methodist Church, South, to spend, if possible, from one to three years at Vanderbilt University. Let every young preacher of the Church who desires the help of a University in preparing himself for more effective service in the ministry, write to the Dean of the Biblical Department, Dr. W. F. Tillett, Nashville, Tenn.

THE WORK AT CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Dear Doctor Meek: Please let me talk with you and your readers for a little while about Centenary College. As already announced in the Advocate, our fall term will begin September 18, 1912. During the school year, which closed early last June, there was marked advancement in every department. Centenary is coming more and more to be what we are aiming to make it—a school where, not only high preparatory, but thorough college work is done. As stated in our catalogue, recently issued, there were two years ago, in our regular college classes, only six students; in the year 1911-12, there were forty-four; and four graduates were sent out from the institution—the first from Centenary in its new home. The preparatory classes were large and promising. In the lower grades, the numbers were not quite so large as in the preceding year. We have arranged to enlarge this department—a necessity pressing upon us. Instructors have been employed to provide the best and most careful training for this class of students; so that we confidently expect a large increase in the attendance.

We are as yet when compared with some others, but a small school at Centenary; yet we claim to be doing high-class work, and invite attention to our curriculum, as evidence of the standards which we are setting. And this fact should be stated here: our student body has been about as large as could be comfortably accommodated in the one building that we occupy. During the greater part of this last year the dormitories and class rooms were not only nearly full, but at times even crowded. I am pleased to state that plans are now being matured that will make provision for all the additional students who may come to us, and who may desire to reside in or near the college building; so that we can take care of all who may come, until we get what we expect in the near future—a new building, which, with the present one, will give ample room, not only for administrative work, but for lodging and boarding all the boys and young men who may be committed to our care.

It is proper that I make some mention of our recent Commencement exercises. They were interesting and inspiring from beginning to end. Dr. C. W. Carter's sermon on Sunday morning was a deliverance of wonderful grace and power; and the audience to which he preached, filled Shreveport's large city hall to its utmost capacity. The Y. M. C. A. sermon was preached Sunday night by Rev. R. H. Harper, at Noel Memorial Church. The alumni address was by Dr. J. H. Scales on Tuesday night; and Rev. G. E. Cameron gave the baccalaureate address on Wednesday morning. All these were of a high order and were heard by large audiences.

The Alumni banquet on Monday night was a delightful occasion. The declamation and oratorical contests on Monday at 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. excited much interest. It is quite evident that at Centenary the true college spirit is fully alive and growing. Many of our friends who, years ago, were students at Jackson, and who honored us with their presence at this Commencement, declared that they were reminded of "the good days of old Centenary."

We are expecting a fine school for 1912-1913. Already a force of excellent teachers has been secured. During the present month we have secured a valuable addition to the faculty. I nominated for the chair of science Mr. Raymond H. Dominick, a gentleman who brings the highest testimonials, who is a B. A. of Wofford College, and has for some years been a successful teacher. The nomination was duly confirmed by the executive committee of our Board of Trustees. If necessity require, we will, from time to time, add to our corps of teachers.

And more, let me beg for the hearty co-operation and support of our preachers and people. Give us your earnest prayers and sympathy. Send your boys to us, and we will be fully mindful of our responsibilities to you and to them. Centenary is your school. It does not belong to any one section or locality of the State. It is the property of the Louisiana Conference and its course will be directed by trustees representing the entire Conference, and from all parts of the State. Let us appreciate our golden opportunities and seize upon them at once. Great and good things are being planned for the near future. We look for our work to be unified, and we are expecting great results from the correlation of our educational institutions. Let us move forward. God of our fathers, help us to do our whole duty toward our schools!

Cordially and fraternally,
July 27, 1912.

FELIX R. HILL.

AN APPEAL TO REASON.

What I have to write seems to me reasonable, and I trust it may not fail of reaching the sentiment, loyalty and devotion of the members of the Louisiana Conference. I would at once convince you and convert you, if I may apply such terms without reproach to my brethren of the ministry. At the session of our Conference, held in Homer, December, 1910, an important matter was the financial condition of Mansfield Female College. So urgent was the appeal made for the college that Dr. Hill, president of Centenary College, in his gracious way, waived all claim to a public presentation of the needs of Centenary and added his voice to the call in behalf of Mansfield. Mr. D. G. Petty, president of the Mansfield Board, was present and made a full statement of the affairs of the college to the Board of Education.

After a very full discussion and careful study of the situation, the Board of Education decided to give the entire time of its usual public meeting to considering Mansfield, and called for donations under the following pledge:

"We, the undersigned, hereby pledge the amount opposite our names to be paid to the Board of Mansfield Female College on or before May 1st, 1911, three thousand dollars, to be used by said Board in paying the expenses of the college for the last term of the session of 1910-11, and the excess, if any, to be paid on the salary of the president of the college for the session of 1911-12."

In response to the appeal made at that time, and on the conditions set forth in this pledge, the Conference subscribed a total of $3,019.75. Mr. Petty and the Board had assumed all of the obligations of the college for the time specified in the pledge, and this was the response of the Conference to the manifest devotion of the Board and a pledge that the Conference would come to the Board's rescue at a given date. Confiding in the promise thus made by the Conference, the Board of Trust of Mansfield, led by Mr. Petty, financed the college, putting these pledges in the bank as collateral. On May 1, 1911, it was found that less than half these pledges had been paid. Some four or five individuals had to give their personal notes to cover the amount unpaid, and paid eight per cent interest on the money thus borrowed. Notwithstanding the efforts made by the Board, more than $1,000 still remains unpaid on these pledges.

Having relied upon the Conference to redeem these pledges, it has been necessary for the Board of Trust to carry this shortage ever since the pledges first came due, and to this very time it has been hampered to that extent in its efforts to properly finance the college. In all fairness, ought not these pledges to be redeemed? Would it not be a comparatively easy task? The individual amounts are all small. There is one pledge of $100, and another of $50, but both of these have been promised us by the parties responsible for them. The other pledges are for $5, $10, and $25. It would not be an impossible task for any member of the Louisiana Conference to raise at once $25 for the benefit of such a splendid institution as Mansfield College. The property is owned and managed by the Louisiana Conference. It is the only Protestant college for girls in the State of Louisiana west of the Mississippi River. The opportunity is exceptional, and, perhaps, not equaled in any other part of Southern Methodist territory. The prospects for the opening in September are getting brighter each day, and success seems assured. Is it not a good time to lend a helping hand?

It will not take much sacrifice for any one of those who made these pledges in open Conference to at once make good the amount promised, even if part is paid out of his own scanty allowance, for the larger part of the pledges were made by our preachers, men who know how to be "in want," but have not yet tasted that other experience of the Apostle, "to abound." But to them I say, Pay the amount you pledged, and at once redeem a pledge, made in good faith and received in good faith, and make a splendid contribution to the building up of a college that has done a great work and that can do yet greater things.

Mr. Petty has recently given the college $500 to start an endowment fund, and would have doubled his gift but for the fact that these pledges had not been paid and that the other $500 had to go to current expenses. We must stand by our schools if we expect others to come to their aid.

Every cent put into Mansfield College is put into the Church's fund for educational work. If you increase the income of the college you add to the revenues of the Church. Shall we sit idly by and let our institutions languish, and our boys and girls go elsewhere for Christian training? Have we no ideals dear to our hearts that ought to be taught our children? Sometime ago I wrote forty letters, personal letters, wrote them because you asked the Bishop to appoint me to this work, wrote them because I believe in the Church college with all my heart, wrote them appealing for help, for sympathy, for advice. I received four replies. I am still writing letters, and I shall keep on writing letters, for I am sure that your hearts are right, and, perhaps, you may yet find time for a word of encouragement and counsel, and little by little the pledges are being paid. Our colleges are well worth while, are indispensable to the life and progress of Methodism in this great State, and we can maintain, endow, and perpetuate them if we will.

N. E. JOYNER,
Mansfield, La. Secretary of Education.

AN ADDITIONAL WORD.

Dear Doctor Meek: In my appeal to the brethren to pay promptly their pledges to Mansfield College, I should like to call attention to the fact, that of those who have already paid, fifteen names taken at random are of men whose salaries only average $525. Two of them received last year less than $300 each. A letter this morning brings the good news that an alumna, 1909, has about secured us two students for the next session. She is the daughter of a preacher. Her father received less than $500 last year, but his pledge was paid before it became due. If one-third of the preachers of the Conference would do as much for us, the College would pay all expenses next year and have a surplus large enough to take up the bond and pay the entire interest. One-third of the members of the Conference can do it!

A PROFITABLE SESSION.

The 1912 session of the Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers convened at the Seashore Camp Ground on July 13, and closed on July 28. The attendance this year was said to have been better than for some years, and it was the general opinion that this was one of the most helpful sessions that has been held at this place. There was a feeling of the presence of the Holy Spirit and that he greatly blessed all in attendance on the Assembly was manifest.

Among the speakers, beside those doing the regular class-room work, were Dr. J. M. Henry, of New Orleans; Dr. S. H. Werlein, of Alexandria, La.; President A. F. Watkins, of Millsaps College; Dr. A. F. Smith, of Jackson, Miss.; President Andrew Sledd, of the Southern University; Judge Thomas, of Montgomery, Ala., and Dr. G. B. Winton, of Nashville, Tenn. These gentlemen brought before the Assembly matters of vital importance to the young people in attendance. Dr. J. W. Moore, of New Orleans, and Dr. F. N. Parker, of Durham, N. C., brought inspiring messages on the Sunday mornings during the Assembly session. On the evening of the last Sunday of the session Dr. F. S. Parker preached a very helpful sermon. He seemed to speak out of his heart to the young people and there was a quiet, suppressed feeling that spread over the congregation, and the truths brought by the preacher laid hold on the people. At the close of the sermon a great number of young people and others gathered around the altar to re-consecrate themselves to the service and work of God. A feature of the Assembly was the singing of Rev. C. N. Guice. His fine work added very much, indeed, to the success of the meeting.

Courses in mission study, in personal evangelism and in different league methods were given. The instruction was of a high order and much good work was done. The books used in the mission study courses were "The Awakening of China," by Smith, and "The Church of the Open Country," by Wilson. In the class on personal evangelism, Dr. Weatherford's book on "Introducing Men to Christ," was used. Dr. F. S. Parker gave some lectures on the Bible that were of a very high order. The classes were well attended by the Leaguers and by the Camp Ground population.

On July 24 there was held a meeting of the commissioners appointed by the Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama League Conferences for the purpose of organizing an Assembly for these three States, or of adopting the Seashore Assembly. Commissioners had already been appointed by the League Conference of North Mississippi, but these failed to be present. Commissioners will be appointed for the North Alabama Conference at the meeting of the Executive Committee in September. The Commissioners who were present from the Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama Conferences adopted a plan of organization, and this was submitted to the Seashore Assembly and also adopted by the Assembly. It is also to be submitted to the North Mississippi and the North Alabama Commissioners. It provides for the organization of an Epworth League Assembly for the five Conferences in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama. It is felt by all those that were present at this session of the Seashore Assembly that this will make it possible for a strong League Assembly to be held within the bounds of these three States, and that it will become a means of greatly enlivening the interest of the young people in the League work.

Everything was in favor of a good session this year. The weather was fine, not being hot except for a few days at the close of the session. There was little rain to interfere, and no mosquitoes at all. The bathing was fine and greatly enjoyed by all. But better than all these physical things, were the good things intellectually and spiritually. The only regret of all those who were present was that there were not more of the young people there to profit by the occasion.

Every one went away with the full expectation of returning again next year and of trying to get others to come along with them. Great good has been accomplished here in the past, and good will be accomplished in the future. Young men have given themselves to the work of the ministry and young women have given themselves to the work of missions, home and foreign. The Leaguers and the young people of the three States of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama should join their prayers and their work to make this one of the greatest League Assemblies in the Southern Methodist Church. There is no reason at all why this should not be the case.

Secular News and Comment

By Rev. A. J. Gearheard.

A special session of the Louisiana Legislature has been called to convene on August 12.

John Mitchell, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, has just been sentenced to nine months in jail for contempt of court. Samuel Gompers, the president, and Frank Morrison, the secretary, of the same organization, are already under sentence for the same crime.

There is a real live scandal in the police department of New York City. We do not care to thrash out the particulars of a scandal in these columns, but merely to say that the time has come for the citizenship of this country to lay violent hands on any system that permits the existence of a partnership between high-handed lawlessness and the police arm of the law.

Those who think the rebellion in Mexico is at an end may reconsider their opinion. Late reports claim that thirteen States are in open rebellion and thirty thousand men are in the ranks of the insurrectionist's army. We recall the history of thirteen other colonies that fought on American soil for "reform, liberty and justice," and to-day the Stars and Stripes are the result of that rebellion.

A professor in the Ohio State University claims that the high cost of living to-day is due to the super-sensitiveness and ultra particularness of the consumer, and not to any criminal practice of either the trusts or dealers. He cites the fact that some customers will insist on a grocer driving a mile to deliver a five-cent loaf of bread; that we buy our breakfast foods in fancy packages that cost more than their contents. There is some truth in these claims, and doubtless if some housekeepers would provide themselves with proper receptacles for containing groceries and then buy in the bulk, they could live much cheaper.

A campaign has been inaugurated in New York City to prevent smoking except in one's home or in the open air. The contention of the would-be reformers is that tobacco smoke is offensive to many, and that, therefore, their rights should not be ignored simply to gratify the pleasure of others. Especially do the reformers object to smoking in restaurants, stations, waiting-rooms, stairways and halls.

A new form of procedure has been tried in Gadsden, Ala., to handle an alleged obstreperous choir singer. The deacons of the church applied to the courts for an injunction to prevent the singer from further exercising his talents in the church. We wonder if there is a legal chance for the accused singer to apply the writs of certiorari and prohibition on the deacons.

A Greely, Colo., educator is advocating teaching children in the public schools the art of vegetable raising by actual practice.

Particularly does he want to teach the town boys how to raise potatoes. He claims that the cry, "Back to the farm," is a futile one unless you first teach the child how to make a living after he gets on the farm. Every now and then a college professor says something worth while; in fact, the day of the professor seems to have dawned.

The British Board of Trade, in rendering its verdict concerning the Titanic disaster, laid the blame on the ship's captain and its construction. It exonerated Mr. Ismay, a director of the White Star Line, and Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon, who was alleged to have bribed sailors to row away from the sinking ship without offering aid to others on board. The verdict of the British Board of Trade does not in any way affect the opinion of the American people, who hold the two exonerated gentlemen as far from being above suspicion.

It is claimed that for the first ten years after their graduation, the class of Princeton University of 1901 advanced from an average earning capacity of $706.44 per year, the first year, to $3,808.58 for the tenth year. There were more than two hundred graduates in the class, and at the end of the ten years the smallest salary received by any one was $1,714.25, and that was earned by a minister. The lawyers in the class averaged $4,994.88 during the tenth year. It appears from these figures that it pays to get a college education.

The Texas & Pacific railroad has secured dock privileges, and it seems probable that it will be granted certain other privileges by the Council of New Orleans which it desires in order that it may proceed with its plans for future improvements. Ten million dollars will be spent in the building of a depot, freight terminals, trackage, and wharfing accommodations. In addition to preparing for its own traffic, it seems evident that both the Missouri Pacific and the Great Northern railroads will run into New Orleans over the T. P.'s lines. This is possibly the greatest railroad improvement promised to the Crescent City in many years.

The plans for the Galloway Memorial Hospital, in Nashville, include buildings and equipment which will cost, when completed, $575,000. The central structure, which will be first erected, will cost $235,000. Of this amount, $165,000 has been secured in cash and subscriptions. It is said that this institution, like the Johns Hopkins Hospital, will not only care for the sick and train future nurses and doctors, but that it will at the same time do a great deal for the promotion of medical science. This plant will be a magnificent monument to Bishop Charles B. Galloway, than whom Southern Methodism has never had a more inspiring leader.

Bishop W. A. Candler recently did the preaching at the Wesley Grove Camp Meeting, which is under the direction of the presiding elders of the Baltimore and Washington Districts. It is needless to say that he profoundly stirred the large audiences that heard him. It is something worth while to hear our great Georgia chief pastor on such an occasion.

MISS MARY JONES—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. B. F. Jones, D. D.

And softly, from that hushed and darkened room

Two angels issued, where but one went in."

There has been removed from our midst by death, a bright noble and sincere Christian—Miss Mary Jones. She was the daughter of Mr. James B. Jones, and his wife, Cecilia A. Killian, of Jefferson County, Mississippi, a niece of the late Rev. John G. Jones, the historian of the Mississippi Conference, and a first cousin of the writer. She was born July 22, 1832, and died June 27, 1912, in the peaceful serenity of a ripe old age, in the home of her youth, surrounded by those who loved her with an ever increasing and beautiful devotion.

Early in life she was converted and joined the Methodist Church at old Cane Ridge, under the ministry of the sainted Dr. B. M. Drake, in which communion she lived a devout, consistent, and faithful Christian till called to the Church Triumphant. She lived up to the highest ideals of unselfish devotion to Christ and his Church.

She was of a bright, sunny disposition, firm in her convictions, sincere in her attachments, strong in her faith, and sound in the Christian experience. Her whole life was a preparation for the change of worlds. She was ever ready to draw the mantle of charity over the faults of others, and had a kind and sympathetic word for all who were sad or sorrowful and in need of a friend. She was truly a noble woman and held the love and respect of all who knew her. Her education and literary training were the best that the schools of her early day could bestow. Her true intuition and clear perception gave her the power to appreciate the highest and sweetest things in life. She could see the flowers by the side of the "common path" of every-day life; she could see the towering hills which lay beyond the cloud-covered valley, and she could see God above all and in all.

She was modest, gentle and tender; yet she was a tower of strength. She became an inspiration to the faint-hearted, imparted courage to the weak and comfort to the sorrowing. Her ministrations of tenderness and help extended beyond the circle of kindred and friends. Many were the visits she made to the sick in the "quarters" of the lowly slaves on her father's large plantation, as an evangel of light, bearing a message of cheer from the Bible, and a blessing in the form of relief from bodily pain. Every Sabbath afternoon she read the Bible to them and gave them a service of song and prayer.

She was a woman whose character was of the purest type. Gentle, unassuming, unselfish, and sympathetic by nature, she diffused sunshine wherever she went. The influence of such a beautiful and sweet character becomes, of course, a vital part of the hearts and lives of her friends and loved ones. Truly, "To live in the hearts of those we love, is not to die."

As the infirmities of old age came she retained a cheerful interest in life. While deprived of the services of the sanctuary for more than a year, yet she did not murmur or complain. On the Sabbath before she left us her sister asked if she would like to have some of her favorite passages of Scripture read; she answered, "Yes, indeed," and began to repeat, "The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." When her pastor visited her that afternoon and sang and prayed, she became very happy and said she would shout if she had the voice. Her sister, in writing me of her death and funeral service, said: "Brother Samplly, the pastor, had been called away and we had Brother J. E. Gray, of Fayette. The hymn, 'Jesus Lover of My Soul' was sung; the beautiful burial service was read, a few suitable remarks were made, and our dear little sister Mary was placed in the grave beside our mother, father and brothers. Her grave was covered with beautiful flowers."

Her bright, sunny face will not be seen any more in the congregation of dear old Cane Ridge; but we shall see her again, clothed in white and in the likeness of our King, in the beautiful home of the soul. The circle of that cultured, refined and once happy home is broken again—one more link of the family chain has been taken away. She heard the mysterious voice while the sad requiem of the stars floated upon the quiet darkness of the night, and slipped away to continue in the bright beyond the beautiful life she had lived here for nearly eighty years.

She was lovely in all the graces of nature. We can never forget the noble, benignant face—the light of her sweet smile, the soft tones of her voice, the kindness of her deeds, the tenderness of her sympathy, and the affections of her heart. We give our tears to the quiet sleeper in her restful repose of the blessed; and as we think of the hushed voice, the vanished presence, the desolate home and the stricken hearts, we are reminded that—

"God's ways are dark, but soon or late,
They touch the shining hills of day."

We relinquish our hold upon the earthly form reluctantly, and lay fresh flowers upon the mound where her precious form reposes, yet we bow with humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well.

MORE STUDENTS AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE—AN APPEAL.

Having been engaged to travel during the summer in the interest of Millsaps College, it has been the pleasure of the writer to visit various charges within the bounds of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, and it is my desire to reach as many more as possible during the month of August. The invitations, cordiality and assistance of the preachers have been greatly appreciated, as has also the help of other friends, but I take this opportunity to appeal to any friends of the college, and especially to preachers and alumni, to aid me in locating young men who are planning, or ought to plan, to attend college next session. A card sent to me at Jackson will be promptly forwarded, and it will be very helpful to learn where a visit from a representative of the college would be of special value, or the names of parents to whom catalogues should be sent. Help us to advertise Millsaps College, and let us not be hesitant in speaking of its merits where opportunity is afforded.

Brethren, this institution is doing a greater work than some realize, and is one of which Methodism in Mississippi has a right to be proud. Its value to Christian education and the citizenship of the State is being more and more appreciated without respect to creed. It is not an uncommon thing to hear educated and influential men, who have been graduated from other institutions, speak of Millsaps College as the coming college of the State. The high standard maintained, the thoroughness of the work done, and the superior influences that have always prevailed on the campus, challenge the admiration and confidence of all. The fact is, that in these respects Millsaps College is already the equal of any institution in the State, and unquestionably possesses features of superiority. Its entire history has been one of constant growth and enlarging usefulness. Its prospects are brighter to-day than ever before, and it behooves every Methodist to stand loyal in his support of this great agent of the Church in the interest of Christian education.

During the past session the enrollment was 280, and by co-operative effort throughout the State, there is no reason why it should not reach 380 during the next session. Everywhere there is an increasing interest in a thorough college education on the part of the young men and women, as well as of their parents. I have found no exception to this, even in those sections of the State where crop prospects are the poorest. Many splendid young men have applied for work to help support themselves while at college—more than can be accommodated by definite assignment. Some are anxious to borrow money on easy terms, and contributions have recently been made to a loan fund, which is to be perpetuated, and thus do incalculable service. If any readers of this appeal wish to put five or ten dollars, or more, into this fund, the gift will be thankfully received and bear abundant fruit.

Let our people inform themselves as to expenses and other conditions. Remember that young men can attend Millsaps College with as little expense as at any college in the State, and parents, who patronize certain training schools in other States, expend nearly twice for actual necessities what they would have to spend in sending their sons to the Millsaps Preparatory School, besides losing many associated advantages. The facts presented here have been amply verified.

Friends, let us take a more active interest in this matter during the next six weeks. The next session will open on September 18.

BISHOP MORRISON AT VICKSBURG.

Dear Brother Meek: According to an appointment previously made, Bishop H. C. Morrison spent Sunday, July 21, in this, the Hill City of Mississippi. He arrived here on Friday evening, the 19th, and remained until Tuesday, 12:45 p. m. His sermon at Crawford Street Church on Sunday at 11 a. m., on "Worldliness" was a masterly discussion of that vital and burning question, and the large and intelligent congregation that heard him will long remember the sermon as one of the greatest ever delivered from that pulpit. At 8 p. m. the Bishop preached at Washington Street Church, on "Christ, the Need of the Soul," which subject he handled in his own strong and impressive way.

By his genial and manly bearing and his great preaching, the Bishop has made for himself a large place in the hearts of the people of Vicksburg, and they will accord him a hearty welcome when the time comes for him to return. The Bishop thoroughly informed himself as to the status of our church work in the city, and by the help of our wide-awake presiding elder, Dr. W. H. Huntly, he got a fair idea of the state of things throughout this district.

He fully espoused the cause of our new enterprise, the building of a new house for the Washington Street congregation, and we feel now that the enterprise will go through. The Bishop's great interest in the Master's kingdom is proof that he serves with a single eye, and the interests of the Church are safe in his hands.

"LEARN, LEARN!"

When Daniel Webster was fourteen his father began to be aware of his unusual talents, and he resolved to give the boy a better education than he had been able to give the other children. For he believed that education can give a boy what he can get in no other way.

"On a hot day in July, it must have been in the last days of Washington's administration," says Daniel Webster in Sydney George Fisher's "The True Daniel Webster," "I was making hay with my father. About the middle of the forenoon the Honorable Adiel Foster, M. C., who lived in Canterbury, six miles off, called at the house and came into the field to see my father.

"When he was gone my father called me to him and said, 'My son, that is a worthy man; he is a member of Congress; he goes to Philadelphia and gets $6 a day, while I toil here. It is because he had an education which I never had. But I missed it, and now I must work here.'

"My dear father," said I, "you shall not work. Brother and I will work for you, and wear our hands out, and you shall rest."

"My child," said he, "it is of no importance to me. I now live but for my children. I could not give your elder brother the advantages of knowledge, but I can do something for you. Exert yourself, improve your opportunities, learn, learn, and when I am gone you will not need to go through the hardships which I have undergone, and which have made me an old man before my time."—The Christian Index.

HOW TRIP SAID "PLEASE."

Mrs. M. W. Baker.

Tommy came into the kitchen where auntie had been making fudge.

"Oh! I want some," he cried.

"All right," said auntie; "how do you ask?"

"I want some," he repeated a little louder.

"Ask for it properly, then."

"I tell you, I want some!" roared Tommy, as cross as a young bear.

"When you say, 'Please,' you can have some," replied auntie, carrying the plate of fudge into the dining-room, and setting it on the high side-board.

Trip came out from under the stove, where he had been asleep, and stuck his little pug-nose up in the air, and sniffed, for he smelled the fudge, and he was as fond of it as Tommy was. Trip had a cunning way of sitting up straight on his hind legs when he wanted something and was told to say, "Please."

Tommy stood there and looked as sulky as a small thunder-cloud, while auntie sat and polished the teaspoons. All was quiet for a little, then they heard a low whine from the dining-room.

Looking in through the half-open door, they saw Trip sitting up on his hindlegs by the side-board, waiting patiently for some one to come and give him fudge.

"There, Tommy," said auntie, "see that! Trip is saying, 'Please,' without even being told." And she went in and gave him a piece of fudge.

Tommy followed after her, hanging his head. "Please give me some," he said. "I am sorry I was so cross."

Then auntie kissed him, and gave him two pieces.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

SCRATCHING FOR A LIVING.

The speckled hen called her brood of half-grown chicks around her. She wanted to give them some good parting advice.

"My dear children," she said, "the time has come when you are no longer my baby chicks. You are all now large enough to make your own living. I have taught you where to go to look for the finest worms and how to get them. Now I will have to leave each of you to scratch for a living."

When she said this, her handsome son, who had always been called lazy, threw up his head in the air and said: "Scratch for a living, indeed. Well, I guess not," and he strutted about the yard, lifting his feet daintily from the ground, as if he were afraid they would become soiled.

"My son," cried the good mother, "how do you, then, expect to make your living, if you do not scratch?"

By this time all of the barnyard fowls had gathered around.

"How do I expect to make my living?" echoed the son, as he preened and smoothed the glossy feathers in one of his wings. "Mother, you talk as if we were the commonest fowls in the world," and he looked about him in haughty disdain at the plain, white chickens and those that wore dark, dull coats.

"Oh, you are all handsome children as far as that goes," said the mother, "but your beauty will not bring you your breakfast. What are you going to do for something to eat?"

All of the chickens, geese, ducks and turkeys were anxiously awaiting the young son's reply. They wanted to know what he was planning to do. With a great flit of his crimson head, he said: "Well, mother, dear, and my good sisters and brothers," turning to them also, "I am going to sing for my living."

"Sing!" cried his mother.

"Sing!" cried his sisters and brothers, while some of the other fowls boldly smiled.

"Yes, I mean to sing for my living," and he strutted about boastfully.

At this moment a little bird began to sing joyously in the apple tree. He sang as if his little throat would burst. "Sweet, sweet!" he cried.

"There, said the mother hen, "can you sing like that?"

"I am sure I can," replied her son.

"Let's hear you," she said.

"Yes, do, do!" cried the old gray goose.

"Do, do!" cried the other fowls.

"Very well," replied the vain young rooster. "Give me room."

The fowls gave him a clear space under the apple tree. He proudly took his place upon the top of a coop.

"Sweet, sweet!" cried the little bird again.

"There," called the old gray goose, "sing like that."

The young rooster saw that they were all ready to laugh at him if he made a failure, so he threw his head back, flapped his wings and began.

"Sweet!" called the little bird.

"Cock-a-doodle do!" squawked the young rooster, in a hoarse voice. "Cock-a—" but could get no farther. All of the fowls were laughing at him. The funny old green-headed duck, over in the corner, quacked and laughed until her sides ached. Even the bossy calf in the next lot mooed with joy. The young rooster's poor mother and sisters were sorry for him, but the other fowls were glad. They thought he had learned a lesson.

The next evening the old gray goose went up to the mother hen. "Where is your handsome son?" she asked.

"Out in the back lot scratching some supper for his sisters," she replied.

Let us learn from this to do those things that we can do, and not, like the silly young rooster, try to do those things for which we were never intended.—The Child's Gem.

WOULD STOP ITS SHIPMENT.

Resolutions of the Departmental Conference on Temperance of the Southern Sociological Congress Held at Nashville, Tenn., May 7-10, 1912.

Throughout the Southern States determined opposition to this traffic has resulted in the enactment of laws by which five entire States and approximately ninety per cent of the territory of the remaining States of our Southland now forbid the sale of intoxicating liquors.

Under the present federal law the States are powerless to prevent the importation of intoxicating liquors from other States even when consigned to notorious violators of law, and for the avowed purpose of sale contrary to the laws of the State. Under our system of government a citizen of one State should not be given privileges and opportunities under the protection of Interstate Commerce, which the people have wisely denied to their own citizenship within the State.

Therefore, in view of all these things, be it resolved:

1. That it is unjust to States having prohibited the liquor traffic, in whole or in part, for the Federal Government to permit people in other States to ship into these States alcoholic liquors intended to be used in violation of their laws; and we call upon Congress to pass promptly the Kenyon-Sheppard-Webb-McCumber Bill, which will permit the States to enforce their own laws by preventing the introduction of liquors from other States into their territory for unlawful purposes.

2. We insist that the present situation is both anomalous and intolerable. The fact that outside and irresponsible citizens of other States should, under the guise and protection of Interstate Commerce, have the power to furnish the "boot-legger" and the "blind tiger" with their supplies of liquors by means of which they carry on their unlawful traffic, is repugnant to every sentiment of justice and of fair dealing between the Federal Government, under its delegated commercial power, and the States, under their inherent powers of police. We insist that no political issue transcends this in importance, going directly as it does to that relationship of equity and comity, which should be established and maintained between them under our dual system of government.

We therefore urge Senators and Representatives in Congress to support both with their influence and votes the pending bill above named, and vigorously to oppose the efforts of the liquor interests of the country to delay and defeat it.

THE BUBONIC PLAGUE MENACE.

The bubonic plague, which is beginning to threaten all our Atlantic coast cities, and New Orleans in particular, is an old disease. It takes its name from the development of buboes, suppurating lymphatic glands, by which it is generally characterized. Other designations by which it has been known are "the pest," "the great mortality," and "the black death." It was formerly endemic in Egypt and the Levant, and first appeared in Europe in Constantinople in A. D. 544. It prevailed to an alarming extent in London in 1665, in Copenhagen in 1712, in Marseilles in 1720, in Moscow in 1721, in Malta in 1813, and in Silesia in 1819. Its last bad outbreak prior to the beginning of the present epidemic was in the Russian provinces bordering on the Volga River in 1878, when it was carefully studied by scientific men. The epidemic which now seems to be spreading very largely over the globe is said to be the fourth planetary outbreak of this fearful malady; it started in the Yunnan Province in China (thought by many to be the original home of the disease), in 1894, and in the city of Canton alone killed 180,000 persons. The epidemic of 1334 is estimated to have destroyed 25,000,000 people in Europe alone—nearly one-fourth of its population at that time.

We take the following description of the various stages of the malady from Johnson's Universal Cyclopaedia: "The outbreak of the affection is preceded by lassitude and the enfeeblement of mind and body; its definite onset is announced by shivering, headache, vertigo, vomiting, high-fever heat, great prostration, stupor or unconsciousness, bloody discharges by the excretory organs, the appearance of buboes or the suppurative enlargement of the lymphatic glands, or of carbuncles; or, again, in fatal cases, of petechiae or purple spots and mottling of the skin. Hemorrhage in the lungs and from the lungs was a frequent symptom of 'the black death' of the Middle Ages. The duration of the attack is from two to ten days, and convalescence is slow."

This disease is not one of filth, as is sometimes supposed. It is primarily an ailment of rats, and it is from them, through the fleas that live upon them, that human beings become infected with the bacterial germ, which is known as bacillus pestis. This discovery was made by Yersin at Hongkong in 1894. Every person who takes the malady, however, becomes a focus for its propagation, his sputum being alive with the poisonous germs. Hence it will be seen that this disease is much more infectious than the yellow fever, which only insects can spread.

Of the dozens of rats which, up to the present, have been killed and examined in New Orleans, only one was found to be infected. This does not mean that there is any great probability of the plague becoming prevalent here, since it often exists among rodents for years before it is communicated to human beings. But it is a warning to our people which they may well heed.

With the plague existing in Cuba and Puerto Rico, and ships constantly plying between those islands and this port, we cannot be too watchful. The warfare on rats in the Crescent City has been begun none too soon, and it should be carried forward vigorously and intelligently until these breeders and conveyers of disease have been completely exterminated. We are fortunate in living in an age when our men of science know the source from which this ancient scourge comes and the method of procedure to obviate it.

THEIR SPHERES SUPPLEMENTARY, NOT IDENTICAL.

The Alabama Christian Advocate takes exception to the oft-heard statement, "The evangelization of the world is a man's job." It quotes with approval the remark of a brilliant woman: "It is neither a man's nor a woman's job, but one that calls for the best energies of both, working together with their Lord."

Our contemporary is right in the position taken. Both men and women have a necessary part to perform in setting up the divine kingdom on earth, and by the peculiar aptitudes given, Providence clearly indicates the sphere of work for each. Their labors are not designed to be identical, nor competitive, but supplementary. Longfellow was right when, in describing the normal condition of things, he wrote:

"As unto the bow the cord is,
So unto man is woman;
Though she bends him, she obeys him,
Though she draws him, yet she follows,
Useless each without the other!"

But let it not be forgotten that to accomplish the best results for the world and for the Master, the division of labor that God in the beginning made between male and female needs still to be adhered to. It is when woman commences to try to do man's work, or man tries to take up her tasks, that confusion and disaster follow. The great Adam Clarke (now unfortunately too little read) in his Commentary on Ephesians, quotes the following lines from old Francis Quarles, which, though somewhat homely, are pithy and to the point:

"Ill thrives the hapless family that shows
A cock that's silent, and a hen that crows;
I know not which live most unnatural lives,
Obeying husbands or commanding wives."

A POSTHUMOUS PUBLICATION.

We have had on our table for some weeks, "Hymns and Other Poems," by Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, D. D. The preface by the author's wife, Mrs. Lyda Magruder Hunnicutt, reads as follows: "In publishing this little volume of Hymns and Other Poems, collected from my husband's writings, I gather them as a bunch of rosemary for our relatives and friends who hold him in sweet remembrance."

Dr. Hunnicutt was an A. B. graduate of Emory College, a life-long student, and a man of large and varied culture. In him the poetic gift was marked and some of his productions contained in this booklet possess a high order of merit. They deserved to be published not only for "relatives and friends," but for Mississippi Methodism and the public at large. Much of what he wrote is worthy of preservation, and a man so richly dowered by nature should be kept in lasting remembrance. Not a few noble itinerants, beside blessing the world with a gracious ministry, have substantially enriched its literature. We do not make enough of such men. We Methodists need a larger development of the historical instinct, that we may give to our successors the rich heritage which is legitimately theirs. The volume under discussion closes with a beautiful tribute to Dr. Hunnicutt by Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, who since writing it has joined his glorified friend in the City of God. This booklet ought to have a place in the library of every Methodist preacher in Mississippi. It was printed by Mr. Hubert G. Todd, of New Orleans, La., and its mechanical make-up is a work of art.

"AROUND THE WORLD."

The above is the title of a beautifully bound little volume from the facile pen of Mrs. W. B. Murrah, the accomplished wife of Bishop Murrah. It consists of a series of letters of travel composed while she was accompanying her distinguished husband on his mission to the Orient last year and his westward return home through the Holy Land, Egypt and Europe. These letters were written to friends in Jackson, Miss., and first appeared in the Daily News and the Clarion-Ledger of that city. They are bright, vivacious, informing, and at times sparkle with a humor that charms and delights. One cannot read them without being both entertained and instructed. It is well that they have been gathered up and published, and the gifted authoress has rendered her many friends and admirers a pleasurable and profitable service in having this done. Whether the book is for private circulation only, or whether it may be purchased by persons desiring it, we are not at present informed.

OUR WOMAN'S WORK DEPARTMENT.

At the request of representatives of the Woman's Missionary Societies of our three patronizing Conferences, we have set aside space to be devoted to this important branch of our work. Mrs. Robert F. Harrell, of New Orleans, whose address will be given in every issue of the Advocate, has been elected editor of this new Department. To her all communications coming within its scope should be sent. This action is in accord with the plan suggested by the last session of the Woman's Missionary Council, and we trust that the arrangement will prove satisfactory to all concerned. We feel a deep interest in the service which our women are rendering to the cause of missions, and are pleased to do what we can to promote the true progress of their work.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. H. Felts, of Corinth, Miss., has lately assisted Rev. W. A. Russell in a meeting at Murray, Ky. As a pastor-evangelist, Brother Felts ranks with the best.

Rev. A. S. Briscoe, of Strong's, Miss., has announced that a series of revival services will be commenced at that place on the third Sunday in August. He will have with him Rev. E. S. Lewis, of West Point.

Dr. A. F. Watkins preached at Vicksburg last Sunday. He formerly served the Crawford Street Church of that city for four years with great acceptability, and numbers his friends there by the hundreds.

Rev. W. D. McCullough, our efficient pastor at Eupora, Miss., conducted a meeting at that place last week, in which he was ably assisted by Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, of New Albany. The results are not known to us at this writing.

Rev. W. M. Young is meeting with much success in his work in the Amory and Nettleton charge, North Mississippi Conference. Peace and harmony prevail, the finances are in excellent condition, and 57 members have been received during the year.

Rev. T. H. Morris, our pastor at Mansfield, La., recently contributed to the Central Methodist Advocate, of Lexington, Ky., a bright and interesting article, entitled, "The Great Southwest." Brother Morris was formerly an esteemed member of the Louisville Conference.

A correspondent informs us that Mrs. Peyton Cottrell White has been chosen organist of our church at West Point, Miss., in place of Mrs. D. B. Fullington, whose death was announced in the Advocate last week. This is an admirable selection.

We are in receipt of a copy of the program of the service conducted in our church at Covington, La., on Sunday, July 28. The musical features of it, which were classical and most attractive, were arranged by the accomplished organist, Mrs. E. R. Morrison. Under her capable direction, the singing at this church is represented to be of a superior order.

Mrs. J. E. Cunningham and children, of Aberdeen, Miss., have gone to the Ozark Mountains, where they will spend the remainder of the summer. Being a presiding elder, with pressing duties calling him on every side, Brother Cunningham could not go with them. Such is the price that he must pay for the honors that the Church has conferred upon him.

A protracted meeting is in progress at Slaughter, La., this week, under the direction of Rev. J. D. Harper, the pastor, and his son, Rev. R. H. Harper, of Natchitoches.

Rev. W. N. Thomas, who has served the Eden, (Miss.) charge since leaving Millsaps College in June, is doing a good work. He is planning to hold revival meetings at all of his appointments.

We are indebted to the following brethren for subscriptions to the Advocate recently sent in: "Rev. S. N. Young, Bucatunna, Miss.; Rev. R. H. Barr, Beauregard, Miss.; Rev. H. C. Murphy, Tickfaw, La.; Rev. L. T. Sargent, Smithville, Miss.

Brother J. E. Denson, who is now residing in Baton Rouge, was in New Orleans last Monday, and attended the session of the Protestant Preachers' Association of this city. It seemed good to shake his hand and see his face again.

Mr. H. H. Boswell, of Kosciusko, Miss., representing Millsaps College, bore off the prize in the State Oratorical Contest held at the Mississippi Chautauqua, at Crystal Springs, on Tuesday night, July 30. Hurrah for Millsaps! She has a way of getting what she goes after.

In spite of the fact that the Divinity School, the Camp Meeting, and the Assembly have closed their meetings at the Seashore Camp Ground, there are a number of preachers yet on the ground. Regular services are conducted under the Tabernacle, and are largely attended.

Rev. A. G. Shankle will spend the remaining weeks of August away from his pulpit in New Orleans, taking a season of needed rest. He had planned to take his vacation earlier in the summer, but a complication of affairs prevented him from getting away sooner. He will probably leave this week.

Brother W. E. Thomas, pastor of the Second Church, New Orleans, is holding his usual crowds at the preaching services, in spite of the hot weather. He is deservedly popular with his flock, and especially has a firm grip on the young people of his church and of St. Mark's Hall, where he has charge of the Boys' work.

The Millsaps graduating class of 1912 held a rather unexpected reunion at the College on Monday evening, July 29, fifteen out of nineteen being present. A banquet was given and the occasion was one of much interest. President and Mrs. A. F. Watkins were on hand to chaperon the happy young people in attendance.

Dr. P. I. Lipsey, the scholarly editor of the Baptist Record, published at Jackson, Miss., has been elected instructor in the Biblical Department of Mississippi College, at Clinton, to succeed the late Dr. H. F. Sproles. Dr. Lipsey is admirably equipped for the place, but whether he will accept it we are not informed.

Two sermons were preached to deaf-mutes in New Orleans last Sunday: One under Catholic auspices by Rev. D. D. Higgins, of Kirkwood, Mo., and the other by Rev. H. Lorraine Tracy, a missionary to the deaf in this part of the country, at St. Paul's Episcopal Church. At the latter service there were said to be about 200 people present who could not hear.

Rev. C. A. Battle, the gifted young pastor of Felicity Church, New Orleans, has fitted up the lawn about his church with seats and lights, and during the hot summer evenings is holding the preaching services outdoors. He finds that the plan is popular—not because it is novel, but because the audience can listen better when not so sorely oppressed by the heat.

We greatly regret to be informed of the serious illness of Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Como, Miss., which is announced elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. He is one of the choice young ministers of our Church, and we can ill afford to spare him even temporarily from the active service. Let the brethren remember him and his anxious loved ones at the throne of grace.

The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting, on the East Feliciana charge, will begin on Friday, Aug. 23, and last ten days. Rev. J. G. Snelling, of the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, and Rev. Elton Wilson, of Hammond, will be the preachers in charge. Accommodations may be had on the grounds. For further information address O. E. Townsend, Oaknoia, La., or W. L. Haney, Clinton, La.

The issue (Jackson, Miss.) of July 26 contained an ably written and most instructive article on "The Mississippi State Penitentiary" by the chaplain, Rev. John D. Ellis. We hope to be able to give our readers an extract from it in next week's edition of the Advocate. Brother Ellis is rendering a great service in his responsible position, and should have the prayers and co-operation of all the brethren.

In a letter written on August 5, Rev. J. H. Foreman, our pastor at Bogue Chitto, Miss., says: "I preached for Brother R. S. Gale at East McComb yesterday at 11 a.m., and spent the afternoon with him at Summit. He is very sick. He wishes the prayers of the brethren for his recovery, but said to me, 'If I go, you will know where to find me.' Brethren, do not forget this man of God in your seasons of devotion."

Marked improvements are being made at the Mary Werlein Mission in New Orleans. Shower baths, a thorough system of lights, and a reading room are included among features added. Brother W. W. Holmes, who has largely been looking after this mission, has received the encouragement of the municipal authorities in the work, and he has been assured that the cost of installing the new lights, and water works will be taken care of by the city.

From an issue of the Jackson Daily News appearing last week, we clip the following: "Rev. J. M. Morse, pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, has been presented with a thirty-days vacation, and a purse containing the snug sum of $150, with instructions to enjoy himself as much as possible during the next month. Mr. Morse left this afternoon for Gulfport, to spend a few days, after which he will go to Montevalle for a well-earned rest."

Rev. H. N. Harrison, our pastor at Lafayette, La., was an appreciated caller at the Advocate office last week. He had many good things to say of his flock, who have given him a nice vacation, and whose kindnesses to him and his family are unceasing. Brother Harrison spent his season of rest partly at the Seashore Camp Ground, and partly in the city of New Orleans. He well deserves the kind treatment which his people are giving him.

Rev. George Manotte called at the office last week and made us happy by a good report of the work he is doing. Brother Manotte is the representative of the American Bible Society in Southern Louisiana, and is placing hundreds of volumes of the Scriptures in the hands of the people. He travels almost constantly, and where he cannot sell the Bible he gives it away. No class of missionary work surpasses in importance the careful distribution of the Word of God.

Rev. J. T. Murrah, our pastor at Aberdeen, Miss., not being in robust health, recently took a respite from his labors and went to Dawson Springs, Ky., to recuperate. We are pleased to be informed that he returned home a few days since, much improved physically. The new church which he projected in Aberdeen more than a year ago is now nearing completion. One who is a good judge of church architecture says, "It will indeed be a thing of beauty."

Brother S. B. White, our efficient Sunday school superintendent at West Point, and one of the first laymen of the North Mississippi Conference, in a personal note to the editor, bearing date of August 3, says: "Mrs. Amos Kendall is at present a guest in our home. It is, indeed, a benediction to have her." Sister Kendall is the widow of the late Rev. Amos Kendall, whose name is "as ointment poured forth" all over North Mississippi, and a woman of uncommon attainments and the noblest Christian character.

Rev. A. S. Lutz is having success at Homer, La., and will no doubt give a good account of his work at Conference in Monroe next December. He was engaged last week in a revival meeting at Lisbon, where he assisted the pastor, Rev. J. B. Williams. Revival meetings are now in progress in many of the charges in North Louisiana and many souls are being saved. Doubtless our "Tidings from the Field" department will soon be filled with glowing accounts of wonderful works of grace.

Mrs. R. H. Wynn, the accomplished wife of Presiding Elder Wynn, of the Lafayette District, is an expert writer of shorthand. Whenever she attends a service and hears a lecture or sermon that is above the ordinary she takes it down. As a result, she has on hand many valuable discourses. She has each of the splendid addresses delivered by Mrs. George N. Robinson at the Seashore Divinity School this year, and is planning to transcribe parts of them for the benefit of the many women in Louisiana who were denied the privilege of hearing them.

Rev. S. M. Frazier, who assumed charge of the Silver City work a month ago, has received seven into the Church. The work under his guiding hand is progressing. He reports that his people have recently been greatly benefitted by two able sermons preached by Dr. Huntley, the presiding elder. We do not doubt Brother Huntley's ability to edify any congregation by his sermons, and we are furthermore persuaded that every interest of the Church will receive careful attention in Silver City during the pastorate of Brother Frazier. The Advocate has already been remembered.

After Friday of this week, the Editor of the Advocate expects to be out of his office for fifteen or twenty days. He has stayed at his post through the entire summer, but for the past two weeks has not been well, having been confined to his room with fever a part of the time. He will spend his brief vacation with friends in Central Mississippi, resting and looking after his personal business, that he may have no interruptions when the heavy work of the fall is on. This statement is made that persons writing the Editor may know why replies to their communications are deferred.

Bishop Edwin Mouzon will occupy the pulpit in our church at Crowley, La., on Sunday, September 29. Brother C. D. Atkinson, the pastor, whose reputation as a worker is second to none in the Louisiana Conference, filled his pulpit last Sunday after a month's vacation. He expects to push the work of building the new $30,000 church which he enterprised a few months since, and its completion will be effected as rapidly as possible.

The Clark County (Miss.) Sunday School Association recently at Enterprise, Miss. The printed last week at Enterprise, Miss. The printed program sent out by the County Secretary contained much valuable information and many suggestive subjects for discussion. In the information department under the heading, "Papers Methodists should Read" the New Orleans Advocate is quoted at $2 per year. While this is fifty cents too high, there is little doubt that the editor of the program thought that the Advocate should be $2 per year, since that is the price of the Baptist Record, published in Jackson, Miss., and announced in the same program.

Dr. J. W. Lee, in a communication in the St. Louis Christian Advocate, re-enforces the Board of Stewards of the St. Paul's M. E. Church, South, of Springfield, Mo., in their request that at the approaching session of the Annual Conference (which their people are to entertain), the evening hours shall be devoted to preaching. He also advances the further suggestion that this preaching should be along evangelistic lines. We are much pleased to see this demand being made. In our opinion, the proposed course would do a vast amount of good; it would tend to emphasize what is our first and chief work as a Church of the Lord Jesus Christ—a spiritual ministry to the souls of men. There are other things beside our money needs.

The Monroe News-Star (La.) reports that Bishop E. D. Mouzon spent Sunday, July 28, in Monroe, preaching both in the morning and evening at the First Methodist Church (which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion) to immense audiences. The News-Star says: "Bishop Mouzon is a scholarly divine, with an eloquent flow of language with which he expresses the deepest thoughts, unfolding the mysteries of the Scripture in a manner that holds the attention with acute interest throughout his discourses." While in the city, the Bishop was the guest of Mrs. M. A. McHenry and Mr. Leon McHenry who entertained at dinner in his honor. Among those present on that interesting occasion were Rev. W. Schuhle, presiding elder of the district; Rev. T. J. Norworthy, the pastor; Mr. R. O. Randle, president of the Board of Stewards, and Mr. C. H. McHenry and Mr. Neil McHenry.

Writing from Indian Bayou, La., under date of July 29, Rev. J. S. Rutledge, the pastor, says: "We closed our meeting here last night, with what those who ought to know say was the largest crowd ever gathered at a church service at Indian Bayou. We had a week of delightful weather, and the meeting was an excellent one. The preaching was done by Rev. S. L. Riggs, and it goes without saying that he is a captain at the helm in a revival campaign. We had 17 accessions to the Church, and untold good was done. Our Sunday school is very fine, and one most commendable feature is that the children stay for preaching. Thus the pastor has an opportunity to feed the sheep and the lambs together; but he is made to feel that he stands in urgent need of divine assistance when he reflects upon the fact that each sermon may live in the hearts of some of these children for fifty or sixty years."

Under date of July 29, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, our energetic pastor at Slidell, La., writes: "The work here is moving along very well. I have baptized 19 children and have received 25 persons into the Church. The majority of these joined at Slidell. I was assisted in a revival at Covington by Rev. John H. Williams of the Isle of Pines, formerly in the Alabama Conference. In this meeting, which closed early in July, forty or more professed conversion. I will enter this week into a series of revival services with a Baptist minister at Pearl River. We are planning for an evangelistic campaign in Slidell in the near future. Our women are faithfully at work, and the schools are doing well. Mrs. Lipscomb, our baby, and I were all sick last week." It pleases but does not surprise us to hear of the good progress that is being made in this charge under the leadership of Brother Lipscomb. We regret, however, to know that illness has invaded his home, and we trust that ere this the stricken ones have completely recovered.

J. D. ROLLINS was born in Jefferson County, Miss., March 5, 1830, and died June 23, 1912. He moved to Claiborne County seven years ago. Brother Rollins united with the Baptist Church at McBride when 16 years old. Oh! how sad it is for us to see our loved ones leave us just as the day of a useful life has begun! He married Clara Perkins eight years ago. He leaves a wife, a father, mother, three brothers, three sisters, and three precious little children—two boys, and a little baby girl who will never know the love of papa. He was a kind husband and an affectionate father. I want the prayers of all praying people. I have a great responsibility on me and I want to raise my children to be Christians. Brother Blackwell preached the funeral sermon.

By His Wife, CLARA.

ROBERT JOHN GOODLOE was born June 14, 1830, in Orange County, North Carolina, moved to Madison County, Miss., in 1846, and was married to Miss Julia Hodge May 1, 1856. To them five children were born, three of whom preceded the father to the other world; the other two, Claud and Julia, with the aged mother, grandchildren, and many relatives and friends remain to mourn his going. Uncle Bob, as he was called, filled well his place in all the activities of life. He was a true husband, a good father, a useful citizen, a dauntless soldier, a trusted friend, and a faithful servant of Christ and the Church. To do his duty was the pride of his life. On March 4, 1912, he passed peacefully from the stage of action to the great beyond, and we laid his body to rest in the quiet shades of the family graveyard near his home. May the God of all grace sustain the loved ones.

His Pastor,
L. L. ROBERTS.

BEN J. RUDDER was born in Tennessee, June 18, 1844; came to Shreveport in 1848; was married Dec. 26, 1865, and died Jan. 10, 1912. He enlisted in the Confederate Army from Shreveport when he was 18 years of age and served until the surrender. He was at the siege of Vicksburg, Pine Bluff, and Little Rock. He lived in Texas six years and while there joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Upon his return to Shreveport in 1861, he was employed in various municipal offices and in such proved himself a citizen of great worth to the community. In 1889 he placed his membership in the M. E. Church, South, under Dr. Scruggs. When the Jordan Street Church was organized he was a charter member. At the present site of the church on Texas Avenue, he was a constant worshiper and was a faithful steward for twenty years. He was familiarly known as "Uncle Ben." All classes loved him and appreciated his high Christian character. He owned a gospel wagon which was used many times to do outdoor work, especially in the cause of prohibition. At his funeral a large crowd was in attendance to pay their last respects to one who had always been kind and true to those in need.

ALBERT S. LUTZ.

JOHN C. COMMANDER, son of Rev. J. P. and Eliza E. Commander, was born in Attala County, Miss., September 5, 1848, and departed this life April 21, 1912; was converted under the ministry of Rev. Hill Bounds in early youth, and united with the Methodist Protestant Church, coming into the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the union of the two Churches in 1866. In the character of Brother Commander all the graces of Christian manhood were proportionately and beautifully blended. A friend and neighbor who had known him from his childhood said: "Too much cannot be said in praise of his Christian character." As a friend and neighbor, a husband and father, a son and brother, a citizen and member of the Christian Church no truer, cleaner, and more trustworthy man could be found. He was the "salt of the earth and the light of the world." His death has, indeed, "left an aching void" in the social and religious life of the Bethel community. But in all the varied relations of life he left it a rich inheritance in precept, example and influence. To the gracious care and protection of Him who is a Father to the fatherless and a Husband to the widow, we lovingly commend the wife and two children.

D. M. GEDDIE.

On the evening of May 25, 1912, the soul of little ERMA, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Gibson, winged its flight back to God, who gave it. She was born August 17, 1910. Only for a brief period was she permitted to live here, but they were months filled with blessings in the home, for she was such a sweet and loving child. The memory of her little life will long be fragrant, although gone from home and loved ones for a season she still abides in their thoughts. To the many loved ones little Erma is only a jewel gone to be found. We cannot bring her back, but we can go to her. She left a father, mother, one little sister, and other relatives to mourn their loss. She went to meet her Savior in that beautiful land called heaven, where they will never say good-by. Let us try not to complain, since God thought it best, but let our aim be to meet little Erma in heaven.

Her Grandma,
ALICE COURTNY.

The subject of this sketch, MRS. M. E. MITCHELL, daughter of William H. and Elizabeth Holland, was born May 15, 1851. She was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at old North Union, near Bellefontaine, Miss., in the early years of her childhood. She was married to Rev. A. H. Mitchell on October 23, 1866; to them were born nine children, two of whom preceded her to the grave. After an illness of eighteen months, her pure spirit was released and went to its heavenly home, July 18, 1912. The funeral service was conducted on the afternoon of the nineteenth of July in the Methodist church at Bellefontaine by the writer, who was her pastor, a large number of relatives and friends being present. Her body was laid to rest in the North Union Cemetery, one mile north of Bellefontaine, there to await the resurrection of the just. She leaves a husband, one brother, seven children, and about forty grandchildren, besides a number of relatives and friends to mourn her going. Weep not, dear friends, for our loss is her gain; remember that God doeth all things well. He never calls on us to undergo a trial, which we cannot bear, if we only trust him. God had use for her, or he would not have called her home.

G. W. McLAIN, Pastor.

Tidings From the Field

Pickens, Miss.

We are moving along reasonably well. We have had two of our meetings, the first at Pickens in June. While we did not accomplish what we desired, yet we felt that the meeting did great good. The preaching was done by Rev. J. H. Bell. His preaching is direct and strong, and will live in the hearts of all who heard him. We have just closed a great meeting at Goodman, resulting in ten additions to the Church. Some hard men who had resisted for many years were reached. The preaching was done by O. P. Armour of Sidon. Armour is a splendid leader and helper. His preaching is spiritual and moves upon the hearts of his hearers. We organized an Epworth League with twenty-two members. The people are talking about a nice, up-to-date brick church for Goodman, which is much needed in that hustling little town, filled with such good people. We were greatly aided in this meeting by the help of Brother Ellis, pastor of the Baptist Church, and Brother McBride, pastor of Presbyterian Church, as they led their forces with us. May God bless them and their people. Pickens is a splendid charge, composed of as fine people as can be found anywhere, and I can truly say they know how to be kind and helpful to their pastor. We are having a good year.—J. D. Simpson, Pastor.

Centerville, Miss.

Dear Doctor: Will you give me a little space in the Advocate to say a few words concerning our meeting here in Centerville, which began on July 14, at 11 a. m., and closed on Sunday night, July 21? Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, one of the missionary evangelists of the Mississippi Conference, and Rev. Ira B. Robertson were with us. Brother Peebles did all the preaching during the meeting, except two sermons by Brother Robertson. Both are true and faithful men of God. Their preaching was spiritual and of a high order, but plain, positive and simple enough for a child to understand. Brother Peebles is a strong doctrinal preacher. He preached one sermon on the mode of water baptism to a crowded house, to the satisfaction of all, except some who believe that immersion is the only mode of Christian baptism. He said nothing to offend any one, but proved clearly that pouring and sprinkling are the scriptural modes of spiritual and water baptism, and that these modes are practical and convenient in all climates and conditions of man. I believe much good was accomplished during this meeting. There were eight accessions to the Church, and the membership was revived. Any pastor desiring help in a meeting will do well to secure the service of Rev. I. L. Peebles. His address is 1522 13th Avenue, Meridian, Miss. I will write more later on. May the good Lord bless you and the readers of the Christian Advocate.—J. M. Massey, P. C.

Morton, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: On the night of July 19, we closed our meeting here. Brother H. F. Tolle, of Lake, preached the first sermon on the night of July 3, just after the Scott County Sunday School Association had held the most interesting and profitable session of its history. I did the rest of the preaching until the Sunday night following, when Brother D. E. Kelley, our Conference evangelist, occupied the pulpit. He did all the preaching from then until the close of the meeting, except two days when he was sick. Those who know Brother Kelley know that the preaching was well and faithfully done. This meeting was in every way a great meeting. The town was stirred up as never before. All denominations were brought under the influence of the meeting. There were forty-five accessions to the Methodist Church on profession of faith, and eight by certificate. It rained a great deal during the meeting, but the people came in spite of weather conditions. I have had many men hold meetings for me, but Dan Kelley gave more nearly perfect satisfaction than any man I have ever had. This is not saying anything against others who have helped me in meetings. His style is simple and straightforward. He never resorts to questionable or clap-trap methods. He depends on prayer, the preaching of the Word, the leadership of the Holy Spirit, getting into touch with the people in their homes, on the street, and in their places of business, for success. He preaches a whole gospel and does not compromise with sin anywhere or in anybody. He does not run on denominational lines, but endeavors to get men away from sin to Jesus Christ as a personal Savior, and yet his preaching is thoroughly orthodox, after the manner of the Methodists. God is wonderfully blessing the ministry of this consecrated man, and he is doing much for the cause of Christ and of Methodism in Mississippi.—W. J. Dawson, Pastor.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER TURNER.

Dear Brother Meek: I have just returned from Hico, La., where I assisted the pastor, Rev. J. B. Williams, in a great meeting. There were about forty accessions to the Church, thirty-seven of them were on profession of faith. The church membership was greatly revived. We had some old-fashioned shouting, the kind that helps a fellow to preach and makes the meeting a greater success. Bloss Williams is deservedly popular with his people, having served eight years as pastor of this charge where he grew to manhood, and was licensed to preach. Every citizen in that country would be glad to have him to serve another quadrennium if the church law would permit. I think, however, he ought to be moved, so as to give him a chance to get married. He is "Cousin Bloss" to every one over there, and in Louisiana the law forbids cousins to marry.

During the first quarter of the Conference year we were unable to do much in revival work on account of weather conditions; however, we have assisted in twelve meetings and received 250 into the Church on profession of faith, and some few by certificate and otherwise. I have received the best of treatment from the brethren whom I have served, and our laymen are well pleased with the method adopted by the Mission Board looking to the evangelization of Louisiana by men regularly appointed to the work of evangelists.

Brother Coleman, chairman of our Executive Committee, tells me that our slate is about full to November 1. If satisfactory arrangements can be made, we ought to have two men appointed to this work next year.

Your brother, A. W. TURNER, Conference Evangelist for the Louisiana Conference.

Woman's Missionary Work

Edited by: Mrs. R. F. Harrell, 1329 Josephine St., New Orleans
Conference Press Superintendents:

Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.
Mississippi Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, Miss.
North Mississippi Mrs. A. C. Yeager, Water Valley, Miss.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

A PRELIMINARY STATEMENT.

By the action of the Council in session at Washington, D. C., April 1912, it was agreed that the space given for Woman's Work in the church papers should be edited by only one woman, this woman to be chosen by the corresponding Secretaries of all the Conferences using the paper. The space thus given is to be used to the best possible advantage. Every Conference and both departments of every Conference are to be represented in these columns. It is to be the medium through which the women of the territory may spur one another to good works, have an interchange of thought and methods, and keep informed of the progress of the work throughout the different sections and the world at large.

This Woman's Department shall, in every issue, contain information of general interest, and it aims to inspire love and loyalty to the cause of missions.

Three Conference superintendents have been chosen: For Louisiana, Mrs. A. C. McKinney of Ruston, La.; for Mississippi, Mrs. H. L. McCleskey of Hazlehurst, Miss.; for North Mississippi, Mrs. A. C. Yeager of Water Valley, Miss. All literature of interest to our women should be sent to them, and they, in turn, will forward this to Mrs. Robert Harrell, 1329 Josephine Street, New Orleans, who has been chosen to edit this weekly column.

Mrs. Robert Harrell is a woman of exceptional ability, and fine Christian character, and we believe the information and inspiration that she will give to us through this medium, will enlarge our vision, and deepen our sense of responsibility to those of God's children, who so much need to know more of the Father's love.

Dr. Meek has very generously given the women of the Missionary Society this space in the Advocate. It will be filled regularly each week with items bearing on the missionary work. In return we expect our women to be loyal to their church paper, and contribute their part to its circulation and support. In order to get this information, which we so much need if we would do the best work, we must have the paper. Let us advance along all lines, and make this year better than any that has gone before.

A WORD OF SYMPATHY.

The love and prayers of all our workers will go out to Mrs. Lee Britt in the great sorrow which is now upon her. Her only child, a young man of 26 years, chief resident, physician in Bellevue Hospital, New York, was killed in the Lakawanna wreck. He was an A.B. and A.M. graduate of the University of Virginia, and a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania—a young man of high character and great possibilities for future usefulness. Mrs. Britt is a member of the Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, and is one of the managers of the eastern division of the Woman's Missionary Council. Her co-workers will bear her up in prayer in this day of deep sorrow.

A High Tribute.

In June Dr. Graham Taylor delivered a series of lectures during the Biblical Institute at Vanderbilt. At the conclusion of his lectures he said: "Your women of the Women's Board (M. E. Church, South) are the most advanced group of social workers that I know in America. They are brave in their work, they are in the advance line. They have seen the vision and they have followed it." These words from Dr. Taylor are to be prized. He is in touch with the great movements for the betterment of mankind and knows the value of different lines of work. Let us still 'go forward' that we may be worthy of this appreciation.

Union.

The question of union has been left entirely optional with both Conferences and auxiliaries. When it has been accomplished it has been done by the majority vote of the members. Still, when union has been perfected many problems arise and much patience and tact are required for their adjustment. Some old and loved methods must be laid aside and with a new (or combined objective) other methods inaugurated. Old plans of both organizations are to be preserved as far as possible, however, so that the same ideals and results may be reached, but with an enlarged vision of the world as a harvest field rather than a section of it. In the face of these difficulties the following words from a secretary of one of the first united Conferences will be of special interest:

"The District Meetings we have had this year have been good, showing a decided improvement over last year in many respects. The confusion of last year has practically cleared away, the resistance in many places to the new order of things fast disappearing, and the new plans and movements are being studied and worked in a most encouraging manner." Let us have patience and work together for the broadening of our own ideas and lives and for the extension of the Kingdom around the world.

"Modern Christians may be divided into two classes—those who are trying to spread the gospel, and those who are trying to spread themselves."

NOT THE CAFFEINE THAT HURTS

From the mass of evidence given by expert witnesses before Judge Sanford of the Federal Court at Chattanooga last spring, one fact stands out pre-eminently, namely: that whatever unpleasant effects may be experienced by some people from the drinking of tea or coffee those effects are not due to Caffeine contained in these beverages. Learned scientists, college and university professors and physicians of national reputation testified that Caffeine has an advantageous effect in refreshing the body and mind and when taken in the customary amount is devoid of any injurious effects.

Practical experiments made upon human beings by Dr. Hollingworth, instructor in the Department of Psychology of Columbia University, prove conclusively that caffeine is not only harmless to mankind, but is an aid in the performance of work. It is the only known stimulant that quickens the functions of the human body without a subsequent period of depression. According to Dr. Hollingworth, caffeine acts as a lubricant, as it were, for the nervous system and has an actual physical action whereby the nerves are enabled to do their work more easily.—Advertisement.

One Grand Trip to Zurich, Switzerland

A number of our contestants have been taking a number of subscriptions and have not as yet sent in the names of the subscribers they have taken. This has not inconvenienced us in any way, however we would be glad to have the names of the subscribers so that they may become readers of the paper at once. To this end we make the following suggestion:

Let every candidate work hard from now until Saturday night, August 10, and then mail to us on that date all the subscriptions and money secured, so that we can get them in time to publish next week the standing of the candidates. A number have made splendid reports. Others have written, that they are working hard and meeting with success. We feel that by the time we go to press August 15, we should have at least five-hundred subscriptions as the result of the contest.

Let the pastors awake now to the opportunity before them. If in a revival meeting, urge the taking of the Advocate from the platform. If you have no candidate in your charge, and there is one in your district, make the rounds for her, and send in a nice list of subscribers to her credit.

There is time yet for contestants to enter the field and become prize-winners. Especially is this true in the Mississippi Conferences, where there are not so many contestants as are to be found in Louisiana.

Remember, the prizes are valuable, and should be won by some one only after having been compelled to work hard for the same. Let each candidate settle down to work and accomplish the greatest possible results in the next few days. Three months are before us. Let us make those three months count for at least two thousand subscribers.

Send in your reports and subscriptions not later than August 10, so that we will be able to publish the standing of the candidates in our next issue.

LAYING THE FOUNDATION FOR ABSOLUTE PROHIBITION.

The neatly bound 100-page pamphlet, "Destroying the Destroyer With Two Weapons," is being distributed rapidly over Mississippi by over 70 persons. People are calling for it. Quite a liberal commission is paid to agents. In fact the profit is given the canvassers in commissions and in premiums to the three distributing the most books in each county and to the four handling the most in the entire State. The Prohibitionists want to put this great little book into the hands of the people this summer. It has been decided to ask each Sunday school superintendent and pastor to try to find some young lady or other person in each church who will handle the book and use the commission in any way she pleases. It is hers. She will have earned it doing good, and scattering seed that needs to be scattered quickly.

The League will very much appreciate it if Superintendents and pastors and teachers will find some one who will handle it and so write us. She can distribute it any place she wishes in the State. We believe our friends will do this to help us win this battle and solve the problem in this State.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By Rev. B. F. Lewis.

Before this issue of the Advocate reaches its subscribers, the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Board will have signed a contract for a field worker. Full particulars will be communicated later to our Sunday school workers. We ask your co-operation.

Brother O. Ware from Sharon writes: "We have observed Children's Day on the Sharon Charge. 'Twas small, but we had it just the same. Hope to have some kind of service at the other churches." That is the kind of spirit that makes a good Sunday school. When our people find we are going to try, they will always help; then we make things go.

From Lorman comes another cheering note from Brother Ramsey: "Children's Day at Cane Ridge. Crowd fine, program fine; leader, Miss Anna P. Jones. Every one looked pleased and happy. Great dinner; good afternoon service. The school extends from Cradle Roll to Adult Bible Class." Brother Ramsey does things.

The Sunday school at Capitol Street, Jackson, has begun its grading and organization. They have a Beginners and Primaries organization under the superintendency of Mrs. Lizzie Fryant, who, before she took charge of the new organization, made a study of the work by joining the "Graded Union" of Jackson. When our teachers recognize the need for as careful preparation for Sunday school work as for public school work, then will our Sunday schools command the child.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

A Christian statesman once said: "The devil is perfectly willing to leave us the prayer meeting if we give him the playground."

Mrs. R. P. Neblett, Houston, has 106 members now enrolled in her Men's Class, and their commodious and attractive room paid for.

Mr. Wagner, of Shannon, has a fine school which is doing good work, and other schools on his charge will go in the "Evergreen" list this year.

At Calhoun City the older ladies meet in the afternoon in a splendid class called the Harriet Countiss Class, in honor of the mother of the splendid president of Grenada College.

We need an "arresting moral decisiveness" in our encounters with evil, and not the diplomatic compromises which so often characterize us when we face conditions needing a speedy remedy.

Rev. W. D. Wendel, of Pontotoc, reports a fine Sunday school and says the distribution of Home Department literature and daily Bible readings is materially increasing family altars in his charge.

Failures may have strewn our pathway last year, but there is always the comfort in the thought that all opportunities are not over; that fall, with its new enthusiasms, cooler weather, and new possibilities, is just ahead.

Mrs. Jack, the efficient Elementary superintendent of Houston, gave an exhibition of the work done in her department at the Aberdeen District Conference, and the children showed every mark of her trained teaching.

A very fine Primary Class of forty members is reported at Amory and the Sunday school is overflowing its present quarters. The Fulton Sunday school is also reported as reaching beyond the high water mark.

Mr. Boyd of Houston has one of the loveliest Sunday school classes in all Southern Methodism—47 dear old ladies who are seventy-five years old and over. He was an enthusiastic Wesley Adult Bible Class member, but was promoted to this greater work.

The insistent demand is for preparedness, and preparation can not be made without a program, for one seldom hits anything who fires at random. Adult classes and all Sunday schools need to begin right now to prepare a clear, decisive, and enthusiastic-producing program of constructive conquest.

Seven hindrances to a good Sunday school: (1) Disorder; (2) Tardiness; (3) Prosininess; (4) Laziness; (5) Inefficiency; (6) Indifference; and (7) Poverty of Resource, Equipment and Enthusiasm. These are common hindrances to every good cause, and should be, and could be, easily remedied one by one.

Three veteran superintendents were introduced at the Aberdeen District Conference at Houston, and it was a great joy to look into their faces: Mr. Johnson, superintendent Wesley Chapel, Houma; Mr. Lewis, father of T. W. and E. S. Lewis and a superintendent for forty years, and Mr. Shell of Houston.

Dr. Richard Warriner's class of fine boys took a "hike" out to Waukomis, a fishing lake near Corinth, July 22. The teacher had been busy all afternoon and had a really delicious Brunswick stew ready for the hungry fellows when they arrived. They had a delightful time and are a class it is a joy to see.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

At Eden, on the Standard charge, a new church is being built around the frame of the old one.

At Selma, the pastor is discussing "The Infant Church" in his prayer meetings, beginning at Pentecost and going into the Acts, thus securing the worshipers' interest in the history of the Apostles and their work.

A new Home Department has been organized at Eunice with Mrs. J. M. Robinson, superintendent, and a Cradle Roll, with Miss Maggie Miller, superintendent. A teacher training class has been organized at Eunice, with Rev. J. O. Bennett, leader, and Mr. J. T. Adams, assistant.

Rev. G. A. Morgan reports that the Washington Sunday school has doubled in attendance since Conference, there having been sixty-two present on a recent Sunday. At Ville Platte the Protestants have all promised co-operation (and the Catholics are cordial) in establishing a Sunday school that temporarily is meeting in the homes of the people. The needed church building is expected later.

Rev. J. F. Foster, teacher of one of the largest Bible classes in the State, is spying out the land in the territory of De Riddle, for the presiding elder, who is prospecting for new fields for our Church to occupy. This sounds like progress, and is as it ought to be. Of course, a Sunday school organization will be one of the first things in planting the gospel, and where as many as ten people can be gathered, this will be done in accordance with the law.

The Sunday School Board has provided a good reading course for our adult Bible classes, one book being by Dr. Chappell on the life and work of John Wesley. Other books treat of the life and work of Christ. What it would mean if our classes would all read them! Even one book sometimes opens a new world to a person when read at the right time. We should give more time and money to cultivating the mind and heart. It can't all be done through the Sunday School Quarterly. Send to the publishing house for a full list of these books and put your classes to reading.

The psychologists tell us that the best surety that the boy will have moral courage is to have his physical courage cultivated. Thus, his dangerous athletics, his roughing it in the wilds, his manly "scraps," and all his risky undertakings have a positive value in his moral training. The "sis-sy boy" has but little place in the heart of the world, and the natural thing is for "boys to be boys." Summer is the time to allow this racial instinct to have a chance to develop, and if our parents and teachers would read a few books like Fisk's "Boy Life and Self-Government" and become intelligent students of the boy life, there would be a corresponding change in the development of our boys. When our parents head their boys' fishing parties and our teachers lead them in their ball games and umpire their contest games, a better day will have dawned. Of course, it costs something to fight mosquitoes on the lake just for a boy's sake, and to give up the office or shop to coach the players in a contest game. But is a boy not worth something? After we "have put away childish things," how hard is it for us to still remember them when we were children, we "thought as a child." In many instances "the boy problem" resolves itself into the ignorant parents' and ignorant teachers' problem. Give the boys a "square deal" this summer.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER BABB.

Dear Brother Meek: I visited Rev. J. B. Randolph, our pastor at Como, who is sick with typhoid fever, yesterday. This is the 29th day of his confinement and there is no break in the fever yet. He is a right sick man. I suggest that prayers be offered for his recovery; especially by the members of the North Mississippi Conference. He was busily engaged in the building of the new Methodist Church at Como, where he is in his second year, when the attack came.

We are getting on well with our work, considering the hot weather. Nearly three-fourths of our Conference assessments have been forwarded to the proper treasurers. We commence our protracted meeting at Love's next Sunday. Pray for us.

Yours very sincerely,
D. W. BABB.

A DESERVED COMPLIMENT.

Dear Doctor Meek: I note with pleasure the deserved and unsought honor that has come to Mrs. Wyatt, the wife of our pastor at Ackerman, in being offered the chair of History in the I. I. & C. at Columbus. The trustees, in complimenting her, have honored the College.

I do not know whether or not Mrs. Wyatt will accept the position, but I feel like saying that it will be fortunate for the hundreds of Methodist girls who are in the school, if she does. Their association with this cultivated woman will be worth much, not only in an educational way, but socially and religiously—particularly in the Y. W. C. A. and missionary activities, in which Mrs. Wyatt is especially interested.

KIND WORDS FROM AN ALUMNUS.

Dear Doctor Meek: Since the end of the school boy's vacation is to be seen looming up in the near future, the trend of our thoughts naturally turns back to text-books, schools, and other things intellectual. And, just now, I have it in my heart to mention my school life as a boy at the Mississippi Conference Training School located at Montrose; to say a word in behalf of this institution that so nobly did its part toward me, and the able men and women who were instrumental in inspiring me to higher things.

When a mere boy I entered the Mis-issippi Conference Training School. I found a faculty composed of Christian men and women of strong mental ability, with a heart-felt interest in each and every student. That interest did not confine itself to the class-room, but followed us in all our outside affairs. They made themselves our friends, and, with very few exceptions, we made good. At the close of the session 1909-'10, after three years of work, I secured my diploma. Not much 'tis true, considered from a finished standpoint, but dear enough to a school boy's eye, and certainly an incentive to higher things.

Tho' there have been several changes in the faculty since my last session, tho' Drs. Chapman, Betts, Moore and Galloway have all in turn presided over the school since my first session, it has been in no way weakened, but ever stands for thoroughness and progression. This Conference school makes no effort to be classed as a college. It is preeminently a preparatory institution—a training school—and its work is a great one. The Mississippi Conference was wise in establishing such a school, thus supplying the missing link between the public school and the college. The work is of the greatest importance, and well does the school realize this fact. There is no shirking of work at Montrose, no smattering of knowledge, but a thoroughness that is unmistakable in every department.

The Methodists of Mississippi should be found rallying around this school. It is our school, and it has made good. The work is thorough, the curriculum strong and, with a good word here and there, the capacity of the school would be filled to overflowing, and its facilities greatly increased. I earnestly urge the parents, who have children to send to school, to place them at Montrose. You will never regret it. It will be the means of giving your children a firm foundation, for which they will have cause to rise up and call you blessed. You may send your children there, safe in the knowledge that all their needs will be looked after—intellectual, moral, and physical. They will be cared for and guided by teachers who have in mind their responsible duty of training youth for future well being and intelligent citizenship. I will always rejoice with my parents over the choice of the Mississippi Conference Training School for my early training. It has fitted me for my university course as no other school in my knowledge could have done.

Being in historic Lexington, I have seen sights that are new and strange to me, Dr. Meek—sights that are worth while to every Southerner. Located in the far-famed Shenandoah Valley, encircled by the Alleghenies on one side and the Blue Ridge on the other, with the lazy old North River at their feet, the little city of Lexington is an interesting spot for tourists. A town of ante-bellum days, and the center of old Virginia aristocracy—hallowed by the one-time residence and burial place of the immortal Robt. E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson. MARVIN LAGRONE ROGERS. Lexington, Va., July 25, 1912.

Player Pianos

For the Advocate Piano
Club

CLUB MEMBERS should not overlook the fact that they have the right to select either the regular Ludden & Bates' Cabinet Grand Piano or the Ludden & Bates' Cabinet Grand Player, which any member of the family can play. The player is identically the same instrument as the regular style Cabinet Grand, except that it has the player attachment. It is really two instruments in one and can be instantly converted from a piano into an automatic player piano.

Please do not confuse this player with any other. It is really in a class by itself; for it possesses all of the beauty of design and finish, the magnificent tone and responsive action of the Ludden & Bates' Cabinet Grand. The player mechanism is perfected to a degree that musicians did not ever dream of a few years ago. Even if you do not know one note from another, or cannot "carry a tune," you can, nevertheless, produce the sweetest and best of music on the Ludden & Bates' Cabinet Grand Player. The modulation of tone and time is exquisitely sensitive to the mood of the player and the requirements of the composition.

If your family contains any members who have not the time or talent to study music, you will certainly be delighted with the Ludden & Bates' Player. All of the attractive features of the Club apply on the Player just as on the regular piano. Remember that the

OBJECTS OF THE CLUB ARE

1. By clubbing together to secure the lowest wholesale prices for Club members. The Club saves you fully one-third the cost. Ludden & Bates finance the Club and ship your instrument at once.
2. To obtain for its members the most advantageous terms of easy monthly or quarterly payments. Almost any terms you want.
3. To provide that in the event of your death, after $60 has been paid all further payments are anceled and your family is given a receipt in full. This is a splendid feature and removes every objection to the easy payment plan.
4. To insure the best quality of pianos and players guaranteed by an old and reliable house, thus avoiding the disappointment so often resulting from dealing with irresponsible firms. Club members also have the privilege of testing the instruments thoroughly in their own homes before accepting them.
5. To obtain for the Club member the best price for his old piano in exchange for a new one or for a new automatic player piano that any member of the family can play.
6. Every piano and player furnished to Club members is fully guaranteed and backed by the reputation of Ludden & Bates, one of the oldest, largest and most reliable Piano Companies in America.

The above picture shows the Ludden & Bates' Cabinet Grand Upright Player Piano, opened. When closed or when being used as a regular piano it cannot be distinguished from the regular Ludden & Bates' Cabinet Grand Upright Piano. Furnished in Mahogany, Walnut or Oak, as desired.

Hundreds of Letters from Club Members Express Appreciation

Since the first Club was organized we have printed in these columns many letters from Club members expressing their high appreciation of the Advocate Piano Club and their praise of the instruments. In speaking of the Ludden & Bates' Cabinet Grand Automatic Player Piano, Professor Orr says: "We made the selection after a careful study of every player piano in Savannah. We consider it the sweetest toned instrument we have ever used and are greatly pleased with our purchase. The player is perfectly satisfactory, and so is the instrument when used as an ordinary piano."

Remember that the name of Ludden & Bates on any instrument is a guarantee of highest quality. Ludden & Bates' Pianos have been on the market for nearly half a century, and enjoy a reputation which is not surpassed by any instrument anywhere. In addition to their superior tone qualities, they have the advantage of being especially constructed for the trying Southern climate, and it can be confidently asserted that there is no other piano on the market today that so perfectly meets the needs and requirements of that class of Southern people who demand superiority in both quality and durability.

All readers are invited to write for their copy of the Club Booklet and Catalogue, fully describing and illustrating the Club plan and the pianos.

"Prove All Things: Hold Fast That Which is Good."

WHOLE No. 2948.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, AUG. 15, 1912

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

We take the following from the Raleigh Christian Advocate: "Are you a progressive? There are progressive and 'stand-pat' Republicans; there are progressive and reactionary Democrats; there are progressive and ——— pastors. Among other things, the progressive pastor is one who has his church paper in the homes of at least all of his official members."

The Convention of American Organists, in session at Asbury Park, N. Y., a few days since, pronounced against "ragtime" music in our churches. Doubtless there is some justification for this criticism, but we should hesitate to let these specialists make our musical programs for us. Between "ragtime" and operatic music, the choice is a difficult one; indeed, we believe that we should prefer the former. It at least has the merit of being understood by the people. Paul said he had rather speak five words that a congregation could understand than ten thousand in an unknown tongue; and, if he had lived in this day, no doubt he would have applied the same rule to singing.

Evidences of the extent to which the Bible has affected human thought are not lacking. It gives to our writers and speakers their best illustrations and figures of speech. Mr. Bryan, in his address to the Democratic Convention, closed with a reference to the pillars of fire and cloud; Mr. Roosevelt recently ended two of his great speeches with the statement, "We stand at Armageddon and we battle for the Lord"; Gov. Woodrow Wilson rounded out his speech of acceptance with the Pauline expression, "We thank God and take courage." Truly, the language and philosophy of the Old Book are woven into the very warp and woof of our social order and intellectual life.

In endeavoring to reach the unsaved, do not forget the agency of prayer. And pray specifically for certain persons; prayer loses much of its power when too general and indefinite. Press the individual case with earnestness and persistency, and God will hear and answer you. He can touch men by the Holy Spirit that you could never reach. Are you enlisting him sufficiently in your work? Alas! we fear that the most alarming apostasy of our time is at this very point—that we are too unmindful of our great Co-partner in our well-meant, but too unfruitful labors. When we work in our own puny strength, we can do but little; it is when the Master works through us that success crowns our efforts. Nor can it be too strongly emphasized that Jesus chiefly uses those who wholly surrender themselves into his hands and who most keenly feel their need of him. Self efficiency can lead only to disastrous failure in attempted spiritual service.

OUR CHURCH'S TRUE POSITION.

The charge is sometimes made that the Southern Methodist Church was organized for the purpose of trying to perpetuate negro slavery, but, as a matter of fact, such a view is wholly erroneous. She had, to be sure, many members who believed that slavery was wise and justifiable, but she had within her pale others whose sentiments were against it. The Church, as an organization, was neither an advocate nor an opponent of slavery. Her position was that slavery was a political and social question, not a spiritual or moral one, and that its handling was a matter for the State and not for the Church of Jesus Christ. Her attitude was set forth in a masterful manner in a review article, written by the South's great thinker, Dr. Albert Taylor Biedsoe, in 1872, which we quote in part:

"With respect to slavery, the Southern preachers in the memorable conflict of 1844 took exactly the attitude maintained by our Lord and his Apostles. They denied all right of ecclesiastical legislation in the premises. Whatever the Christian citizen may have to do with it belongs to his relation as a citizen, not as a church member. In a republic, unquestionably, if the people are Christian, the Christian conscience ought to realize itself in civil as well as ecclesiastical legislation. But the Church, as such—the Church in its organized capacity, in its legislation—has no right to enter the political arena. She always comes out of that sort of contest with soiled robes and a disfigured face.

"On this issue the Southern Conferences were inflexible. They would render to Caesar the things that were Caesar's. They would not consent to be dragged into a contest with the State in a matter over which the jurisdiction of the civil authorities is clearly recognized by the Scriptures. They could not be made a party to a crusade against that which had passed without animadversion under the eyes of inspired men, and of the Lord himself. They were not propagandists of slavery. Such a charge was made, but it was both false and malignant. Individuals among them did no doubt utter pro-slavery views. But the Church, South, in her ecclesiastical assemblies, and in her pulpit, took the Apostolic attitude. She left civil institutions to the State. She never did constitute herself the champion of slavery. She was simply the custodian of the gospel, both for the master and the slave. On this issue the Methodist people, North and South, parted from each other.

"The Methodists of the South held that in those affairs ascertained by Scripture to lie within the domain of the civil magistrate, the Church may not intermeddle; that the institution of slavery is ascertained by Scripture to lie within the domain of the civil magistrates; therefore, the Church may not intermeddle with it. The Church must keep to her own affairs. She has no more right to trench upon the domain of the State, than the State has to trench upon her liberties.

"This was the issue: The question was whether the Church had the right to interfere in affairs purely political. The South said no, and could maintain her negation only through a separate ecclesiastical organization. She had no alternative but to be involved in a conflict with the State in a case in which the jurisdiction of the State was unquestionable, or separate from the Northern Church."

Every one who is informed as to current events knows that each of the two branches of Episcopal Methodism is to-day animated by much the same spirit as that which controlled it in 1844 and in the stormy years that immediately followed. The Northern Church is still much more prone to meddle in politics than the Southern Church. Within comparatively recent years some of its Bishops have been known to take the stump for presidential candidates, and only last year many of its congregations observed Lincoln Sunday, glorifying a man who, though he was able and, we think, patriotic, was not a Methodist, nor indeed a member of any Church. Such things would not now be tolerated by the Methodists of the South, though we regret to say that we think there is an increasing tendency among us to dabble in secular affairs. Let us read the splendid history made by our fathers and set ourselves resolutely against this trend. As a Church, we have a far nobler mission than to promote civic enterprises and the success of political parties. It is "to spread Scriptural holiness over these lands" and to set up the Imperishable spiritual kingdom of Christ in the hearts of men. And the regeneration of individuals will finally lead to the transformation of the social order, as certainly as day follows the night. Christian men acting in their capacity as citizens will produce a Christian State, wherein dwell justice, equity, and righteousness. The truth is, there is no other way by which this desirable end may be successfully achieved.

SHOULD STRIVE TO IMPROVE.

A man really never knows when he has reached his best. Given a resolute will and fixity of purpose, the good of to-day can be made better tomorrow in ninety-nine cases out of one-hundred. In the matters that really count, progress and improvement are possible right up to the very gates of death—after that we fancy they will be still more possible. All that is necessary to make our own best a little better is the steady, upward striving. And it is a terribly crippling delusion that makes us think at any time that we have reached the highest and best that is possible for us. Nothing will send us down in standard of achievement and purposing quicker than to even secretly cherish that conviction. Our best may be and ought to be ever ahead of us.—The Christian Guardian.

GREAT TOE PERSONALITY AND ELSE.

By Rev. H. M. Du Bose, D. D.

The constantly developed center of consciousness determines the spirit of life. It does more; it determines personality. Idiosyncracies, abnormal self-esteem, arrogance of temper, and ethical misdirection in conduct are signs of a personality which has removed from its appointed seat.

A notion of the range of this eccentricity may be gained from a study of the Zodiacal man of the old-time almanac, each general division of whose anatomy (agreeable to the dream of some Chaldean astrologer) is put in apposition to a constellation, or slice of sidereal space. Some of the remoter characteristics of this personality have even been referred to the lunations, but the whole question belongs to a neglected department of psychology, the neglect growing out of the fact that each case calls for a new and independent inquiry.

Thus it happens that the great toe, for instance, as a center of consciousness, has never been fully considered, though its possibilities in this direction are not without suggestion in literature and history. From the adventures of Oedipus, "the swell foot" tyrant of Thebes, expounded in the Athenian poets, to "Old Splay Foot" in the tragedy of "Doctor Faustus," enough of this great toe suggestiveness has been dropped to constitute a science, even a philosophy, had one the patience to gather it up and combine it. Perhaps the very riddle of the Sphinx would emerge from such a combination, nor is the guess altogether a hazard, since many living illustrations of this personality of egotism and ethical eccentricity present, to even friendly eyes, the aspects of a constant and baffling riddle.

The edge of German self-conceit had secure housing under the great toe nail of Mephistopheles, who, accordingly "toed the mark" in undoing sound doctrine, as well as sound conduct, in obedience to the secret wish of young Faust; from which source, it is safe to infer, a specific infection persists in the over-conscious wise of to-day, both old and young.

The great toe of the Pharonic Princess Hermonthis, as vouched for by Gautier in his masterpiece, "The Mummy's Foot," was "slightly separated from the rest, afforded a happy contrast, in the antique style, to the other toes, and was thus given an aerial lightness." This same great toe in the lifetime of its divine mistress "wore rings bearing the device of the sacred scarabaeus." Thus femininity is shown to have shared in the long record of great toe consciousness. But, as for that, it could be shown with equal clearness that Cleopatra lavished a regal pension on her chiropodist, and that Semiramis, though she encased her queenly toes in shoes of iron and used them oft to prod her louting soldiery, was, like the heroine of Chaucer, not hindered thereby "for to daunce" or even to play the queen's other parts. Nor shall I pass over the unconscious complicity of childhood which sings in its nursery rhymes: "I went to the well to wash my big toe," in which there is something more than cadence.

The great toe of old Rameses—a feature more prominent than his slitted eyes or his cantilever nose—which pushed, in Egypt, like the ram of Daniel's vision, still asserts itself in the Bulac Museum, the ghost of an ancient terror, tied with a hempen string and enswathed in a poultice of the same sacred scarabaeus. Well is that virile member, like its titular owner, called the "Great."

Quite early, as the preferred member of the papal anatomy, the great toe of the pontiff came to be the center, not only of a personal, but also of a general ecclesiastical, consciousness. Indeed, from the involutions of much history it is difficult to realize the fact whether was the pontiff or his great toe the more certain personality. This was as much of nature as of office or accident. When conceit takes hold of the individual or the mass, it manifests itself in some form of groveling.

An ancient Gathite, of whom a record survives, rejoiced in the possession of an even dozen of pedal digits, amongst them possibly two pairs of great toes, which fact suggests that antiquity justly boasted a monopoly of giants, if not of egotists. Yet there is ground for suspicion that the ancients themselves believed their times overstocked with self-centered consciousness, for a Jewish judge cut off the great toes of a certain vaunting despot, who acknowledged that he had, in his time, performed a similar surgical operation upon seventy of his rivals. If the seat of consciousness was not restored by this treatment, it is fairly certain that some wholesome readjustments took place as a result.

In his diary William Drummond, of Hawthorndale, thus betrays a confidence of Ben Jonson, the Elizabethan playwright and general wit. Said Drummond: "He (Jonson) hath consumed a whole night in lying looking at his great toe, about which he hath seen Tartars, Turks, Romans and Carthaginians fighting in his imagination." A fertile fancy this, which we have seen to be equally active and productive in some of to-day, with, of course, appropriate changes in the personages supposed to engage in the diverting and flattering gyrations.

But to cite a more modern, if still less classic, record, does not the consciousness of a large circle of worthies center about the great toe that lifts the "pig skin" aloft, a thing which, with its umprage, causes the tenures and jurisdictions of rulers and churchmen to cease, or be of no avail, and themselves to resemble the price of two sparrows? After answering this query, the groundlings may consider themselves at liberty to draw an inference.

And, above all, is it not understood that the great toe is a patrician, an aristocrat, a hobnobber with Plutus, who, no longer blind, dispenses his gifts with the squint of a diplomat? Perhaps, in view of all the facts, the scribe should here write it, "Major Toe." Let it be so printed.

Nor must this faithful record fail of making due mention of his Toeship's fashionable compeer, "the Light Fantastic." The conventional and administrative relationship forbids neglect, though it is only necessary to say that the German doubly applies: "Sie sind Geschwister."

The great toe does, indeed, love good fellowship, and has a penchant for feasts and banquets, and for the coddling of those who linger long over the soup tureen and the ragout platter. Verily, there is a reward in the post prandials, and, maybe, a balance to be settled in the currency of gout, which further illustrates the proverb: "Pride rideth before a fall"; or at least, it shows that compensation is a judicial officer.

The meat of Caesar has an unmistakable tendency to shift the center of consciousness. Official stall-fed personality is under notice to watch itself. So also is the other sort, where responsibility and conscience are left to be their own umpire. Years of lease on an official trust have been known to remove the seat of personality from its normal habitat in the sensorium to the region of the gall duct. It is altogether a case of too constant dining at the table of Caesar. This recalls the fact that an old-time wit conditioned the value of living upon the state of the liver, which is sage enough. Certain it is that many a man's personality has, through the despotism of the grill pan, been crammed, like a trunk victim, into his chief digestive organ. A devil-ridden digestion may be a fault only, but the pampered guest of Caesar's table is headed for judgment.

Rabelais' Gargantua, who was "like to crack for fullness of the table," who picked his teeth with his slipper, washed his hands in his broth, and combed his head with a bowl, may be an exaggerated glutton, but "the alterations and personal habitudes of brain," the temperamental self-inflations and priggishness which were observed to follow the Gargantua diet are wholly generic consequences.

But, to return from even a slight digression, the great toe persists in its role. The shoemaker decrees it the cynosure of polite eyes, putting annually upon the bow end of the leather craft it is to pilot enough thought and labor to fabricate a dreadnaught. The beau sees the world revolve about his member thus adorned. The man of litigious schemes turns his pelt-covered digit into a catapult and proceeds to kick his way to destiny. My Lord of Consequence has the mixed sensation of having his big toe (pelt and all), kissed by fawning patrons, and rudely trodden upon by those who go with him to assize. Even corns have their public uses.

But there is palliation. A partial biographer of Ben Jonson—rare old egotist!—sets his great toe egotism to the credit of his "visual powers." Thus, Jonson was a seer, a painter, a Hogarth in language. He "saw things." That much stands. Great genius atones for much egotism, and sometimes for worse. I say it does, not it should. Little genius, or none, exaggerates egotism and its concomitants. I say it should.

Egotism and other counts more serious stand against Jonson, to use his case further as a text. "He is," says Drummond, "a great lover and praiser of himself—thinketh nothing well done but either he or his friends have done—but above all, he excelleth in a translation."

A lively picture that! Write "plagiarism" for "translation" and you will probably have a fair half of the critic's meaning, though from plagiarism in its vulgar, or even its technical, sense no English writer is freer than Jonson. He was zealous of originality; though a late censor intimates that he took what he liked from Juvenal. His thefts were Promethean. Even Shakespeare proved himself a good "translator." In making plots for his plays, though he was free from the "great toe" egotism of Jonson, probably through a solemn memory of his much embarrassed beginning. No snare is greater than that of a self-appraised genealogy, unless it be the Will Wimple conceit of knowing only the great, and of knowing them over much. Between these two faults, the great toe exalts like the horn of a unicorn.

But, to return to Jonson. Though he did steal fire from Olympus, he was not guilty of carting away Jove's kindling wood. He hid the celestial flame in his own brain cells and thus brought it down to earth. He was no phrase snatcher. There is a fixed guile between the plagiarist of celestial ideals and images and the purloiner of other men's brain coinage. In the first class—"celestial thieves" every one—are Petrarch and Chaucer, Virgil and Milton, Shakespeare and Ben Jonson, Tennyson and other immortals. The cumberers of the other class are nameless. Genius is not a parrot, but an eagle repeating forever the world-old call of his royal race.

The sin of plagiarism, like other ethical faults, as breaches of faith, arrogance, egotism and such, becomes possible only to the "great toe" personality, either in mastery or in following.

If plagiarism is, like De Tocqueville's majority, without the sense of justice, it is also, like Pecksniff, without the sense of humor. Like as not, the plagiarist builds to a large plan, possibly seeks to admonish in holy places with unconfessed borrowings. In such case, the sense of proportion is equally at fault with that of justice and humor.

Some of the early Christian basilicas at Rome were built of quarried stones and the borrowed remnants of classic buildings. It was not unusual to see a fluted column doing duty as an entablature, nor to see a Doric and an Ionic capital matched in the same colonnade. The plagiarist does from choice what the early Church architects did from necessity.

A long-ago incumbent of an episcopal see used to disguise himself as a friar, and, with letters from his own hand, go through the houses of his bishopric. On one occasion, after having preached in his own cathedral a sermon on the sin of purloining, he went, in his friar's disguise, to a distant benefice and there heard a prior preach, with much show of zeal, and with minutiae of detail, the episcopal homily on theft. If that prior lacked as much the sense of honesty as he did that of humor, he was beyond even the correction of friars.

RELIGIOUS WORK IN THE MISSISSIPPI PENITENTIARY.

(An extract from an article by Rev. John D. Ellis, the chaplain, which appeared in The Issue, of Jackson, Mississippi, of July 26, 1912.)

There are more than eighteen hundred prisoners in the Mississippi Penitentiary, many of whom are from good homes. Some of them are as smart as anybody. The negroes are in the majority, fifteen to one.

I visit the sick at the hospitals, and in the cages, and reach all the prisoners once per month in religious service. I write letters for some, at their request; deliver messages to their friends on the outside, and do various acts of kindness, reasonable and legitimate.

I have endeavored to make some of the services evangelistic, and recently many of them have professed belief in Christianity, and a trust in the Atonement. The Board of Trustees have been generous in supplying religious literature upon the recommendation of the chaplain, and during the last few months I have distributed 6,450 tracts and pamphlets, 132 Bibles in English and other languages, 25 Testaments, 450 Gospels, 300 Sunday school quarterlies, scores of song books, and hundreds of miscellaneous publications. I distribute some literature according to the religious belief of some of the convicts. Some want Methodist literature, some Baptist, some Roman Catholic, etc. It is right to give them their preference. I eliminate everything which smacks of bigotry, or sectarianism, and endeavor to preach a gospel broad and powerful enough to save everybody in the Penitentiary.

The American Bible Society of New York has given many Bibles and portions to the prisoners, and the Society promises to give many more.

At this time I am organizing the men and women into leagues, in which they promise to do five things:

1. To pray morning and night.
2. To read the Bible.
3. To refrain from the use of bad language.
4. To keep the prison rules and become an example of good conduct.
5. To cheer and encourage others in well doing, right living, etc.

Many have joined the League, and others will do so.

I regret that there are no chapels on the Parchman farm. The farm there is the biggest and most valuable in the world. It is about ten miles long, and three or four miles wide. Thirteen hundred convicts are kept there, at twelve or more camps. It is impossible for one chaplain to preach at Rankin, Oakley, and Belmont and reach also all the convicts at Parchman in religious service each month, unless three or four camps are brought together in one service, which is being done. The men are compelled to walk from one to two miles under guard to reach the places of worship, and there is no place large enough to accommodate all of them comfortably when they come together, except the yards. The weather often interferes with out-door services and other things militate against success. There ought to be at least four chapels on the Parchman farm, each large enough to seat and protect, and make comfortable four hundred souls in summer and winter.

The authorities are willing for the chapels to be built, but the State has no lumber just now. The wet winter and spring have interfered with the sawing of lumber. It is a long time to wait until the next session of the Legislature and ask for an appropriation. If the State will allow two chaplains the men can be reached in the cages once a month. Still, there are objections to a service in a cage. The beds must be moved into the yard, and the room put in order, where the men can squat on the floor, lean against the walls, or sit upon a few benches dragged in. The truth of the whole matter is, a chapel is desirable at every preaching place, and they can be provided without much cost. It is a physical impossibility for one chaplain to reach all the convicts once per month on the four farms, without bringing the camps together at four preaching places on the Parchman farm; and when they are brought together there is no place large enough to house and seat them comfortably. I do not mention this matter in the spirit of fault-finding against anybody, but simply to show a condition, and represent a need. The Parchman farm is big enough to claim all the attention of a chaplain, or an assistant. The chaplain really should be given an assistant of his own choosing, who will work in harmony with him, and who is acceptable to the Board of Trustees.

I am not complaining at the amount of work which falls upon me. I am simply observant, and realize the impossibility of one man looking after the religious work on four farms in different parts of the State as it needs to be looked after. The distances are considerable, the preaching places of necessity are many, and a belated train on Sunday, or the refusal of the railroad superintendent to stop it for the chaplain, causes the miss of a service. The white convicts at Rankin, some of them, are begging for more preaching, and they ought to have it. The chaplain and an assistant could arrange a schedule of appointments which would reach all the prisoners regularly, at little cost to the State, and thus a growing need can be met. When we consider the amount of revenue the convicts turn into the treasury of the State by the sweat of their brow, it is not asking too much that chapels be built in which to worship and that an assistant chaplain be given.

MILLSAPS AND MISSISSIPPI.

My Dear Doctor Meek: The latter part of May I had the pleasure of a trip into Mississippi and, like the old woman who went to New York City just one time in her life, I am dating everything from the time of that trip. My principal business over there was to deliver a literary address at the Commencement of the Meridian Colleges. I tried to show the young people, and their visitors, that all real literature—epic, drama, romance, lyric, essay, oration, novel, short story, etc.—is an expression of human life. For example, the core, the very soul, of the lyric, is the cry of life. The higher and holier this cry, the finer literature the lyric is. The core, the very soul of the oration, is a persuasion about life. The higher and holier the theme of this persuasion, the finer literature the oration is. But it is not my purpose, in this letter, to rehash that address.

Those Alabama Beesons are doing wonders at Meridian. I never saw two men with as many irons in the fire, and all of them red hot, as these Brothers Beeson have: colleges, farms, stock-raising, poultry pens, dairies, and what not. Everything bears the stamp of progress. When I left there I knew I had not been to Mars, but really I felt as if I had been to a little world all to itself, and with somebody who knows how at the head of it. That night, under the pines in the moonlight, before we went into the auditorium for the exercises, I caught myself half dreaming that J. W. Beeson makes the weather out there to suit the occasion.

From Meridian, I went on over to Jackson to visit my friend, Dr. A. A. Kern, of the Millsaps faculty. While in Jackson I was royally entertained in the palatial home of the youngest and most progressive man, to his years, I have ever seen, and I've been seeing folks some forty-four years. I refer, of course, to Major R. W. Millsaps. By the way, now that it is all over, and our good brother, Dr. Watkins, has been elected to the presidency of Millsaps College, I have something to tell that amounts almost to a joke, on the outside of Mississippi fellows who went down there to "investigate." Major Millsaps, Bishop Murrah, the local trustees, the faculty of Millsaps, and others, were so hospitable that each several man went home just knowing that the lightning was going to strike him. Mississippi has not forgotten ante-bellum cordiality and hospitality.

Everybody knows about Rip Van Winkle's little nap of twenty years. When Rip woke up his gun had fallen to pieces and he had grown old. I had slept only seventeen years, that is to say, it had been seventeen years since I had visited Jackson, or seen Millsaps College; but the college has not fallen to pieces and I am not yet old—bear that in mind! Seventeen years ago I drove out one afternoon to see a single building in the midst of a sedge field and on a hillside set about with young saplings that looked like big, unbranched walking canes. This time I saw a handsome group of modern buildings, beautifully shaded walks and drives, and grass sheared with the care of an experienced barber.

Long time ago, they said the wise men came from the east; but, nowadays some of them are over there in the west. Some of them are native, too. Not only are they wise, but they have built wisely, and are still building wisely. I have the honor to occupy a chair in one of the oldest and best colleges of Southern Methodism, and my honest and candid opinion is that if some of these "oldest and best" schools do not kick up some dust, young Millsaps is going to catch up and pass by some of them before long. The fact is, I regard Millsaps as belonging, already, to a small group of a half-dozen, or less, of our best and most progressive institutions.

I had the pleasure of meeting all the members of the Millsaps faculty except Dr. Sullivan, who was away at a district conference. They are a live, progressive set of men, and if pupils do not learn under them, it is because those pupils do not want study to interfere with their college course. Dr. Kern I have known intimately for a number of years. I want Millsaps to keep him, but I have frequently said to college presidents, "Keep your eye on Dr. Kern. He is one of the coming teachers of English in the South." Dr. Kern would object to my telling it, so publicly, but he declined an offer while I was there, that pays two hundred dollars a year more than he gets at Millsaps. This shows his devotion to Millsaps and his faith in her future.

The city of Jackson, hasn't she made solid advancement in these few years? Seventeen years ago we had to go down West Street to keep out of the mud on State Street. Now, Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington City, needn't feel hurt if your tongue slips and you call it State Street, Jackson, Mississippi. If I had purchased, ten years ago, three acres facing State Street, out near Millsaps College—and most any poor teacher could have done that then—I could now sell it and make more, in the single transaction, than any ten college professors of my acquaintance have been able to save in the last twenty years.

All things considered, do you wonder that so many men from North, East, South and West, were willing to be sacrificed on the altar of the presidency of Millsaps College?

Here's to you, Brother Watkins: may your administration be a great success. You have been a friend of the college from the beginning and you will be to the end. I believe the brethren of both the Mississippi Conferences are with you for the further upbuilding of your great college.

I had the honor to dine with Major Millsaps on his seventy-ninth birthday. I expect to be with him, on a similar occasion, ten years from now, if I have to travel a thousand miles to get there.

Success to you in your great work, and love to all the folks. Yours truly,

WIGHTMAN F. MELTON.

Church News

An aged and childless couple, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Phillips, of Grayson County, Virginia, have transferred to Emory and Henry College a farm worth $10,000. They will continue to reside on the property as long as they live.

Dr. C. F. Reid, who is Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the M. E. Church, South, has transferred his membership from the China Mission to the North Alabama Conference. He is giving himself energetically to the promotion of the great work which has been committed to his hands in the home land.

The Central Methodist Advocate (Lexington, Ky.) reports three charges in its territory in which every home receives the Conference organ. This shows that the achievement of getting every Methodist family to take a church paper is not impossible. May these banner charges in the beautiful Blue Grass State multiply into a vast number all over the connection.

Dr. J. A. Rice, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, of Fort Worth, Texas, is now at Chautauqua, N. Y., where he has an engagement to deliver fifteen lectures on "Prophecy and the Prophets," fifteen on "The Wisdom Literature of the Old Testament," and five on "The Personal Religion of Jesus." He also occupied the Assembly pulpit on Sunday, August 4.

The Trustees of the Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh, N. C., have decided to build two new dormitories for girls. The erection of one of these was made possible by the donation of a fine farm by M's. M. J. Jackson, of Kingston, and the money for the construction of the other will be raised by subscriptions. It pleases us to see the orphanage work of our Church growing. There is none that is nobler.

Philadelphia has a Protestant Episcopal congregation of deaf mutes numbering 250. It is announced that the erection of a new house of worship for them will be begun within a few weeks. There is no danger of the pastor of this flock talking too loud; but, like his brethren, he must still fight against the tendency to undue length. We suppose that what he most needs is to be a good gesticulator.

Our St. Paul's Church, in Denver, Colo., was organized in 1871 with fifteen members and began to meet in a little frame structure. This congregation now has a beautiful house of worship which cost $27,500, and, including the lot, the property is worth $35,000. Under the three-years pastorate of Rev. R. E. Dickinson, 171 members have been received. This does not look like Southern Methodism is failing to make headway in the West.

A young lady graduate of Elmira College, New York, has applied to the Northern Presbyterian Church for admission into the ministry. The case has been referred to the General Assembly, as this denomination has never licensed a woman to preach. The New York Independent keeps up its usual record of advocating the wrong thing by insisting that the door to the pastoral office should be kept open to female as well as male applicants.

Rev. Dr. J. Herman Randall, pastor of the Mt. Morris Baptist Church, of New York City, in company with the governing body of his congregation, has ruled that persons from other denominations may be received into their membership upon a church certificate. This means that people who have not been immersed may unite with his flock. This rule is said to be quite general among the Baptists of England.

The Roman Catholics are claiming that fifty-five students from the General Theological Seminary of the Protestant Episcopal Church, which is located in New York City, have united with the Romish Church within recent years, a majority of them having entered the priesthood. Evidently, if this is true, there is something lacking in the teaching and influences prevailing at this institution. Perhaps the theology taught is too nebulous. The fact that Rome seems to stand definitely for something is an important element of her strength.

The press dispatches announce that the World's Conference on Faith and Order, which is being arranged by the Episcopalians of the United States and Great Britain, will be held in New York City. The object of this gathering is to promote unity, and, as far as possible, organic union among the Christian people of the world. An effort will be made to influence all the denominations to send delegates, and Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan has given $100,000 to help the cause along. We would have more faith in the benefit to be derived from this movement, if the denomination leading in it were less bigoted and more fraternal.

The Paulist Fathers, who are among the most aggressive workers for the Roman Catholic Church, announce that they have been instrumental in making within the past three years 33,247 proselytes from Protestantism in the English-speaking countries. During the three years ending in 1909, they claim to have gained 28,739 converts, and during the three years ending in 1906, 25,955. It is now stated that a Protestant Bureau will begin the collection of figures showing the gains of the Protestant churches from Roman Catholicism. There has been a very general impression that the secular papers would not be willing to publish the names of persons leaving the Romish Church, but it is now stated that a test has shown that this suspicion was groundless; that the editors generally are without bias.

THE MISSISSIPPI INDUSTRIAL COLLEGE.

(A report submitted to the Boards of Education of the two Mississippi Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in their joint meeting in Jackson last June, and ordered published.)

Dear Brethren: The Mississippi Industrial College, located at Holly Springs, Marshall County, Miss., was founded seven years ago by the Mississippi Conferences of the C. M. E. Church in America. The institution owns one hundred and ten acres of land, with three buildings, a dormitory for boys and one for girls, and a central or administration building, which is used for general purposes. Each of the buildings has some space for the industries.

The buildings are all brick, heated by steam and lighted by electricity. They are all well supplied with modern equipments.

Since we began to raise funds to build and foster this institution eleven years ago, more than $150,000 have been raised from the struggling farmers, who are uneducated themselves, but have sacrificed much to provide these facilities for the moral, religious and industrial training of their children. The institution is operated under the auspices of the C. M. E. Church. The entire plant, with all of its possessions, is reasonably estimated to be worth $200,000. Very little money has been raised from any source other than that above referred to; no large sums have been contributed from any source.

We voice the sentiment of its friends when we say that it is desired that in this institution, located in Mississippi, built and fostered by Mississippians, Southern Methodism in our State should take a deeper interest.

We are sensible of the fact that the General Education Board of the M. E. Church, South, adopts its own methods of helping the institutions for negro education under the auspices of the C. M. E. Church, but we are appealing to the love and pride of the Southern Methodists in Mississippi. We do not want to draw the line or to appear provincial in our educational pride, but we do feel that the Southern Methodists in Mississippi should have a peculiar interest in this work.

We have managed to keep out of debt, as far as possible, ever since the founding of this institution; we have never been seriously involved until the erection and completion of the last building, which cost us approximately $40,000. Then, for the first time in the history of the movement, a mortgage was placed on the plant; we borrowed $15,000 and we have only been able to keep up the interest on this money. We are greatly in need of money to cancel this mortgage debt, which will enable us to secure the gift of $25,000 promised us more than two years ago by Mr. Andrew Carnegie, whose conditions compel us to liquidate this debt before receiving his donation. The erection of the building which he promises will place this institution in the foremost rank, if not in the lead, of all Negro institutions in the South, Tuskegee and Hampton alone excepted.

The C. M. E. Church stands ready to co-operate with any plans that your Board may suggest as to the best method of reaching the Southern Methodists in Mississippi. The institution has no endowment or permanent income from any source, but is wholly dependent upon the small contributions that come from friends at large to buy lands, construct and equip these buildings, and pay all running expenses, amounting to ten or twelve thousand dollars annually. Coming from our poor, struggling farmers, this is proving to be quite a burden; we feel that we deserve help. We are loyal to the Mother Church and have never deserted the teachings and the trust committed to us by the fathers, and shall never cease to cry unto you for help.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology is the first educational institution in this country to announce a department for the study of Aeronautics. The new course will be under the supervision of the School of Mechanical Engineering.

The Hymelia crevasse, the largest and most destructive break ever recorded in the Mississippi River levee, was closed last week. Hundreds of thousands of acres of the richest farm land in Louisiana were inundated because of this crevasse, and as a result will produce no crops this year.

Ten thousand seamstresses in New York City are now threatening to strike because the foremen over them use so much profane language that the rooms where they are employed are not fit places for them to remain. If such a strike is called, there is no doubt but that the public will lend its sympathy to the strikers and help them to win.

There are now 1774 organized bodies of the Y. M. C. A., with a total membership of 563,479 in North America. According to the year book which was issued August 1, there has been a gain in membership during the past year of 27,500. The Association now owns $73,000,000 worth of property and new buildings now planned or in process of erection will cost $6,500,000.

More than ten million stamps are issued annually by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing at Washington, D. C. The daily income from the sale of stamps throughout the United States is said to be $1,570,000. It costs the Government an average of $1.703 to make $603,000 worth of stamps; the difference in the manufacturing cost and the selling price being the principal income of the Post Office Department.

A local hall of fame will be built in San Francisco. It will include a main hall in which will be twenty niches in the form of oval frames, garlanded with laurel wreaths. The names of three women have already been selected whose art glass effigies will adorn separate places—Gertrude Atherton, Sybil Sanderson, and Mary Anderson, all native-born Californians. The remaining seventeen to be thus honored will be named by the public.

A hospital in Switzerland has instituted the "Sun Treatment" for tubercular diseases in children. No medicine is given, but the patient is exposed naked to the rays of the sun for hours each day. The treatment is said to be effecting remarkable cures. The doctors of this day are giving less medicine and trusting more to the healing powers of nature, and we think wisely so.

A young man was recently arrested for burglary in Chicago. He is the son of refined and highly respected parents. His downfall is said to be traceable directly to the habit of reading detective stories and dime novels. How long will parents be unmindful of the fact that what a boy reads is in some way woven into his life and character? If there is care exercised anywhere in the culture of children, it should be exercised at this point.

Congress paused long enough one day last week to hear discussed a bill which proposed to do away with flogging in the public schools of the District of Columbia. The Representative who championed the proposed measure claimed that a flogging in school lowers a boy's self-respect. It may do so, but a local contemporary notes that some of the greatest men America ever produced were flogged on an average of once a day during their life in the school room.

The following are some of the names of men who have been connected with recent lawlessness in New York City: "Lefty Louis," "Whitey" Lewis, "Bald Jack" Rose, "Bridgie" Webber, "Dago Frank," and "Gyp the Blood." Was ever such an array of suggestive nomenclature assembled on one occasion? It is easily discerned that the stories about pirates, blood and thunder novels and hair-breadth detective books have played their part in the naming of such men.

On account of the recent Corning wreck on the Lackawanna railroad being due in part to the drinking of an engineer, the Lackawanna System has issued an order forbidding the use of intoxicating liquor by employes, either while on or off duty. This is a step in the right direction. The men whose business it is to man the great railroads over which practically the whole population of America travel, should be sober men. Not sober while on duty, but men whose habits of sobriety are constant and not spasmodic.

Frank H. Starr, a philanthropist of the highest order, recently died in Philadelphia. He was at one time a convict, serving a sentence in the Sing Sing prison, and heard the immortal Frances Willard deliver one of her soul-stirring messages. When released from prison he devoted the rest of his life to his fellow prisoners, 2,500 of whom are good citizens to-day because of his influence. His message to the convict upon his release was, "You brought your punishment upon yourself. You have taken your dose like a man. Now forget it and make every one else forget it."

"Beer cannot stand the light." "Germans know the damaging effects of light on beer." The preceding sentences are extracts from a brewery advertisement. How much truth is unwittingly contained in these two remarks! Certainly, beer cannot stand the light. Neither can the acts of the men who make it, nor the men who sell it, nor the dens of filth and slime where it is sold, nor the politicians whose domain is within the walls of the beer saloon. Light and beer are enemies. Light is the enemy of almost every unclean thing. "They love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil."

A bill is pending in the Legislature of Georgia, the object of which is to require locomotive firemen to pass an educational test before being employed by any railroad within that State. If passed and made effective, the law will cause almost every negro fireman and many white men to lose their jobs. The negro firemen claim that the bill is aimed at their race, but laying aside their contention, which may be just, the law has much merit in it. Locomotive firemen become engineers. The engineer occupies the most responsible position to the traveling public of any man who works as a craftsman. He should have something more than mere muscle and correct vision; he should have sufficient learning to enable him to realize his responsibility, at least.

The Louisville Herald recently contained an editorial in which it contended for the establishment of a great American University at Washington, and that the Government's archives of historical documents, great libraries of valuable books, and magnificent equipment for scientific research, upon which it spends $5,000,000 per year for maintenance, be thus brought into use. It is further claimed that George Washington, in his will, provided for such a university by leaving $25,000 for its endowment, the same to remain intact and accumulate interest until the enterprise should be accomplished. This sum would now amount to $25,600,000, but it has been lost sight of. No doubt the Herald has made a wise suggestion, and one that will receive the approval of the majority of the people.

WHY PARAGRAPH 66 OF THE DISCIPLINE— 1910?

Paragraph 66 reads thus: "Let every Annual Conference appoint a Committee on Admission, who shall inquire into the character and adaptation to the itineracy of all applicants for admission on trial, admission into full connection, readmission, and admission from other Conferences."

It is easily in the memory of many when such law did not exist among us, and at its adoption it was construed to mean a greater protection to the Conference and a relief from embarrassment to the presiding elder; and as we have studied the law, the conviction has grown the more that this is the only legitimate conclusion. While it may not have been in the minds of the advocates of the resolution that this committee should have such absolute powers as those of a Grand Jury in the civil courts, there must have been some such thought in its conception, otherwise the statement of the presiding elder, backed by the report of the committee on examination for admission on trial, would have been sufficient.

If our contention be true, should not this committee, in a large measure, supersede the presiding elder, rather than be merely a supplement to his report, as is too often the case? Should it not be in their power during the interim of district and Annual Conferences to look into all cases that are reported as probable applicants for membership, thereby securing information for their judgment and decision which may not be obtained from the elder, or at the session of the Annual Conference? Should it not be the duty of this committee, if necessary, to hold daily sessions during the session of the Annual Conference that they might become thoroughly acquainted with every case through ministerial brethren whom they might call before them? Last, but not least, should not this committee be composed of men who have no connection with any other committee or board of the Conference? At the last session of the Mississippi Conference this committee, composed of seven members, could have but two short sessions to pass upon the fitness of twenty applicants, simply because five of the seven on the committee were members of different boards, and three officials on said boards. To one member of the committee, at least, the work was not satisfactory, and this evil should be corrected.

OUR ANNUAL CONFERENCE SESSIONS.

In an article under the above title, appearing in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of August 1, "A. J. G.," whom I take to be the assistant editor, deals rather rude blows to my arguments for some changes in our Annual Conference program. In summarizing my criticisms and suggestions and in the use of fragmentary quotations, the writer has dealt so unfairly with my article as to make it appear ridiculous. It is difficult for one to calculate the impression of a written sentence upon the mind of all readers. There need be, therefore, no surprise that some one gets out of your words ideas that you did not intend to put into them. Either I did not make myself clear, or "A. J. G." did not intelligently read what I wrote, or he yielded to the old temptation of writers and speakers to state unfairly the antagonist's view in order to reduce the difficulties of plausible reply.

There are four suggestions in my plan for the redemption of our Annual Conference sessions from dullness and monotony:

1. Dispense with verbal reports. There has come to be such a sameness about said reports that they are next to meaningless. Who has not noticed even the Bishop reading his mail or holding a whispered conversation with some brother while the self-conscious pastor was saying, "A good year, Bishop?" Moreover, as I urged, there are many pastors who do shoddy work who talk in extravagant terms of their own achievements; while many hard workers say very little. Therefore, I suggested, let the presiding elder make a verbal report covering every charge in his district.

2. Now, to quote the exact language of my second suggestion, "My appeal is for every connectional officer present to have brief but ample time to address the whole Conference in session." Nothing was said about "side-tracking all business in order that these great speeches may be heard." Neither did I intend to convey the notion of "turning the connectional men loose on the regular session." It is to be hoped that if "turned loose," whatever that may mean, they would behave themselves properly as platform speakers. But I point to the fact that my only suggestion as to the space allotted these men was "from twenty to thirty minutes." While "no reflection" is offered to our secretaries by "A. J. G." in his remark that "most of the preachers would quietly retire until the speaker finishes," it is perfectly plain that it is a most humiliating reflection, and the more so, because that is precisely what often happens under our present system. But it is the writer's opinion that the reasons for this do not lie in the lack of ability of our connectional men, but in the loose and accidental way we have of introducing them at most any time when a few minutes can be snatched from the meaningless routine. The very unfavorable impression voiced so apologetically by "A. J. G." is by no means rare. But we insist, at the risk of monotonous repetition, that it is because these speeches often have no relation to either what precedes or what follows. There is no progress of thought from topic to topic, no cumulative effect. The whole impression is about this: "We will now suspend business and hear Doctor Blank, after which we will resume the business of this Conference."

3. My third suggestion was for adequate time for deliberation and discussion of "important reports;" for example, those carrying large appropriations or assessments. I protested, and still protest, against the suppression of wholesome discussion, and the hurried passage of reports that are usually written by one man, read hurriedly, and voted recklessly. No plea was made for "floods of oratory" over "each little detail." Here again my friend, the critic, has allowed his peculiar mental make-up to lead him to read into my words his own thoughts. The idea I failed to make clear is this: When the committee has thrashed out its report, let it be presented to the Conference in time to give opportunity for that body to understand, discuss, amend or re-commit the same. If the report is submitted an hour before adjournment when all are on the qui vive for the appointments, it is unreasonable to expect that deliberation which should characterize such a body of men. Often the vote is one of impatience, and any attempt at discussion is considered an unfriendly act by the anxious brethren. Yet these reports are shaping our policies, affecting our colleges, our papers, our hospitals, our missionary, and other interests. My contention is not for "floods of oratory," but for patient deliberation.

4. My fourth suggestion for "such consecration, evangelistic, and educational meetings as will uplift, encourage, and animate" is dealt with more tenderly by my critic. But do we not all agree that to have room for these, we must shorten up somewhere?

In conclusion, may I say three things briefly? First, there is a widespread feeling that our Conferences are not filling the bill. After my above-quoted article one connectional officer wrote me: "We are being crushed with ecclesiastical routine." Another leader wrote, "We must recover the Conference." A third declared that he was compelled frequently to leave the session and go to his room and rest.

Second, I am not bold enough to presume that the solution is contained in my suggestions. The question was up and I ventured to keep it before the readers, believing there must be some more excellent way.

Third, such is my faith in the vitality of the Church, that I am confident that when it becomes a little clearer that we need a revision, the same will be wrought out by as clear-brained, loyal-hearted men as Jehovah ever called to leadership in the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

CONCERNING MISSION STUDY.

To the Louisiana Women's Missionary Societies:

I am informed by our Educational Secretary that the new mission study literature will be off the press in a short while. It will consist of a Mission Study folder and leaflets on mission study, Bible study and library work. The Council has added these last named lines of work and will issue a leaflet with full explanations shortly. The home mission book is "Mormonism, the Islam of America." "The Church of the Open Country" is another timely book that is to be put before our women, while the foreign mission book is "China's New Day." The pamphlet of "Helps" (as it is called for the home book) and "How to Use" (for the foreign) will not be ready before September 1, though the study books themselves are now ready.

The books for intermediates are, "Under Marching Orders," the life story of Mary Porter Gamewell, a missionary to China, and "Winning the Oregon Country," a hero story of the great Northwest that will prove interesting to the young folks. The home mission book for the children will be "Why and How," by Miss Mary Helm. The foreign book will be "The Young China Hunters."

It is urged that auxiliaries plan to begin their mission study by the 1st of October, at least, as that is Mission Study Campaign month. All classes should report organization to Miss Mabel Head, 810 Broadway, Nashville.

Realizing that this department covers the broadest field in the Conference for seed sowing, I purpose making the attempt to have a study class in every pastoral charge, whether a missionary society exists there or not, for I know of no better method of discovering a nucleus for such an organization. I had the opportunity to talk with a number of pastors recently, in whose charges we have no auxiliary, and without exception, they gave me the most courteous and ready hearing, gladly promising to use every effort to assist the women in beginning and carrying on a study class, realizing, as they said, that it would be a genuine help to themselves.

I would appreciate it so much if any pastor of the Louisiana Conference, who may chance to see this, would send me the name of the woman whom he considers the best qualified to conduct a mission study class, in the event he has no organized society to look after this work.

Yours for diligent, enlightening, universal Mission Study,

MRS. R. H. WYNN.

A REQUEST.

Hundreds of members are lost to our Methodism because we have no systematic "follow-up" plan. I expect there are at least two thousand Methodists in Memphis that are not connected with any of our churches.

Sometimes a pastor requests his members, who are coming to the city, not to bring their Church membership with them, as they "may come back some time." The result is, nine out of every ten who fail to bring their Church membership with them, drift away from the Church. Brother pastor, when one of your members comes to Memphis, please notify one of the pastors here. While our hands are overfull of work, we want to save our Methodist people who come to this city. The tide here is very strong against religion, and we need your help.

A MODEST CELEBRITY.

The late Julia Ward Howe, though a woman of very good appearance, was extremely modest. "She once posed for me," said a Boston painter, recently, "but she hesitated a long time before consenting to do so. To urge her on I said, 'Don't be afraid, I'll do you justice, madam.' 'Ah, she answered, 'it isn't justice I ask for at your hands; it's mercy.'"—The Presbyterian.

The little maid gazed thoughtfully at her father. "Papa," she said, "do you know what I'm going to give you for your birthday when it comes?" "No, dear," he answered. "But tell me." "A nice new china shaving mug, with gold flowers on it all around," said the little maid. "But, my dear," explained her parent, "papa has a nice one, just like that, already." "No, he hasn't," his little daughter answered, thoughtfully, "'cos—'cos—I've just dropped it!"—Newark Star.

THE MODERN "SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD."

According to a vote recently taken by a magazine, the greatest scientists accord to wireless telegraphy the enviable position of being first of the modern seven wonders of the world. Following it come the telephone, the aeroplane, radium, antiseptics and antitoxin, spectrum analysis and the X-ray.

This order was evolved from nearly seven hundred replies from many noted men of science in various countries. Wireless received 244 votes as against 185 for the telephone, its nearest rival. The X-ray received 111, although 100 were cast for the Panama Canal.

This list is interesting when compared with that made up by Antipater, the Baedeker of Siodon, some two centuries before Christ.

He heads his selection of the wonders of the world he knew with the Pyramids. Following these come the famous Pharos lighthouse at the entrance of Alexandria harbor, the hanging gardens of Babylon, the statue of Jupiter by Phidias, the mausoleum of Artemista and the Colossus of Rhodes.

Of the seven wonders of the modern world, all are of incalculable benefit to man; all mark great steps forward in his march of triumph.

A comparison with the ancient list is an eloquent demonstration that the advance of the race has been along the lines of the greatest good for the greatest number. Luxury was the password of the ancients; usefulness that of the present.—New York American.

HOW EDDIE PREACHED.

"When I get big enough I'm going to be a preacher," said Eddie one day.

"What is a preacher?" said grandma.

Eddie looked surprised. "Don't you know what a preacher is? A preacher is a man that tells people what the Bible means. And he says, 'Firstly, my brethren,' and everybody listens to him. It's nice to have people listen to you."

Grandma smiled. "I think you are big enough to preach now," she said.

"Really and truly, grandma?" asked the little boy.

"Yes; really and truly."

"I'm 'fraid not," said Eddie, after a few minutes of thought, "or I'd know how, and I don't."

"What does the preacher do first?" asked grandma.

"He takes a text, and then he 'splains it. I can't do that."

"Oh, yes, you can!" said grandma. "Here is a good text for you to explain: 'Be ye kind one to another.'"

"There's nothing to 'splain 'bout that," said Eddie. "You just be kind to everybody, and that's all there is to it."

"A good text, though, for my little preacher's first sermon. I should like to hear him preach from it for a week."

"Preach a week? Why grandma, I can't."

"Can't you be kind to everybody you meet for a week?"

Eddie looked thoughtful. "Would that be preaching?" he asked.

"It would—the very best kind. A good preacher has to preach in that way, or people will not listen to what he says in the pulpit."

"Well," said Eddie, with a sigh, "I suppose I can try; but I wasn't thinking 'bout that kind of preaching."

"You will be showing everybody what that verse in the Bible means, you know," said grandma.

"It's not kind to the teacher to whisper in school," said Eddie the next day; and he did not whisper once.

"It's not kind to Bridget to play along the road and keep my dinner waiting, either," and he hurried home from school.

"It's not being kind to mamma, when I don't do errands promptly," he said; and he did quickly and well whatever he was bidden.

Everyday he thought about what was kind, and tried to do it.

The end of the week came.

"How do you like preaching?" asked grandma.

"Why, I like it; but, grandma, I guess everybody must have been preaching 'bout that text, for everybody has been so kind to me."—The Mayflower.

MRS. S. C. TRUEHEART—AN APPRECIATION.

The M. E. Church, South, has lost one of her best known and most gifted women. On Friday, July 26, Mrs. S. C. Trueheart, former Secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, after several months of failing health, quietly passed away at her summer home in Monteagle, Tenn. Her life was spent in the service of others. When a very young woman she began teaching, and continued in that profession for many years. At the close of the war, while at Stanton, Va., she married a fellow-teacher, and soon after left her native State to go with him to Stanford, Ky., where he became president of a school for girls. At his death, a few years later, she was elected president in his stead. Here she remained until called to be principal of the Millersburg Female College. After some years of service in this capacity she became principal of the Nashville College for Young Ladies, and remained in this position until elected General Secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society in 1895. For many years Mrs. Trueheart had been deeply interested in missions. She had a large share in the organization of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions in Louisville, in May, 1879. She and Mrs. McGavock, the first secretary of the Board, were warm friends, and for some time before the death of the latter they were associated together in the work of the office, Mrs. Trueheart being given charge of the home department of the organization. This work, by no means light, she cheerfully performed without remuneration during the time which she could spare from her arduous duties as principal of a large school. Early morning, late afternoon or evening, she sat, with pad upon her knee, writing letters, and at the same time consulting with teachers, answering questions, granting or denying requests, attending to the multitudinous details connected with the well-being of a hundred or more girls. She never became confused, and she seldom made a mistake.

Never strong in body, her capacity for work was wonderful. So great were her courage and endurance that she often worked when suffering great pain and gave no sign of distress. A strict disciplinarian, she was perfectly impartial. Justice, swift and sure, was meted out for the offense, but there was kindness, oftentimes tenderness, for the offender. No girl felt that she was punished in a spirit of retaliation. If sickness or sorrow came to any one, her sympathy was ever ready, and her patience with the thoughtlessness and waywardness of youth was often manifested, especially if the girl was motherless. She once said that she believed she had been denied the blessing of motherhood in order that she might mother other people's children. To the last she took the keenest interest in "her girls" and their welfare. A hit of news of them was always enjoyed, and a visit from one of them warmed her heart. Into their young hearts fell sparks from the missionary fire, which consumed her own, and many of our best workers served their apprenticeship in the College Missionary Society.

In China, Korea, Brazil, Mexico and Cuba are the splendid school plants of the Woman's Board, which bear testimony to Mrs. Trueheart's wise management and wonderful constructive ability; but after all, she was greatest in the class room, and her greatest service was done in the home land. Scattered through our Southland to-day there are weary, overburdened women, who in the morning have shouldered their loads with fresh courage, remembering her patience and fortitude. There are useful women in happy homes who owe their joy to the fact that in their heedless youth her firm, untiring hand kept their feet from straying from the right path. There are women with little children around their knees, who are molding more nobly the men and women of to-morrow, because of the high ideals which she inspired in them. There are women who have sent forth their sons and daughters into a successful battle with life, armed with the principles which governed her life. These women constitute her greatest monument, and to them her memory will ever be a benediction.

Editorial.

A WRONG EXPLANATION.

Ever and anon we see in the secular papers an outburst of sympathy for the underpaid ministers of the country. For instance, in a recent issue of the Chicago Tribune appeared an editorial from which we take the following: "It appears to be a well established fact that the number of empty pulpits is increasing in all the Protestant Churches. The reasons are not far to seek. * * * A New England clergyman says: 'The average salary of all ministers of all denominations in the United States is $1,223 for cities of over 300,000 population; $1,110 for cities of over 100,000; $1,063 for cities from 50,000 to 100,000; $972 for cities between 25,000 and 50,000, and $573 for all other places.' * * * The poverty entailed subjects the clergyman's family to humiliation too sordid and limitations too arbitrary for endurance. To stand all one's life upon the rim of the abyss which yawns before those who incur hopeless debt, to go without the privileges which people of culture feel to be their right, and to know that pity is an element in the regard given by one's neighbor is asking too much of men who are not willing to carry the beggar's bowl and staff."

We confess to a decided lack of appreciation of such sentiments as are here expressed. That our ministers ought to be better provided for, all must admit; but that they live ever on the verge of want and that they and their families are, in consequence, dejected and discontented, is not true. The churches are caring for their preachers more adequately than at any former period of their history, and if the editor of the Tribune desires to see a fine looking and happy body of men, let him attend a Methodist Annual Conference. The true remedy for empty pulpits is not better pay; much as that may be needed in some places. Men drawn into the ministry by what it has to offer financially would be a discredit to it. Bishop Marvin said he feared for the Church if the day should ever come when its pastors were paid remunerative salaries. The whole history of Christianity shows that when the people are deeply spiritual there is no scarcity of laborers for the field. The problems of Christ's Kingdom cannot be solved by the employment of worldly methods.

A NEEDY INSTITUTION.

We publish in this issue of the Advocate a report from the trustees of the Mississippi Industrial College, which was submitted to the joint session of the Board of Education of the two Mississippi Conferences, held at Jackson last June. The institution, from whose representatives this paper came, is located at Holly Springs, Miss., and is the only school maintained by the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church for the instruction of its youth and the training of its ministers in that State. The showing which this denomination has made in its efforts to build up this college is certainly remarkable. To have raised for it within the past eleven years $150,000 attests a devotion and a self-sacrifice which are worthy of high praise. And the fact that we Southern Methodists have not done more to assist them in this laudable undertaking is a reproach to us.

The Northern Methodists are generous in their donations to the cause of Negro education. Whatever we may think of their methods of doing this work and the effects of them, we cannot but praise them for the missionary and philanthropic spirit that they are manifesting. It ought undoubtedly to incite us to do more for the colored people in the communion that we were instrumental in establishing, and who have ever been true and loyal to the teachings and traditions of Southern Methodism. Not to give them substantial assistance is to fall short of our duty and let others take our crown.

This appeal ought to touch the hearts of our preachers and people. Mississippi is one of the two States of the Union in which the colored population are in the majority. To Christianize and better the condition of the hundreds of thousands of negroes in that commonwealth is a task that challenges our evangelical enterprise. And what we do must largely be done through the C. M. E. Church, which we are now using as an instrument to plant a mission in benighted Africa.

Our Church, through its General Board of Education, is assisting by annual appropriations a number of schools maintained for colored people in the various sections of the South; but ought not Mississippi Methodists, in addition to this, to help this needy and struggling college which exists upon their own soil? It certainly seems so to us.

We hope that many of our preachers and laymen will find it possible to do something in response to this appeal at an early day. In order that the best disposition may be made of any money raised for this purpose, we suggest that all contributions be sent either to Major R. W. Millsaps, Jackson, Miss., treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Board of Education, or Rev. H. S. Spraggins, Greenwood, Miss., treasurer of the North Mississippi Board. This would place the fund in the hands of our Boards of Education, which could handle it judiciously and so as to accomplish the largest results.

WEBSTER'S NEW INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

Webster's dictionaries have played an important part in the development of our American civilization. For decades they have been in general use among all classes of our citizenship, from the scholarly professor in the university to the struggling student beginning the quest for knowledge amid the limitations of poverty. There is scarcely a doubt that they are the most popular of all lexicons with the people of the United States. Their publishers have been wide-awake and progressive, and from time to time have brought out new editions, enlarged, improved, and fully abreast with the march of intellectual progress. The latest of these is the "New International," which is, indeed, a magnificent volume. It contains 2,700 pages, 400,000 words, 6,000 illustrations, and the making of it cost $400,000. It is printed on superior paper, and the binding is both attractive and durable. It is scholarly, accurate, copious in the information given, and first-class in every respect. We use in connection with the work of the Advocate office a number of dictionaries, and we regard the "New International" as the equal of any of them, and as surpassing them all in some particulars. We consider it the best one-volume English lexicon that we have ever seen. No home or office is complete without a good dictionary, and in purchasing one, no better selection can be made than "Webster's New International." The publishers, G. & C. Merriam, of Springfield, Mass., have rendered the public a valuable service in issuing this comprehensive and up-to-date work. Full information concerning it may be had of them for the asking.

AN URGENT MATTER.

On the fourth page of this issue is published the results of the collections taken for the benefit of the preachers in the flood-stricken section of Louisiana. The list was furnished by the Treasurer, and includes all contributions reported up to August 6. It will be noted that $479.12 has thus far been received, and that this amount represents gifts ranging from $1 from a widow residing in Alabama to $75, the gift of the Carrollton Avenue congregation. Only twenty-five charges in the State had so far responded. There are 127 charges in the Louisiana Conference, about 100 of which were not seriously affected by the overflow. Several of our pastors in the flooded districts have received very little salary thus far, and it is impossible for their congregations to pay them a living salary from now until the convening of the Annual Conference in December. Perhaps there has never been an appeal made to the pastors of Louisiana that was more deserving. Every congregation that can possibly help should be urged to respond to the appeal. Let every pastor who has not yet taken his collection do so at once, and send the money to Mr. S. H. Meyer, treasurer, St. Charles street, near Canal, New Orleans, La.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. H. Holder, our pastor at Okalona, Miss., is assisting Rev. E. H. Cunningham in a meeting at Myrtle, Miss.

On account of ill health, Rev. J. O. Bennett, the pastor at Eunice, La., has taken a needed vacation, and is recuperating at the seashore.

Brother and Sister J. C. McElroy, of Slate Springs, Miss., were made glad on the 13th of July by the arrival at the parsonage of a bright-eyed baby boy.

Dr. J. M. Weems, our busy pastor at First Church, Laurel, Miss., has recently suffered a slight stroke of paralysis in the face. Let prayers be offered in behalf of this servant of the Lord.

Brother and Sister A. I. Townsley, of Arcadia, La., are to be congratulated on the possession of a new son, who put in his appearance at the parsonage in Arcadia last week.

Conference Evangelist A. W. Turner began a revival meeting at Gueydan, La., last Sunday. While this is a busy season with the rice harvest in that section, no doubt a great meeting will be held.

Rev. S. L. Riggs, of St. Francisville, La., preached at McDonoghville last Sunday night to a large and appreciative audience. Brother Riggs was formerly the pastor of the McDonoghville Church.

Rev. H. N. Brown recently received a fine class of children into the church at Berwick. The children had been under competent teachers for some time and were fully prepared for church membership.

Rev. J. G. Snelling, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, preached at Bogalusa last Sunday, both morning and night. Rev. L. I. McCain, the pastor, is away assisting in revival meetings.

Rev. E. L. Alford, our hustling pastor at Pachuta, Miss., has his hands and arms full since the recent arrival of twin girls in the parsonage. The mother and little ones are all doing well; so is Brother Alford.

An addition to the church building at Franklin, La., has been planned, and will be financed by the ladies of that congregation. The extension will be in the form of additional room for the organ and choir.

The church in Lafayette, La., is prospering. Brother Harrison, the pastor, has received seventeen into the Church by profession of faith since the Conference, and his congregations are so large that a new or an enlarged building is being planned.

The new hall that has been opened in connection with the Mary Werlein Church in New Orleans has been named "Meekin Hall." This is a deserved compliment fittingly paid to Mrs. Lily Meekin, the devoted matron of the Mary Werlein Church.

Rev. J. J. Brooks is doing a good work on the Gunnison (Miss.) charge. He is preaching regularly to large audiences, and his prayer meetings are being well attended. He is also looking after the interests of the Conference organ with gratifying results.

A delightful reception was tendered to the members of the Felicity Church in New Orleans last Friday evening by the members of the Sunday school. Rev. H. R. Singleton assisted in the entertainment by delivering a short, but very interesting and amusing address.

Rev. H. F. Toile, our very efficient pastor at Lake, Miss., has just closed a revival meeting at Eureka (his new church which was dedicated in June by the presiding elder), which resulted in six additions to the Church—all adults—and a great spiritual uplift to the membership.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer, an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, is in great demand as an evangelist. He left last Monday morning for Netty, on the East Baton Rouge charge, where he is now engaged, together with the pastor, Rev. G. P. White, in holding a week's meeting.

On another page of the Advocate will be found the announcement of Rev. J. E. Denson (who now resides in Baton Rouge, La.) of his willingness to serve the brethren in the capacity of an evangelist. Brother Denson is known as one of the most able preachers in Louisiana, and doubtless his services will be much sought after.

We are in receipt of three dollars from Brother W. W. Payton, of Saline, La., with the following instructions: "Please extend my subscription one year, and apply the balance to the credit of some worthy brother." We have placed the extra dollar and fifty cents in our "Help Fund," where it is needed, and where we could use $150 if we had that much.

Among the many other advanced steps that have been taken by the church at New Iberia, La., under the able ministry of Rev. K. W. Dodson, is the organization of a French Bible Class. There is plenty of material for such a class, and it will doubtless be a success. We are informed, however, that Brother Dodson has very little to say to the class.

Rev. A. A. Bernard, who has been resting from the active work of the ministry since the last session of the Louisiana Annual Conference, has been appointed by Rev. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder of the Lafayette District, to supply the Rayne Charge, which was made vacant recently by the removal of Brother B. T. Crews to Shreveport on account of his wife's failing health.

A letter received from Mrs. J. D. Barbee several days ago, stated that she and Brother Barbee had made the trip from Rochester, Minn., to Waynesville, North Carolina, without any mishap. The latter is reported to be doing well, though he found the long journey somewhat trying and fatiguing. We hope to hear soon that he is able to climb the mountains of the Old North State.

We regret to chronicle the death of Sister W. D. Stayton, whose obituary will appear shortly in our columns. Sister Stayton was the widow of a deceased member of the Louisiana Conference, and was in the 85th year of her age. She had been a devoted member of our Church at Coushatta, La., for many years. The funeral service was conducted on August 5 by Rev. R. A. Davis, her pastor.

Rev. C. A. Battle, pastor of Felicity Church, New Orleans, was absent from his pulpit last Sunday, both morning and night. In the morning he preached for Rev. A. G. Shankle, at Rayne Memorial Church, and at night for Rev. J. G. Snelling at Carrollton Avenue Church. The Felicity Church pulpit was filled in the morning by Rev. A. J. Gearheard and at night by Dr. J. M. Henry.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, associate pastor of First Church, New Orleans, is ever in demand for special occasions. Last Sunday morning he filled the pulpit at the Carrollton Avenue Presbyterian Church, and in the afternoon conducted the Sophia Wright memorial service at the Home for Incurables. At both services he preached with his usual ease and grace and, of course, gave perfect satisfaction.

Mr. Marion Browning, formerly editor of the Isle of Pines Appeal, in the Isle of Pines, West Indies, and a man whose interests in the advancement of the Kingdom of God is constant, together with his wife, are now in New Orleans, where they will remain during the coming fall and winter. Brother Browning expects to enter a school of pharmacy and prepare himself for the profession of a pharmacist.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of Utica, Miss., is being assisted in a revival meeting by Rev. Dan Kelley. With Brothers Kelley and Ramsey together in a revival meeting, there is little doubt of the success of the meeting. Brother Ramsey will be engaged in meetings until late in October, and wishes to announce that it will be impossible for him to accept other engagements until after the meeting of the Annual Conference.

We acknowledge with thanks the receipt of a copy of a newspaper printed in Vicksburg on July 2, 1863. The paper, The Daily Citizen, is printed on wall paper and in many ways is a unique publication. Brother H. G. Hawkins, who sent us the copy, in the same letter, also calls attention to the illness of his sister, Mrs. J. J. Golden, about whom mention is made elsewhere on this page.

Rev. E. L. Whiddon, who was recently appointed District Evangelist of the Houston (Texas) District, is now engaged in a series of revival meetings at Mandeville, where he is assisting the pastor, Rev. T. V. Peters. Large crowds are in attendance, and a great meeting is expected. After the revival at Mandeville closes, Brother Whiddon will go with Brother Peters to the Camp Ground near Covington and assist him in a meeting there.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, pastor of Washington Street Church, Vicksburg, has been engaged to hold a series of meetings on the Buena Vista charge, where he will assist the pastor, Rev. T. J. Durrett. Brother Saunders was reared within the bounds of that charge, and, when a boy, sat under the ministry of Brother Durrett. No doubt the services will be attended by large audiences and that the Kingdom will be strengthened because of the approaching meetings.

In the death of Hon. Alanson W. Moore at Winnsboro, La., last week, Franklin Parish lost its representative in the State Legislature, and the Methodist Church lost a member who has stood firmly for God and righteousness in North Louisiana for many years. He was licensed to preach in 1860 and served in the regular ministry for several years. His last public act was to lead the opening prayer on the last day of the recent session of the State Legislature.

The local paper published at Leakesville, Miss., in commenting on the services held in the Methodist Church there on August 4, says: "Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Whitworth College of Brookhaven, preached two powerful sermons at Leakesville Sunday in the Methodist Church. He also lectured Sunday afternoon to the Epworth Leaguers on the 'Elements of Success.' He made a splendid impression on the people, judging from commendatory remarks." We are in no way surprised at this good report of Dr. Cooper.

In a letter dated August 12, Brother J. J. Golden, pastor of our church at Philadelphia, Miss., wrote from Hattiesburg: "On August 2, my wife underwent two surgical operations in the infirmary here. She has been critically ill since the operations, but is now improving. I request the earnest prayers of my brethren in her behalf." Let us not forget Sister Golden at this time of suffering, and let us also be mindful of her husband, who has doubtless suffered great anxiety concerning the welfare of his beloved companion.

A large number of the members of the New Orleans Epworth League Union enjoyed an excursion last Saturday to Mandeville. A boat was chartered and the trip across Lake Pontchartrain was said to be delightful. But the pleasure of the day was marred by an accident which crippled their boat and rendered it unfit for service. There was no train leaving Mandeville after 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and none make the trip on Sunday; the result of the misfortune was that a large number of the excursionists who left home Saturday morning for a day's outing did not return until Monday afternoon.

Rev. J. B. Culpepper, the noted evangelist, and his son, Rev. O. B. Culpepper, are engaged in conducting a tent meeting at Jackson, Miss. The services are being held under the auspices of the First Methodist Church, though all the pastors and churches of the city are participating in them. Brother Culpepper is no stranger in Jackson, having held successful meetings there before. He is a remarkably plain and effective preacher, and has been instrumental in leading thousands to Christ. Let prayer be made that God may use him to produce another great spiritual awakening in the capital city of Mississippi.

Rev. N. E. Joyner has been transferred by Bishop E. R. Hendrix from the Louisiana Conference to the Mexico Conference. Brother Joyner is one of Louisiana's strongest preachers and most able executives. Since coming to Louisiana he has filled a number of the important charges in the State, and is at present Conference Educational Secretary. In addition to his present work as Secretary of Education, he is President of the Legal Conference, member of the Board of Missions, and member of the Publishing Committee. His return to the missionary work in Mexico is not a surprise to his friends, but his departure from the Louisiana Conference is regretted by all its members.

Rev. Martin Hebert, the veteran French Missionary, has secured fourteen applications for church membership at the Moss schoolhouse in Vermilion parish. Moss schoolhouse is near Kaplan, La., and is in the midst of a strong French Catholic settlement. Perhaps no missionary in South Louisiana has been so successful as has Martin Hebert (pronounced A-bear) in winning the French people to Christ.

Rev. S. L. Riggs, who is finishing his fourth year on the St. Francisville (La.) charge, has been away from his pulpit for several weeks, and has been engaged in revival work. He assisted Rev. J. S. Rutledge at Indian Bayou, and then began a meeting at Belle City, La., where he was ably assisted by Sister Riggs, who is an accomplished musician. While at Belle City, however, Sister Riggs was taken seriously ill and was brought to Gretna, the home of her parents, Brother and Sister Matthews, where she is now suffering with an attack of intermittent fever. Brother Riggs is constantly at her bedside and she is receiving the very best of attention. Her complete recovery is expected shortly. Let prayer be offered that she may soon be restored to health, and that she may continue to serve her Master with her musical talent.

REVIVAL AT CARROLLTON, MISS.

As we were going to press we received the following telegram, from Rev. W. A. Bowlin:

"Carrollton, Miss., Aug. 13.—Our town is stirred as never before, Evangelist L. W. Cain is preaching with great power and demonstration. Rejoice with us.

"W. A. BOWLIN, Pastor."

LIFT YOUR HEAD AND SMILE.

By Eileen Linn.

If the plans you've held the dearest
You should find can never be,
And the dreams that seemed the sweetest
True and real you cannot see,
Do not yield to disappointment,
Cold and grim as some stone pile—
You will find you hear it better
Just to lift your head and smile.

Problems grave that come before you
In the routine of each day
May seem great and unrelenting,
Even to becloud your way;
But no matter what confronts you
This remember all the while:
All will seem more bright, more easy,
If you lift your head and smile.

If the day seems dark and gloomy
And your troubles multiply,
Do not look upon each moment
With a frown or weary sigh;
Do not feel downcast and lonely—
Think of life as not worth while;
Life is truly what you make it,
Why not lift your head and smile?

After care, and toil, and worry,
If perchance you find no rest
When you've sought it in life's quiet,
Turn not, friend, and leave your quest;
You may find life sometimes weary,
But such hours you may beguile,
If you'll see the side that's brightest,
And then lift your head and smile.

Oft in passing others 'round you
They, perhaps, feel just as you,
Have vexations and forebodings,
Wonder if their friends are true;
Then, my friend, if you would help them
O'er each long and tiresome mile,
I would say the way to do it
Is to lift your head and smile.

GEO. W. NEAL was born in 1869, and was killed by a switch engine at Wichita, Kan., in April, 1912. He was married to Miss Annie May Glass, Sallis, Miss., May 23, 1900. They were blessed with five children—one boy and four girls, all of whom are living. Mr. Neal was a railroad man employed on the Rock Island Railroad. His family resided at Sallis, Miss., where his remains were interred. At the time of his death he was making arrangements to move his family to Wichita, Kan. Mr. Neal was not a member of the Church, but claimed conversion in a revival meeting a few months prior to his death. During his last visit to his family he talked a good deal about the Bible and religion. Thus his relatives and friends are not left without hope. That the All-gracious Father, whose tender love for all his creatures will not allow one helpless sparrow to fall to the ground without his compassionate care, bless, comfort, and keep the wife and five children to the end of their mortal pilgrimage, is the earnest prayer of their pastor,

DANIEL M. GEDDIE.

MRS. CORA MAGEE, only child of William Coney and Sarah Elizabeth Coney, nee Huffman, was born on the old Huffman plantation near Summit, Pike County, Miss., October 10, 1861. Her father, a Confederate soldier, was killed the first year of the war, and never saw his child. At the age of ten years, during a camp meeting at the old Topisaw camp grounds, she was happily converted and joined the Methodist Church, in the communion of which she lived and died. On the 27th of November, 1878, she was married to Jesse J. Magee. To them were born nine children. Two died in infancy, the others, with the husband, mourn her departure. In 1895 the family moved to Tylertown, and in 1902 to Columbia, their present home. On Friday evening, July 5, at 9:30 o'clock, Sister Magee was stricken with paralysis, and though everything which could be done was done (two physicians being at her bedside almost constantly day and night) she passed away at two a. m. Wednesday, July 9. We laid her to rest from the Methodist Church the Thursday following at ten o'clock a. m. Sister Magee was a regular attendant upon the services of the church, being an active member of the Woman's Adult Bible Class of the Sunday School, one of the most active and faithful visitors of the Home Department, and took her place and part in all the Woman's Societies of the church. Her life, so quiet and unostentatious, yet so genuine and true, accomplished more for the Master than many another more demonstrative. The Scriptures say of the virtuous woman that "her children rise up and call her blessed, her husband also, and he praiseth her." Of the seven living children, all girls, each is a college graduate, a consecrated Christian woman, actively engaged in church work, and above all dependable. The whole of her life was given to preparing these young women for their life work, and now that she has gone, "she being dead yet speaketh."

B. F. LEWIS.

HARRIET JOSEPHINE HENRY was born in Crossville, Ala., May 31, 1852; moved with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Henry, to West Point, Miss., Sept., 1866; was married to Mr. D. B. Fullington Oct. 9, 1872; died July 25, 1912. Thus, briefly told, is the history of one of the most loyal members of the Methodist Church in West Point.

When but a child in her early teens she was made organist of the church and continued in this service for more than forty years, seldom missing a service except on account of illness. Her faithfulness can be attested by the numerous pastors that have had charge of this church from a period of extending beyond the time when Bishop Murrah had charge of this church and that of Okolona as a circuit, down to the present. We took the remains to the church for the funeral service and while the choir sang selections from some of her favorite hymns, the sweet toned vocallion, which she loved so well, was silent, thus contributing its part to this sad yet triumphant service. The service was conducted by the Rev. E. S. Lewis, assisted by Rev. W. M. Campbell, who was a very dear friend. The male members of the choir acted as pallbearers, preceded by the entire body of stewards as honorary pallbearers. Mrs. Fullington is survived by her husband, two daughters, Miss Daisy, and Mrs. J. H. Smith, and one sister, Mrs. G. W. Bryan. Mrs. Fullington's life, next to her home, was wrapped in the affairs of the church, the choir being the part in which she expended her greatest effort. On Wednesday night, while preparing to go to prayer meeting and choir practice, she was talking over the telephone with the leader of the choir. As she turned away from the phone and walked a few steps she was stricken with paralysis, and went home to Heaven about one o'clock in the morning. Thus ended a life whose place will be hard to fill; yet while God buries his workmen, his work still goes on.

S. B. WHITE.

West Point, Miss.

SALENA E., daughter of Sampson and Harriet Hamilton, was born June 5, 1837; was married to Joseph Rutledge, Sr., January 18, 1860, and died in Prentiss, Miss., December 19, 1911, at the age of 74 years, five months, and fourteen days. Sister Rutledge was the mother of nine children, five boys and four girls—one of the boys is Rev. R. E. Rutledge, of the Mississippi Conference; all of the rest are members of the M. E. Church, South, honored and loved. Dr. I. W. Cooper, who was at one time her pastor, says: "Mrs. Rutledge was the embodiment of fidelity and consecration, as a wife, mother, friend and Christian. She was a burning light to all who knew her. Her life at home was attractive and most beautiful, and the children rise up and call her blessed. No doubt she has entered on eternal rest." Rev. J. T. Leggett, who was also her pastor, says: "She was one of the best women I ever knew. She was pious without ostentation, and gentle without affectation. The home was made beautiful by reason of her amiable spirit and motherly devotion. Her children may well rise up and call her blessed. No less beautiful was her devotion to her husband. They twain were one flesh in as true a sense as I ever knew." Captain Enoch, a member of the same church to which Mrs. Rutledge belonged, says of her: "A dutiful and loving daughter, a companionable and helpful wife, a devoted, careful and sacrificing mother, this is the record as written by her life on that which is more durable than marble or granite." She suffered much in her last sickness and knew that the message was coming, and awaited it as a true soldier of the cross, with a perfect confidence of a blessed immortality. Mrs. Rutledge came to Prentiss, Mississippi, to visit her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Jones, and while there she became ill, and died after several weeks. Her body was removed to Hazlehurst and buried near there at the old family cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. J. C. Ellis and Rev. M. L. White at the old Bethesda Church. I was with her all this time and to me she often said that all was well. Amid all her sufferings she rejoiced, knowing that he to whom she had committed her soul, was able to keep her against that day.

Tidings From the Field

Scooba, Miss.

I have been thinking for some time that I would write a short report of our work at Scooba. We have a loyal people who stand by their pastor. We are making steady progress along all lines. We have organized a W. H. M. S. and an Epworth League; both are doing fine work. Our Sunday school is growing in interest under the leadership of our efficient superintendent, Brother W. T. Barnes. The school observed Children's Day on the 4th Sunday in June, and it was a great success. We have just closed a ten-days' meeting with good results. Eternity only will tell how much good was done. Our town was stirred as it has not been stirred in years. Some say that Scooba has never had such a revival before. The preaching, which was done by Rev. H. A. Gatlin, Agent of Whitworth College, was excellent. Every sermon seemed to be the exact message that was needed, and they were preached with so much earnestness that they went home to the hearts of the people. Brother Gatlin does not use clap-trap methods, but he warns men against sin and urges them to come to God. A number of strong men confessed that they had not been living right and made a surrender to God. The entire church was revived, and quite a number were converted or reclaimed. Brother Gatlin presented Whitworth College's claim and raised over $90. The pastor and his family have been remembered by the good people of Scooba: on Wednesday they began to pound us and continued pounding until Saturday, and when they had finished there were flour, meat, sugar, coffee, lard, and all kinds of canned goods in the pantry. The Lord is with us. To him be all the glory. J. E. FERGUSON, P. C.

Scooba, Miss., Aug. 3, 1912.

Mars' Hill Chapel (North Miss.)

We have just closed a very great meeting at our Hopewell Church here on the Mars' Hill charge. We had a union meeting. The Presbyterian preacher, Brother H. Y. McCaleb, preached on Sunday, Monday and Thursday, leaving then for other meetings, which, of course, left the writer to battle it out. This he did until Sunday night at 12 o'clock, at which time we closed with a great victory for our dear Lord. This was one of the greatest meetings that I have ever been in. The devil was pretty well entrenched around this vicinity. In addition to having a good hold on the non-professing class, he had crept into the Church and influenced far the majority of its members. But, praise the dear Lord, he did come with relief and in such force that hundreds had that sweet joy and happiness restored unto them, and also poor sinners found him, precious to their dying souls. The greatest victory won was in a men's meeting on the last Sunday afternoon of the services, at which time I endeavored to show the men from the Second Commandment the horror of their sins, and how they would be the cause of a visitation upon their innocent offspring. In this meeting there were some four to five hundred men, and great, strong men who had been given over to the gratification of the lustful appetites of the flesh, fell at the feet of Jesus, agonizing over their sins and asking him for mercy and pardon, who, of course, in his great love immediately extended the hand of compassion, and drew them unto himself, and out of darkness and sin.

We had in this meeting very nearly a unanimous vote for our blessed Saviour. Oh, what a victory for our blessed Lord! At the same time of this men's meeting at the Church, my wife, with some of the faithful women, was having a woman's meeting at the parsonage with some two hundred and fifty or more in attendance, which was equally as great a victory for the Master.

Preachers, let me urge you to have men's meetings. You have no idea what great good can be accomplished in talking face to face with men, showing them the horrible condition existing because of the transmission of the sinful appetites they have handed down to their posterity. Men need to be talked to about these things and shown the error of their way, so they can be helped. They can't be saved with red tape theology or sky rocket oratory. They need to be shown their sins, and then Jesus, who will heal them of their depravity. Pray for us.

W. V. SHEARER.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

After several months of strenuous travel and toil attending District Conferences, Divinity School, College Commencements, etc., I am resting at home for awhile. This does not mean for me idleness or the being "triflingly employed," but simply change of situation and manner of employment. Being engaged in the high calling of my Lord in sowing the good seed of truth and life, I find no place for vacation while the enemy is busy by day and by night in sowing the deadly seeds of error and sin. I am busy with correspondence and filling orders for books, and am ready for any ministerial or official service which I can render in person or otherwise.

The resolutions of recent District Conferences declaring for more diligence in circulating our church books and papers should be observed practically and immediately, "lest we forget." There is no better time for this than the protracted or revival meeting season. Away with the idea that having on hand on these occasions a few Bibles, Testaments and Disciplines, Song Books, Methodist Armors, religious pamphlets, tracts, etc., will mar the interest of the meeting. This is but the suggestion of the enemy, the devil, who would prevent the sowing of the good seed until he can put in his work of sowing the evil seed. May the Lord awaken his ministers and people to watchfulness against these satanic delusions and to activity in counteracting them.

Among the foremost books of the season is "The Religion of Science," by Rev. James W. Lee, D. D. This is truly a great book from the pen of a great thinker, and is thought-provoking. Any thoughtful preacher or layman will be amply rewarded in the reading of it. Price $1.50 net, postpaid.

Of the new books for the boys and girls of all ages, we take pleasure in commending the "Willie Wyld Series," three of which are now ready, viz: "The Voyage to Zanzibar," "Hunting Big Game in Africa," and "Least Among the Jungles." These are charming books from the press of our own Publishing House, and will afford delightful reading for the summer months. Price per copy for either one 50 cents postpaid.

I am prepared to fill orders promptly for any of these or others wanted. Let orders come rapidly for good supplies of "Revival Praises," and "Songs for Praise and Service," for the revival meetings. Prices given on application.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. W. D. Kleinsmidt, member of our Conference Sunday School Board, writes: "We observed Children's Day at Jena, June 30. A fine program was exquisitely rendered before a good crowd, in a tastefully decorated church. Collection was $10.00 (Last year it was $4.00)."

Animals, birds and bees inherit the instinct of their species and are capable of but little improvement. But man is subject to his environment, and one generation is dependent upon how the preceding generation lived, thought, and planned. We should "love our neighbor as ourselves," because he has a great deal to do in making us what we are.

Our Lecompte Sunday school united with the Union school at Meeker and rendered the same Children's Day program at both places, and a delightful time was had. The collection for both places was $25. Later, a joint picnic was enjoyed at Hobson, six miles out in the hills from Lecompte. A nice creek gave the children a fine wading place.

A Home Department visitor reports seeing the children of a large family with some visitors file out to a shade tree and go through the Children's Day program after it had been rendered at the church. It would be hard to estimate the full meaning of these happy children's songs and choice recitations from the life of Christ on the lives of those who took part in the program.

At Grand Cheniere, fifty miles southwest from Lake Arthur by boat, the Sunday school, reorganized some months ago, has been rallied somewhat and Home and Cradle Roll departments have been organized, with Miss Eugenia Sweeney and Miss Georgia McCall as superintendents; and a young people's Bible Class has been started, with Miss Eugenia Sweeney, president, Don Jones, secretary-treasurer, and Miss Myrtle Doxie, chairman of the membership committee. Their motto is, "we do things now," and their name is "The Happy Hustlers." Rev. A. S. J. Neil will preach for this congregation once a month on week days for the balance of the year.

One of the Parish Superintendents of Education informs us that one of his teachers is seventy years of age and is still doing effective work. She buys and digests one or more of the latest books of teaching each year, and thus keeps up with the forward moves of her profession. This same superintendent had another teacher to whom he gave a good book on the same subject, and several months later he found the seal had never been broken—and she didn't teach in his Parish again. Among our Sunday school superintendents and teachers we find the counterpart of both these classes. Some are studying to show themselves workmen that needeth not to be ashamed; reading good books, attending institutes, visiting good teachers' classes, and striving in every possible way to be first-class. The others are satisfied to be hangers-on of the Sunday school—just "hear the children's lessons." The same trifling kind of work would not be accepted by a business enterprise at fifteen cents a day. It is a question whether this type of teaching doesn't alienate the pupil from the Bible more than it causes him to love it. In the public school the lessons are made attractive, even dry subjects arousing interest, but alas! in this teacher's class the Bible seems unintelligible, having neither geographic setting nor historic connection. Verily our teacher's training work and general Sunday school agitation has come none too soon.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Miss Elie Willingham expects her Morris Class at Eupora to reach 100 in attendance during these hot August days, and it is to be hoped that her expectations will be more than realized.

A clever exchange contributes these two sentences to Home Department enthusiasts: "The best man for Home Department superintendent is usually a woman." "The best Home Department goes all to pieces. The pieces come to the Sunday school."

On July 7th, at New Hope, one of Rev. E. M. Shaw's churches, a great day was enjoyed. The Sunday school was held at 10 o'clock and a fine sermon was preached at 11 by the pastor; then came dinner at 1:30, followed by a church conference, and then several helpful talks on the Sunday school.

A specialist on the "Boy Problem" writes: "Boys are not the cause of the 'boy problem,' grown folks are. Where the grown folks are really doing their duty, there is no 'boy problem.'" Lilburn Merrell has a thought-provoking book, "Winning the Boy," which should be in the hands of parents and teachers as well.

This statement, from the pen of one of the most noted literary men of our country, indicates a splendid enthusiasm worthy of filling every thinking head and throbbing heart: "I like to think I am a part of a great orderly, mutually helpful world—not stranded or isolated in it, but lending somewhat to it, nourished and enriched by its fullness."

Miss Golding, an accomplished teacher, has charge of a class in Winona on Sabbath mornings. She had 15 present on July 21. She goes out to New Hope in the afternoon and teaches the class there, taking the money for her trip out of the class treasury. This splendid report should encourage and inspire many workers all over our Conference.

It would be most fortunate and helpful if every superintendent and as many of the teachers as possible received the New Orleans Advocate, and if a large school or Wesley class would subscribe for it and send it to the smaller schools near by. It would be beautifully generous and helpful. This kind of a bond of sympathetic interest between adjacent schools is of infinite help to all concerned.

Miss Elie Willingham, of Eupora, delivered an inspiring message on the Organization of Wesley Adult Bible Classes at Winona recently. As a result of this there were then and there organized two Wesley Classes. The young ladies have 12 members and call themselves the Volunteers, with Miss Mary Wright, teacher; the young men have 10 members and call themselves the Willingham Bible Class, with Miss Ethel Golding, teacher.

A business periodical forcefully expresses what every Sunday school teacher and superintendent should write on his note-book as well as on the tablets of his heart: "To be on time is a courtesy taught by the elementary lessons of business." "Hang on in front and not behind," is another epigram from the same source.

The surest way to protect our people from the false isms of the day is to teach them the Bible. The healthy constitution in warding off disease is worth more than healing remedies applied after it has imbedded itself in the body. And so with the person who is instructed in Christian truth, "when he is old he will not depart from it," though hosts of false teachers "may rise against him." The disciples chosen by our Lord to be his truth bearers were taught from their youth up, and "could repeat the law as readily as their own name," according to Josephus, a Jewish historian. Both knowledge and experience are necessary to stability.

ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

The superior quality and durability of the piano which is now being offered to members of the Advocate Piano Club is shown by the following letter from one of the earliest purchasers of the Ludden & Bates Piano, away back in 1883. Mr. H. V. Coar-sey, of Braddentown, Fla., writing under date of February 1, 1910, says: "I am the owner of Ludden & Bates piano No. 11, in rosewood case, and I take pleasure in mentioning that it has a good clear tone and a smooth, even touch, notwithstanding it was bought of you twenty-six or twenty-seven years ago, during which time, it has had constant service, considered by some an extraordinary amount of hard usage. This instrument has served two generations in our immediate family in a most satisfactory way and we have no idea of parting with it for any other piano."

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

ESTABLISHED 1885
THE C. S. BELL CO. HINSHERS, Ohio

NEXT?

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

Under the caption, "A Timely Movement," there recently appeared in the columns of the Advocate an article from my pen relative to the Brookhaven District Conference resolution, which was quoted as follows: "That in dealing with erring members of the Church, we will gently and patiently admonish them to refrain from their evil ways, and that in the case of obstreperous offenders who defiantly persist in conduct wholly unbecom-ing members of the Church, we will call them to account before the proper tribunal of the Church, and expel them from membership in the same."

Now, following close on the heels of the above resolution, which was unanimously adopted, the Aberdeen District Conference, which convened at Houston, Miss., prompted thereto by Bishop Morrison's sermon on "The Spirit of the World," passed a similar resolution against worldliness in the Church, and in the Advocate of August 1, published its action to the world. That this resolution may appear again in your columns, I quote: "Whereas, there is a growing tendency to worldliness in the Church, and a disregard of Church vows, and, whereas, Bishop Morrison's presence and admonitions have pointed out the spiritual peril of worldliness, and that this evil may be cured by a wise and painstaking administration of discipline; therefore, be it

Resolved by the Aberdeen District Conference here assembled, that we heartily concur with the Bishop in his position and views, and that we hereby pledge ourselves as ministers and laymen faithfully to administer the discipline of the Church, courageously but humbly and in the fear of God, with the interest of souls upon our hearts and consciences, and with the hope that great grace may be upon the whole district, that worldliness may be purged from the Church, and that a great revival come to all our people."

Possibly, it might be presumption in me to say that I am the pioneer, at least in this part of the Lord's vineyard, in pointing out the existence of worldliness in the Church, and the crying need of the exercise of discipline in purging the Church of godless members; be that as it may, about four years ago there appeared an article in the Advocate entitled, "The Spiritual State of the Church," in which I pointed out the predominance of worldliness in the Church, and in a later article suggested the exercise of discipline as the remedy. For my position in this matter, I was taboed as an extremist and called pessimistic. Now, if we may judge from the above resolutions, I am not alone in my extreme and pessimistic attitude, but there are two entire districts of extremists and pessimists. If, however, the men who passed these resolutions be extremists and pessimists, may the Lord raise up more such men, not by districts but by Conferences, till the whole Church stands for what these men stand for—a Church purged of worldly minded men and women. You will notice that the end to be accomplished by the above resolutions is a revival of religion, and the only way to attain this most desirable end is pointed out in the resolutions; so it is earnestly hoped that these brave men will not content themselves with "resolving," but will return to their respective charges, backed by the laymen who voted the adopting of these resolutions, determined to make them effective, and, as sure as the Son of Man still has power on earth to forgive the sins of men, a revival, such as the world has not seen since the days of Wesley and Whitefield, will come in mighty power, and "his name shall be called Prince Immanuel, God with us."

Doubtless, I am not the first to recognize and indicate the existence and prevalence of worldliness in the Church, but I do claim priority in suggesting the remedy: that is, that one pastor alone can not exercise discipline, but, taking the district as a unit, there must be unanimity of action upon the part of all pastors, supported by a determined presiding elder. This is the only efficient plan, and the two districts named above are moving in the right direction. Like Joshua who, coming down from the mountain top, said to Moses, "I hear the noise of war in the camp," I am facing the east with one ear open to the north (the Aberdeen District), and the other toward the south (the Brookhaven District), listening to hear "the noise of war in the camp" of Israel, and above the noise of war the glad shout of victory.

These two districts have fallen into line. I trust all the districts will adopt the district unit plan. So far as I know there remains but one District Conference to be convened, the Port Gibson. Will it also stand up in line and be counted?—Next?

AVAILABLE FOR SERVICE.

Should any of the brethren need my help in revival work, I will be glad to have them address me at 341 East Boulevard, Baton Rouge, La. I need no introduction to the preachers of the Louisiana Conference and the Methodist people generally in Louisiana, as I was a member of the Louisiana Conference for twenty-three years and served among them as a circuit rider, a city pastor and a presiding elder. I will be glad to arrange during the next four months, with any who may contemplate conducting revival services, and who may think that I can render them efficient service.

AMONG OLD FRIENDS.

Dear Doctor Meek: Dr. A. F. Watkins spent Sunday, August 4, in Vicksburg, preaching twice. Of his sermon at Crawford Street at 11 a. m., I heard high praise, and the sermon at Washington Street at 8 p. m. was fully up to the Doctor's high standard of gospel preaching. It was a strong, practical, gospel discourse, and it hit the mark with force. Dr. Watkins was looking after the interests of Millsaps, and it was our pleasure not only to accompany him on his visits to his old friends and some new ones here, but also to point out to him the many improvements in the city since he left here as pastor fourteen years ago. The Doctor has many warm friends in Vicksburg who will be glad to see him any time that he may be able to come this way. August 6. W. H. SAUNDERS.

SHADE JAMERSON.

There died in Meridian, Miss., some time during the latter part of last year a man I learned to love and hold in high esteem during the time I served the Lauderdale charge in 1886-7-8. His name was Jamerson. We called him Shade Jamerson.

When I first knew him he was a member of the Baptist Church, and was considered a model church member. He lived near Lauderdale Station between the station and Lauderdale Springs. He was the conductor on a work train, and was usually at home Saturday night and Sunday. He was a man full of energy, full of life, and full of fun; at the same time a man of good common sense and full of Holy Ghost religion.

During a great revival of religion in Lauderdale, conducted by Mr. Kergin, a Holiness preacher from Missouri, Brother Jamerson became wonderfully interested in the meeting, took a lively interest in the same, and professed sanctification, or, as it was called at that time and place, the "second blessing." I formed his acquaintance soon after I moved to Lauderdale in 1886; and found him to be a meek, gentle, sweet-spirited Christian man. He was very far from being like some—a religious fanatic. He had love and a kind word for everybody, hatred for none. He thought there were good, true Christians in all Churches, while some were not what they ought to have been.

In the month of March, 1886, we had a communion service in Lauderdale. All Christians, of course, were invited to commune with us. This was perhaps about the first time Brother Jamerson was present at a sacramental service in a Methodist Church after he professed the blessing of perfect love. Knowing his Church forbade her members communing with members of other Churches, he simply sat off and looked on while Methodists, Presbyterians and others bowed together and had the sacrament administered to them. His conscience smote him, for he felt sure these were God's children communing together while he sat and looked, because his Church forbade his eating with other Christians. He promised the Lord the like should never occur again; hence the next time he had an opportunity he communed with the Methodists. He reported to his church what he had done. Of course his church withdrew fellowship from him and his good wife, who was guilty with him of the same offense. He joined our Church, was licensed to exhort, and as long as I was his pastor, over two years, he was a good, faithful church worker, and helpful to his pastor in every way possible. I learned to love him and esteem him very highly as a Christian gentleman. I never fall out with, or think less of a man because he wants all the good there is in the Christian religion for him. Perhaps a fresh baptism of the Holy Ghost would be helpful to most of us preachers and others. Why not seek to be holy in all manner of conversation—"perfect as our Father in heaven is perfect?" "Perfect love casts out fear, because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love." H. P. LEWIS.

GRAPHIC DISPLAY OF HOME MISSION PROBLEMS.

Twelve posters dealing with American social and religious conditions, each 22 by 28 inches, are being sent to the pastors of the Protestant churches in the United States, through the various denominational Home Mission Boards. The posters have been issued by the Committee of the Home Mission Council and the Council of Women for Home Missions having in charge the arrangements for the Home Mission Week campaign. The subjects of the chart are as follows:

The Negro in the United States; Illiteracy in Cuba; Growth of the United States; Sources of Immigration; Loss of Population in Nine Great Agricultural States; Twenty-five Metropolitan Districts; Women and Children in Industry; Economic Aspects of the Liquor Problem; Ownership of Wealth in the United States and Growth of Socialism; The Church—the Source of Supply of Social Workers; The Church as a Religious Force; and the Churches in a Unified Program of Advance.

These subjects are in harmony with the topics to be discussed during the three months' period preliminary to Home Mission Week. It is proposed that the charts be displayed in the churches while the campaign is in progress. The facts shown are based upon an accurate study of each subject, and most of the findings are original, never having been used before. The charts will prove valuable in home mission meetings or in any discussion having to do with modern American problems. They are issued without expense to the local churches.

Full information concerning Home Mission Week and the preliminary campaign will be furnished by the officers of the various denominational Home Missionary Boards.

WORTH OF

ANNUITY BONDS FOR SALE

IN DENOMINATIONS OF $100.00 AND UP

As an Investment these Bonds are

I. Safe, absolutely, because (1) the total assets of the Board of Church Extension are behind them, (2) the honor of a great Church is behind them, (3) the Constitution of the Board does not permit it to obligate itself to pay annuities aggregating an amount larger than one-half of its annual income on interest alone.

II. Profitable, because (1) the rate of interest is higher than any long time first-class securities pay, (2) the investment is free from taxation, court fees, etc., and losses and delays in the matter of reinvestment.

III. Attractive, and particularly so to the inexperienced, as there is relief from anxiety and risk involved in the selection and purchase of securities, and freedom from fluctuation in value.

IV. Convenient for all, and especially for those who desire to make provision for old age, or for others who may be dependent upon them for support.

V. Effective and satisfactory, because (1) it avoids the uncertainties attending bequests and legacies, (2) the fruit of the investment is realized without delay, (3) the money invested begins at once to do the double service of yielding full earning capacity in the interest of the purchaser, and at the same time is busy building churches for the Master.

These things, too mighty for man they be,
The unleashed flame, and the unchained sea,
The furious wind that masterless flies,
And the mocking light of rainless skies.
O pale horse, stalking all abroad,
Teach man, the little, to call on God.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

The Pacific Methodist Advocate thinks that the prospect for a union of the two Episcopal Methodisms in the United States "has gone glimmering." The truth is, that prospect was never as bright as some of our superficial and over-enthusiastic leaders imagined. There are stubborn facts of history and important constitutional differences that must be adjusted before the two bodies can come together. These things cannot be ignored or wiped out by resolutions in a day. When the Methodists of the North and South shall have become one in spirit, they may be united, but not before. It is never wise for men to undertake to anticipate Providence, instead of being led by it. He is the best promoter of the cause of union who seeks to spread abroad the spirit of true fraternity.

The urgent need of the Christian religion is one of the proofs of its genuineness. Take away Christ and what he stands for, and how pitiable would be the condition of humanity! Life's struggles and sorrows would have to be faced in our own puny strength, and no stars of promise would light the future that stretches away beyond the tomb. The hopelessness of the heathen nations is one of their most striking characteristics. There was sound philosophy underlying the words of the angelic messenger, when, in announcing to the Judean shepherds the birth of the babe of Bethlehem, he said: "I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people." In Christ, human life has incentive, inspiration, and outlook. Indeed, the riches of our inheritance in him is vastly beyond the conception of the finite mind. "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him." And even the revelations of his spirit are but faint glimpses of the glories to come.

LET US HOPE FOR THE BEST.

We are living in a stirring time, in a period of transition. Things that we have long regarded as fundamental, both in Church and State, are now being assailed and, in some instances, seem to be giving way. This is awakening in many hearts a feeling of alarm; many are becoming gravely concerned lest the foundations of our social and religious systems should crumble and disaster and ruin follow. But let us not be too quick to reach such a conclusion. Nineteen hundred years ago the Master said, "The kingdom of God cometh not with observation." Its methods of approach are not always visible and recognizable. What seem to us to be retrogressions are often forward movements in disguise; when it appears that the least progress is being made sometimes the largest results are being accomplished.

When the promised Messiah came, the manner of his coming crossed all the cherished expectations of the Jews. They expected him to be born a mighty king, but he was cradled in a manger; they looked for him to be a martial hero, but he was a peaceable teacher upon their hillsides and in the streets of their villages; they were counting upon an invincible warrior who would deliver their subjugated country from the hated Roman yoke, but without ever brandishing a weapon he went unresistingly to the Cross. And when according to his own divine wisdom, he was ushering in the kingdom of God, because he clashed with some of their man-made doctrines and customs which for centuries had been revered and unchallenged, they thought he was an agent of Beelzebub, destroying the cause of righteousness. Even so great a man as Paul was so blind to the dawning day about him, that he thought in persecuting the Christians he was doing God's service.

In this there is a lesson that we may well lay to heart. The wisest of us know but little. Many of our preconceived notions as to how the divine kingdom on earth is to go forward may be erroneous. It may be God's plan that human governments must become more paternalistic—that the individual shall count for less and society more. It may be his method to have his Church abandon many things which to us seem indispensable and to stress only a few elements of religion which, in his larger knowledge, he knows to be the true essentials. We do not say that this is so, but only that it is possible. It is right for us to stand aggressively for what we conceive to be the truth and for the good of mankind—less than this we cannot afford to do—but let us not conclude that all is lost if our way does not prevail. We may fall far short of apprehending what is best.

"Our little systems have their day;
They have their day and cease to be;
They are but broken lights of thee,
And thou, O Lord, art more than they."

In the midst of these tumultuous times, can we not find help in the reflection that He who created the earth and spared not his only Son to redeem it, is still watching over it? The best truth of our religion is that God has not forsaken us, but is still with us. Let us do our duty, as we see it, in "the world's broad field of battle" and, though the tide may seem to go against us, let us not lose heart and hope. Even when we feel defeated and perplexed, if we believe that the forces which make for progress are being divinely led, we may have a trustful spirit. In whatever way it may come, nothing could be surer than the final triumph or righteousness upon our planet.

A GREAT WORK.

Dr. W. E. Dickey, the president of Emory College, has succeeded in inducing the presiding elders' districts in Georgia to provide for the maintenance of ten young preachers while taking the Biblical course in the institution of which he is the head, at an estimated cost of $200 each. This is a great achievement, and the money thus expended is certain to do an immeasurable amount of good.

The truth is, we are not doing anything like as much as we ought to help our young men who have the ministry in view to go to school and to equip themselves for their life work. No young man who lays himself upon the altar of the Church in this day ought to be permitted to take up the active duties of the pastorate until he has been given an opportunity to qualify himself for such service. Larger ministerial help funds are needed in all our Annual Conferences, and they ought by all means to be provided. In Louisiana, Dr. Hill, the president of Centenary College, has managed in some way to provide aid for a considerable number of ministerial students at that institution, and in so doing, he has made the Methodism of this State his debtor to an extent beyond all calculation.

As president of the Board of Education of the North Mississippi Conference, we will say that we should like very much to see a help fund for young preachers raised by the Methodist people of North Mississippi and named for the late lamented Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, who for so many years took such deep interest in the instruction and training of young men entering the ranks of the itinerancy. This action would be a fitting recognition of the splendid service which this noble man rendered the cause of ministerial education at a time when it was not nearly so popular as it is to-day. We hope that the Board of Education may see its way clear to inaugurate such a movement at its annual session next December. Meantime, if any brother feels that he would like to assist in making it possible for any needy young ministers in North Mississippi, who may desire to do so, to go to school this fall, let him send a remittance to Rev. H. S. Spragins, treasurer of the Board of Education, at Greenwood, Miss. We will guarantee that any money given for this purpose will be wisely applied. There ought to be a number of laymen who would gladly avail themselves of this opportunity. Means thus expended will multiply a hundred fold, and yield results that are far-reaching and imperishable.

THE OLD AND THE NEW GOSPEL

By Rev. J. E. Godbey, D. D.

They who speak of the old and the new gospel have valid grounds for the distinction. The difference, stated in general terms, is a change of emphasis in the gospel message from spiritual experience, so called, to works of service in co-operation with the enterprises of the Church. The criterion of Christian character has been shifted from faith to works; from supposed conscious relations to God, to manifest relations to the Church, which is accepted as the body of Christ, teaching his doctrine and performing his work in the world.

The preachers are responsible for this change in the view-point from which Christian life is now judged. The preachers have directed their ministry to the accomplishment of the results deemed most desirable, and the consensus of the leaders of Zion as to what is best is doubtless fairly represented in what we have.

It would seem presumptuous to question the general wisdom and goodness of our guides, the officers of the ship, who wave the flags cheerily and prophecy bon voyage. He who dares to do it will be called a fogey, and his forebodings will be stifled in some pigeon-hole of an editor's office. The pessimist will ever share the fate of Jeremiah. Tennyson pictures it well:

"But ever one among us, him,
We please not; he was seldom pleased.
He saw not far; his eyes were dim—
But ours he swore were all diseased.

"A ship of fools, he shrieked in spite,
A ship of fools; he raved and wept.
And overboard one stormy night
We cast his body, and on we swept."

Nevertheless I write.

The causes which have brought the new gospel are easy to note. They are, mainly, such as result naturally from the growth and development of the Church. There is still in the minds of our oldest preachers the memory of the time when our Church was very weak and her organization very crude. There were no great church buildings, no large societies, and virtually no congregational organization. The preacher came and preached once or twice a month, in a private home, in a schoolhouse, under a brush arbor, or in a rude meeting-house. There was no Sunday school; seldom a prayer meeting; no societies for the young people; no missionary societies. There were no colleges, no orphanages, no hospitals, and no financial system. Such was the Church, and in the world without things were very different. A hundred years ago in this country there was one church member to every eighteen of our population (now there is one to every three). Evangelism was necessarily the work of the Church. The preacher who had no message for sinners had no message at all. Our Church had no organization save for evangelistic work, but in her episcopacy and itinerancy her organization for this work was very strong, and more efficient than that of any other Church. Without congregations or institutions, the Methodist Church entered a new and most inviting field free-handed for conquest.

The gospel of the evangelist was the preaching of sin, righteousness and judgment. These thoughts lie in the consciences of men as the revelations of God's Spirit, and, when proclaimed by the preacher, are heard unchallenged. Our preachers proclaimed the need of salvation to all alive. All men are by nature under the dominion of the carnal mind, which is not subject to the law of God, neither, indeed, can be; therefore only by the "new birth" can any man enter the Kingdom of God.

Under the gospel thus preached, the most respectable people in society, the most influential and honorable were brought in humble penitence to God's altars. The preacher knew that he stood upon the Word of God and he fought for full victory. No holding up of the hand could purchase a truce from the evangelists' attacks. The fact of regeneration must be witnessed by the spirit of adoption, the sense of being at home in God's family—God, our Father, and all his children, our brethren. Such were the old time and the old gospel.

Now all is changed. We have a great Church, with many agencies and institutions to be operated. Our greatest preachers, as we now reckon greatness, are men who can manage a great church organization, direct its many societies, develop its financial resources, and edify by their preaching an educated congregation of church members, whom he assumes to be already Christians. Should he be preaching to such of sin, righteousness and judgment? What are our great preachers preaching about? Next Sunday Dr. Solomon will preach on Missions; the next on Christian education; then comes The Laymen's Movement. Then we shall have, presented by one of its representatives, the work of the Gideons. We shall have Church Federation presented, and the returned missionary will have a hearing. Dr. Solomon preaches much to show how science gives evidence to revelation, or upon the significance of late social movements, the labor problem, etc. But the Christian graces, tempers, motives, hopes, and examples are the staples of his ministry—all quite instructive, exhibiting no little research. It is due to Dr. Solomon to say that no one realizes more than himself the bondage in which he is held, nor could any man long more earnestly for the soul-freedom and satisfaction of bearing the message of God's saving mercy to unconverted men, or to such as are ready to ask, "What must we do to be saved?" Last winter the Doctor announced revival services to be held for two weeks in his church, and his preaching showed that he had made careful preparation of soul-stirring messages for the occasion; but he was disappointed in having congregations rather smaller than usual, and there was no change in the character of his audiences. No matter how well the revival services may be advertised, people who do not attend Grace Church at ordinary times will not attend it on any special occasion.

The Church is on our hands elaborately organized, and demanding skillful and discreet pastors to handle it. And it is Church work we are doing from the beginning of the year to the end. To build a finer church, to advance the salary, to raise more money for general claims, indicates a successful pastor, the man now in demand.

Is the very success of the past forcing us to be churchmen rather than evangelists? Is the preacher's fervor and faith being crushed out of him by the drudgery of church routine? Is the work of the preacher becoming constantly more difficult and less soul-satisfying?

There are other questions to ask. Does not the great church, paying salary to the pastor, stand in the way of reaching the consciences of the poor with the gospel messages? Grace Church has a thousand members, cultivated, rich. They maintain a splendid church; they pay a large salary; they raise thousands for missions, Christian education, etc. Is there no way to make these intelligent members of the church direct teachers of others? Can they be made soul-winners? The Church is congested at its great centers. The Men and Religion Forward Movement aims to solve the problem. Will it do it?

Not to take too dark a view, we will not omit to observe that the Church to-day is not measured by her numbers, nor the rapidity with which she advances numerically. The influence of the Church in wide circles outside her own pale was never before so great. It is seen in education, in literature, in her effect upon society and public opinion. Through these molding agencies the Church is a great power. The power of the Church has become her peril. Those who recognize her power seek to exploit her in their schemes of reform and progress. All sorts of reform agencies seek to harness the Church in their interest. They would have the Church formally enlist to fight their battles. But the business of the Church is still to elevate the consciences and moral ideals of men. Let men form their schemes and fight their battles for social or political reforms. The Christians of the land will ever be the most earnest strugglers in such movements. But the Church, as such, should stand as the meeting-ground of all learners and laborers in the school and service of the Master.

Is the Church losing in spirituality? Never has the Church, as such, been so enlisted in effort to establish the Kingdom of Christ. The call is to still greater activities. We are content that the hermit, the recluse, the pietist should be reckoned as phases of religion, which more intelligent views and better tests of Christianity have left behind. We want action as proof of devotion to the Master's cause. But the spiritual life has its experience of fellowship with God. It takes hold on God and eternal life. Men are not born into the Kingdom of God but by the Spirit of God. The "new birth" and the conscious fellowship with God which it brings must still be emphasized in the gospel message.

HAS THE METHODIST CHURCH AN EDUCATIONAL POLICY?

By Rev. Stonewall Anderson, D. D.

Recently an intelligent gentleman was asked to make a brief statement of the educational policy of the Methodist Church. He replied by saying: "The Methodist Church has no educational policy." Was he correct? I think not. Our policy may be in some respects hazy and indefinite. The rank and file of the Church, even many members of the Annual Conferences, may know little or nothing of it. We may not be living up to it. We may be in a condition similar to a political party out of power, and therefore unable to make its platform effective. In spite of all this, our Church certainly has an educational platform, though for want of power or proper organization, she may not be able to make it always and everywhere effective.

It is the purpose of this article to mention certain salient features of this policy. The educational work of the Sunday school, the Epworth League, and the Board of Missions is left out of account here. It is clearly apparent that within the limits of this article anything like elaboration is out of the question. What is said, therefore, will be little more than a mere statement of the important features of what is conceived to be the Church's educational policy.

1. The object of the educational activities of the Church is the promotion of Christian education. By requiring her pastors to preach on the subject, and to advise parents to educate their children, by various General Conference enactments from time to time, and by her educational organizations, institutions, and agencies, the Church has committed herself unreservedly to the task of education. Of course, the education which the Church believes in, is in sympathy with, and seeks to further is Christian education. But what is Christian education? This question was raised by the Board of Education at its annual session, April 27, 1904. A committee was appointed, consisting of Bishop Hendrix, Bishop Galloway, and Chancellor Kirkland, "to define what the Board means by 'Christian education.'" This definition was worked out by the committee, and is found published in the Eleventh Annual Report of the Board of Education.

2. It is the policy of the Church to exert her influence upon the education given by the State, to the end that that, too, as far as possible, may be Christian education. At the General Conference held at Dallas in May, 1902, the following preamble and resolution were adopted:

"Whereas a general movement is being organized looking especially to the improvement of the common schools in the rural districts of the South, and to the better preparation of teachers;

"Resolved, That our educators, presiding elders, preachers, and members generally are urged to give this much-needed movement hearty indorsement and active co-operation."

Only common schools in rural districts are here mentioned. Such schools form a very important part of education by the State, especially in the South. The Church's clearly expressed sympathy for and purpose to be helpful to such schools reveals, I take it, her attitude toward State education. This sympathetic attitude is further made clear by reference to the Bishops' address at the General Conference of 1902, in which a statement is made as to what relation the Church should sustain to the high schools of the State. The statement referred to is as follows: "It would therefore seem wiser for the Church to establish preparatory or fitting schools, and also to co-operate in the development of educational sentiment and local high schools by securing Christian teachers and directors for such schools, that their influence may always make for righteousness. The patronage of our colleges comes more largely from the preparatory and the high school than from the secondary (unclassified) school, owned and operated by the Church, while they do not entail upon the Church financial burdens. This policy will put the influences of the Church in direct relation to all educational work in which our people may be directly or indirectly interested, for we must not overlook the fact that Methodists are taxpayers as well as Church members, and therefore they have a duty to the community as well as to the Church."

3. It is the policy of the Church to maintain schools of her own. Though she may use the schools of the State and endeavor to influence them to the fullest possible extent, that they may give the highest type of education, the Church holds it to be of the greatest importance, both to herself and to the general welfare, that she equip and maintain schools owned and controlled by herself. Our Church proposes to do in her own schools something other and different from that which the State is able to do.

In 1911 ninety-nine institutions reported to the Board of Education as owned by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Of this number, one is a university, twenty-one are colleges, thirty-seven are academies, ten report themselves as junior colleges, and thirty are unclassified. The buildings and ground of these schools were valued in 1911 at $10,690,907; the endowment at $4,131,910; the total annual income, $1,315,147. There were enrolled in them 15,782 students.

4. It is the policy of the Church to standardize her schools. Provision is made by our law for the appointment of "ten practical educators who shall prescribe the minimum requirements to be demanded of institutions seeking recognition by the Board of Education as secondary schools (academies), colleges, and universities. This commission shall, at least once in every four years, report to the Board of Education its work; and it shall then be the duty of the Board to classify all the educational institutions of our Church, and to designate each as university, college, or academy (or secondary school), according to the relation of the work done by it to the standards thus established by the commission."

In our policy provision is made for three classes of institutions, and only three—universities, colleges, and academies. The "Bulletin" of the Board of Education shows five kinds of institutions. To the three already mentioned are added junior colleges and unclassified schools. Perhaps our policy should be broadened so as to include junior colleges. Of course the list of unclassified schools cannot remain. These schools should shortly become colleges, or junior colleges, or academies. It is contrary to the policy of our Church for any of its institutions below the college to confer degrees. In my judgment we have reached the time when this feature of our policy should be rigidly enforced. Our educational policy may want clearness on other lines, but here we are certainly clear. The Church does not and will not give its sanction to that species of educational charlatanism involved in conferring the standard academic degrees by institutions below the rank of the college. May I say in passing that the Church did not begin the work of standardizing her schools a day too soon? There are many and powerful agencies working in this field. To resist, as some seem inclined to do, the influences operating to standardize the schools of the country is mere folly. Our schools must be standardized. In no other way can we secure proper organization.

5. It is the policy of the Church to endow its institutions, especially its colleges and universities. One of the constituent elements of a college or university is endowment. This point we have settled. Endowment is secured in two ways—by annual collections from our people and by gifts for permanent invested endowment. Institutions below college rank may be endowed. They are not compelled to be, in order to secure recognition.

6. It is the policy of the Church to use an educated ministry. While we do not exclude men from the ministry who have not had academic training, we do apply an educational test to every man seeking admission either to the local or itinerant ministry. Furthermore, the Church has committed herself to the task of raising up and equipping an educated ministry. She proposes to seek among the ranks of the Church young men whom God calls to this high service; and if they are not financially able to help themselves, to aid them in pecuniary as well as in other ways to secure academic training. In carrying out this part of our policy, it is one of the functions of the Board of Education, through the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, to raise a loan fund for the purpose of aiding worthy young men to prepare for the responsible work of the pastorate.

7. It is the policy of this Church to build up a system of correlated schools. In the charter of the Board of Education, which was taken out in 1895, by order of the General Conference of 1894, it is declared: "The general purposes for which a charter is sought are to establish a Board of Education for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which shall consist of members whose general duties and powers shall be fixed by the General Conference of said Church, and said Board shall have general care for the upbuilding of the educational institutions of said Church, for the establishment of new ones, and for the union of all in harmonious system."

The Church brought the Board of Education into existence to lead in building up her educational institutions into a harmonious system. The educational house of Methodism was rapidly becoming divided against itself. Competition and friction were apparent on every hand. Chaos was fast becoming the order of the day when the General Conference organized the Board. And while our educational work is not yet in ideal order, who can say what would have been the condition without the Board's efforts during the past eighteen years?

In some quarters the idea seems to linger that it is the policy of the Church to build a college for every Annual Conference. Such is not the case. The whole Church is the unit of organization. The true policy is not to attempt to build a college in every Conference, not even in every State. We shall be true to the policy of the Church at this point if we locate our colleges at such distances from each other that they will not be compelled to enter into competition with one another in attempting to secure patronage in students and money from the same constituency. We shall be true to the policy of the Church when there is a real need for each school, when there is a constituency back of each school large enough and strong enough to maintain it "in respectability and in power." It was to carry out this policy that the law was enacted to the effect that an Annual Conference cannot adopt an institution of collegiate rank or above without the consent of the Board of Education. (See Discipline, Par. 59.)

8. The agencies charged with carrying out the educational policy of the Church are the Board of Education and its auxiliaries, the Conference Boards, and the Commission on Education. To these bodies is committed educational leadership by the General Conference of the Church. It is their duty to make effective the educational policy of the Church. To do that, they must work in harmony. Why is it that after these years intelligent men say we have no policy? Have the agencies mentioned been remiss in their duties? Have they failed to co-operate with each other in this great task? The Commission and the Board have worked together harmoniously, if not effectively, from the beginning. But there is not now, and never has been, that close co-operation and joint effort between the Conferences and the two connectional agencies that should be. Right here is the point of most serious defect in our educational organization. Until very recently how many of our Conferences have sought to know the educational policy of the Church in administering the educational affairs of the Conferences? For illustration, how many have taken into account the standards and requirements of the Commission in making their appropriations and giving recognition to Conference institutions? The Board of Education will not make an appropriation to an institution below the college grade which confers degrees. To do so would be to ignore the standards of the Commission. Many of our Conference Boards do not hesitate to make appropriations to such schools in clear violation of the policy of the Church. However, a better day is dawning. The Board of Education and the Conference Boards are getting closer together for more effective service in building up and better organizing our work. At the recent Educational Conference, held June 20, 21, composed largely of Conference Secretaries of Education, a resolution was unanimously passed to the effect that the Conference Boards of Education should observe the same principles in administering their affairs that the General Board observes in its administration. That simply means that the Conference Boards are determined to co-operate with the General Board in making effective the policy of the Church.

If the fall Conferences will adopt some such measure and will fall in line with the Church's policy, and will co-operate with the connectional agencies provided by the General Conference, it will be a long step in the right direction.

Our preachers and people will soon know that we have an educational policy, because it will be effective everywhere.

WHY NOT GET IT?

The Annual Report of the Board of Missions which was issued some weeks ago, and has already been put into the hands of each of the pastors in the connection, is available also to any others who may desire a copy, and will be mailed free of charge on application to the Board of Missions, No. 310 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn. The Report contains a complete review of all our mission fields and operations, embracing a statement from each Secretary, and also from every important mission in our six fields—China, Japan, Korea, Brazil, Mexico and Cuba. The volume contains, also, a complete directory of the names and addresses of all the missionaries of the Board. Another interesting feature is the Minutes of the Annual Meeting in May, which was in some respects the best session of the Board in its entire history. All who desire to be informed with relation to the missionary activities of our Church should by all means supply themselves with a copy of the Report.

The New York Observer, a religious weekly that has taken high rank in religious journalism for three quarters of a century, has been purchased by the Christian Work and Evangelist.

A million dollars has been added to the endowment fund of Brown University, Providence, R. I., the proceeds of which amount is to be used in paying increased salaries to teachers and in pensioning others who have grown too old for service.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, the venerable ex-Editor of the Christian Advocate of New York, who recently accepted the post of lecturer in Drew Theological Seminary, will deliver, as his first course of lectures, a series of addresses on "Ecclesiastical Law and Philosophy of Christianity."

The Church papers generally are containing words of highest praise of the fraternal address recently delivered by Bishop A. W. Wilson before the Conference of the British Wesleyan Methodist Church. Truly it was a great utterance, and contained words well worth hearing and preserving.

The members of the Congregational Church in Massachusetts contributed nearly an average of $19 per member for church purposes last year. About an average of $5 per member is given by them to the various benevolent enterprises of the Church. This is about 20 per cent above the average for the Congregational Church in the United States.

A movement is on foot to found a woman's college in connection with Trinity College of Durham, N. C. It is claimed that the business men of Durham have undertaken to raise $25,000 to equal a like amount that has been offered, conditionally, by outside parties, and if the amount is secured the work of erecting the college building will be begun at once.

Rev. Frank D. Gamewell, whose effective service as superintendent of education of the Methodist Episcopal Church in China is recognized everywhere, has been elected general secretary of the Educational Association of China. The organization is interdenominational, and Dr. Gamewell has accepted the position for three years, the Board of Foreign Missions of his Church having given its consent.

Dr. John P. Mott, superintendent of all the Protestant Missionary agencies, is preparing for a trip extending over practically every missionary field in the world. He will first visit Ceylon and India, and then China and Japan. He will invite all missionaries who can do so to meet him in a body at the most convenient center of a given mission field, and he will conduct a several days' conference at each place.

The Methodist Church of Canada has adopted a resolution expressing its willingness to proceed at once toward union with the Presbyterian and Congregational Churches of Canada. It is claimed that conditions in Western Canada, where there is a great influx of settlers, demand the union of the three bodies. Just what action will be taken by the other two bodies at this time is hard to predict, but it is understood that if there is any opposition at all, it will come from the Presbyterian Church.

The publishers of the new minutes of the One Hundred and Twenty-fourth General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church announce that the book contains 1044 pages, and then venture to predict that the sharpest eyes will be unable to detect in them the slightest error. For a publisher, that is a dangerous challenge; for typographical errors have an aggravating way of glaring from the printed page after a publication has been issued, while before publication they were as evasive as the proverbial "needle in the haystack."

The National Reform Association is now arranging for the Second World's Christian Citizenship Conference to be held in Portland, Ore., from June 29 to July 6, 1913. An elaborate program is being prepared, and speakers from all parts of the world will be invited to deliver addresses. Among those of prominence thus far announced as speakers are Bishop William Quayle, of the M. E. Church, and Bishops E. R. Hendrix and John C. Kilgo of our own Church.

The first two Sundays of September have been set apart by those whose business it is to plead for special causes as Labor Sunday, and Day of Prayer for Colleges Sunday. As much as we believe in the Church, and that it has a message for the laboring man, and that it fosters the spirit of education, we question the advisability of any attempt to get all the preachers in the country to preach on a given date on the same subject. The themes of a preacher's sermon should be of his own choosing, and not those handed to him by the corresponding secretary of any society.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, the able Methodist Episcopal gatherer of statistics, has given to the public his record of the advances and losses made by the Churches in the United States during the year 1911. His figures are interesting, although they cannot be said to be absolutely accurate. Among the Protestant bodies he credits the Methodist Episcopal Church as ranking first, the Regular Baptist Church (South), second, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, third. Among the Churches that are more prominently known the following have less than 100,000 members: Unitarians, Universalists, Salvation Army, Christian Science and Quakers.

Rev. Dr. Parley E. Zartmann, secretary of the Extension Department of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, is in charge of the plans for an Evangelistic Conference to be held in the Moody Bible Institute building on September 18-20. The object of the meeting is to assemble all the leading evangelists of the country together in order to plan a systematic evangelistic campaign throughout the whole country. Coming as it does in September, when most evangelists are the busiest in revival meetings, we doubt whether it will be possible to assemble any considerable number of the better class of evangelists anywhere at that time.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE SOUTHERN ASSEMBLY.

The second annual meeting of the stockholders of the Southern Assembly was held in the Methodist Church in Waynesville on June 20, at 10:30 a. m. About fifteen hundred shares of stock were represented either in person or by proxy. The report of the work done during the past year was read and the plans of the Board of Commissioners for the coming year were announced to the stockholders. The report showed that about seven miles of beautiful roads had been constructed at that time, and since that time two miles more have been finished; that about seven hundred and fifty choice lots had been carefully surveyed and staked and maps of same made, so that lots would be immediately put on sale, that not only had plans been made for the dam and the hotel and auditorium, but that the work on the dam and the hotel had already been begun, and the contract had just been closed for a steel auditorium with a capacity of four thousand, the steel frame-work of which is to be erected in place by August 15, 1912. The Commissioners reported to the stockholders that the dam, the auditorium and the hotel would all be completed in time for the formal opening of the Assembly at the third great Conference of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, which will be held on the Assembly Grounds on June 27-30, 1913.

The stockholders indicated their hearty approval of the work which had been done and of the plans as outlined for the future, and after the adjournment of the stockholders' meeting, a trip was made to the Grounds in order that opportunity might be given to the stockholders in attendance to select lots. Many lots were selected, and since the day of the annual meeting many more stockholders have visited the Grounds or have sent in their application for lots.

In view of the fact that for a limited period the Assembly is giving a rebate of 50 per cent on the price of lots to all persons who will build on the same by September 1, 1913, practically all of those who have purchased lots have indicated their intention of building by the time of the opening next summer, and already some have adopted their plans and have given out contracts for their cottages. Among those who have bought lots are John R. Pepper, Memphis, Tenn.; E. A. Cole, J. B. Ivey and D. H. Anderson, Charlotte, N. C.; W. S. Witham and J. A. McCord, Atlanta, Ga.; J. B. Blades and two sons, Newbern, N. C.; J. A. Bullock, Montgomery, Ala.; F. P. Gurley, High Point, N. C.; Dr. George R. Stuart, Cleveland, Tenn.; Dr. S. B. Cook, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Fred Carter, Sweetwater, Tenn.; Rev. Whitley Langston, Waycross, Ga.; Rev. A. E. Holler, Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. Hattie D. Borden, Goldsboro, N. C.; I. B. Verdery, Augusta, Ga.; C. Perry Snell, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Miss Nellie Bennett, Kobe, Japan; Miss Mary Lee Bennett, Blackstone, Va.; W. H. Cralle, Pittsburgh, Pa.; J. M. Hough, Norfolk, Va.; George P. Adams, Blackstone, Va.; Rev. T. W. Lewis, Memphis, Tenn.; D. R. Barbee, Mobile, Ala.; General Julian S. Carr and T. J. Lamb, Durham, N. C.; Thomas J. Jerome, Salisbury, N. C.; S. C. Welch, G. C. Briggs, Dr. John Smathers, Bishop James Atkins, and Dr. James Cannon of Waynesville, and others.

A company has been formed by a number of gentlemen, which company has bought seventy-five lots, and will erect one, and probably two, hotels and forty cottages within the next two years.

President W. W. Finley, of the Southern Railway, and Traffic Passenger Manager S. H. Hardwick made a special visit to the Assembly Grounds on Thursday, July 25, and after a careful inspection of the work being done, stated that the Southern Railway would proceed at once to prepare plans for the building of a handsome station and necessary side-tracks, so that the railroad would be in readiness to handle the travelers to the Laymen's Conference in June, 1913.

Letters requesting information concerning lots and the plans of the Assembly are being received every day, and there is abundant evidence that the interest of the Church in the Assembly is very great and is steadily increasing. Many persons are visiting the Grounds, and all are impressed by the beauty of the scenery and the appropriateness of the place for a great Summer Assembly. We are banded together to do a great and much-needed work, and we must and will make it a great success.

Seven men were electrocuted at Sing Sing prison, New York, on Aug. 11. To a sympathetic person it does not seem right to thus slaughter men in the name of the law. Yet, when one contemplates the fact that these men were confirmed criminals and murderers, such drastic action appears necessary.

On Oct. 14-15, New York City will witness the mobilization of the greatest fleet of warships ever assembled in American waters. At that time President Taft will review 120 fighting craft, including the two new 26,000-ton dreadnaughts, the Wyoming and Arkansas. At the same time forty-three war ships will be assembled in the San Francisco harbor and twenty in the Manila harbor.

The United States Senate committee on privileges and elections is prepared to recommend that the United States pay to William Lorimer, who was found guilty of obtaining his seat in the Senate by fraud, and ejected therefrom, the sum of $35,000, a part of the amount he spent trying to prove himself innocent. Such a suggestion is scarcely less than an attempt to make the United States a party in an attempt to corrupt itself. We should like to know the full meaning of the spirit of treason.

The highest price ever paid for cattle on the hoof since 1867 was paid in Chicago last week, being $10.40 per hundred pounds. We are not able to understand the reason of the excessively high price of beef cattle. It is easily understood that the cost to the consumer will be raised in proportion to the cost to the packer, and, also, that after the price of meat goes up, no matter how much the cost of cattle goes down, the retailer seldom remembers to reduce the price to the consumer. With the doctors advising the American people to eat less meat, and floods and other causes reducing the income of the average man, the exceedingly high price of meat will greatly aid the masses in heeding the doctors' advice.

The latest Kansas reform that has been suggested by an original "Jayhawker" legislator is one that would establish a course of study in the State schools looking toward the final establishment of a class of professional jurymen. The author of the proposed measure claims that a man to intelligently serve on a jury should not only be a level-headed, unbiased man, but that he should have such knowledge of the law of his State as would enable him to judge the fine points of legal technicalities that are so often presented to a jury as evidence that might affect the decision. We doubt the wisdom of the proposed reform. Who would undertake to become a professional jurymen?

The science of surgery promises to accomplish wonders for the good of man in the way of preventing diseases and causing a normal development of all organs and limbs in those who might otherwise become cripples or invalids. It is claimed that by stimulating the thyroid gland, located in the floor of the mouth and near the larynx, a child may be made to grow much taller. It is further claimed that the shape of the body, size of the bones and general health of the person may, in a measure, be controlled by the science of surgery, assisted by the science of medicine. We do not know how much dependence can be put in these promises of great benefit, but one thing is certain, and that is that the number of cripples, deformed people and invalids are increasing so rapidly that something should be done.

The Chicago Tribune claims that a Chicago preacher paid it $100 for the space required to publish as an advertisement a portion of the Scriptures. It further claims that two souls were converted as a result of the bought-and-paid-for space in its paper. That means that the two souls were saved at a cost of $50 apiece, the paper receiving the money. The Tribune has the temerity to suggest that the conversion of the world might be accomplished by the Churches devoting their time to circulating the newspapers and, dismissing their preachers, spending the money thus saved in advertising. The saving clause in the Tribune's editorial claiming such a change was advocated by a leading minister, was that the said preacher is also an insurance agent, an ad-writer, and is at present without a pulpit. May such men so remain.

"WESLEY AND HIS WORK."

By Theo. Copeland.

The greatest need of every generation is to have its institutions vitalized and readjusted to existing conditions and environments. This necessity was laid upon the English people in the eighteenth century by reason of the skepticism which permeated the higher walks of life, and the low state of morals prevalent among all classes. For such a time as this, God raised up and commissioned John Wesley to inaugurate and direct the greatest religious movement of modern times.

This latest book, from the pen of Bishop Candler is in no sense biographic. Its purpose is rather to present a portrait of Mr. Wesley in his strenuous endeavor to stay the pernicious tide of infidelity, to rekindle the fires of devotion on deserted altars, and to infuse new life into a decadent and apostate Church.

The book consists of ten addresses bearing on different but related subjects, the first having been delivered before the British Wesleyan Conference assembled at York, England, July 17, 1908.

The entire book shows the Bishop at his best. The subjects treated are of the first importance, and the manner of their treatment is above criticism. I have been specially enlightened and edified by the address of the author on the occasion of the bi-centenary of the birth of John Wesley. We have here a panoramic canvas on which eminent historians, like Buckle, Lecky and Lord Macaulay; noted journalists, such as Strachey and W. T. Stead, and distinguished theologians of the type of Isaac Taylor and A. M. Fairbairn, pass in review before us and lay their garlands at the feet of John Wesley. We are reminded that the Methodist movement is the starting point of our modern religious polity, and the field preaching of Wesley and Whitefield is the event from which the religious epoch now current must date its commencement. They tell us that Wesley helped England to save Europe from doubt, despair and destruction; that he checked the mad current of French infidelity, and averted in some degree the perils of modern industrialism.

The Bishop quotes a fine eulogy from Dr. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton University: "From the lips of John Wesley there flowed into the arid and sterile theology of the eighteenth century a refreshing and fructifying influence. A divine benefit has been conferred through him upon every living Christian Church, and multitudes who hardly know his name have felt the influence of his spirit. That every one who wants salvation may find it in Christ; that every one who finds it through faith may know it and be sure of it, and that this knowledge brings gladness and leads to goodness—these are the great truths which shone clear in Wesley's experience, and these, I take it, are of the essence of Christianity."

According to Fitchett, the historian, the religious revival of that period purified domestic life, wove bonds of quick and generous sympathy betwixt all classes, gave a new tenderness to charity, a loftier authority to morals, as well as a new grace to religion.

Toward the close of Wesley's life he apprehended, not that the people called Methodists would cease to exist, but lest they should exist only as a dead sect having the form of godliness without its power. And this he predicted would undoubtedly be the case unless they held fast both to the doctrine, spirit and discipline with which they first set out. The doctrine we still hold intact, but that in many places we have drifted far from the spirit and discipline of early Methodism is a painful fact.

If the Methodist clergy of the twentieth century would make as much of the Bible as Wesley did, if they were inspired by the same lofty motives that prompted his consecrated life, if they kept steadily and constantly before them, as he did, the controlling and consuming passion of the Christian ministry, the desire of all nations would speedily come in Pentecostal power, and diffuse His blessings to the ends of the earth.

IN REPLY TO BROTHER SELECMAN.

In his article published in the last issue of the Advocate, Rev. C. C. Selecman, of Webb City, Mo., accuses me of treating unfairly his recent contribution to the Nashville Christian Advocate, entitled "Wanted—An Annual Conference Program." He seems to think that I did not read it intelligently, or misconstrued its meaning in order to reduce the task of answering it. Possibly I did not read it intelligently, according to his notion. Intelligence in readers, according to some writers, is manifested only by their unconditional agreement with the writer's statements. If my reading intelligently Brother Selecman's recent article is conditioned upon my agreeing with the sentiments contained therein, I'll confess right here that I can't meet the condition. I will not agree with the spirit of any article that has as its purpose the destruction of either the doctrines or polity of the Methodist Church.

He quotes a certain connectional man as saying, "We are being crushed by ecclesiastical routine." If the "we" means the connectional man, it might be noted that the business of the Methodist Church is not to expand connectional men, or humor dignitaries. There is even now too great a tendency on the part of some to place the few favored ones in the Church upon a pedestal and perform a sort of homage to them, and ignore the rank and file of the ministry. Right here let me say that the future progress of the Church does not depend upon ecclesiastical statesmanship, nor upon the revision of the modus operandi of our ecclesiastical gatherings, but upon the faithfulness of the men who are in the field, upon our pastors and the noble men and women of our churches. They are the ones who are gathering in the sheaves. The number of souls saved during any one year depends very little upon the faithfulness of our connectional men, but almost wholly upon the faithfulness of our fellow-pastors; and yet our friend would crush the hard-worked pastor, seal his lips on the Conference floor, and hurl an insult into his face by saying so "many pastors who do shoddy work, talk in extravagant terms" that all of them should be silenced. I deny his charge. I lift my hat to the pastor on the poor rural or mission charge, and claim for him the same right to take the time of our Annual Conference sessions as is accorded to presiding elders or connectional men.

Again, if by the "we" he means the Church, I will say that the Church is in far less danger of being crushed by "ecclesiastical routine," whatever that is, than it is by ecclesiastical vandalism. There is to-day in our Church, as well as other Churches, a small number of ecclesiastical vandals, with chisel and hammer in hand, who have as their object, and, apparently, sole object, the changing of something. They seem to think the Church is like the housewife's front room, "freshened up a bit by moving the furniture around." Give them rope, and they would restate our faith, do away with the presiding eldership, and so construe the Word of God that a man with the devil in him would have no reason to repent of his sins or believe on the name of Jesus Christ. I have not said that Brother Selecman belongs to the crowd of vandals, but I do say that he is attempting to do away with a time-honored custom and so change our Annual Conferences that the personal element in them would be largely destroyed.

My creed in brief is, I believe in the doctrines of Christianity as interpreted by the Methodist Church; I believe in that system of church government that has been tried by the Methodists for so many years and found good enough; I believe in the Methodist itinerant, who on an average is the most spiritual, religious and effective minister of Jesus Christ found in the world, and I believe he has a right to be heard in the Annual Conference sessions for what he has done; I believe the Annual Conference is the official business meeting for a number of preachers within a given territory, the object of which is to hear the reports of the year's work, and plan and man the field for another year's work, and that there is nothing in our system that indicates that its sessions should be made to entertain any one; and I believe that any attempt to radically change our system of doctrine or polity should be throttled in its incipency.

In brief, Brother Selecman, by both his first and last articles, desires to do away with verbal reports at Conference; I do not so desire. He would map out a program for the session, showing just when each speaker will appear, so that it would seem that the connectional men are a part of the session instead of incidental visitors. I say that such a change is absurd. The connectional men themselves could not work to such a program. They are busy men, often making two and three Conferences in one week, besides traveling hundreds of miles. They often arrive at a Conference session in the morning and are compelled to leave within a few hours and must be heard then or not at all, and the Bishop cannot twist the affairs of the Conference suddenly into such a strain that the Secretary's speech will be in logical order. His Annual Conference program with a "cumulative effect" is cumulative twaddle. He agrees with me that the connectional men fail to hold the attention of the preachers when they make their speeches, yet he says I reflected seriously on them. I may have done so, but I would rather cast a few that way, than to say that so many of the rank and file of our preachers are so dishonest in their reports on the floor of the Conference that the reports should be done away with and all the pastors muzzled and forbidden to tell of their trials and victories during the year.

His third suggestion about committee reports being brought in earlier, is not so bad. But it must be remembered that a committee must have time to consider and something to consider before it reports. If reports are hurried up to any great extent the committees would have to meet in advance of the regular session of the Conference, or else the Conference would have to sit longer than a week. If, as he says, reports are written by one man, read hurriedly and voted recklessly, the fault is not with our system, but with the men who vote. He simply says, in effect, that the majority of our preachers consider their own personal pleasure of greater importance than the welfare of the Church. If such is true (which I do not believe, for again, I say, I believe Methodist preachers are Christian gentlemen), what we need is not a change of system, but a change of heart.

He says his plea is not for "floods of oratory." I will submit his own words: "There are many smoldering sentiments entertained by the rank and file of itinerants to-day that need to be dragged out from under the ashes. Many sparks would be extinguished quickly by a breath of air that otherwise will smoulder for years. Here and there a flame will kindle when proper ventilation is furnished. . . . There are many questions on which the rank and file of 'field hands' have a right to speak." For what is he pleading if not for floods of oratory?

In conclusion Brother Selecman says that there is a widespread feeling that our Conferences are not filling the bill. Whose bill? and what is the character of the bill that needs filling? The fact is, there is a crowd of pseudo-reformers who are just itching to change something and are casting about for some excuse to attack either the doctrines or polity of our Church.

His second statement is that he is not bold enough to presume that the solution of the question is in his suggestions. Once, at least, we are agreed. We have written and arrived at the same conclusion, viz., that his new program for an Annual Conference is a fizzle. It will not solve anything. His apology that the question was up and he wanted to keep it up is a little "far-fetched." Brother Rankin's suggestion of having the Conference sessions once in two years, instead of annually was a joke. Everyone laughed at it who read it thoughtfully. That Brother Selecman kept the subject "up" with his self-confessed bopeless plan adds to the humor of a suggested change.

His last paragraph is a confession of faith in God, the Church, and divine providence. He says that when a change is really needed, God will raise up a proper man or set men to do the work. Correct he is, but at present we see no reason for casting reflections on both our present system and our noble preachers, and offering self-confessed futile methods of accomplishing an imaginary reform.

ORIGINAL SIN.

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

"By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin." (Romans 5:12.)

Sometimes the thought comes into the mind of the Christian, "Why does God, who has all power in heaven and earth, allow evil to exist in the world? Has he not power to blot out and banish from the earth the very existence of evil? Was evil present in the beginning, and did God create the evil as well as the good?" These are not idle questions of mere curiosity, but of importance to each one to whom the thought presents itself.

We will better understand these questions and receive light on this subject by reading the three first chapters of Genesis, where the inspired writer, Moses, gives an account of the creation, and the fall of man. We find that God created everything just as he would have it be, in order to the happiness of man and for his own glory; so that he pronounced that which he had created "very good." Man being created in the image of his Maker, was holy and happy. But he was created a free moral agent, having the power to choose obedience and live, or to disobey and die. He was made able to stand, yet liable to fall. He chose to transgress, and fell from his high and holy estate, and thus "by one man sin entered into the world and death by sin." By this one act of disobedience, banishment from the Garden of Eden was incurred and a curse was brought on the earth for man's sake; and not only that, but there were entailed on his posterity a sinful disposition and a depraved nature, "whereby they are very far gone from original righteousness and prone to evil and that continually." And so the poet rightly expresses the condition of fallen man when he says:

"As soon as we draw our infant breath
The seeds of sin grow up for death."

We have only to look around us and see the existing conditions of this world and its many calamities, and read the daily newspapers with their records of crimes and harrowing accounts of daily occurrences, to see that there is a curse resting upon it. And although there are many beautiful things in nature on which the eye of man delights to look, showing us something of its original beauty and grandeur, yet the effects of sin and death are found everywhere, reminding us of the fact stated by the inspired writer that, "By one man sin entered into the world and death by sin." In my next I will have more to say on this subject, and something of the remedy for sin.

WISHING.

Do you wish the world were better?
Let me tell you what to do;
Set a watch upon your actions,
Keep them always straight and true.
Rid your mind of selfish motives,
Let your thought be clean and high;
You can make a little Eden
Of the sphere you occupy.

Do you wish the world were wiser?
Well, suppose you make a start,
By accumulating wisdom
In the scrap-book of your heart.
Do not waste one page on folly;
Live to learn, and learn to live.
If you want to give men knowledge,
You must get it ere you give.

Do you wish the world were happy?
Then remember day by day
Just to scatter seeds of kindness
As you pass along the way;
For the pleasures of the many
May be oftentimes traced to one,
As the hand that plants an acorn
Shelters armies from the sun.

ANY BOY MAY DO GREAT THINGS.

A bronze tablet recently placed on the outside of the house which was the boyhood home of Mark Twain, reads:

"Mark Twain's life teaches that poverty is an incentive rather than a bar, and that any boy, however humble his birth and surroundings, may by honesty and industry accomplish great things." It has been suggested that copies of the tablet be placed in the public schools of the country.—New York Christian Herald.

JAPANESE TOP-SPINNERS.

A Japanese student of medicine was showing a group of Americans what he could do in the way of top-spinning. He took up a big, yellow top shaped like a chrysanthemum, wrapped a silk cord about it and threw it down. It spun beautifully, this huge flower, and out of it, all of a sudden, a half-dozen smaller flowers leaped and spun in their turn about the floor.

"A chrysanthemum top," said the young man. "Here is a bird top."

He corded and threw down a top that resembled a bird. This top, as it spun, opened and closed its wings and made long leaps to left and right in imitation of a bird flight. The Japanese student wound a red top as big as his head and hurled it violently straight at one of the guests. It shot through the air till it was within a few inches of the frightened young man's face, and then, as though by magic, turned and darted back again, and the student caught it on his palm and held it there, still spinning.

"This is a boomerang top," he said. And again he threw it across the room, and again it shot back still spinning, to his hand.

The young man now set going simultaneously a dozen small tops of red and yellow and green paper. They looked plain and commonplace as they spun, but suddenly they began to open out, and one became a ladder, another a lantern, a third a ship, a fourth a branch of cherry blossoms, and so on.

"The Chinese," said the student, "are noted for their kites. Why is it that we Japanese are not equally noted for our tops? All over our country we spin tops, and my little exhibition here would seem poor and mean beside the one that a really expert spinner could give you in Japan."—Christian Intelligencer.

TWO IN THE CORN.

Margie stopped short, listening. As sure as anything, those sounds meant that Joe and Jack were on the other side of the hedge in mischief. Whispers and scurrying feet were bad signs when Joe and Jack were near at hand and out of sight. Margie sighed—a very long sigh for a girl six years old. "I just know," said Margie, "that's something of mine they got."

Here she heard a queer mixture of noises—a hiss, a growl, a wicked shout of joy; and from under the hedge shot a furry ball. Margie's dearest of three dear cats, Tort—short for tortoise-shell. His ears were flat and his tail as stiff as a brush. Margie caught only a fleeting glimpse as he passed, but enough to see that all four feet appeared to be several times their normal size.

Without hesitation, she set out on a dead run in pursuit of the fleeing cat.

Down the yard they sped, cat and girl, through the gate, into the road and still on. Margie had simply one idea; she must overtake Tort before his feet grew any larger. When her breath gave out, and she crouched in a little heap to rest, it was with a confused memory of having seen a tortoise-shell tail disappear somewhere to the left and of having dashed after it. "Why, I'm in the corn," Margie said.

She certainly was. All around waved a forest of straight corn; the green blades leaned together for a roof, and everywhere went a sort of singing breath. Nothing else could be heard or seen. "Well, I've let Tort outrun me," Margie remarked, recovering her scattered wits; "I'll just have to go home, now, and wait till the blessed cat comes back to me." So she started forth.

But much walking and walking did not bring the road edge any nearer. At last, when all directions had been tried and found to lead nowhere, Margie understood that she was lost in the corn-field. "It's like the ocean," she told herself fearfully. "S'pose there are sharks and whales."

This last word made her think of Jonah, and that brought another thought: "I can say my prayers." And holding tight to a cornstalk, she prayed for help. Then she sat and waited breathing very hard, but comforted. Presently far off, a slight crackle began. "Do whales crackle?" she asked herself. Rustle, rustle. Something was brushing against the low-growing blades. Margie shut her eyes, opened them and saw—Tort! He mewed politely; his tail was smooth again, and his feet the right size—all but one that wore nothing more terrible than a paper shoe.

Tort, well pleased too, shook his freed paw lightly, sat down and began to wash his face with it as though nothing had happened. Then he stretched, yawned and started off at a brisk trot. His little mistress followed, not a good six inches behind, having no idea of again losing sight of the precious tail-tip.

Daintily, carelessly, he picked his way, looking to neither right nor left; and finally, after much winding in and out, it seemed to Margie, they were at the roadside again and yonder in the distance was home.—Jewel.

THE CONVERTED BRAHMIN.

(From a true incident narrated by Dr. Scudder.)

Published by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church.

A Brahmin, who'd been taught from early youth That he was holy, wise and heir of truth;
A Brahmin, worshiper of idols old
Like "Jagganatha the Supreme"—of him we're told

That he, some years ago, a Christian book
Obtained and read. He could but look
With scorn upon the words therein.
"What!" murmured he, "Is idol worship sin?
And 'Jagganatha the Supreme,' is he
No God? Away with such vile blasphemy!"

Thus spake the Brahmin, but he still read on.
He read of one true God, of Christ His Son;

And while his lips with proud contempt denied,
"This doctrine strange is true!" his soul replied.
A Bible next from Christian hands he bought,
And secretly within its lids he sought
Full knowledge of that wondrous personage Called Jesus Christ.

He read page after page,
The Holy Spirit giving promised light.
Meanwhile he thought with tremulous affright
Of holy waters and of honored dead,
Of angered gods and shrines unvisited.
At length in sheer despair he cried aloud,
While o'er the Blessed Book his head was bowed,
"I'll make this night one final test;
Thus shall my soul find peace and rest."

The day wore on; and when the twilight fell,
Throwing its long, cool shadows like a spell
O'er all the land, the Brahmin stole away
Toward Jagganatha's temple, huge and gray,
His only weapon was a sharpened spear—
Not borne in self-defence. He had no fear
Of forces armed; his enemies, unseen,
Were superstitions. But behind that screen
All human hope and fear, and love and hate,
With mysteries he had learned to venerate,
Beset him with their pleading, torturing cries.
He felt the pressure of past centuries,
And still moved on, trembling but undismayed—
A martyr soul, who dared not be afraid.

Quite unobserved, he passed the portals wide—
Soon reached a dim recess, and stood beside
A hideous idol—Jagganatha grim!
Wise, "twice-born" ancestors had worshiped him.

Through ages past. What if, indeed, 'twere true
That his curse rested on the doctrine new?
What if with thunderbolts his wrath should vent
Itself in swift and awful punishment?

Such thoughts—each one a fiery dart—
Now pierced the Brahmin's troubled heart,
"Is Jagganatha God?" he cried;
"Oh, speak to me, thou Crucified!
If thou be God, reveal thy might,
And through the darkness send thy light!
These barriers high break down for me;
Show me thyself—and make me free!"

In agony of soul he breathed this prayer,
Then with firm-clasped, uplifted spear
He struck the wooden god once and again,
Ay, smote it sharply! but no cry of pain
Escaped, no thunderbolt nor flash of fire,
No echoed curse from ancient priest or sire.

The victory was won! A joyful cry,
"O Alleluiah!" seemed to reach the sky.
"My heart believes! for me the Savior died!
There is no God but thee, thou Crucified!"
The hoary temple arches caught the word—
"No God but Thee!" and heaven the echo heard.
Entranced, enraptured knelt the Brahmin there,
Light filled his soul, for God had answered prayer.

He is but one. The restless millions wait
That Light whose dawning "maketh all things new."

Christ also waits—but men are slow and late;
Have we done what we could? Have I? Have you?

OUR PRESSING LITERATURE PROBLEM.

It is a good plan to keep first things first. We sometimes note expressions that would indicate that our Publishing House at Nashville was established to provide for our superannuate preachers, but any such notion is wholly erroneous. That institution was designed to furnish our people with wholesome religious literature at the lowest reasonable cost, and what it may do for our worn-out veterans, noble as that work is, is merely incidental and secondary. And most urgently do we need to adhere to the great primary purpose which led to the founding of our publishing plant. The country is now being literally flooded with vicious reading matter that is poisoning the minds of our people, and by all means its influence should be counteracted. Indeed, it is perilous in the extreme not to endeavor to do this. Not to make money for any cause, but to fulfill the real mission for which it exists should, in our humble opinion, be our aim in the management of our Publishing House. If necessary, let some other way be found to care for our aged heroes—none are more interested in making adequate provision for them than we. But we think we should become more aggressively enterprising in the manufacture of bright and attractive books and periodicals and in getting them into our Methodist homes throughout the country.

Though we would not be so presumptuous as to express a positive opinion against that of those who are familiar with all the prevailing conditions, we fear that a mistake has been made in changing the Epworth Era from a weekly to a monthly. It may, under the new plan, serve equally well as a working manual for our Epworth Leaguers, but ought not a Church with 2,000,000 members maintain at least one bright and high-class weekly for its young people? What if it was not paying expenses? Could we not, in view of the service that it would render, afford to supply the necessary funds to keep it going? It seems that the Northern Methodists felt that they could well afford to do this in the case of the Epworth Herald, which lost considerable money during the past quadrennium, but which the late General Conference at Minneapolis refused to abolish or to change in any way whatever.

We do not desire to be understood as finding any fault with our capable and faithful Publishing Agents, for both of whom we entertain the very highest regard, and whose superior service deserves unstinted praise. They are doing well the work that they understand they have been commissioned to do. Nor are we directing criticism at the Book Committee. It is rather with our general publishing policy as a Church that we are dealing. We feel a pride in the quality of the work turned out by our Nashville plant. In our judgment, it is unequalled anywhere in the South. Books on live subjects, beautifully printed and bound, are constantly issuing from our presses. Our shelves at Nashville are loaded with choice volumes. But are we resourceful and energetic enough in getting this literature into the hands of the people? It must be circulated to do good. Are we printing it in the best form for this purpose? Could cheaper editions be more generally sold? Are we getting out a sufficiency of tracts on pertinent questions and distributing them as we ought? Are we making weekly papers enough, or too many, for the Church, and is the price of each what it ought to be? Ought all our papers to be issued under the direction of the General Conference, subsidized, and circulated at a low subscription rate? These are some of the questions which, as we see it, deserve the most careful and painstaking consideration.

We heartily commend our leaders for the enterprise they have shown in establishing branch book houses at Dallas and Richmond. This proves that they are awake, observant, and disposed to go forward. But in view of the extreme exigencies of the situation, we feel doubtful whether we are pressing this work to the extent that we ought? None among us is more important, and none more imperatively demands to be thoroughly studied, wisely and skillfully planned, and vigorously and systematically executed. Here is a challenge to the ecclesiastical statesmanship of Southern Methodism.

TEMPORIZING WITH A MONSTER EVIL.

We are pleased to note the warfare that is being waged against the white slavers in all parts of the country. They are a curse to society, and they ought to be severely punished whenever they are apprehended. Scarcely anything could be more diabolical than their scheming to entrap and ruin innocent and unsuspecting girls. The crime which they commit is blacker and more heinous than murder, and far more frightful in its consequences.

But pernicious and horrible as it is, the white slave traffic is only a surface indication of a vastly more deep-seated and widely extended disease which afflicts human society in all lands. We refer to the blighting reign of sensuality which is nothing short of a positive menace to civilization. States have gone down before it in the past, and it may yet wreck some of those to-day in existence. The threatening evil of divorce, before which the civilized world is now standing aghast, is one of its logical and inevitable fruits.

Though frowning at the white slave traffic, our police authorities are not fighting the widespread prostitution which underlies it, and of which it is the baleful offspring. On the contrary, in most of our municipalities they are licensing and encouraging it. Not only is it given the right of way in restricted districts, but its emissaries are allowed to lay their traps for unwary victims in reputable sections where they are expected to be off their guard. The organized forces of vice, if they will merely keep from shocking the public too much, are given a comparatively free and unfettered hand. This is a crying shame. It is hard enough to combat evil when the government lends a helping hand in its suppression, and the case is well nigh hopeless when its influence is on the other side. We need nothing at this time more than clean and upright officials in our cities. The reform that gives them to us will be the greatest that can possibly come, since these centers of population are now giving type to our entire civilization. As are our cities, so will the whole country largely be in the coming years.

TRYING TO POLLUTE A STAINLESS NAME.

Some of the liquor manufacturers are persisting in trying to market an "R. E. Lee" brand of whiskey. They attempted it some months ago in Virginia and were estopped, and have lately attempted it in Alabama, with the same result. We congratulate these States upon having blocked this effort to pollute the most stainless name in American history. General Lee would not permit the use of his honored name as a means of drawing patronage for a reputable insurance company, even when offered a large sum of money to do so at a time when his finances were depleted by the ravages of war; and to allow a distillery to do this in this day would be a shame and a reproach. The great soldier had no connection with profanity, whiskey drinking, and kindred vices. He was the most perfect flower of Southern chivalry—white, flawless, and unsoiled. Well may we cherish his memory and sacredly guard his spotless name.

"Ah, Muse, you dare not claim
A nobler name than he,
Nor nobler man hath less of blame,
Nor blameless man hath purer name,
Nor purer name hath grander fame,
Nor fame—another Lee."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. W. Faulk is assisting Rev. R. V. Fulton, the pastor, in a revival meeting at Dennis Mills, La.

Rev. J. F. Foster, the pastor of our Church at DeRidder, La., is spending his vacation at Biloxi, Miss.

The annual camp meeting at Shiloh, Miss., will begin on Friday night before the first Sunday in October.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of New Orleans, is in Franklinton, La., where he is assisting Rev. L. C. Wilson in revival meetings.

Rev. Dan Kelley, one of the Conference evangelists of the Mississippi Conference, recently closed a successful meeting in Haynesville, La.

Rev. H. C. Murphy, the pastor, assisted by Rev. F. N. Sweeney, has just closed a successful meeting at James Chapel on the New Roads (La.) charge.

Rev. C. J. Stapp, of the New Augusta charge, is doing well. The New Augusta Church has recently been blessed with a gracious revival meeting. The power of Methodism is in her revival spirit.

Rev. B. H. Rawls is in great favor with his people. The McLean charge is to be congratulated on having such a splendid preacher. It is current among the preachers that this brother knows how to preach.

We are grateful to Rev. W. M. Commander, the faithful pastor of our Church at Chester, Miss., for a club of five subscriptions, which he sent in last week. He announces that he will secure others as fast as possible.

Rev. Elton Wilson, of Hammond, La., is spending his summer vacation visiting relatives in Georgia. Brother Wilson has been doing good work in Hammond; in fact, preachers from the "peanut" State have a habit of doing good work.

Rev. J. Y. Bowman serves an appreciative people at Lucedale, Miss., where he is deservedly popular. A correspondent, in writing to this office recently, said: "When Tennessee gave the pastor of Lucedale to Mississippi, a gracious gift was made."

Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, pastor of our Church at Newton, Miss., recently returned from Corpus Christi, Texas, where he delivered a series of lectures on "The Distinctive Doctrines of Methodism" before the Texas Epworth League General Assembly.

We are grateful to the following brethren for having remembered the Advocate during the past week by sending in remittances for subscriptions from their respective charges: Rev. W. A. Bruner, Pine Valley, Miss.; Rev. T. H. Dorsey, Water Valley, Miss.; and Rev. W. J. Porter, Lanesville, La.

Rev. J. B. Conner, pastor of the Sardis (Miss.) Circuit, assisted by Rev. R. H. B. Gladner, has just closed a successful meeting at Wesley Chapel, five miles east of Sardis. There were several additions to the Church on profession of faith, besides some of the converts united with other Churches.

The pleasure of a summer vacation which Dr. G. E. Cameron, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, La., was spending with his parents in Benton, Ark., was marred last Monday by the sudden death of his father. Brother Cameron will have the prayers and sympathy of all who know him in this hour of sore bereavement.

Brother W. E. Dickens, pastor of the Shiloh (Miss.) Circuit, assisted by Rev. J. E. Williams, has just closed a successful meeting at Johns Church. Nineteen were received into the Church on profession of faith, and the entire membership was revived. In writing of the meeting, Brother Dickens says that Brother Williams preached with the old-time power.

Rev. W. W. Drake is in high favor at First Church, Baton Rouge. He has one of the best Sunday schools in the State, which is under the able superintendency of Brother W. S. Holmes. Brother Holmes not only presides over the Sunday school session on Sunday morning, but devotes much of his time during the week in looking after the welfare of his school.

Rev. G. P. White, pastor of Second Church, Baton Rouge, is being ably assisted by Revs. J. T. Sawyer and J. W. Brown in a meeting at Meadows Chapel. From the reports that have reached this office, the meeting is accomplishing gracious results. In speaking of Brother Brown's preaching ability, Rev. C. C. Miller, his presiding elder, says, "He is a regular Bishop."

The Rev. H. B. Watkins, of Natchez, Miss., recently closed a successful revival meeting at Mizpah, on the Harriston (Miss.) charge. There were ten accessions to the Church and the membership was greatly revived. Brother J. E. Sampley, the popular pastor, was unable to attend the meeting until the last two days, having been confined to his home with a severe attack of malarial fever.

Four revival meetings have been planned to be held in New Orleans during the month of October: at First Church, Parker Memorial, Epworth, and McDonoghville. Among the ministers who have been called to assist in these services is Dr. A. F. Smith, of Jackson, Miss. Dr. Smith will assist Rev. H. R. Singleton at the Parker Memorial Church, beginning the first Sunday in October.

We are in receipt of a letter from Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District, stating that the condition of Rev. R. S. Gale, our pastor at Summit, Miss., who has been sick for some time, is critical. Let prayers be made that God may spare his life to his family and the Church. Brother Gale has been a faithful servant of the Church, and has lived a true life among his brethren.

Rev. C. C. Miller, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, accompanied by his son, Richard, passed through New Orleans last Friday on his way to Varnado, and complimented this office by a brief call. He is rounding out his fourth year on the Baton Rouge District, and was never more deservedly popular. He reports that the revival season is proving especially fruitful in the harvest of souls in his district.

Rev. Joseph King has captured the people on the Deasonville (Miss.) charge. It is said that that charge never had a better pastor, and it is also said of him that he is a preacher of more than ordinary ability. He recently closed a successful meeting at Ellison Chapel, in which he was assisted by Rev. J. E. Williams, of Mendenhall. Brother Williams has proven himself to be a successful evangelist on more than one occasion.

Rev. H. R. Singleton left New Orleans last week, and his Parker Memorial Church congregation was left in the dark as to his whereabouts. Brother Singleton, however, returned in due time, and it developed that he had made a little run to the northwestern part of the State, and delivered a lecture or two. While gone he was permitted to inspect the new Noel Memorial Church building in Shreveport, which he says is an imposing and handsome structure.

The Mt. Hermon Charge, under the effective pastorate of Rev. J. W. Harper, was never in better condition than now. A revival meeting in which Rev. L. I. McCain did the preaching, has recently been held at Angie, one of the points on the charge, and among the new members taken into the Church were thirteen of the best and most substantial men in the neighborhood. A new church building has been enterprised, and $600 already subscribed for that purpose.

Dr. F. N. Parker will fill the pulpit at Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans, next Sunday morning. It has been some time since the people of New Orleans have been permitted to hear Dr. Parker in one of his home pulpits, and the seating capacity of the Carrollton Avenue Church probably will be tested. Dr. Parker has made a new record for himself as a teacher of the Bible in Trinity College, Durham, N. C., but it is as a preacher that the people of New Orleans know him and love him the best.

Rev. Hugh W. Jamieson was in New Orleans last week to attend the wedding of his brother. While here he reported that his work in Shreveport, with the Queensboro congregation, is prospering. Brother Jamieson is pushing the work on the new $10,000 church which he is building, and has been phenomenally successful in raising money, by selling shares in the church building, the same to be redeemable only in that blessing that comes to the purchaser when he thinks of the good his money has helped to do.

Rev. J. T. Murrah died in Memphis on Aug. 20, and was buried at Columbus, Aug. 21.

Rev. H. M. Johnson has been appointed to the Summit and East McComb (Miss.) charge to take the place of the pastor, Brother Gale, who is seriously ill. He has begun his work in earnest, and has already planned to hold revival meetings at both Summit and McComb City. He will reside in McComb City.

Rev. Fred Applewhite is the pastor of the Benton (Miss.) charge. Benton was once the capital of Yazoo County, and Senator John Sharpe Williams lives near the place. It is said that men make a place famous, and in this connection it may be added that Yazoo County has always been noted for its noble women and brave men. The parsonage in Benton is presided over by a member of the Lewis family, and she is, indeed, a gracious woman. Brother Applewhite was never in greater favor with his people than now.

Pachuta, Miss., is a pleasant place in which to live. Such men as Brothers Day, Evans, Abney, Gunn, Graves and Adams make for the welfare of any town. Rev. E. L. Alford has the confidence of the people and is doing a good work. The following extract from a communication recently received is of some interest: "About a month ago two young ladies of the same age arrived at the parsonage in Pachuta. Mary and Elizabeth are their names. The pastor's salary should be increased. Blessings on the young ladies!" We heartily join in the last two statements.

Happy is the Rev. W. B. Alsworth, the fortunate pastor of our Church in Leakesville, Miss. And why should he not be happy? He is a cheerful and active man, and has the unqualified support of such worthy laymen as Brothers Faulk, Green, Westerfield and Allums. There is just one note that has been sounded in connection with Brother Alsworth that is a discord, and probably the brethren may be able to assist Brother Alsworth in putting that discordant note in tune. That which is referred to was contained in a paragraph written to this office which, after having recorded many of Brother Alsworth's valuable qualities, ended as follows: "The general impression is that the pastor needs a mistress of the parsonage."

In our last issue we stated that Dr. J. M. Weems, our pastor at Lanrel, Miss., had suffered a slight stroke of paralysis. We are glad to state that we were misinformed and that Brother Weems has not been thus afflicted. He and his devoted wife have just returned from Stafford Springs where they have spent three weeks taking a much needed vacation. Dr. Weems is one of the most tireless and effective workers in the Mississippi Conference, having successfully enterprised the building of two expensive churches and one parsonage in the last three charges he has served, and this rest was both appreciated and much needed. During his absence his faithful members took care of the Laurel Church and we are informed that they did it well.

Rev. A. J. Gearheard, while discussing the building of a new parsonage in McDonoghville with one of his members last week, accidentally stumbled onto a clew that led him to the fact that the Methodist Church owns two valuable lots in Gretna, Louisiana, which have been lost sight of since 1861. The lots are of considerable value, and the title to them is without a blemish. The property is said to be worth at least $700, which amount will aid materially in furthering the parsonage enterprise on the McDonoghville charge.

On page sixteen of this issue will be found an imposing advertisement of Whitworth College, located at Brookhaven, Miss. Dr. L. W. Cooper is the efficient president of this school and is not only a faithful school man, but a Methodist who is loyal to his Church in every practical way. Whitworth College has never been more prosperous than at the present time, and the signs are propitious for a great opening on September 12. Dr. Cooper is a ceaseless worker, and believes in planning for the future. His is the only school in our territory that has continued its advertising throughout the entire year, and no small credit is given to this constant advertising program for the present promise of a successful year; for the Methodist laymen who have daughters to send to school have been kept mindful of Whitworth College all the year.

"FOR PREACHERS IN THE FLOODED DISTRICT."

Dear brethren of the Baton Rouge District: I notice from the report of Brother S. H. Meyer, treasurer of the Louisiana Conference, that of the $2,500 thought by the Bishop and presiding elders to be necessary in supplementing the salaries of our ministerial brethren in the overflowed district of Louisiana, only $479 has been reported as raised. There are practically six districts in the State that were not seriously affected by the overflow. One-sixth of the required amount, if a distribution were made by districts, would fall to the Baton Rouge District. There are twenty-one charges in the Baton Rouge District, and if each charge would pay $20, our quota would be raised. In the twenty-one charges of the Baton Rouge District there are sixty-seven preaching places, and if each preacher would raise $6.20 at each preaching place, the amount would likewise be raised. The Baton Rouge District has raised $140, and only five of the preachers have sent in reports. It would certainly be a very easy matter for the remaining pastors to collect the $280 still needed from us. I am informed that the amount of suffering on the part of our brethren from a financial point of view, will be measured by some of them receiving as little as 25 per cent of their assessments in the overflowed district. David said, "I have never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread," and it ought to be a matter of very great humiliation that any preacher in the Louisiana Conference should be compelled to draw rations from the Government. I am sure that there is no congregation in Louisiana that the members of which will refuse to contribute to the cause above mentioned when it is rightly presented to them, and they are brought to the point of realization that the people, the preachers' base of supplies, are actually unable to meet the demands. Let us, my dear brethren, do our part, and more than our part. Let every man in the Baton Rouge District put himself in the place of his distressed brother.

Your brother, C. C. MILLER.

SEASHORE OUTING.

The Outing Commission, working in conjunction with the Woman's Board of Missions, has been doing a most excellent work in sending women, who are too poor to leave the city, and children of the poor, to the Seashore Camp Ground for a week's stay.

There was a little hunch-back girl, sixteen years of age, who made her first trip out of New Orleans this summer. A hard-working mother told me that she thought that she was in heaven, and she did not know that there were as many good people in the world as she found over the lake. One of our good Methodist women secured a chair for the cripple girl and she rode around those beautiful grounds in state. I doubt whether Queen Victoria ever felt half as proud and happy.

It is a matter worthy of special mention that the Camp Ground residents have given them such a warm welcome. Yet it is not to be wondered at. Jesus said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these, ye have done it unto me." The residents of the Camp Ground represent the best that we have in our churches. It would be a sad reflection on forty years of Christian teaching if they did not give a glad welcome to the unfortunate.

Brother Sutton and his boys are there, also. The writer heard many words of commendation of the orphan children's behavior. Many expressed themselves after this manner: "The coming of these young people has added variety and charm to the summer." Christianity is not dead yet.

The Coast property is in great demand and very high. Fortunately Methodism secured years ago a magnificent estate. This property ought to be used as a sacred trust held for the masses of the people, especially God's poor, living in the near by cities. Surely Jehovah was leading when the Seashore Camp Ground was purchased. This is one spot on the Coast that ought not to be degraded by becoming a resort for an exclusive set of fashionable or would-be-fashionable people.

MRS. MARY LIEUTITIA MARTIN (nee Corbett) was born on Jan. 16, 1860, in Franklin Parish, La., and died July 22, 1912, at her home eight miles northeast of Gilbert, La. In 1877 she was married to Mr. C. A. Brewer, from which union there are four children living. In 1899 she was married to Mr. J. B. Martin. From the last marriage one son, J. B., Jr., survives her. Early in her life she was converted and united with the M. E. Church, South, at Magnolia, and has from the date of her conversion, lived a consistent Christian life. She was a faithful wife and mother, not shirking nor evading any duty or responsibility; in fact, in all her relations she exhibited in a quiet way the qualities of a Christian. For several months before her death she suffered considerably, but without complaint, and when the end came she met it bravely and without a murmur. For her husband and children, who survive her, there is the deep inevitable pain and heartache of separation, but for her there is a crown of life that fadeth not away. May the influence of her life abide with those left behind, and may God grant them strength to bear this great affliction.

MRS. SARAH J. DOUGLAS, widow of William W. Douglas, was born April 9, 1839, and died May 22, 1912. She was married to W. W. Douglas, Dec. 8, 1864, and enjoyed a long happy life with him until twelve years ago when he was called away to the land of the blest. She leaves seven children, four boys and three girls, and several grandchildren who, with many friends, mourn their loss. Sister Douglas joined the Olive Branch Methodist Church in early life and was ever a devoted servant of the Lord. Many are the Methodist preachers who will remember with pleasure the home made welcome and bright by Sister Douglas. Her life was a benediction and her going away has made heaven nearer and dearer. Her children loved her with a deathless fervor. The funeral was held at the home and concluded at the family burying ground by the writer. The father and mother have passed into rest and are waiting for their children on the golden strand. We pray God to help them make heaven their home. When we too shall sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and the ones we loved best on earth, then we will renew our friendships and live with God forever. May God comfort the bereaved and help them through the trials of life.

MRS. FANNIE STAYTON, widow of Rev. W. D. Stayton, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, was born in Washington County, Kentucky, Nov. 3, 1828; joined the Church when quite young, and was married to W. D. Stayton at the age of 19. When Brother Stayton entered the ministry she was with him and came with him to Louisiana before the war. Here in the Louisiana Conference they served quite a number of hard circuits. Sister Stayton was taken with a paralytic stroke on Monday, July 29, and seemed to grow better and worse, in turn, until Sunday night, Aug. 4, about 9 o'clock, when she breathed her last. We buried her in the Springville cemetery beside her husband. R. A. DAVIS.

JOHN WESLEY JOHNSON was born April 7, 1825, and died Aug. 2, 1912, aged 87 years, 4 months and 27 days. For 57 years he was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and the following songs, "How Firm a Foundation," "O Think of The Home

Over There," and "There is Rest for the Weary," which he requested should be sung at his funeral, indicate his spiritual condition. He served in the Civil War and was twice given the Lieutenant Colonelship of his regiment; was twice captured while in the discharge of his duties, at Ft. Donaldson and at Vicksburg, the latter time remaining for over two years in prison. He was for 40 years a member of the Order of A. F. and M. at Hernando, Miss., and was buried by his brethren of that fraternity, Aug. 4, at Baker's Chapel, his pastor assisting. He was the father of six children, only two of whom survive him, Mrs. P. F. Valden of Bright, Miss., and Mrs. Dormat of Arkansas.

A. W. BENNETT, P. C.

R. S. WESTBROOK, the subject of this sketch, was born in Clay County, Miss., August 13, 1856, and died at his home, surrounded by many of his friends, near Prairie, Miss., April 11, 1912. Early in life he realized God's love and his own responsibility, and at thirteen years of age he professed Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Soule's chapel in Clay County. For twenty years he was a teacher in the Sunday school, and for the last few months of his life he was the superintendent at Ebenezer or McCoudy Church, on the Buena Vista charge, of which charge he had been an official member for several years. In 1887 he was married to Miss Etta Wyles, with whom he spent twenty-five happy years. This writer was his pastor for two years, 1909-1910, and was often in his home, where Christian peace and joy dwelt supreme. I have often thought that he came as near reaching the Bible ideal of a virile Christian manhood as any man whom I have known. No children came to bless the home life of him and Sister Westbrook, so their father and mother hearts were constantly looking out for and helping some one who needed their help. He was true to his God, home, Church, and friends, and we cannot think of him as dead, but only sleeping—only as waiting for the summons—

"They are not dead; they have but passed.

Beyond the mists that blind us here,
Into the new and larger life
Of that serene sphere."

May his sorrowing wife and friends be consoled by the fact that he lived for the Lord and died in the faith, and, we believe, has gone to glory. Only another link in the golden chain that binds us to heaven has been forged, for in his case it can be said—

"There is no death! the stars go down

To rise upon some fairer shore;
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown,
They shine forever more."

His former pastor,
O. P. ARMOUR.

LOUIS B. BARON, the subject of this sketch, was born in Campbell County, Tenn., on May 5, 1835. He moved with his parents to Washington County, Ark., when fourteen years old. When the Civil War broke out in 1861, he entered the Confederate army as a volunteer, and served four years in that great conflict. He did not return to his old home in North Arkansas after the war, but came to Louisiana, stopping near Minden where, on November 1, 1868, he was married to Miss Nancy E. Perritt. Three children blessed this union, but two died in infancy. Mrs. W. E. Wallace, of Heflin, La., alone survives him. He joined the M. E. Church, South, under Rev. R. M. Cronson in 1873, and made a valiant soldier of the Cross from thence to the last roll call, March 17, 1912. Brother Baron was neither rich nor great, but he was a good man and a Christian, and his

Tidings From the Field

Anguilla, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our Children's Day exercises were held July 7, and the program as rendered was a pronounced success. Some said, "The most beautiful Children's Day I ever saw." The church was elaborately decorated and under the leadership of Mrs. Kurch (in charge of the music), Mrs. J. S. Parker, and Mrs. J. R. Bankston, a beautiful program was faultlessly rendered. I want to assure Brother B. F. Lewis that we always observe Children's Day. It was only postponed on account of the high water.—J. S. Parker, P. C.

Laurel (Kingston Church), Miss.

Dear Mr. Editor: Several weeks ago we held a revival meeting at Kingston Church, which was attended with very gracious results. Many of our members received a great spiritual uplift; six children and young people were added to the Church on profession of faith, and two splendid young ladies volunteered for work in the Sunday school, where additional workers have been greatly needed. The meeting was conducted by Rev. C. N. Guice, of Meridian, who captivated everybody with his unexcelled singing and his forceful and eloquent sermons. We have received this year, to date, twenty-one members. The pastor and his family were recently the recipients of an appreciated pounding at the hands of the ladies of the Woman's Home Mission Society. We had a fine Children's Day service in June, which was greatly enjoyed by all. M. M. BLACK, P. C.

Prentiss, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: On Saturday, July 20, assisted by Rev. Dan Scarborough of McComb, we began a meeting at Carson, Miss. The preaching was of a high order. Every one was pleased and helped by Brother Scarborough's earnest efforts. One boy and two girls were received into the Church. I had the pleasure of baptizing Brother G. W. Holloway's seventh boy, Earl Brewer (Brother Holloway is the lay leader of this circuit), during this meeting. On Friday night we began a meeting at Prentiss, Miss. Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, did all the preaching for eight days, three times a day. Brother Bass is an old-fashioned Methodist preacher. I have never heard better preaching than he did; God was with him from the beginning to the end. Our church was helped as never before. We are better Methodists and better Christians by his coming this way. Eleven persons were brought into our Church. At the close of this meeting, we went to Mt. Zion and held a splendid meeting there. Three persons were received into the Church. Just about everybody has joined the Church in this country. Brother Bass' preaching was equally as good at Mt. Zion as at Prentiss. He is good help and is thoroughly Methodist. He left our people more loyal to their church than when he came. My meeting is now in progress at Bassfield. Brother Peebles is doing the preaching.—M. L. White, P. C.

Lauderdale, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: I have just closed my second meeting on the Lauderdale charge. The first was at this place and I was assisted by Rev. R. S. Stewart. It continued for seventeen days and God was with us in great power from the first to the last. I don't think that I ever heard better sermons preached than fell from the lips of Brother Stewart. God must have touched them with a live coal from off his altar. Men; women, boys and girls sat spellbound and trembling under his masterful appeals, while their sins were uncovered, their religious stilt broken and their props knocked from under them. About seventy-five were converted and reclaimed, thirty-five of whom joined the Methodist Church. Others applied for membership in the Presbyterian Church, and, strange to say, most of those who joined the Methodist Church had not been baptized. Truly this was a great meeting. The second was at Marion, which was said to be the best meeting that has been held there for several years. The preaching was done by Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, who is a good preacher and a faithful and earnest worker. May God use him greatly. I cannot afford to close this letter without mentioning the sermon preached by our beloved Dr. Hull, from the parable of the Prodigal Son. I have heard many preachers preach from this parable, but this was the best that I have ever heard. This meeting closed with a number of professed conversions and two accessions to the Methodist Church.—A. B. Barry, P. C.

East Feliciana Circuit, La.

Our meeting at Olive Branch, held by Rev. I. T. Reams, was a great success. At the last service 75 or 100 people were unable to find room in the church. A Sunday school was organized; plans were made to purchase new seats for the house; to put on a new roof, and, if possible, paint the church. Two persons were received into the Church. Rev. J. W. Booth was with me at Gilead for a few days, and much good was done. The pastor closed the meeting with the largest congregation present he ever addressed at that place. Rev. F. N. Sweeney (otherwise called the Bishop of Wilson charge) helped me at Clear Creek, and we had an extra good meeting. There were four accessions to the Church by baptism. We are yet looking forward to the meeting at Alford's Chapel, with Rev. T. V. Fulton assisting, and the Bluff Creek camp meeting and the revival meeting season will have ended on my charge, and I will then take a few days' rest.—J. W. Faulk, P. C.

PREACHER WANTED.

The undersigned desires to secure the services of a preacher, for the remainder of the Conference year, for the Pine Grove Circuit in St. Helena Parish, to take the place of Brother S. J. McLean, who has been relieved of the work because of sickness.

The circuit has five appointments and is assessed at $600, about $100 having been already paid in. Parsonage on work. Preacher will need horse and buggy.

The people and the presiding elder want a preacher for the work who reads some, studies some, preaches some, visits some and is somewhat of a mixer. The right man will be of very great service and will be reasonably compensated. A single man is preferred, but if we cannot do any better, a married man will do.

PORT GIBSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE—A WORD OF REMINDER.

To all pastors and members: Comparatively few New Orleans Christian Advocates are taken in the Port Gibson District, and not all of those taken are read by us. Like men in traditional times, with memories having to do the work of books and papers, and the mouth serving as trumpet to the herald, we will have to use the mails and the pulpits. Bulletins from the pulpit give all the information some of us get concerning what the Church is doing, and proposes to do. Letters, not post cards unless we have to, do excellent service as reminders. And the District Conference calls for important statements. Let us write and talk of the Conference.

Quarterly Conference Records.

These books contain the history of the congregation, and will be reference books always. Will pastors remind the recording stewards to have their books ready and bring each book for examination.

District Conference Property.

Two parsonages and the Sam Jones Camp Ground are to be considered. One parsonage has a fine balance of debt upon it, dating back to the second year of its purchase. Also a series of loans upon it, bearing (and almost forbearing) interest. The Camp Ground is a bone of contention, long since picked bare. The Conference must determine what is to be done with the bone. Will pastors see that good lawyers are among the delegates, with the perspicacity of an Oedipus, should the Sphinx be present with tiresome questions. The Camp Ground is a splendid property, which could be a helpful asset for Methodism on the Western side of the State, for centuries to come.

Local Preachers.

Will pastors remind these brethren that the Conference desires the grace of their presence, or their thoughtfully written reports upon their year's service since the last session. The Church has run short of these strong braces of late, and is the weaker because of it. May their number and their service increase among us.

System in Finances and Everything Else.

Shall we cheer one another with results of system, in the congregation and the Sunday school and League departments? May the Conference decide the vexing question, whether system produces thrift and action in the membership.

Pastors who happen to mention the boll weevil may declare that they (not the weevil) have taken the places of the provision merchants, and are doing a big credit business. And laymen will be present who shall say that, in such case, there have been ample supplies to make the credit greater. There should be comfort in that. Stewards who read here do not need reminding that salaries are being paid very gradually. Some of the pastors, with families to support and books to buy, and sermons to prepare, have not averaged more than $15 to $20 a month. One pastor, modest and hungry, sometime ago took his watch to town and proposed to pledge it for groceries. It aroused his membership, and relieved him; he kept his watch. Such examples suggest that we are not intentionally negligent, but decidedly so.

Bishop Morrison, a few days ago, speaking of the work he had done, said that he always had a faith which worked and helped others to work. If he was to secure a sum of money, he went about it in the certainty that if God wanted him to succeed, he would succeed. His success has lifted him to an extraordinary place in the history of Southern Methodism. (Or was it his faith which lifted?)

The first sermon at Fayette will be given by a veteran of more than half a century's service for the Mississippi Conference. The announcement will appear in another place in the Advocate. It is mentioned here to draw interest and prayer toward this occasion, that the Master key shall be turned in the opening doors of the Conference, and give the tone and tune for what follows.

With a full attendance and full hearts, we will repay the hospitality which Fayette will surely furnish.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

In spite of the overflow the Winnsboro Church has just raised money to build an adequate room for the Adult Bible Class.

Rev. W. F. Henderson has his Cradle Roll superintendent bring him the names of the babies of her department, and he looks them up for baptism, having recently baptized seven. How better could these lambs be fed? If "of such is the kingdom of heaven," they certainly are entitled to the seal of the Covenant, the gift of the Holy Spirit. Our Christian mothers, to say nothing of those who are not, need the help of both the Cradle Roll superintendent and the pastor, and this is what these servants of the Lord are giving at Winnsboro. Miss Lucy Walker is the superintendent of this department.

On July 14, three of the orphanage girls joined our Church at Ruston. This is one of the signs of the good example and correct religious teaching given at this splendid and growing institution for which our Sunday schools have done so much. The children, who are old enough, regularly attend Church and Sunday school, as well as day school, and so are being trained to a high type of Christian usefulness.

"The meek shall inherit the earth" not by having titles to it, but by being able to appreciate it. Thus the poet may possess poetry without owning a volume, and the artist art without a title to a masterpiece, all nature being the possession of his artistic taste; and so our children inherit the Kingdom of heaven, not by memorizing Scripture or creeds, but by appreciating the character of God, and by realizing a living faith in him. Happy that teacher who can weave the cord of faith that will bind the pupil's heart in love to the father heart of God.

Rev. A. I. Townsley and the Sunday school workers of Arcadia have their council meeting once a month and plan programs for four Sundays for each department. Each teacher or superintendent brings a suggestive program to the meeting, and these are put together, rearranged and programs given to the superintendent of each class or department for a month. "In the multitude of counsel there is wisdom," and many of our Sunday schools are failures, simply because they are built upon one man's wisdom and lacks that co-operation that comes through the workers planning together at regular times.

The Bible is a book of action, its characters being known by what they wrought more than by what they taught. They "subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, stopped the mouths of lions," but left very little record of creed-making, as such, or of delicate social elegancies. The teacher's work will abide when her pupils are trained to practice on Monday what they have learned on Sunday. "He that heareth these sayings and doeth them shall be like a house built upon a rock." The good teacher turns out working Christian pupils. How would it do to have them report to the class each Sunday the good things they have done during the week?

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The attitude of a teacher is a bigger thing before a class than any text book.

All the churches in the world give less in one year for missions than is taken in by the theaters in New York alone.

Miss Elie Willingham's class in Winona is making a record these warm summer days and, indeed, if the Sunday school attendance records of different schools for the heated term are looked over, it will be found, in every instance, that if said school has a Men's Wesley Class, it has a good attendance and even a vivid interest, while others drift to pieces.

On July 28 at Itta Bena, the Men's Bible Class was organized into a Men's Adult Bible Study Circle. The president, secretary and treasurer, with three department vice-presidents, constitute the officers. The class motto is, "My Brother and I," and the International Bible Class pin was adopted and ordered. Rev. S. L. Pope, whose earnest work has led to this organization, will be the teacher of this class. Hon. J. W. Bradford is class president, Mr. James Haley, secretary, and Mr. W. F. Townsend, treasurer. We are indebted to Mr. Kirby S. Enocbs, who sent this interesting announcement of this new movement. Great things will be expected from this class, whose aim is to reach every man in town not now attending Sunday school.

It is firmly believed at headquarters that if all of the Sunday schools would be as diligent in distributing our literature as other forces are in distributing theirs, we could soon establish our own in places now occupied with what is harmful to us. One progressive school has gotten such literature from Smith and Lamar, and will have a bright boy put it into every hand at the Sunday school hour, and it is hoped other schools will adopt a similar progressive method. This plan was the suggestion of Mr. Chas. Aswell, of Tupelo.

"It is a confirmation devoutly to be wished" that every Sunday school in our Conference should know our Standard of Excellence and begin to work up to it. Smith and Lamar have gotten out attractive printed ones which should be hung in every school. The ten points of excellence are as follows: Cradle Roll, Home Department, Wesley Adult Class, Teacher Training Class or Students, Graded Instructions and use of our own Literature, Missionary Instruction and Offering, Definite Decision for Christ Urged, Annual Observance of Children's Day and Offering, Good Records, and Evergreen School. Ten per cent is given for each of these items and 100 per cent makes the first grade school. It would please the Field Secretary beyond expression to have every superintendent write her the present per cent of his school according to this standard, and what he hopes to make it before Conference in December.

Prof. Herbert of the A. & M. College, Starkville, was to speak recently to the Morris Bible Class in Europa, and its members were most anxious to have 50 men present to hear him. Calling cards in blue and gold were secured; the president and an assistant stamped these; the station agent punched a hole in one corner and the teacher placed therein blue and gold ribbon attached to a blue and gold celluloid button. These cards were numbered from one to seventy-five and as a man would go out canvassing he'd mark his number on the card and tie it to his coat lapel first, and then go out for the other fellow. The country people and drummers soon were caught in the wave of enthusiasm, and 75 men greeted Prof. Herbert and the delighted teacher on Sunday morning. This class wanted the good attendance and then went to work to secure it, and that is the only way to get anything worth while.

"Cultivate an interest in the good work of the Lord. What you can do, do heartily, as service rendered to God, and the service will soon become an abiding delight."

CONFERENCE REPORTS.

Mississippi Conference.

The following is the second quarterly report of the Mississippi Conference Society:

Corresponding Secretary.

Organization work has been reported as follows:

In the Brookhaven District, new auxiliaries have been organized at Bethel, Mrs. B. L. Sutherland Cox, Secretary, Wesson, R. F. D. No. 7, and at Pleasant Grove, Miss Cordie Griffith, Cor. Sec'y., Monticello, R. F. D. No. 1. The Societies at Magnolia and at Bogue Chitto, have united. In the Hattiesburg District, a new auxiliary is reported at Ora. The Societies at Mize, and at Purvis have united. In the Newton District, the Newton Aid Society has merged into connectional work. The following is an extract from my report to Nashville: Number Adult auxiliaries, 98; members, 1,832; subscribers to Voice, 732; visits to sick and strangers, 2,316; cottage prayer-meetings held, 69.

Treasurer.

Amount of dues, $462.97; Specials, $221.95; Local Work, $1,746.41. Total for quarter, $2,431.33.

Vice Presidents.

First V. P.—Number Baby Rolls, 31; increase, 3; members, 595; Number societies, Junior Division, 35; increase, 5; members, 763; subscribers to Young Christian Worker, 168.

Third V. P.—Number women making regular offering to Missions, 476; pledge card, signed, 53; mission study classes, 13; membership, 276.

Fourth V. P.—Auxiliaries having a fourth V. P., 77; money raised for parsonages, $322.15; churches, $160.50; auxiliaries undertaking relief work, 10; amounts expended in relief, $95.30; auxiliaries contributing to City Mission Boards, 3; amount contributed, $32.66.

Please permit me to call attention to the discrepancy between the reports sent to the Vice Presidents and those sent me as Corresponding Secretary. To the First Vice President there were reported 31 Baby Rolls; to me 16. Members, 595; to me 250. Number societies, Junior Division, 35; to me 8. Members, 763; to me 124.

This is just a sample from one report. There are many others. When it is remembered that it is my report compiled from those sent me by the District Secretaries which goes to Nashville, and is published in permanent form, making history, giving standing to our work, the importance of greater accuracy and promptness in the Auxiliary Corresponding Secretary reporting to the District Secretary that she in turn may report accurately and promptly to me, will be apparent to all. May I ask your heartiest co-operation in this matter.

I wish, however, to commend our District Secretaries for the promptness and accuracy of their reports. Never in the history of our work have the reports been so satisfactory. To each I wish to extend my thanks.

Movements of Missionaries.

Misses Lester, of Soochow, and Nichols, of Seoul, Korea, started home June 25 by the trans-Siberian route, and will reach the United States some time in August. Miss Claiborne sailed from Shanghai about the same time, coming home by way of the Pacific.

At last Miss Wilson has been forced to leave Chihuahua, Mexico, but not until the contending armies were within three miles of the city. Then she stopped at the first point after crossing the Rio Grande. She and Mr. Esquivel's family have rented a house in El Paso, and will return to Chihuahua as soon as it is considered safe. Miss Harper is at her home in Georgetown, Texas. Miss Lelia Roberts, now in Bonham, Texas, is planning to return to Saltillo soon. Miss Ford is in Paris, Ky; Miss Butterick, in Ashville; Miss Barcroft, in Tupelo, Miss; Miss Laura V. Wright, in Baltimore. Miss Churchill will go soon to Mexico City to help Miss Case adjust herself to her new surroundings. Miss Case does not yet feel quite at home in a bright, cheerful, attractive apartment, so long has she lived in a room that the sun never reached.

Extracts Taken From the Leaflet,
"The Foreigner in the Southwest,"
by J. J. Morgan.

"We of the Southwest read with amazement that immigrants are coming to America at the rate of a million a year, and we are thunderstruck at the statement that a majority of the voters of New York are foreign born. We sympathize with Chicago and other sections, with their difficult problems in dealing with the foreigner; but it does not occur to us that we are threatened with similar problems, and that already conditions are alarming right here in Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, and Oklahoma. Briefly and pointedly I propose to set forth the leading facts that make manifest the problem of the foreigner in the Southwest, following with the plea for the distribution of the Bible as the first step toward a solution.

"First, this problem is manifest from the number of foreigners already here. It is estimated that there are a little more than a million foreigners in the Southwest. These are distributed about as follows: Louisiana, 240,000 French and 60,000 Italians; Texas, 375,000 Mexicans, 300,000 Germans, 85,000 Bohemians, 60,000 Scandinavians, 30,000 Italians; Oklahoma, 100,000 Indians; and Oklahoma and Arkansas together, about 25,000 Slavs (Italians).

"From the above figures, it is plainly seen that the problem of the foreigners in this section has mostly to do with Texas and Louisiana. Louisiana is already in the clutches of a thirteenth century Romanism, because of her French and Italian Catholics, while Texas is the new immigrant field, and already has an alarming number of foreigners.

"The Government Bureau of Immigration tells us there was a decrease in immigration to the United States last year, while on the other hand, immigration bulletins show a substantial increase in the Southwest. Another interesting observation is that Texas received last year 85 per cent of the entire number received by the four States of the Southwest. There is an organized effort to turn the tide of immigration away from the congested areas of the East and North into the great undeveloped Southwest.

"But the thing of chief concern with respect to the foreigner is his character, his influence. The fact that he is a foreigner certainly does not condemn him. The whole problem lies in the character of the immigrant, and hence his influence upon American life and ideals. The immigrant comes to America because he is ill-

ESTABLISHED 1848
THE C. S. BELL CO., Hiram, Ohio

WAYNESBORO, MISS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Permit me to say through the columns of the Advocate, that I am getting along smoothly with my work on the Waynesboro circuit. I find the people to be loyal to the Master and eager to make progress, both spiritually and financially. I preach eleven times each month. I have large congregations at some of the places on my charge, and, through my humble ministry, I have seen some graciously blessed up to this time. All praise to the Crucified One. I began my revival meeting at Big Rock, July 25, 1912, and continued the service until the following Tuesday, closing out with gracious results. I did all the preaching, tried in my weak way to show my people the heinousness of sin and the joy which one finds in accepting Christ as his Savior. As a result of our meeting ten souls sought and found their Savior precious to their never-dying souls, and several family altars were pledged. On the last night of the meeting we all left the church, feeling that we were the better by having attended the services at Big Rock. Some say that it was the best meeting that has been held at Old Big Rock in many years. I say, Amen! All glory to him who died for us. Rev. W. H. Lewis, our presiding elder, came to us August 1, 1912, to hold our third quarterly conference. He preached an excellent sermon at 11 a. m., on "Job as a Perfect Man." He showed to us in a forcible way that God would have us live perfect lives as Job did. And at 2 p. m. he held our conference. Hebron, Big Rock, Pleasant Grove and Fedora were all well represented. Our revival meeting followed the quarterly conference, and Brother Lewis preached for us twice on Friday, his themes being "Prayer" and "Steadfastness." He preached with unusual unction and freedom while with us this time. His message will be long remembered by both pastor and people. May God spare him many years yet to preach his truth. Rev. W. G. Forsythe, of Waynesboro, Miss., came out on Saturday with Brother A. J. Chapman and preached for us at 11 a. m., and 3 p. m. He preached with unusual freedom at each service. Rev. W. A. Hays, of Bay Springs, Miss., came to us in due time on Sunday morning and began his work among us as a faithful dispenser of the Word of God. We found his sermon to be seasoned with salt (grace) and very helpful to all who came to hear him. Brother Hays is fine help in revival meeting work. His preaching was second to none. May God bless his ministry with many precious immortal souls for his hire. We closed our meeting at Hebron on Wednesday evening with a good old Methodist handshake. A goodly number professed faith in Christ, and I baptized six infants and one adult and received two into the Church, one of these being David Samuel Westbrook, my oldest son.

MRS. HARRIET VIRGINIA JONES, wife of E. H. Presley, was born Aug. 25, 1843, and died Feb. 22, 1912. She was married Sept. 24, 1865, and became the mother of six sons and two daughters; five of whom, together with her husband and a number of relatives and friends, remain to mourn her loss. Having joined the Methodist Church at the age of 18, remaining therein for 52 years, her experience and faith in God was such that in the services at the house of God she would often shout aloud his praise. I visited her a short while before her translation and found her feeble and suffering great pain, but trusting in the Savior. Though the clouds may hang heavily over us, there is the "rainbow of promise," assuring us that by serving and trusting in her Christ, we shall gain eternal victory over sin, death and the grave, and meet her again in the bright beyond.

Her Pastor, R. T. PICKETT.

Once more the death angel has visited our village and left a home desolate. NORMA, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Hartley, was born at Martin, July 23, 1894, and died Aug. 2, 1912. Never a strong child, as she grew into womanhood her health declined, and for four months she had been confined to her bed. She was a very lovable character and endeared herself to all. She was modest and retiring and seemed like a frail flower that must be protected from the harsh winds and scorching sun. It is hard, indeed, to give her up, though we know she is free from all suffering, is safe in her heavenly home. She, who loved music so much, has joined the heavenly choir. Weep not, dear friends, Norma is not dead, but alive and awaiting you in a better world. This message she left to all her friends, "Be good." From the beginning of her illness she never thought she would recover, and bore her sufferings uncomplainingly. She was buried from the Methodist Church, Rev. S. R. Young, of the Baptist Church, who had known her all her life, conducting the service.

AUNT DAKIN.

MRS. G. A. REMBERT, nee Grandberry, was born March 23, 1849. She accepted Christ as her Savior and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pleasant Valley when a small girl. She was married to Mr. J. P. Rembert Dec. 12, 1876. To them were born four sons and one daughter. One son and the daughter preceded her to the better country. She leaves a husband, three sons, a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss. Their home was a happy home. God was their Father, Jesus their Leader, the Holy Spirit their constant Comforter, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate a weekly visitor for thirty six years, being the first paper that ever went into their home. Sister Rembert was afflicted for several months. After having all done for her that loving hands and hearts could do, she went home to glory, July 20, 1912. She was, indeed, a Christian woman. By her fruits we know her. She was a devoted God and her Church. As long as her strength permitted, she was a faithful worker, being an active member of both missionary societies and a teacher in the Sunday school. We will miss her, but her works do follow her. The funeral was conducted in the Methodist Church July 22, by the writer and Rev. P. Gower. The very large congregation and the beautiful floral offering by her Church and friends, speaks the appreciation of and the high regard for Sister Rembert and her life. In the people where they were known. Now may God's Spirit and grace comfort and sustain all the bereaved ones and enable them to so live as to meet her in the place of eternal rest.

Her Pastor, J. M. CORLEY.

TO THE PEOPLE OF MISSISSIPPI.

I am building up a library for the white prisoners on the Rankin State Farm, and I want you to help me.

I will pay the express, or freight charges on all books sent to me at Jackson, Miss. I am sure that many people have books of fiction, biography, history, religion, etc., which they have read and can spare very well from their shelves and center tables. Why not give them to the prisoners? They will appreciate them. One kind-hearted gentleman at Fayette, Miss., will send fifty volumes. Can you send five, ten, twenty or one hundred?

Drop me a post card and tell me what you have sent. If you live in Jackson, write me where to call, or send for them. "I was in prison, and ye came unto me . . . Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." JNO. D. ELLIS, Chaplain.

To be silent, to suffer, to pray, when we cannot act, is acceptable to God. A disappointment, a condition, a harsh word received and endured as in his presence is worth more than a long prayer.—Fenelon.

Of Vital Interest to Women

Two Grand Prizes are to be Given Away. You may see Switzerland or the Lake Chautauqua if you will.

It is no small thing to be offered the means whereby one can visit at another's expense the greatest scenes of natural beauty in the world. Yet such an offer has been made by the Advocate and at least three women in our territory will be the recipients of the gifts. Why not take that trip? It simply means that you will have to devote your time to securing subscriptions for the Advocate for a few months, and you will be doing untold good for others by circulating religious literature and at the same time winning a trip for yourself. The first prize is a free trip to the World's Sunday School Convention in Zurich, Switzerland, in 1913. The trip will be through lands of indescribable grandeur.

Switzerland is situated in the very center of Europe. The Helvetic Mountains, the most important range of the Alps, clad in perpetual snow and ice, cover almost its entire surface. "Switzerland has become the common meeting-place of all those whose hearts beat with emotion when contemplating the superb spectacles there offered by nature, and something seems to be wanting until we have looked upon the Alps at least once in our life."

The two ladies securing the second and third highest number of votes will be given a free trip to Lake Chautauqua, via Niagara Falls, with stop-over privilege, and return via New York City. We furnish you the ticket and your expenses for one week at Lake Chautauqua. If you desire to do so, your ticket permits you stop-over privileges at Birmingham, Chattanooga (Lookout Mountain), Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, and Albany, N. Y., from which place you will have the option of a day boat-trip on the Hudson River to New York City, where you may stay until the limit of your ninety-day ticket. Determine right now to win one of these trips, and go to work with all your might. Win the grand prize that will be given to some woman in your Conference. Write to us for circular giving full particulars.

A RIGHT VIEW OF LIFE'S WORK.

Though not considered strictly orthodox, Dr. Lyman Abbott is a minister of worthy character and conspicuous ability. The views of such a man are always interesting and usually attract widespread attention. In a recent issue of The Outlook, of which he is the brilliant editor-in-chief, Dr. Abbott thus describes his way of looking at his work:

"The work in which I am engaged is not my work, it is my Father's work. He has assigned it to me. To him I am responsible for the way I carry it on. All that he asks of me is my best endeavor. I am not under obligations to succeed; I am only under obligations to do as well as I can that very little portion of humanity's common task which he has allotted to me. From 1870 to 1887 I was preaching to a village congregation which rarely numbered over seventy-five. Then I was called to Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, to preach to a congregation which numbered from fifteen hundred to two thousand. I was sometimes asked if I did not feel it a great responsibility to stand in Henry Ward Beecher's pulpit and preach in that historic church to such a congregation. I answered then, and I answer now, no. The responsibility of preaching to fifteen hundred people is no greater than the responsibility of preaching to seventy-five. The responsibility is the same in both cases: it is to speak the truth as God gives me to see the truth, and to speak it as simply and as clearly as I can, without fear and without favor. In fact, I never feel my responsibility quite so keenly as when I am talking to an individual who has come to me with some problem of his spiritual life and I realize the difficulty of clearing away the prejudices, his and mine, which shadow our minds, and make real inter-communication of life between us difficult.

"But I am not merely working under my Father's orders, I am working with my Father's comradeship. We are working together, and I am responsible only to do my share in our partnership work. This is what Jesus Christ means when he says, 'Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you.' A yoke is an instrument for doing work. It is also an instrument for uniting two workers together. If I take Christ's work upon me, I am yoked to him and we do the work together. This is what Paul means when he says, 'We are laborers together with God.' I plant a seed in the garden; nature produces the flower. I plant a thought in a human soul; God produces the character."

We heartily commend this conception of the nature of man's work and of the obligation which is upon him. Such convictions ought to make the utmost possible of a human being and cause his life to express itself in service to the limit of his capacity. A person who accepts his work as coming by divine appointment, and who believes that God is really a co-worker with him, has learned the secret of contentment, optimism, and high endeavor. And one who feels the weight of responsibility in what are called the smaller tasks of life, is certain not to be found lacking in those which are regarded as larger. We entertain no doubt that all Christian lives, even as to their apparently insignificant details, are much more fully shaped by the Heavenly Father than we are usually prone to think.

WHY THEY SHOULD ESCHEW POLITICS.

We are on the eve of what promises to be the most strenuous and bitterly contested campaign in the history of American politics. Doubtless some preachers and church journals will feel a strong temptation to take a hand in the raging conflict. We have already noticed in one of our own church papers a high commendation of a prominent candidate, which apparently was intended for political effect, and in another, a picture of a man running for office, accompanied by a setting forth of his claims, with a statement underneath that it was paid for as an advertisement. We do not hesitate to say that we think such things are wholly out of place in religious periodicals.

It was our pleasure in a recent issue of the Advocate to quote Dr. Albert Taylor Bledsoe's masterly explanation of the position of the Southern Methodist Church concerning pending political issues at the time of the division of Episcopal Methodism in America and in the turbulent years that followed; and in view of what is now ahead of us, it may not be amiss to reproduce the statement of the same great authority as to why preachers and churches should keep out of politics. Like everything else that came from his pen, it is a vigorous piece of writing. It is as follows: "Political partizanship on the part of the Church is to be condemned on several grounds:

"First.—It renders the ministry of the Church unacceptable, and uninfluential with all who may be of the opposite faction.

"Second.—It destroys the fact and consciousness of consecration in the pulpit. It induces a secular character in men who ought to be wholly devoted to God and his cause. In the case of ordained Methodist preachers, who have solemnly promised to give themselves wholly to 'this one thing,' it is a gross violation of vows.

"Third.—It breaks up that concentration which is an essential condition of the highest success in the Christian ministry. A divided mind cannot bring the full measure of its force to bear on any one object. When God appropriates any man for his work, that work suffers in the measure of the diversion of personal force upon any other object.

"Fourth.—Even amongst politicians, though they may be of his own stripe, the political preacher has, to say the least of it, an equivocal reputation. They may flatter him for the sake of the influence he has with his people, but the Gospel from his lips will do them no good. The sanctity of his calling ceases to attach to his person, however sanctimonious he may be. The ministry, the Church, and even religion itself, come into bad odor through this means.

"Fifth.—Its effect in actual character is bad. The trade of the politician is demoralizing. The partizan wrangle is a strife of potsherds. The devil still takes men up into a high mountain, shows them the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them, and proffers them to such as will fall down and worship him. It required such power of integrity as was in the Son of Man to spurn the bribe. This mountain—the height from which men see kingdoms, and the glory of them—is strewn with debauched and prostrate souls, that fawn upon the devil for his gift. Are they not the tricksters, who stickle at no devil's work, who oftenest bear off the prize of place and power? But the country needs good men in office. Yea, verily. That end will never be secured, however, by the participation of the Church and the ministry in popular politics. She will only drag her garments in the mud by such a course. Even now many of the devil's worshipers show reverent faces in the house of God on Sundays, and break the sacramental bread. Some there be who erect themselves from the profane prostration on the morning of the Lord's day and enter the very pulpit to deliver the Lord's message to men. Their words are light as chaff. The Church can work toward a purer condition in public life only in an indirect way, by preaching the Gospel, and thus increasing the prevalence of Christian morals at large. It is not by preaching politics, and coming down to the strife of potsherds, but by simply preaching Christ, that the ministry can accomplish any permanent good, either in this or any other field.

"Sixth.—Ecclesiastics make the worst politicians in the world. It may be difficult to account for this, but it is certainly true. We do not say that the devoted Christian does not make a good statesman. The enlightened Christian conscience is a high qualification for statesmanship. But we do say, that when ministers of religion try their hand at statesmanship, they always make a hotch of the business. God never intended them for this service. Their standpoint is not favorable for it. It is altogether unfavorable in a country especially, where the Church exists, as it must always where there is any liberty, in the form of distinct denominations.

"Seventh.—When Churches enter into politics bad men will seek connection with them for the sake of their influence. The Church will and must become corrupt in such a state of things.

"Eighth.—The Church is the bride of Christ. She is debauched by political alliances. They are a breach of her marital vows. Her purity is lost when she goes after other lovers."

Our Monthly Sermon

THE NEW REVELATION.

By Rev. Charles A. Battle.

Text: "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he shall guide you into all the truth" (R. V.) John 16:13.

Old Testament history contains many evidences of conditions and times where the standard of moral truth was below that of later conceptions. In earlier times practices were prevalent among the leading people that would not be dreamed of among civilized peoples of the present day. Abraham felt called upon to actually offer up his son as a human sacrifice. Jephthah committed the deed of sacrificing the body of his only daughter because of a rash vow. Luke says, referring to the ancient custom of idol-worship, that "the times of this ignorance God winked at." Through the upward moral growth in the passing of time such practices were put aside. There is a vast step between the code of Hammurabi and the Hebrew decalogue in point of moral growth. The advancement is as evident between the days of the Exodus code and the Leviticus code. The coming of the Great Teacher was planned for a time of moral enlightenment when he would meet with a reception in which he would be sufficiently understood for the establishment of the Kingdom of God in the light of a new revelation. The full day had not come. There were revelations in store for those who sought greater things. The Master recognized, even after thousands of years of development, the moral and spiritual conditions to be at such a state when he came that, without great effort on his part, the Kingdom would not be fully appreciated. For years he trained the disciples in the endeavor to gain the necessary ends. The world received a mighty moral impulse upward during his short ministry. He supplanted the Old Testament regime by fulfilling its predictions and interpreting its depths of moral truth. Yet the full light was still to be expected. The disciples had not morally digested much of Christ's teachings. There were convictions to come that would demand great sacrifice and the renunciation of time-honored and deep-seated customs. The death and resurrection of the Lord, with his later ascension, finished his part of the work which was afterward completed in the revelation by the Paraclete. The world then entered upon the fullest and final stage of the revelation of moral and spiritual truth.

The new revelation demands a complete moral and spiritual life. In the times of past darkness ignorance was an excuse before the eyes of God. Doubtless it is such under any circumstances. But to the enlightened Christian this could never apply. When Pentecost was over the disciples were new beings in the sense that none ever existed like them on earth before. The moral and spiritual truth necessary for the living of a life, enjoying all the benefits of the Kingdom had been introduced. The heritage of the Christian is the richest and greatest possible. His is the privilege of ascending to the heights of religious experience planned to be the ideal of finite existence. Nothing has now been held in reserve. The mind of the Infinite is revealed in his designs of a complete Christian life. When Christ spoke to Nicodemus about being born again, the man could not grasp the seeming paradox. Now the truth made clear and in its realization is cause for great rejoicing. In the ecstasy of the achieving of the new life and the great power accorded him for accomplishing moral and spiritual ends, Paul declared: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." This man was a Jew with deep prejudices, but in the light of this new relation he maintained with the Infinite his earthly interests sank into comparative insignificance. In reference to the inner life, what before the new revelation in the individual is regarded often as a disgrace, and is looked upon as beneath the dignity of a respectable and successful career, is afterward the most joyful attainment of all. Christianity plucks true heroes from the midst of surroundings adverse to the development of spiritual life. The experience of the inner change is so transforming, and so completely reverses the point of view of the individual that it arouses acute antagonism in others who cannot appreciate the new life. Instinctively the line of cleavage is drawn; life-long friends are alienated; benefits are deferred, and hardships are brought about that change the whole aspect of life. It is with different conceptions that the Christian looks upon the world. The difficulty coming in the way of the new professor in numerous instances is hard to surmount. Persecution and death have claimed many in the ranks of the faithful because in this new life they have persisted in the course that antagonized those in authority. Hardships thrown in the paths of those who profess the new life are often the experience of those of the present day on the mission fields. These extreme cases are but the more evident results which in reality exist with more or less intensity at every point of contact between the true professor and those who fail to appreciate their new experience. There is no room for cowardice in the heart of the true Christian. He must be a hero. The Kingdom from its very nature knows no compromise. And the very thing that is the hardest, driving the weak and the cowardly out of the band of the faithful, increases the intensity of the life that enters into the fuller conception. But the new revelation makes all things possible to the willing heart. So there are no trials, sufferings, nor opposition that can intimidate the Christian. Men have, in many instances, felt utterly helpless before trying circumstances; a greater personality overcomes them, the weaker will have no power to resist the mightier; but the experience of the Christian leads into a fullness and completeness that will not be shaken by opposition nor taken by bribery. And here lies the ideal, the great goal. And "I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Such is the character of those who must compose the membership of the Kingdom in the light of the new revelation.

This new revelation transforms its exponents into zealous propagators of God's moral and spiritual truth. Enthusiasm and deep interest were certainly characteristic notes in the light of the new revelation within the Kingdom. There were no hardships and dangers too trying to be braved, and no power that these religionists with their burning message would not encounter. They felt that nothing else mattered save the presentation of their gospel. Death was feared least of all. Paul seemed to desire to go and meet his God save for the fact that there was work for him to do. It is reputed that Peter was crucified with his head downward, being unwilling to die in the dignity of the same position of his Master at his crucifixion. And this intensity was not born of a recklessness seemingly upon the face of it, but of the unceasing desire to save others from perishing, and present unto them the means of inheriting eternal life. Neither did they think of the external power of the mighty organization that would be accrued in time, but only of the love of presenting Christ to a needy people. And this same spirit has characterized true Christianity ever since.

To the consternation of the disciples, and what Paul termed a "mystery" that had been revealed to him, the gospel was to be dispersed among all peoples regardless of ethnic descent. But no one could ever charge that Paul allowed his inherited prejudices to dampen his ardor. If it meant his social ostracism among people whom he dearly loved, the joy of the labor was correspondingly increased with the attendant affliction. The true character of the religionist of the new revelation is here admirably depicted. Christ issued the mandate: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." It is not for one to question the integrity of the demand, but rather to realize with the great apostle to the Gentiles: "Woe is unto me, if I preach not the gospel!" By the "foolishness of preaching" the whole lump is to be leavened. A peculiar instinct attends the preaching of the moral truth that it will receive attention wherever man is found. This is in consequence of all conscious beings being subjected to moral law, and however low their conception of the truth may be, the primal elements of moral law are there. A responsive cord is always vibrated. A greater revelation carries with it enlarged responsibility. A consciousness of condemnation attends the refusal to take advantage of the inducted truth. Whoever, then, hears and comprehends the Golden Rule is not only obligated to observe it, but feels a sense either of approval or condemnation, according to his active attitude. There is no neutral ground. It is a startling fact to observe with what agility men sometimes endeavor to shirk the responsibility of a greater revelation of the moral truth of God. Fervading the hearts of many people is the spirit of the madman of the country of the Gadarenes when he cried out: "What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God that thou torment me not." Elijah was persecuted and driven into hiding because he endeavored to cut away the moral cancer of the government. Jeremiah suffered imprisonment because he proposed to preach a righteous course of action. Preachers of the truth in all the ages have, in many instances, been vilely treated. Yet they have been the great benefactors of the human race. Their bodies are often killed and afterward their memories "immortalized." It is this eternal zeal, and enthusiasm, and conviction of truth, that has characterized the exponents of the religion of the new revelation that accounts for its unparalleled success. An optimistic view of the past, and the effect of this past upon the present, leads one to believe that the Kingdom has been intensely active through all the ages, and is even now vastly more alive than is commonly thought. Christ compared the Kingdom to the leaven which was hid in the meal and the whole lump was leavened. He also likened it to the man who planted the seed which "day and night" sprang up and grew, though "he knoweth not how." Elijah once, in a moment of discouragement, complained to God that the children of Israel had forsaken the covenant, thrown down the altars of God, "and," said he, "I, even I only, am left; and they seek my life, to take it away." He was, consequently, informed that there were just seven thousand times as many in Israel as he thought, who had not bowed the knee to Baal. Like the little grain of mustard seed, the smallest of all seeds, which springs up and grows into a large tree to become a sheltering for the beasts of the field and a resting place for the fowls of the air, the Kingdom grows and flourishes forever.

The new revelation manifests itself in rewards obtained through the carrying out of the precepts of moral and spiritual truth, which are outward manifestations of the Kingdom. The benefits conferred upon individuals and nations for right action are great incentives for further development. The tendency is toward the accumulation of strength of mind and will and heart that crystallizes into outward blessings. The Renaissance was the transition from the mediaeval to the modern world in point of history; but this transition was the result of the evolution from a time of comparative darkness to one of greater light in point of moral law. Individualism aroused itself, and great accomplishments were the result. Out of the chaos modern science arose with its investigations of nature. Copernicus and Galileo made their wonderful astronomical discoveries; Vesalius laid the foundation of the modern knowledge of anatomy, and geographical explorations took place that resulted in the discovery of the New World. The mariner's compass, the telescope, and the printing press served to advance the day of enlightenment. The great culmination came, as the result of this moral and material progress, in the reformation instigated by Martin Luther. It is scarcely possible to realize how closely related are the worlds of matter and spirit. All these outward manifestations of the Renaissance resulted from this close inter-relation; for material things are strictly subservient to spiritual. A proper development of the moral law has an inconceivably utilitarian effect in the material realm. The wonderful achievements of this century are the outcome of the growth of the Kingdom of God within the hearts of men. The railroads, the telegraph lines, sea-going facilities, modern business, intercourse, and prosperity as it is understood to-day, are the proper results of a higher revelation of God's truth put into practice.

And the legitimate aesthetic tendencies of true refinement of the individual are but the outcome of a higher development. Polish of the exterior is the natural outcome of the polished interior. It may take a generation to develop, but it will be evidenced. The savage is not able to appreciate the meaning evidenced in the ultra polish of wood. Architectural beauty and art are the evidences of the inner man. Through the ages he has sought to copy the truth revealed in God's handiwork, and he follows the elegant taste of Him who built the archways of the heaven and planned the courses of the spheres. These blessings are the rewards of a true enlightenment of the heart; they are the words of the Master wrought wonderfully by the handiwork of man from iron, stone, and wood into peculiar things that serve and please. All things upon earth were created for a purpose. The value of the more easily discovered and necessary commodities of material nature has always been known, but later years saw a further seeking into the riches of hidden powers to be most fruitful of wonderful results. By combinations and devices nature has been harnessed to serve the smallest wants of the human being. Electricity and gasoline and steam have revolutionized the methods of travel; the manufacture of the most delicate texture of cloth has made personal adornment pleasing; architecture renders obtainable the most ideal and superb palaces for residences, and in thousands of other ways God has given his good things to man as the result of a full development in the realm of moral truth.

But the imminent danger facing the Christian world to-day is the seeking for these tangible rewards that have been made possible through the revelation of moral law and the forgetting of the obligation to the inner revelation. This peril is exemplified in the man who seeks refinement of the person and not of the heart; who loves the beautiful polish of furniture and everything pleasing outwardly, but neglects the polish of the inner moral and spiritual life; who loves the success of business life and seeks material gain, but fails to appreciate the success of a life built according to God's moral law. But these outward things, that are the rewards of the inner life, will never be able wholly to usurp the throne of authority in the sphere of the Kingdom. For the Kingdom furnishes a necessary check upon itself. When the moral law is shunned, then the outward becomes less refined, inter-relation of men less open and honest, and then all the structure of a well-built civilization begins to tumble. Through the sufferings that will necessarily result, the inner life will again come into its proper sphere.

The more subtle reward of God's revealed truth in the new order is the enjoyment of greater blessings of the heart. After all, the reward is rather on the inside than on the outside. One person may hear the Golden Rule and appreciate its delicate meaning, and he may realize thereby a greater love for his fellow man and become fixed upon a healthier basis of fellowship and service; another may hear the same truth and not conceive its every shade and meaning. Many live under the same dispensation of the gospel, but do not enjoy the same relative rewards of strong character and human worth. The degrees in heaven will not be that one is exalted above another as in rank, but one will be able to enjoy heaven more than another because of a deeper appreciation and realization of the prize. The fact of the corresponding reward, according to the application of moral and spiritual truth, brings the world into the light of a greater day. The Kingdom of God is the ultimate good realized in the human heart, and to the world at large, in the new dispensation through the teachings of the Paraclete.

THE BIBLE AS THE PREACHER'S BOOK.

By Rev. W. L. Hunter.

Every preacher is confronted, not with the question of finding something to say, that is comparatively easy, but the task of instilling into the minds of his hearers the essential truths of the Bible, so that the unsaved will be brought to Christ, and the Church be made more aggressive, and clothed with a larger spiritual power.

The preacher must necessarily have much to do with Systematic Theology, Homiletics, Church History; in fact, he should keep in touch with the results of the critical scholarship brought to bear on the vital problems of the Church, whether in the departments of Science, Philosophy, Literature, or elsewhere. He is under obligation to acquaint himself with and support the great missionary enterprises of the Church, and to carefully study and seek to improve the social conditions with which he is surrounded, etc. These things are eminently useful, and contribute to the successful preaching of the gospel in a large degree; but if a broad and secure foundation for the future triumphs of the Kingdom of Christ is to be laid, the preacher's sermons must be intensely Biblical. The very atmosphere of the sermon must be Biblical. Mere quotation is not sufficient. The man, no less than the message, must be enriched with "the unsearchable riches of Christ." He cannot afford to be a mere text-hunter nor a gleaner of other men's thoughts; he must become saturated with God's love-message; he must catch the martial spirit of Joshua, the courage of Caleb, subdued by the burden of the prophets, and inspired by the heavenly music of the Psalms. The whole New Testament must, of course, be made to yield forth its message of all messages. Dr. Jefferson says: "The Church, on looking backward and counting up her pulpit princes, admits no one to the shining company of the immortals save those alone who have been mighty in the Scriptures."

Alexander McClaren, Joseph Parker, Spurgeon, Wesley, and many other "pulpit princes," who might be mentioned if space permitted, were all "mighty in the Scriptures." Mr. Gladstone said: "Talk about the questions of the day; there is but one question, and that is the gospel." The gospel has not lost its power; its message only needs to be translated into conscious experience. The Bible still reveals the remedy for a world of sin; but the Bible must be studied. Let us all, as preachers, read and "inwardly digest" the great hooks which help us better to understand the Bible and interpret its message in terms which will make it available to all, but, above all else, let us give ourselves to a deep, thorough, constant, and spiritual study of the English Bible, and the rather too common criticism, that "the preaching of the present day is lacking in the notes of conviction and authority," will lose much of its force, and we shall receive a vast increment of power, not only to lead the Church into a "closer walk with God," but also into larger fields of ministry.

LIBERALITY.

Dear Doctor: In these days in which you and I are living there is a great deal being said about liberality. We have liberals in politics, liberals in education, liberals in the Church, liberals on the outside, and liberals on every hand. I have been thinking about this thing some lately. There seems to be some strange and elusive charm about this liberal movement that makes people feel a great deal of pride and self-importance when you tell them that you think that they are liberal.

There are some of these liberal Christians who would be real amusing were their liberality not so tragic. Good old Sister X has gotten to be real liberal of late. She used to live in the country and drove to Sunday school every Sunday. In the summer time it was hot and dusty. Great clouds of dust rose up all along the road and got into her mouth and eyes. In the winter there was a great deal of rain and mud, and it was so cold all the time. But she never missed Sunday school at the little church where she was teacher and her husband was a steward. She wanted to get the little daughter started in the right way and bring her up so that she would know God and love the things of God. She was always glad when the preacher came to stay all night and when he would take down the Bible to lead the family in prayers.

But now things are very different from what they were before. She has gone to the city to live. The daughter has finished college and now she is going the rounds of fashionable society. Sister X is very liberal. She is a member of the missionary society and becomes very enthusiastic over the heathen in the foreign lands and the immigrants coming to our land. She is very liberal and sometimes she gives a quarter of a dollar for the conversion of these multitudes. Her daughter belongs to the "We Do Things" young ladies' Bible class. They are so liberal and believe in helping on in "Social Service." This summer the seventy-five young ladies are going to send six little girls out into the country for two whole days and a night. The Church is so far behind in these things, and they must show people how to do things that are liberal and up-to-date.

Sister X is liberal. She does not believe in being so strict. She and her daughter always go to at least two matinees and one evening performance each week during the season. She can always arrange to chaperon her daughter to all the dances in her set. But she can never find the time to go to the prayer meetings. Her daughter is a member of the Tuesday afternoon young ladies' bridge club and she herself is a member of the matrons' euchre club. Neither of them ever miss a meeting. They pay fifty cents or a dollar each month as dues to the club, and this money is used to buy the prizes for which they play. How it does fill Sister X with pride to be told that she is liberal in her views and her ways!

The other day one of the stewards from the Broadway Church, where Brother X and family are members, called on them to see them about their assessment for the support of the pastor. Sister X said, "Why certainly we will contribute to the support of the pastor. We have been giving ten cents per week for a long time, and we will still give that much if Mr. X does not fail to make one of his big deals that he is trying to make now. I will let you know later about that." Mr. X has gotten to be liberal too. He is too liberal now to trouble his busy head about the work of a steward in the Church of God and the affairs of the church.

Doctor, what do you suppose has gotten to be the matter with some people? They seem to think that liberality consists in doing the things that the Church says they ought not to do, and in spending their time and money in all sorts of pleasures and fads. Giving their time and their money to the support of the Church and the institutions of the Church has nothing at all to do with liberality. Well, I guess that they are liberal people, all right. Don't you suppose that it is just pure sin after all that people call liberality? I am beginning to think that is the case, and that people love to be called liberal because they are glad that there are some people who do not think it is such a bad thing for them to sin and to do other things that are wrong. May the good Lord have mercy on people like that. I, for one, am glad that there are still a great many people in the world who are not hankering after being called liberal Christians, but are satisfied with being just plain old-fashioned Christian people.

Your ever faithful WILLIAM.

CALLED TO HIS REWARD.

Dear Brother Meek: The Commercial Appeal of August 21 contained the following announcement of the death of Rev. J. T. Murrah, which occurred in Memphis on the afternoon of the 20th inst.:

"The Rev. J. T. Murrah, pastor of the Methodist Church at Aberdeen, Miss., died suddenly at the Peabody Hotel yesterday afternoon. He had been in poor health for some time, and was in Memphis for the purpose of consulting a physician. Dr. R. M. Boyd, a physician of Aberdeen, accompanied him to the city and the two registered at the Peabody Hotel Monday evening. Mr. Murrah consulted a physician the next morning, and his condition was found to be bad, and he was told so. He and Dr. Boyd returned to the hotel and procured their tickets to Aberdeen, preparatory to returning home, and then went to their room. Mr. Murrah said he would lie down awhile, and with his clothes on he lay across the bed. Dr. Boyd went to lunch, and when he returned he found his companion dead. He had not complained of acute illness."

The above statement tells the sad story of our great loss. Brother Murrah was buried from the First Methodist Church at Columbus, Miss., on August 22, at 2:30 p.m. Rev. J. E. Cunningham, assisted by Rev. E. S. Lewis, Rev. J. C. Park, Rev. J. H. Felts, and Rev. J. H. Holder, conducted the service. The choir rendered very softly and sweetly "How Blest the Righteous When He Dies" and "Asleep in Jesus." Brother Cunningham made a very appropriate and touching address. This was followed by an address of appreciation by Captain George Paine, of Aberdeen, a member of the official board at that place.

We laid him to rest in the old family burial ground, where sleep his loved ones whom death has claimed. One son, James, Jr., who reached his majority on the day of his father's decease, is the only surviving member of the family.

The loss to Aberdeen just at this time seems irreparable. One of the most popular, gifted, and useful of our North Mississippi preachers is gone. "God buries his workmen, but carries on his work."

DR. MOORE'S LECTURES.

Dear Dr. Meek: With the kindly permission of the Advocate I wish to announce that I have prepared with some care four lectures, any one of which I shall be happy to deliver to any church, or Epworth League or Woman's Missionary Society desiring it. It will cost them nothing but an effort to get out as many people as possible and the privilege of passing the hat. The undersigned has as his sole object the increasing of interest in our Home Mission work. The offering taken will go to the St. Mark's Night School and to help feed the hungry at the Mary Werlein Mission. It is the desire of the pastors of this mission work in New Orleans to bring it close to the heart of the Louisiana Conference.

The topics upon which I shall be delighted to talk to any congregation that I may be able to reach upon a week night are as follows: "America, the Land of the Unblessed Flag;" "The Tomorrow of Our Country;" "Why John Smith Loves the Church;" "The Threat of the City."

If any pastor or any organization desires any of these lectures, let him communicate with me and we will agree upon a date.

Yours in Christian service,

J. W. MOORE.

THE SUPERANNUATE FUND.

To the Brethren of the Mississippi Conference and Claimants on the Joint Board of Finance.

The President and Treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance instruct me to announce the inability of the Board to meet the claims for the third quarter. This announcement has been delayed, for we had hoped sufficient funds would come in to meet the demands upon the Board, but this has not been the case. We, therefore, are now compelled reluctantly to announce the delay of the payment for the third quarter.

In times of financial stringency, those who suffer most are the dependent and helpless. Several pitiful letters have been received asking for immediate help. We urge again the immediate collection of this fund, and that it be forwarded as soon as possible to Mr. S. A. Tomlinson, Treasurer, Mississippi Conference Joint Board of Finance.

NOLAN B. HARMON, Secretary.

MATTERS EDUCATIONAL.

A university can no longer be defined as a "boy on one end of a log with Mark Hopkins, the great teacher, on the other." The average young American has beauty and comfort at home and demands that these shall be found in the school attended. Rarely is ambition strong enough to endure bare academic walls and rough, coarse fare in order to acquire knowledge. Knowing this fact, and believing that the fountain of knowledge should be a place of beauty, I have devoted all my time and means to the improvement of Grenada College. Under the direction of the chief gardener of the Illinois Central railroad, the campus has been graded, walks laid, a beautiful fountain placed in front of the building, shrubbery and flowers planted, and the entire grounds made as attractive as possible. Quite as many improvements have been made on the buildings and furnishings, so that we now have here a refined college-home for our girls.

All this would be largely sham and show if the actual school work were not maintained on a high plane. The curriculum calls for twelve and a half Carnegie units for admission into the freshman class, while the leading colleges for men demand fourteen such units. We have more teachers in proportion to the number of pupils than any other school with which I am acquainted. This is made possible by the funds received from the North Mississippi Conference. These teachers represent such institutions as Tulane, Vanderbilt, Mississippi, Michigan, and Chicago Universities, while the teachers in the special departments have had training in the leading schools and conservatories of this country and Europe.

A well-assorted geological and biological museum and a well-equipped laboratory are new features which will add to the efficiency of the work for the next session.

Notwithstanding the large faculty and the superior equipment, the school is not at all expensive. It is run for the good it can do and not for money. Many poor girls and orphans are assisted each year from the Conference fund and other loan funds placed with the president for the use of ambitious and worthy pupils.

The next session will open on September 11. More girls are now registered than attended last year, and the indications are that the school is entering upon a new period of growth and prosperity.

The best feature of all is the character of our student body. Loafers and rowdies avoid the school entirely. Only five of the girls who were with us last year went home not members of some Church, and several of these planned to join at once at home. Their lady-like deportment was most widely commented on by those who saw them. After all, Christian character is the best product of the Christian home and the Christian school.

Cordially and fraternally.

J. R. COUNTESS, President.

Grenada, Miss.

THE LOUISIANA ORPHANAGE.

Dear Dr. Meek: Will you kindly state that we are arranging to have our Annual Work Day for the Orphanage on Saturday, Oct. 12, and that the Sunday following will be the day when we hope to enlist every church and Sunday school in the Conference in a vigorous effort to raise funds to carry on our work.

While we have suffered a serious loss in the support that comes to us from the flooded districts of our Conference, we hope that the interest in our great cause will be maintained throughout the Conference and that the assessment for the orphanage will be fully met. We now have seventy-eight children in the Home. We are almost constantly receiving new applications for help. We are operating up to our full capacity, and until we have more room and a more liberal support, it will be impossible for us to care for many more children.

We have spent a busy summer, canning large quantities of fruits and vegetables. We have had most excellent health, and the children have been happy and contented. The splendid results from the Easter collections have tided us over the summer, but as we have received less than $500 for the past three months, you can readily see that our funds are rapidly diminishing, and we will be compelled to make a most vigorous campaign this fall if we meet our obligations and maintain our work.

Sincerely,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent.

Ruston, La.

UNSELFISH SERVICE.

No one can be true to his home duties unless he is true to the duties that lie outside of his home. It is well for us to think of this when we are tempted to misuse a certain overworked adage. "Charity begins at home," we say. Yes, charity begins at home; but it ceases to be charity if it stays there. No one ever shirked the duty of showing love for those outside his home because of his fidelity to the demands of love within his home. There is always some other reason; and that other reason is always selfishness, never unselfishness. Those who love their own best are those who most love others. If we are not serving sacrificially the needs of those who are far from our own home circle, we may be sure that our own dear ones are being injured by this neglect.—Great Thoughts.

Church News

Of the eleven new members of the Publishing Committee of the M. E. Church, only one is an experienced publisher. The others are mostly lawyers and preachers.

The stewards of our churches in Atlanta, Ga., have organized themselves into an Association, and have regular meetings at which the problems of the steward are discussed. We commend the plan to our stewards in other places.

The Texas Christian Advocate was fifty-nine years old on August 15. Its near three score years have not made it feeble, as a man grows feeble with years, but it is to-day one of the greatest forces in the journalism of our great Church.

Bishop Thomas Bowman of the Methodist Episcopal Church passed the 95th year of his age on July 15. He has been a preacher for seventy-five years, a Christian for nearly ninety years, and is said to be, for one of his advanced age, active and capable of a limited amount of service.

In the death of the Rev. Griffith John, D. D., the Christian world lost one of its veteran missionaries. He went out from the London Missionary Society in 1855, and was the first Christian to reach central China. He died on July 25, after having spent 55 years of active service in the heart of China.

The largest average salary paid to the ministers of our Church is paid by the Virginia Conference, and amounts to $1,080. The smallest is paid by the Illinois Conference, and is $394. The Louisiana Conference pays an average of $813; The North Mississippi Conference an average of $795, and the Mississippi Conference, an average of $771.

Nearly six hundred delegates, representing eighteen States and countries, attended the Conference of the Missionary Educational Movement in Silver Bay, Wis., last month. This organization, which serves forty-seven missionary boards, has enrolled 175,000 persons in mission study classes in the United States and Canada during the last few years.

It has been announced that Bishop Vincent, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will be the guest of honor at the World's Sunday School Convention, which meets in Zurich, Switzerland, next summer. This honor has been bestowed upon Bishop Vincent because of the great service he has rendered the cause of Sunday schools throughout the world.

A Convention of Chaplains has been announced to convene in San Francisco on September 9-14. The object of this convention, as stated in the call, is to consider the problems of chaplains now in active service, plan for the promotion of the welfare and morals of the men in arms and others being served by chaplains, and to attempt to arouse an increased interest among the Churches in the soldiers and sailors doing service under the American flag.

Of the Church editors now in active service, the following are claimed to be alumni of Drew Theological Seminary: Dr. George P. Eckman, New York Christian Advocate; Dr. Dan. B. Brunmit, The Epworth Herald; Dr. Levi Gilbert, The Western Christian Advocate; Dr. John J. Wallace, The Pittsburg Christian Advocate, and Dr. Gross Alexander, The Methodist Review. Besides these distinguished editors, the following assistant or managing editors are also graduates of the Drew Theological Seminary: H. E. Woollever, with the Northern Christian Advocate; Rev. Robert F. Harned, with the M. E. Board of Foreign Missions; Rev. Henry H. Meyer, and

Rev. R. W. Keeler, with the M. E. Sunday School Publication Department. It would seem from this array of religious journalists, all from the same school, that their alma mater must have a private wire connecting it with the Muse of sacred literature.

The following is taken from the New York Christian Advocate: "Trinity College, at Durham, North Carolina, is in the midst of a campaign for a million dollars. B. N. and J. B. Duke offer to give $650,000 for endowment, provided the two North Carolina Conferences raise $200,000. The General Education Board will add enough to round out the million. This is one of the foremost institutions under the direction of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and deserves the good fortune which is coming to it."

The white Baptists of Georgia claim 270,000 members, and the State is divided into 87 Associations. Three and a half months of each year are consumed in Association meetings. This is quite different from our own Church, which is almost of equal strength in Georgia, which has less than one-fourth the number of district organizations, occupies less than half the time in Conference meetings, and does an equal amount of religious work. We are abundantly satisfied that the Episcopal form of government has a decided advantage over all other forms of Church government.

The Rev. Frederick Luke Wiseman, the new head of the British Wesleyan Conference, is said to be one of the most versatile men ever occupying that position. A contemporary says of him. "In Mr. Wiseman Methodism has a personality vivid and versatile—a scholar who was a university prize man in Hebrew and Greek in his student days; a burning missionary who has proclaimed the gospel of redeeming grace from the pulpit of the Birmingham Mission for a quarter of a century without a suspicion of staleness; a brilliant musician who can direct a musical festival with the skill and verve of the professional conductor; a composer whose choicest work is enshrined in the tune-books of his own Church. To these outstanding gifts might also be added elocutionary powers of a very high order—his reading of the lessons at the Birmingham Central Hall service is one of its main features, and is said to produce a magnetic thrill."

The late John S. Lyle, a devoted member of the Presbyterian Church, was a man with a truly benevolent heart, and was a firm believer in missions as well as other forms of Christian aggressiveness, as is attested by the following bequests made by him in his will, which was probated about ten days ago:

Board of Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America, New York	$50,000
Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church in America, New York	50,000
Board of Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church, New York	50,000
Presbyterian Hospital, New York	50,000
American Bible Society, New York	50,000
American Tract Society, New York	50,000
Children's Aid Society, New York	25,000
New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, New York	25,000
Charity Organization Society, New York	25,000
State Charities Aid Association, New York	25,000

THE EPWORTH ERA.

The September issue of the "Epworth Era" begins the new series and the XIX volume of that periodical. The new form is both pleasing and convenient. The cover design consists of violets, the Epworth League flower, and the contributed articles are printed in clear, old style ten point type, the correspondence and working material for the League in smaller type. The chief contributors are Bishop E. R. Hendrix, who writes on the Prayer Life of Jesus, the first of a series of articles on the Prayer Life; Dean W. F. Tillet, of Vanderbilt University, who gives in connection with the study of a hymn a sketch of the life of Frances Ridley Havergal, the author; Professor Thomas Carter, whose first article on "The Story of the New Testament" is vigorous and brilliant in style and full of promise of a most interesting series; Rev. S. T. Bartlett, General Secretary of Sunday Schools and Young People's Societies of the Methodist Church of Canada, writes convincingly of the "Value of Junior Work;" Miss Mary Ferguson tells a wonderful story of the achievements of the North Texas Conference Epworth League during the twenty-one years of its history, the crowning glory of which is the Ruby Kendrick Memorial Fund, which is now supporting two missionaries in Korea. The Editor writes confidently of the "Advancing Column," and the department columns are full of material for the practical work of the Leagues.

The entire Atlantic Fleet of battleships will visit New Orleans next January. If reports recently sent out from Washington are true.

Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson was 77 years old on August 16. He claims that he will retire from Government service next March on account of his age. Others will retire at that time for other reasons.

A modern plow, drawn by three traction engines, recently turned an average of an acre of soil every four minutes for more than an hour. The experiment was performed on one of the Purdue University farms.

Tulane University now boasts of a new building to be used as a Gymnasium. This structure was completed last week, and is two stories high, with the main room having a 60 by 100-foot floor space and a 25-foot ceiling.

Miss Emma Carola Woerishoffer, a settlement worker and friend of the needy, who was recently killed in an automobile accident, left to her alma mater, Bryn Mawr College, a gift of $750,000. She also gave to the College Settlement Association of Boston, $10,000.

Clarence S. Darrow, who underwent the longest trial ever conducted in Los Angeles, Cal., under the charge of attempting to bribe jurymen in the late McNamara case, was found not guilty. Mr. Darrow conducted his own defense, and proved himself a lawyer of more than ordinary ability.

Dr. P. E. Archinard, of New Orleans, and one of the most noted doctors of America, died on August 22. In diagnosis he was unsurpassed by any American physician, and his fame was world-wide. He was an author of repute, and a bacteriologist with few peers. His death is a distinct loss to his profession.

Miss Mabel Keiso, of Seattle, Wash., has successfully passed the examination exacted by the Government for wireless telegraph operators, and has been given a position as operator on an ocean going steamship. Thus it seems that no matter what the business or profession, there is always a woman ready to enter it.

The Chicago, Peoria and New Orleans Navigation Company has recently been organized for the purpose of plying a line of steamships from Chicago to the Gulf of Mexico by way of the new Illinois-Michigan Canal and down the Illinois and Mississippi rivers. Thus will be in operation the first Lakes to the Gulf line of steamships.

There seems to be renewed interest in the scientific world in the birthplace of man. The latest announcement is that Peru was the cradle of the human race. An expedition has been fitted out, and a number of scientists have gone to Peru to examine the value of Peru's claims. Personally we have very little curiosity that would lead us to make a search for ancient Eden. That the exact spot where man first set foot upon this earth will ever be found, we seriously question.

The late Justice John Marshall Harlin is claimed to have died leaving his family almost penniless, having left but $3000 worth of property and no money. His life on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States was free from the slightest insinuation of wrong. His honesty was unquestioned. So much was he loved that the lawyers who practiced their profession before him, are endeavoring to raise a purse of $40,000 to provide for the wants of his widow and family.

A United States Naval Surgeon, Dr. Allan Smart, has announced that the reason so many Southern boys are healthy, is that they have preserved their teeth by eating corn bread. How much truth there is in his contention can better be told by another, but with the 1912 corn crop promising to be the biggest ever produced, and the prices of other food stuffs soaring higher and higher, it might be well for more housewives to feed their boys on corn bread, for the sake of cheaper living, if not for the sake of better teeth.

With the determination of the United States to allow American vessels engaged in inter-coastal trade to pass through the Panama Canal without paying toll, comes the announcement that the toll on vessels using the Suez Canal is to be reduced. The only way in which the Suez Canal comes into competition with the Panama Canal is in connection with vessels sailing from Europe to the Pacific coast of Asia. "Competition is the life of industry" we are told, and we fail to see any just reason for any one to object to the proposed action of the managers of the Suez Canal.

Dr. Frank H. Loveland, a prison expert, has expressed an opinion that the Missouri penitentiary is the most barbaric in America, with the possible exception of the State prisons of Nebraska and Georgia. He alleges that on a recent visit to the Missouri institution he found several men hanging by their thumbs and the blood streaming down their wrists. This charge has been denied by the warden, who claims that while the men were held by a vice above their heads gripping the thumbs, they were not suffering the tortures that Dr. Loveland claims they were.

It has developed, after a painstaking search through the Statutes of Louisiana, that there is no law against killing a buzzard. It has also been claimed by eminent medical and veterinary doctors that the buzzard is one of the most common carriers of contagious disease germs, especially among live stock. The feet of several buzzards have been submitted to microscopic tests and found to be laden with the germs of charbon and other dangerous germs. What the result of these investigations into the habits and characteristics of this long-time favored bird will be, we cannot say, but it seems about time for the feathered scavenger to fly on.

PUT SOMETHING INTO THE WORLD.

Most men are trying to get as much out of the world as they can without a single thought of putting anything into it. They look upon the world as a vast reservoir of resources into the midst of which we all have been set down that each might get all he can.

We shall never measure up to a high ideal of life unless we shall strive earnestly to put as much into the world as we get out of it. We must learn to look upon this world, our dwelling-place, as a great opportunity to invest whatever of talent and strength we may possess where it will yield the largest returns, not for us alone, but also for mankind.

This is a law of nature. Trees draw nourishment from the earth, and in turn shed their leaves every year to enrich the soil, and yield their fruits to support and strengthen the life of man. Birds are not content to find a home in the trees of the forest and make no return for the favor; but they fill the air with music and the hearts of men with gladness.

The Creator made man to give as well as to receive. Those who try to get as much as possible out of the world without making any return live contrary to their own nature as well as to the laws of the kingdom of God. They can never rise to a high degree of happiness or blessedness. They are walking contrary to the order of the universe. What can we put into the world?

We can all put work into it. Man was made to work, and work is one great need of the world. It is a waste wilderness without man's labor. Every man who puts into the world whatever work he is able to do, is helping to enrich the world and to make it what the Creator intended it to be.

We can put thought into it. Great thinkers have helped to make a better world by their great thoughts. Out of the thoughts of one man came the steam engine. The thinking of another produced the telegraph. One man thought out the telephone, another the printing press, another contributed something to enlarge the freedom of men who live on this planet by his intelligent and careful thinking. We sometimes hear it said that all the wealth of the world is the product of manual labor. Surely this is a great mistake. More than half the wealth of the world has been produced by the brain energies of thinkers.

We may put light into the world. Every inventor, every discoverer, everyone who makes original research in science, helps to dispel the darkness that for so long enveloped the human mind. What floods of light Morse and Columbus poured upon the world. Every intelligent and thoughtful person may do something to drive away the darkness and fill the world with light. Our Lord said, "I am the light of the world." What radiance he brought. He said to his disciples, "Ye are the light of the world." Every true disciple of Jesus is a light-bearer.

Some can put music into the world. This has been a richer world since Handel lived. It has been a brighter world since Homer sang. If there is music in your soul, pour it out upon the ears of mortals. It will help to make the world a better dwelling-place for your fellowmen.

We can put character into the world. One person cannot change the characters of all men and make them what they should be. But every man can, by the grace of God, make one man good, one noble, pure, grand character and life. This one will create an atmosphere which will affect the lives of multitudes for good. Who can estimate the value of one good life?

Put your life into the world. What are you doing with your life? How are you investing it? Are you devoting it to pleasure-seeking or money-making. You are here, living here, not so much to get a living out of the world as to put a life, a strong life, into it. Think of the men who have built their lives into the world, into its schools, its churches, its hospitals, its cities, its governments, its laws, its literature. They are living still. Their bodies have gone to dust, but their lives are a permanent investment.

Paul put his valuable life into the world. He did not get much out of it in the way of financial or material benefit. He sacrificed everything, and put himself into the world, which was by no means worthy of him. In this he followed his Lord. Jesus put his life into the world, and what a life it was. He did not seek temporal and worldly gain. He came not to be ministered to but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many.

The noblest thing in man is love. What would life be without love? Nothing enriches life as love does. Everyone can put love into the world. He may not have much to give at the start; but let him give what he has and it will increase more and more. He begins with a feeble spark of love, but freely giving it to those who are near him and those who are far away, to his kindred and to his enemies, to those who are worthy and those who are unworthy, as Jesus did, it will become a glowing flame and he will be a burning and a shining light. He will cease to be a smoking flax, filling the room with stifling odors and blinding clouds, and become a torch which lighteth everyone that cometh into the house.—New York Christian Advocate.

The Home Circle

"MEBBE 'TAINT SO."

"Mebbe 'taint so," reads a striking placard that greets the eye and brings the smile as one enters a certain printing office where they believe in looking on the bright side of things. The comfort-compelling phrase originated in a story told of a grouchy old Scotchman who, by his unfailing ill forebodings and gloomy observations about things in general, and the work of the office in particular, got "on the nerves" of his fellow laborers. Desperation brings inspiration. They thought of a plan to cure him. Every time he came around with his pessimistic prophecies and "Gloomy Gus" comments on things they said never a word, but solemnly presented him with one of these placards which they always managed to have at hand. They were effective and his cure was complete. When things are looking blackest, when we are in a state of nervous apprehension bordering on panic, and things appear to our blurred vision to be on the very verge of disaster, it might be worth our while to recall the inelegant but optimistic little phrase, "Mebbe 'taint so."—Southern Churchman.

A FAITHFUL LISTENER.

A pastor in Central Pennsylvania owned a large, handsome dog, named Watch. On Sabbath mornings, he regularly followed his master to the village church, taking his station under an oak tree close to the main entrance, and remaining in respectful silence till the close of the service.

One very inclement day, after the congregation had assembled, the sexton noticed Watch in his usual place, shivering under the cold rain. He kindly brought the dog inside to a sort of alcove near the door, where he was partly concealed by several umbrella stands.

During the sermon, Watch gazed steadily at the minister's face, listening intently to the words he could not comprehend until at last one was uttered which had a meaning for him.

The pastor had been inculcating the duty of watchfulness, and in his closing sentence, with outstretched hands and resonant voice, he exclaimed: "For the sake of the Church, for the sake of your families, for your own sake, watch! watch!! watch!!!"

The word was scarcely uttered, when the congregation was startled by clamorous barking, and the huge dog bounded along the aisle, and leaped up the pulpit steps to his master's feet.

Faithful creature; he understood only one word of the sermon; but upon that word he acted instantly with all his heart, mind and strength—J. W. W. in The Presbyterian.

I'M PRETTY LITTLE, BUT I'LL TRY.

Here is a story which the press dispatches carried last winter, and it is worth while for every boy and girl to read it, and to apply the remark of little Eileen Martin to the plain work of a plain, every-day life.

Eileen Martin is the daughter of a section foreman on a great railroad line. She lives in Alta, California, and near her home the Overland Limited flashes past on its journey between the east and the west. Eileen is seven years old, and, though she is a girl, she loves to watch the railroad trains go by as well as any boy does.

One day she had gone to the track to watch the Overland Limited whirl past, and, while waiting, her quick eye noted a broken rail.

She is only seven years old, but she knew that when the swift-flying train struck that rail destruction and death would sweep down upon it.

She also knew the semaphore signals. She knew that when the long arm on the high pole dropped, pointing downward, that a train had entered a given space called a block.

When Eileen saw the broken rail she at once ran to the telephone and called the station agent nearest her, and told of the disaster awaiting the train. In an instant's glance at the clock he saw that he could not reach it in time to save it.

"Can't you flag it?" he shouted to the little girl standing on a stool and listening at the other end of his line.

"I'm pretty little, but I'll try," answered Eileen. Then, calling an elder sister, they ran together down the track. The long arm of the semaphore had dropped. The time was short, and death was near. Yet on they ran, waving their aprons, desperately trying to stop the train.

And they did stop it. The engineer saw them and, with instant and quick action, brought the long, heavy train to a standstill.—The Christian Guardian.

BE AN "IS-ER"

A certain shopkeeper is reported to have placed this sign over his door where it might be read by all passers-by: "We are not a 'Has-Been,' or a 'Once-Was,' or a 'Going-to-Be,' but we are an 'Is-er.'"

Many people stopped, read and puzzled over that strange sign, but it was just another way of expressing a phrase often used in business, such as "We are up-to-date in our line." This tradesman meant to say that he was not attempting to do business on past reputation or future promises, but that he was "right there with the goods all the time;" that he made it his business to keep the best of what his customers wanted. In other words he was "on the job."

Are you an "Is-er?" Are you in the habit of doing the duty in hand at the proper time and in such way as to meet with the approval of your own conscience or of others who may be concerned in your affairs?

Then, too, what about those church and Sunday school duties? Are you an "Is-er" there, too? Are you on time in your place every Sunday, or at such time as your Christian obligations call you? Can you always be depended upon when others are failing? The world and the Church alike need a great company of "Is-ers"—and besides it is the "Is-er" who succeeds when the "Has-Beens" and the "Going-to-Bes" are making miserable failures all around us. Be an "Is-er."—Onward.

ABOUT PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

Rev. C. M. Chapman, the new President of the Port Gibson Female College, has devoted himself fully throughout the summer to the interests of the institution, both by preparations and arrangements within the buildings and by mingling with former patrons and future ones in their homes here and there throughout the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. His library and household goods reached Port Gibson in May; but so pressing were the other demands upon his time that these were not opened and installed until during the last few days. However, everything was in orderly condition and in readiness for the arrival of Mrs. Chapman on Aug. 20.

The seventy-third annual session of the school will open Sept. 11. The faculty will be composed of several of the choicest of the former teachers and some new ones chosen with much care. Judging from the number of old students who expect to return and from the number of new ones who have applied for rooms, there will be a full attendance. Twelve new students from a single town in South Mississippi have engaged rooms.

The college, by student duties assigned in dining hall, library, etc., has provided means by which, during the last half dozen sessions, a total of eight thousand dollars in expenses has been saved to students. President Chapman's policy is to continue this feature.

The sermon on Sunday after the opening will be preached by Rev. E. C. Gunn, and the Faculty Recital will be given the second Friday night of the session.

FINDING FAULT WITH THE CHURCH.

It is quite the fashion with some people nowadays to find fault with the Church; they have a penchant for harping on its alleged defects, and telling what it must do if it is to continue to be a vital and effective force in the world. It has sometimes seemed to us that a disposition to arraign the Churches has been rather too manifest upon the part of those engaged in the Men and Religion Forward Movement. The Christian Church has been the mightiest moral and spiritual force in the world for nineteen hundred years, and we dare say it will so remain long after the little spurts of so-called progressiveness, which spring up now and then, shall have been forgotten. Of course, the Church needs to be alert, and it is to be expected that new methods to meet new conditions will be developed under the leadings of Providence; but nothing is to be gained by a depreciation of the great organization which was divinely founded, and which is God's appointed agency for accomplishing the redemption of the race. This much is certain: if the world is ever redeemed, the Church of Jesus Christ will have to do it.

In a recent article in the Midland Methodist, entitled, "Why Men Don't Go to Church," Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Memphis and one of the most successful ministers in the South, discusses vigorously this inclination to misrepresent the existing conditions in our churches. He says:

"Of all the tommyrot that ever taxed the patience of the reading public, the above question is the limit. Some writer who likes to pose as a great critic takes his pen in hand and proceeds to hand us a profound magazine article on this question. Some religious people get scared, a great reformer comes along, reads a lot of statistics to us, our hair stands on end, and we can scarcely breathe. I wonder how many of these wisecracks ever go to church and try to help solve its problems? It requires neither brains nor character to criticize the Church. I challenge the proposition on general grounds. I believe there are more men going to church now than ever before. I know a great church where the men largely predominate at the evening service and are about as numerous as the women at the morning service. Why should some of our church papers and leaders accept the bald statements of these sensational writers, take up the cudgel, and beat us over the head? Most of these writers never lifted their hand to help the Church. I would also remind our friends that there is nothing more misleading than a lot of statistics when misused. They can be made to mean almost anything. Is it not about time for us to take a sane view of the situation? There are multitudes of non-church-going people in our towns and cities, but we can never hope to reach them by reading a lot of statistics to them. If our friends want to do a real service, they might discuss the question, 'Why all men should go to church.'"

"EDITORIAL BOTHERATIONS."

Few people have any idea of the exacting labor that is required to get out a single issue of a paper. They seem to think that all that is necessary is to place in the hands of the printer the copy that comes in, to use the scissors a bit in clipping a few articles, write a few brief editorials, and that the task is accomplished. If those who hold this view could be about a newspaper office a little, they would open their eyes in astonishment. The truth is, every article that is used has to be gone carefully over by the editor, and everything must be put in perfect order before he passes it to the typewriter. Every word must be legible, abbreviations spelled out or plainly indicated, the capitals and punctuation precisely correct, and even the style of printing to be used made apparent. The men who set up type correct nothing; it isn't their business to do so. They are taught to follow copy with the utmost exactness. It is this revisional work that consumes an editor's time and which taxes him most. Scarcely one article in fifty comes in such form that he does not in some way have to use his pencil upon it. The following are some of his "botherations" as set forth by one of our contemporaries:

- "Rolled manuscript.
- "Anonymous matter.
- "Puff without substance.
- "Paper written on both sides.
- "July happenings received in September.
- "Indelible pencil writing—an abomination.
- "Capitals strewn throughout the article with the eyes shut.
- "Manuscript which has not been read over by the writer.
- "Single-spaced typewritten copy—special abomination.
- "Pencil copy when the pencil has worn down to the quick.
- "Clippings from newspapers, to 'make out of it what you can.'
- "Spelling which has an unholy contempt for the dictionary.
- "Obituaries just as they were read at funerals and four times too long.
- "Copy in which the last half of the word is nothing but a wavy line.
- "Articles which will be just as good in a year which must appear next issue."
- "Articles so long that Robinson Crusoe would not have had time to read them.
- "Poetry devoid of meter, rhyme, and rhythm—especially if the writer claims to have been inspired.
- "A hand so large that the loop of the 'h' runs up two lines and the loop of the 'g' down two lines, making the page look like a bedspring."

HASTY PLEDGES UNWISE.

We notice that literature is being sent out from Nashville, Tenn., by some of those who favor granting all the rights of the laity to the women of the Church, with a view to committing the preachers in advance to the proposition to have each Annual Conference appoint a committee to investigate the question for a year and submit a report to the next session of the Conference. We sincerely hope that our pastors will not hastily pledge themselves to support this movement. The wiser thing to do is to refrain from committing ourselves until the Conferences are in session, so that when the matter comes up for discussion we may be free to take such action as we may then deem best. It is never a good policy for one to tie one's hands before it is fully known what is involved in a pending issue.

For our part, we are inclined to think that if an educational work is to be done in behalf of woman's rights in the Church it ought to be done openly, through the press and by means of such other agencies as may be thought expedient. Those who seek to have committees of inquiry appointed generally manage to see who goes upon them, and as a rule they do what they are constituted to do. Any report that such a committee would make would necessarily be biased and incomprehensive. Let the advocates of woman's rights turn the light on in such way that all our preachers and laymen will be instructed. To show the question up by referring it to a committee which is to make no report until the fall of 1912, and then place it brought forward for consideration by a body of men who had given the matter little or no attention, is a course which we do not think is calculated to make for the best results. We are writing this just as the terms of the Advocate are about to be closed, and cannot say more on the subject at present. We may, however, discuss it more fully in our next issue.

REV. C. A. BATTLE.

This gifted young minister, who fills our Advocate pulpit for August, is a Georgian by birth, and comes of a family which on both sides has been allied with the Methodist Church for generations. He attended the Young Harris College, of Georgia, where he took the B. A. degree, and later pursued his academic studies further at the University of Chicago and Vanderbilt. At the latter institution he received the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. He joined the Louisiana Conference four years ago, and since his entrance into the itinerancy has been assigned to three charges: Jennings, Lafayette, and Feliciana Street, New Orleans, where he is at present serving with great acceptability. Well equipped educationally, an earnest student, and a forceful and impressive speaker, he gives promise of great usefulness in the years to come. It is a most suggestive message which he furnishes our readers this week, and we feel sure that it will be much appreciated by them.

THE DEATH OF REV. J. T. MURRAH.

In the death of Rev. J. T. Murrah, which was announced in the Advocate last week and of which a fuller account appears in this issue, the North Mississippi Conference has lost one of its leading members. He was a son of Rev. William Murrah, who was a minister of eminence and large usefulness, and a brother of Bishop W. B. Murrah. His education was obtained in the common schools and at Vanderbilt University, where he made a good record, especially distinguishing himself as a speaker. Brother Murrah did not enter the ministry immediately after leaving college, but was for several years engaged in secular pursuits. It was in 1892 that he expressed the conviction that he had been called to preach, and in the fall of that year he was admitted into the North Mississippi Conference on trial. His gifts at once attracted attention, and from the beginning to the end of his work in the itinerancy he enjoyed great popularity.

Genial, sunny-hearted, and obliging, he had almost a genius for making friends. It was his habit to get acquainted with everybody, and he had a way of attaching the people to him that was remarkable. In the pulpit he drew large audiences and his sermons were pleasing and impressive. Among the charges that he served were Tibbee, Durant, Clarksdale, Shaw, Sardis, and Aberdeen. For a number of years Brother Murrah was on the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, in the success of which he was much interested. We deeply deplore his death, and earnestly pray that the Heavenly Father may have the orphaned son and all the other sorrowing relatives in his gracious keeping. We trust that a fitting memoir of the deceased will be furnished us at an early date.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Lightning struck the McDonoghville Church last Sunday evening and damaged it to the extent of about $200. The loss was covered by insurance.

Rev. J. G. Snelling left New Orleans last Monday for the Bluff Creek (La.) Campground, where he is doing part of the preaching for the camp meeting that is now in progress there.

The Jackson Daily News states that Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of Millsaps College, preached at Raymond, Miss., last Sunday morning, and at Bolton in the evening.

Rev. L. A. Sims, who has been attending the summer term of Tulane University, left last week for Shreveport, where he will attend Centenary College during the coming session.

Rev. Thomas H. Mills reports "the greatest meeting in years" at Pleasant Hill, Miss. It was conducted by Evangelist L. W. Cain, of Baldwin, Miss., whose labors have been so wonderfully blessed this year.

Rev. J. W. Dawson, of Morton, Miss., remembered the Advocate this week with a handsome list of subscribers. He is doing a good work on the Morton charge and will doubtless be able to make a splendid report at Conference.

While assisting Rev. George P. White in a revival meeting two weeks ago, Dr. J. T. Sawyer fell from a wagon at Prairieville, La., and was somewhat bruised. His recovery, however, has been complete and he is now ready for another battle for souls.

A meeting at Gloster, Miss., conducted by the pastor, Rev. E. C. Gunn, who was assisted by Rev. Charles Lane of Georgia, closed last Sunday night. The press dispatches state that large congregations attended the services, and that a number were added to the Church.

Rev. John L. Sutton, who has been in Biloxi, Miss., for some time giving the boys of the Protestant Home for Orphan Boys an outing, will return the latter part of this week, and will occupy his pulpit, that of the Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, next Sunday.

The pastors of our Church in New Orleans are planning to begin the discussion of live subjects at their regular Monday morning meetings. The first theme suggested for discussion is, "What attitude should the New Orleans pastors take on the subject of worldly amusements?"

Dr. S. A. Steel, who is to tour Louisiana during the late fall on a lecturing tour under the supervision of Rev. R. H. Singleton, has been booked for twenty-five lectures. No church in the State could spend the price of securing a lecturer to a better advantage than in engaging Dr. Steel.

Rev. J. M. Alford, of Rayville, La., recently assisted Rev. E. B. Troy, the pastor, in a meeting at Girard. Four new members were added to the church roll and twelve family altars established. The work of the West Monroe charge, under the able ministry of Brother Troy, is growing rapidly.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, of Bienville, La., recently held a successful meeting at Clarence, where he assisted the pastor, Rev. J. H. Montgomery. Reports from Clarence state that Brother Woodward is a forceful preacher, and that his work as an evangelist was highly satisfactory.

Rev. T. J. Halfacre has conducted three revivals on the Kilnichael (Miss.) charge, in each of which he had able assistance and accomplished much good. He will give an account of these three meetings in our Tidings from the Field Department in the next issue of the Advocate.

We are indebted to Rev. J. C. Chambers, of Collins, Miss., for a nice list of subscribers sent in last week. It is needless to say that we appreciate this good service, so kindly rendered. It is Brother Chambers' habit to take care of all the interests of the Church in the field in which he labors.

Rev. W. J. Johnson, the popular pastor of our First Church at Beaumont, Texas, and his family are visiting relatives at Lexington and Acona, Miss. Accompanied by Mrs. Johnson, he recently went on a trip to New York and other Northern cities. He expects to return to his charge about September 1.

Rev. W. A. Terry, of Bolton, Miss., writes as follows: "I am finishing my fourth year on the Bolton charge with some encouragement. I have recently held my own meeting at Brownsville, where we had ten additions by profession of faith." Brother Terry began his meetings at Raymond last Sunday.

Mr. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., who is one of the first laymen of the North Mississippi Conference, went to Petoskey, Michigan, about the middle of August, and will be there for two or three weeks longer. On account of being subject to hay fever, Brother Streater finds it necessary to go North every year at this season.

Rev. J. W. Raper, of the Ruleville (Miss.) charge, began a revival campaign last week in which he has the assistance of Rev. J. H. Bell, of Black Hawk, who was engaged to be with him at both Ruleville and Drew. Brother Raper has been hindered in his work this year by illness, but is reported to be in good favor with his flock.

Rev. W. C. Carlisle, of Columbus, Miss., recently conducted a fine meeting at Arkabutla, Miss., where Rev. R. G. Carlisle is the preacher in charge. There were 18 additions to the Methodist Church and 7 united with the Baptist Church. We have in hand an account of this meeting which will appear in the next issue of the Advocate.

We are grateful to Rev. W. B. Hogg, our pastor at Madison, Miss., for some subscriptions, forwarded some time since, and also for kindly words of appreciation. Brother Hogg is a Vanderbilt and a young minister of unusual effectiveness. Since his return to the Mississippi Conference, we have heard none name him but to praise him.

The Culpepper tent meeting is still in progress at Jackson, Miss. Large audiences have been attending and considerable interest has been manifested. We cannot at this time state definitely what have been the visible results. We hope to have an account of the services from some one who has participated in them for the next issue of the Advocate.

Rev. Thomas J. Martin, of Ringgold, La., has been in the midst of a revival season on his charge. He has added a number of members to the Church, advanced the interests of the Advocate, and in general has promoted the work of the Church in every department. He will tell of his meetings through the columns next week.

The Ruston District Epworth League Conference was held at Homer, La., Wednesday night and Thursday of last week. Among those taking an active part in the exercises were Rev. H. W. Jamieson, Rev. A. Inman Townsley, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle, and Mrs. V. C. Pipes. The welcome address was delivered by Mr. E. W. Gill, president of the Homer League.

Rev. N. G. Augustus, presiding elder of the Durant District, has been spending a few days at the old family homestead near Macon, Miss. It was there that he was born, and he is much attached to the place. While recently visiting in Mississippi, it was our pleasure to hear Brother Augustus deliver two sermons on a quarterly Conference occasion. They were of a superior order, thoughtful, suggestive, and calculated to do much good.

Saturday, October 11, will be Work Day for the Louisiana Orphanage. Read what Brother Vaughan, the faithful superintendent, has to say on the subject on another page. Let our pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and League presidents announce the day and explain its meaning at their earliest opportunity. We trust that it will be generally observed throughout the State and bring substantial assistance to this most deserving institution.

Rev. J. H. Bell, who serves the Black Hawk (Miss.) charge, has recently had two good meetings on his work: one at Acona, and the other at Black Hawk. In the former he was ably assisted by Rev. S. B. Myers, of Louisville, Miss., who completely captivated the people; in the other the preaching was done by Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, who delivered a series of sermons that produced a profound impression. There were several accessions at each place.

In company with Dr. J. M. Henry, Dr. F. N. Parker called at the Advocate office last Monday. The Editor keenly regrets having missed seeing this gifted Louisianian who is making his influence so widely felt for good at Trinity College. Dr. Parker spent last Sunday in New Orleans, and preached at Carrollton Avenue Church in the morning and at First Church in the evening. It scarcely needs to be said that his discourses were of a high order, and that they were much appreciated.

Rev. J. C. Long, who is closing his third quadrennium on the Neshoba (Miss.) charge, has just closed a great meeting at Coy, where he was ably assisted by Rev. T. J. O'Neill, the presiding elder of the Newton District. The result of the meeting was forty-eight accessions to the Church, forty-six of which were by baptism. Such a meeting is worth more space in a church paper than a brief note, and Brother Long will be given plenty of space to tell of it in his own way next week.

Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss., in a note to the office, states that his mother has been ill a considerable part of this year, and that he has given quite a good deal of his time to her, and in consequence has not been able to keep up his usual activity in revival work, though he has held a number of very fine meetings. We are pleased to know, however, that Sister Bass is now much improved, and that Brother Bass hopes from now on to prosecute vigorously his "loved employ" of winning souls for the Master.

Elsewhere in this issue we publish a statement concerning the work at Grenada College from the pen of its accomplished president, Rev. J. R.

Countiss. We are pleased to know that this worthy institution has such a bright outlook for the next session. It deserves the patronage of the Methodists of North Mississippi, and we hope to hear that it is full to overflowing when its doors are opened in September. It is safe to say that no shoddy work will be done within its walls so long as it remains under the present management.

Rev. Isaac Peebles, one of the Conference evangelists of the Mississippi Conference, has been engaged recently in revival work on the Prentiss (Miss.) charge, where he assisted the pastor, Rev. M. L. White. During these meetings Brother Peebles preached some great doctrinal sermons and was heard by large and appreciative audiences. Possibly Methodist preachers too often ignore their duty to their congregations by failing to instruct them concerning our position on the controverted doctrines of Christianity.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, in spite of the hot weather, is keeping things astir at Arcadia, La. He has lately issued a neat folder announcing an interesting series of sermons on live topics for the month of August. He is conducting his evening services in the open air, and has "a fine band" to furnish the music. He will take his vacation in September, and will spend it with his father in Tennessee. He has engaged Rev. E. K. Means to be with him in a meeting which will begin on September 29. Referring to his little son, whose birth was announced in a late issue of the Advocate, Brother Townsley says: "He was baptized last Sunday by his father, and was given the honorable name of Hendrix Atkinson Townsley. 'Hendrix' is the family name of my mother, and 'Atkinson' is for our family physician, Dr. J. Atkinson, of Arcadia, who was a classmate of Bishop Doggett."

Miss Belle M. Roberts, one of the energetic contestants for the prize trips now being offered by the Advocate, in a letter to the office, says: "Please send me some sample copies of the paper, as I can work better when I have them to give out. You would be surprised to know how many Methodist people do not know what the Advocate is. They tell me that they never saw it before. So you see how much good we are doing in placing our Church paper in these homes." It was with the hope of introducing the Conference organ into many such families that we instituted our present Tour Contest. How can we hope to have loyal and enthusiastic Methodists in our charges when they know nothing of what the Church is accomplishing? "Inspiration waits on information." Let our pastors aid the young ladies who, in harmony with the present plan, are striving to secure subscribers to the Advocate. This is a work well worth their attention.

An announcement that Bishop Hoss was ill with a severe cold and that his physicians had advised him to cancel all his engagements and take a season of absolute rest, was sent out from Nashville last week. A note recently received from Dr. Theo. Copeland, of St. Louis, Mo., where the Bishop had been stopping for several days, reported him as steadily improving, with a prospect of being in his usual health at an early day. This is most gratifying news. None of our leaders spend their strength to promote the progress of the Kingdom more freely than Bishop Hoss, and he ought to guard himself against overwork. The Church needs his services too urgently for him to jeopardize his health by undertaking to do too much. There is no more important kind of conservation than that of taking care of our capable men. The press dispatches state that Bishop Hoss, accompanied by his son, Dr. Sessler Hoss, left St. Louis for Muskogee, Okla., on August 26.

MR. DWIGHT L. MOODY AND THE TRACTS.

It may not be generally known that Mr. Dwight L. Moody had a half million tracts distributed at the World's Fair in Chicago, and doubtless those vast throngs were greatly blessed by those gospel messages.

A little leaflet touched the heart of John Bunyan, to whom the world owes that matchless book, "The Pilgrim's Progress."

Doctor Marsham, a most zealous missionary to India, said that portions of Scripture and tracts have had something to do with the conversion of almost every individual who has come to Christ in India.

The Rev. Prebendary Webb Peplow was led to Christ through a tract, and he has been a blessing to great numbers.

Wesley, Whitefield, Mr. C. H. Spurgeon, Dr. Murray McChesney, and a host of others have all borne witness to the power of tracts.

The printed page is the only means of reaching the majority of the people in the world with the gospel. And all who will distribute tracts will constantly have many joyful surprises.—Arthur Meachen, in Western Christian Advocate.

MARY VANCE HEATON was born in Ripley, England, Nov. 2, 1844. At the age of 18 years she married with her parents in America, who took up their residence at Hingham, Penn. At the age of 23 she was married to Samuel Heaton, and moved with him to Illinois. Six years later they moved to Webster County, Nebraska, where she lived for 18 years. Her husband died in 1894, since which time she has lived with her son, Samuel Heaton, and came with him to Collingswood, La. In June of the present year, where she died August 15. The following day she was laid to rest in the Carter Graveyard. Sister Heaton was the mother of nine children, eight of whom preceded her in the grave. She leaves one son, Samuel Heaton, and one aged daughter, Mrs. Anna Farnham, of Hingham, Penn. To honor her last wishes with the Methodist Episcopal Church when 25 years of age, and all of her life was devoted to the Master's service. In sunshine and shadow she was faithful to her Master and her end was peace.

WILLIE PATTERSON BOONE, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Boone, of Greenville, S. C., was born Dec. 14, 1909, and died July 1, 1932. He was permitted to suffer long for God, with his hand of infinite mercy stayed the forces of a burning disease, and claimed his precious soul as it is sweet with him. It is hard for us to understand but somehow it must have been best for him to die. Father and mother are grieved at the loss of their loving, promising way boy and their friends and all who knew the child are shocked with a pang of grief because it is gone, but our little minds cannot quite fathom the veiled path of life and see the trouble and pain that must have come to him and he have died. God saw and knew that what has happened was best and we lay our heads in obedience to his will and say, "Thy will be done." God has not robbed us of our loving child, but has provided us a way through Jesus Christ, by which we may join him with the angels, the sainted loved ones gone before, and join Christ in a better world beyond. JORDAN MOORE REANLAND was born near Fayetteville, Lincoln County, Tenn. In the year 1859 died in Knoxville, Tenn. from injuries received April 25, 1892 in a railroad accident. In the passing away of this good man the community was shocked, the end came so suddenly. The writer of this has known Jordan the greater part of his life; we were boys together and he was one of the

There is a father whose name is dearer than bread to our home and took from his two sisters an only brother and from his family an only parent for his wife had breaded him many years in that other world. W. H. CHAMBERS the subject of this sketch was born in Park District, Ill. June 1, 1855 and departed this life in Lake County, Miss. July 20, 1912. He had long been a faithful member of the Baptist Church, and left a fair name and the record of an honest life. The confidence and high esteem of his children is assured, and all who knew him speak of him only in terms of highest respect. He was a successful farmer and is such he climbed the hill of life's difficulties leaving footprints along the way well worth following. Death came to him in a dreamless sleep after an illness of over two weeks. Let our hearts be sad and yet radically cured of the fear old hydra that we may through its columns inhurlen our hearts and mingle our tears with those of others who bring their sorrows to the Church in that way.

ALEX, son of A. F. and Marie Giza was born Dec. 17, 1902, and after a long and painful sickness died at the home of his parents at Summit, Miss. March 17, 1932. We share the sorrow of his parents that his life was so soon cut off and he was not permitted to enjoy the length of days in earth which fall to many of us. He was only entering into manhood. His lay before him. His ideals were unrealized, his hopes bright and it must have been hard to give them all up and enter another realm. Yet he had many things to rejoice over. He was an obedient, considerate, affectionate son, the pride of his parents and the friend of everybody. His smile was always bright and cheery and it was a pleasure to meet him. His outlook on life was cheerful and he was planning for an honest, useful career. It is with sad hearts that we realize that his plans have been broken up by his untimely death. When we consider, however, that God's hand is ruling his heart sympathizing and his mind directing, we say God is in heaven, all's well with the earth. It is true, Alex lives and moves no longer in our world, but he is in another and better world, no less truly alive and conscious than we. May we be true to the principles of truth and grow stronger and better as the days go by, that we may so fill our lives with love and service that we may see him in the day of the Lord.

Pleasant Hill, La.

Dear Brother Meek: If you will grant me just a little space in the dear old Advocate I would like to say a word about my work. We have had fairly good success since we returned to the work in March. We have held some of our meetings with fairly good success and I am planning for the others. I would like to report the Robeline meeting which we closed about a month ago. Brother R. H. Harper did the preaching. He is a fine preacher and good help. The meeting was a success in every way. It resulted in the gain of 27 members. Only just a few children, so the most of them were what we might call grown.—J. F. Waltman.

Auburn, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: Our protracted meeting closed at Adams to-day. All things considered, it was the best meeting possibly ever held at this church. The writer was, after much earnest solicitation, fortunate enough to get Rev. J. T. Leggett to do the preaching, which he did with great effect, accomplishing results for the Master. All who heard Brother Leggett said that he preached with greater power than he ever did in their hearing before. There was quite a number who joined the Church, and 38 others made repentance anew and have started out with renewed determinations to serve the Lord. Our people over here look upon Brother Leggett as being one of the greatest men on this continent. I believe that the good he did the Church at this place will be felt through the coming ages.—G. G. Yeager.

Waynesboro, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: I will take the privilege of sending you a short account of our meeting at Big Rock. It was the best meeting we've had in years. Brother Westbrook, our pastor, did the preaching himself, and everybody seemed glad to have him conduct the services. We believe he was the man the Lord would have with us. Our meeting continued several days with large audiences and attentive hearers. Brother Westbrook seemed to know how to reach the people. As a result of his work many souls were graciously saved and believers were made stronger. We are glad to have Brother Westbrook with us, for we know that through his earnest labor much good has been accomplished for the Master's cause. May he be spared many years to labor in his noble mission, and may God continually add his blessings to a work so nobly begun in the prayer of his people.—Aubrey R.

Brookville, Miss.

I have just returned from the Columbus Circuit, where I assisted Brother Worley, the pastor, in two of his meetings: at Flint Hill and Murrah's Chapel. We had a fine time at each place and tried to preach to large and attentive congregations of intelligent people. The house at Flint Hill would not accommodate the people. Brother Worley is a fine fellow. He is very popular with his people. He is a good pastor and a fine preacher. Many of his best people are already asking for his return for another year. Brother J. E. Thomas, our stirring presiding elder, is hard at work. I never had as helpful a presiding elder in my work as is Brother J. E. Thomas. He stands ready to help his preachers in any way he can in their work. He enjoys the highest esteem and appreciation of this pastor and his people. Our revival at Prairie will begin the second Sunday in September. The preaching will be done by James A. Hassell, of the Memphis Conference.—J. H. Bass.

McNeill and Nicholson, Miss.

The places named above are within the bounds of the Carriere and McNeill charge. On August 2, with Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Raymond, Miss., to help, we began a meeting at McNeill. The Lord added his blessings from the very first, and to the end the attendance and interest manifested were on the increase. The whole community was stirred and the people say it was the best attended meeting ever held there, and that great good was accomplished. On August 9, with Brother Campbell to assist, we began at Nicholson. Manifestations there were more pronounced than at McNeill and the expressions of appreciation from all classes of people indicate a permanent work of grace done. The cause of God was greatly advanced on this charge because of these two meetings. Brother Campbell preaches with a force and style that command attention from the very first, and from all classes. Children, young people and old folks listen with rapt attention to every message he gives. He has a talent for imparting the Word which none surpass and few equal. The people hear him gladly.—H. P. Lewis, Jr., P. C.

Gores Springs, Miss.

We have just closed a series of meetings here in Gores Springs which lasted one week. Gores church is thirteen miles east of Grenada, on the Mars Hill Circuit. Our efficient pastor, Brother W. V. Shearer, was assisted in the services by Brother Pope, of Itta Bena, Miss. Brother J. Earnhardt, of North Carolina, also rendered valuable assistance. Brother Pope did the preaching in his profound, eloquent, yet simple way, which stirred the hearts and deepened the spirituality of the membership of the church. Brother Pope presents the Gospel in such an attractive, yet forceful, way that he holds the attention of his hearers; brings conviction to the unconcerned, and comfort to the penitent. No preacher ever came to Gores Springs on a mission of this kind that came nearer winning the hearts of all his hearers than did this man of God. The people heard him gladly, and the crowds were the largest that had been seen at a religious gathering for years. Backsliders were reclaimed, sinners were converted, and there were several accessions to the Church. Brother Earnhardt, or Uncle Jessie, as he is familiarly and lovingly called, is fine help in a meeting; the people were highly pleased with him and his messages. He is a man that lives close to God. It has never been my pleasure to be thrown with a more genial, sunny and hopeful pastor than Brother Shearer. He is a good pastor, a fine preacher, and is deservedly popular with his people. A choir, consisting of about twenty voices, was quite attractive and helpful to the services. The meeting was generally conceded to be a glorious success.—Mrs. B. C. James.

They are Off! The Race is On!

In a race there is some point to be gained by the position taken at the beginning, but the position at the close is of vastly more importance. When we first announced our contest, and agreed to give away a grand trip to the World's Sunday School Convention, which will be held in Zurich, Switzerland, next year, a few made instant announcement that they would enter the race, and began as if they would lead everything. Others waited some time before entering, and are now ahead of some of the ones who began so enthusiastically. The money season has just now begun. Candidates far behind now may dash to the front as the result of a successful week's work, and pass every candidate. Changes are bound to be rapid; excitement will surely run high; interest is going to be acute. LET EVERY ONE BE PRIMED FOR THE RACE.

Miss Candidate, stop right now and look around you! Are you the only woman in your district that is in the race? Sit right down and write to your presiding elder and tell him that you are in the field to help him put the Advocate in every home in the district. Tell the preachers the same thing. Write to a pastor, tell him you will visit his charge on a certain day and ask him to announce it the Sunday preceding, and make preparations for you. There is not a pastor but who will do that much for you if you ask him. Then go! Go and present the claims of the Advocate and your own claims. Tell the Methodists that you are selling a paper that is interesting, religious, instructive and valuable—a paper that is worth $2 a year—for $1.50. Then tell them that the Convention in Zurich is the greatest religious event of 1913, and that you want to go. Tell them that, and then just look as if you expected a subscription and the effect will be hypnotic. Let every candidate go right to work with her whole heart, and this contest will be one of the liveliest races ever known in religious journalism.

The following are the six leaders, together with a full list of the candidates:

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Homer Sunday school has doubled its membership since Conference.

The Young People's Bible Class of Oil City, numbering twenty-six members, has bought a piano for the Sunday school.

The Zwolle Methodists are planning to build either an elementary room, to cost $1,200, or a brick church, to cost $5,000.

A Young People's Bible Class has been organized at Mer Rouge, with Rev. A. F. Vaughan, teacher, and Miss Powell, president. There are fifteen members.

Rev. J. O. Bennett, the pastor, is working on the plan for a new church at Eunice, a growing railroad center. The already splendid Sunday school there demands more adequate quarters.

Miss Alice Morse, feeling the need of reaching the men of the Felicity Street Church, secured the names of the fathers of the Sunday school children of that church and began, some months ago, a canvass for members of a Business Men's Bible Class, which now has over ten members and is doing good work. She invites special workers to teach the class from Sunday to Sunday, and thus has variety in the lesson study programs.

At our recent preachers' institute at Biloxi, we frequently noticed auditors who appeared to be sleepy while listening to well prepared lectures by specialists, and could but contrast the lecture with the "quiz" method of teaching. When a good teacher is teaching and students are answering questions and entering into discussions, they don't go to sleep, but when the teacher follows the method of "talking so much" himself that "the upper jaw does not move," the results are often otherwise.

For the past three years the Seashore Camp Ground Sunday school, together with the League Assembly, has supported a Bible woman in Korea at a cost of $40 per year. Rev. F. G. Hocut, one of our superannuated preachers, superintends this Sunday school. The school is now paying for an organ for the Tabernacle. During the recent institute Brother Hocut and his esteemed wife treated the preachers from time to time to buttermilk and figs, made or grown at their own home by the seaside.

Our teachers would do well to study the question of their personal influence over their pupils by noting how much like their parents are their pupils. Notice how nearly boys and girls are duplicates of their fathers and mothers in ideals, manners, speech and habits. If the parents are peculiar their children will possess the same peculiarities, unless the teachers' or associates' influence counteracts them. Thus the obligation of the teacher to be chaste and gentle in manner and beautiful in appearance is no trifle. Our pupils will live over our lives after they have forgotten our words.

The last general Conference created a department of ministerial supply to devise ways and means for enlisting more preachers for our Church, there being needed about one thousand more than we have at this time. Heretofore we have boasted that in this we were not like other Churches, for they have had a dearth of preachers for many years, especially the Presbyterians and the Episcopalians. But we now find ourselves getting into the same strait, and see the need of praying the Lord of the harvest to raise up reapers. These preachers, like our laymen and missionaries, must come from our Sunday schools, and our teachers, who know and speak to their pupils heart to heart, are the ones to impart the missionary spirit and enlist these needed servants. Let our Sunday schools, and all of our classes, realize that they must furnish their quota of our preachers and missionaries. Thus will a new interest be created in the broader extension of the Kingdom.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"The hope of the world is not in inheritance, not in government, not in education, it is in God," says Dr. Lyman Abbott in his great sermon on "The Secret of Character."

Four things a man must learn to do. If he would make his record true: To think, without confusion, clearly; To love his fellow men sincerely; To act from honest motives purely; To trust in God and heaven securely. —Henry Van Dyke.

At a recent men's banquet the price of admission was not one dollar or five, but a boy. A tremendous success was the result. The men hunted each a boy, and in the chase found in his own heart a great and abiding interest for that one boy, and then for all others. Why should not our men's classes try this plan?

Have regular social meetings in your class. One of the men from a large class in a progressive town made this statement, "After attending a couple of class socials I felt a kind of obligation to attend a Sunday meeting or two of the class, even if it were just to oblige the man who invited me to the social." That man is now one of the most active members of his class.

In the late Russo-Japanese war, it is a matter of true record that mothers whose sons could not come to the military standard and were not accepted as soldiers, feeling disgraced, killed themselves. If our Christian mothers and fathers could only be brought to feel as keenly in regard to the moral standard of their sons, a splendid co-operation would be given the Sunday schools of America.

It is a modern truth, and a well-established one, that the life and growth of the country church demands better farming and better roads. If the country church is to live, it must be effective. Utility is its test, and not good sayings. The Sunday school must lead in the remaking of the rural community by giving skilled, sympathetic and comprehensive teaching of God's Word, and of local conditions by furnishing character-forming recreation.

Mrs. W. W. Scales, teacher of the Cadet Class, Starkville, Miss., certainly makes a great effort to attend Sunday school on time. Several of her pupils had dropped out or been late, so their teacher suggested that they be consolidated with another small Adult Class. The Cadets said, "No, if you'll teach us, we will rise at four o'clock and get our work done at the A. & M. College and get in to Sunday school on time." The class is having a full attendance and they were entertained at dinner by their teacher last week, and she is preparing other good things for them. Adult classes do not wilt in summer, but help keep the entire school flourishing.

"Number members present, 235; visits made to sick and strangers, 195; Bibles brought to class, 61; flowers sent to 29 sick people; new members enrolled, 10, 9 in the Home Department; given to Southside parsonages, $8; amount given to missionary cause, $18; to colored Sunday school, $2; collections, $28.40; total, $56.40." The above is a report of the enterprising Matron's Class at First Church, Corinth, Miss., for the

Conference Press Superintendents:

Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.
Mississippi Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, Miss.
North Mississippi Mrs. A. C. Yeager, Water Valley, Miss.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

It has taken us several weeks to get in "running order," but now that we have communicated with our Press Superintendents, and our women know that we have this department, we feel sure that we can promise interesting and helpful news through this medium. We ask the hearty cooperation of all our women. Let us not appeal in vain.

The Minutes of the Council meeting have been published and are in the hands of the auxiliaries. Let us study carefully the President's Address, also Committee Recommendations, for in both we shall find food for thought. The minutes of the Louisiana Conference meeting will soon be ready for distribution. It is hoped that they will be in the hands of the auxiliaries for the September meetings. Consider it a privilege to obtain a copy of either one of these "Records," study them diligently, and learn what our women are doing.

The North Mississippi Conference has a very progressive press superintendent. A monthly bulletin is issued by her, containing a resume of the work done in her Conference; also interesting items of news gleaned from our Bulletin, published by the Council. This is an example worthy of imitation.

Mrs. Crow Girard, Corresponding Secretary of the Louisiana Conference Society (Home Department) reports two new societies organized during the past ten days. One is at Angle, in the Baton Rouge District, with 14 members; the other is at Gueydan, in the Lafayette District. This kind of news is always encouraging and shows us that our work is steadily growing.

Notice.

In a letter received from the Superintendent of Literature of the North Mississippi Conference, she states that to prevent confusion she would like it known that her official address is Mrs. J. F. Evans, Tupelo, Miss., care of Mr. J. C. Windham. Tupelo will be her home after August. She has been variously addressed, and does this for uniformity, so that her mail will be correctly directed.

MRS. G. C. JONES,
Treas. Foreign Dept.

Union in Water Valley, Miss.

At the recent meeting of the two Department Societies in First Church, Water Valley, union was beautifully and harmoniously effected. Mrs. W. H. Hartwell was unanimously chosen President.

At once the third Vice President "got busy," made inquiry as to the number of tithers present, and found 14. She then organized a Home Department Study Circle with 13 members, to which some names have since been added. She means business.

Foreign Department.

The Industrial School at Soochow, China, furnishes a living to nearly two hundred women. More than double that number are craving an entrance to the school, but lack of space forbids. These women are poverty-stricken, and our school is their avenue of escape from starvation. Is it any wonder they are so clamorous for entrance?

Woman's work in West Soochow continues to grow steadily. A good attendance and attentive listening characterize the meetings. Miss Tarrant says, "There is no greater privilege in this world than to be allowed to live and work in China to-day."

Home Department.

The North Carolina Conference Society, at a recent executive meeting of the Home Department, appropriated $1400 from its half of dues for the new buildings at Brevard, N. C. The North Georgia Conference Society contributed $500 from its half of dues for a new chapel and class room at the same place. It seems that the Conference societies are going to make possible the erection of these much needed buildings at Brevard. The need is urgent, and to do efficient work they should have the buildings this year.

ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

The superior quality and durability of the piano which is now being offered to members of the Advocate Piano Club is shown by the following letter from one of the earliest purchasers of the Ludden & Bates Piano, away back in 1883. Mr. H. V. Coarsey, of Braddentown, Fla., writing under date of February 1, 1910, says: "I am the owner of Ludden & Bates piano No. 11, in rosewood case, and I take pleasure in mentioning that it has a good clear tone and a smooth, even touch, notwithstanding it was bought of you twenty-six or twenty-seven years ago, during which time, it has had constant service, considered by some an extraordinary amount of hard usage. This instrument has served two generations in our immediate family in a most satisfactory way and we have no idea of parting with it for any other piano."

MANDEVILLE, LA.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate: We have had the Houston (Texas) District Evangelist, Rev. E. L. Whiddon, with us for the past two weeks. He brought a large tent with him and had it pitched in a convenient place on the lake front. He has been preaching three times a day, and the meetings have been very well attended. The audiences at night have been particularly large and attentive, and we believe that there has been more interest and more spirituality displayed than at any meeting that has been held here for many years. There have been fourteen additions to the Churches of different denominations. About one-fourth of the congregation were Catholics who gave excellent attention. Brother Whiddon has been in the pastorate for seven years, and in the evangelistic work but a short time, and he seems particularly fitted for his present work. He has the gift of preaching entertaining sermons which draw and hold the crowds, and then in a masterly manner introduces his persuasive, logical and convincing arguments that result in the conviction and conversion of sinners. We confidently predict a great future in the evangelistic field for Brother Whiddon, if he can get the encouragement and co-operation of the Church.—R. B. Paine, Steward.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS

Adopted by the Montrose Epworth League.

Whereas, by one of the inscrutable mysteries from which we are not permitted to lift the veil, the life of our brother was brought to a sudden end. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That as it has pleased Almighty God in his wise providence to take by death Mr. Peyton Yarrell from our Epworth League, we, the committee, speaking for ourselves and our League, feel deeply grieved that we have lost one who for two years has faithfully attended our League services.

2. That his life of earnest piety, words of love, faithful friendship, and ready sympathy through the years he was permitted to serve with us, are to us a grateful and tender memory.

3. That we extend to his stricken mother and sister the assurance of our most sincere sympathy, and commend to them the faith which made beautiful and strong the character of our deceased brother.

4. That these resolutions be published in the Christian Advocate, spread on the minutes of the League, and a copy sent to Mrs. Yarrell.

Rev. G. H. Galloway, Miss Stella McLaurin, Miss Julia Kennedy, Committee.

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

Dear Dr. Meek: There appeared in the Advocate of July 25, an article, the heading of which was, "A Model Local Preacher's Report," sent to the Advocate by G. S. Harmon. I certainly appreciate Brother Harmon's kindness for referring to me as a model local preacher. But I did nothing more than was my duty.

Since the District Conference I have helped in my first protracted meeting. I helped Brother E. L. Alford of the Pachuta (Miss.) Circuit. I get all the work to do that I can do. I shall organize a church the third Sunday in September. I earnestly desire the prayers of every one.

SOME FIELD NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

Rev. T. J. Holladay, pastor at Oil City, has organized a Sunday school at Plum Point, near Oil City, with 26 members, and 10 more are expected. Many other communities with more than the disciplinary required number of "ten persons" are awaiting some seeker after lost men, to find them and enlist them in the study of the Bible and in doing the Lord's work.

The Epworth League of Lake Charles has right of way at the pleasure pier on the lake each Tuesday evening, and the management allows no interference with this group of happy Christian young people on this night of their weekly social. They bathe in summer and skate in winter, after which they lunch together and heed the standing rule of "leaving nothing on the table." Their socials contrast so favorably with other gatherings on the pier that they have made for themselves a good name, which is rather to be chosen than great riches. Mr. Seaman Mayo puts his motor boat at the disposal of the Leaguers, and the ride to the pier is part of the pleasant program.

Dr. F. N. Parker, of our Conference and teacher of the Bible in Trinity College, North Carolina, reports that his work there is taking hold of the student body most successfully, and he is rearranging the course for next year on a still more satisfactory basis. Each student is required to take one hour a week for the entire four years' course. The meaning of this in the lives of the more than four hundred students of that institution would be hard to estimate. It would seem that here is real "teacher training" for our Sunday schools. If the Church has a college—a Christian institution—the least thing to expect of it is to teach the Bible as a part of its curriculum, and thus give back to the Church some prepared teachers for its Sunday schools and leaders for its work. We wish that we might have been rich enough and progressive enough to have retained this splendid Bible teacher for one of our own Church schools. But we have others, and Centenary, we understand, has already inaugurated such a course under the guidance of Revs. S. J. Davies and H. T. Carley.

In reporting the condition of their people at their several churches, it is no unusual thing to hear pastors speak as though it would be about as well to abandon some points because the people seem to make no development in such Christian virtues as liberality and a progressive church life, the church remaining in statu quo for many years. Besides the question of possible unbrotherliness of criticism of those whom we are set to shepherd, and the fact that others will most likely gather some valuable church members should we abandon them, there is afforded a fine opportunity here to study the relative value of our several lines of work. Our gospel is tested by what it can do for the people who need it most, and Methodism's boast has been that she takes ignorant and sinful people and makes intelligent and pious Christians of them. Doubtless the monthly sermon by an educated pastor and an annual revival by one of the more-zeal-than-knowledge methods of saving a community has often failed when the Church is more to blame than the people. It takes food upon which to grow, and if the pastor is not prepared to teach, and there is no other teaching agency in the Church, by what law of reason can we expect our members to develop? The public school and the general educational movements of the day are aiding in elevating these weak churches, but our part is to have the very best Sunday schools possible, furnishing religious literature, inspiring some to go to college, and to co-operate with the common schools. Since we are commissioned both to teach and to preach, our mission is but barely begun when we get the disciples enrolled, knowledge and spirituality both being necessary to Christian perfection. The truth is, many of our best preachers have come from those communities where salvation was "free," and the church life of a very weak type. "My people perish for lack of knowledge." Try the divine plan of teaching more and exhorting less. When the Lord abandons these ignorant communities it will be time for us to do the same. Until then, let's change our methods and hold on.

THE NEXT PREACHER.

On Aug. 19, Mrs. Wier returned from her European trip, won as a prize from the Daily Picayune. During her absence the ladies of our Franklin Church began to prepare, in earnest, for the next preacher. They painted floors, put down new art squares, and did other things to freshen up our beautiful parsonage. The new preacher will find that he is wanted, because they prepared for him. He will get to eat the fruit of our orange and peach trees. I do not know who will eat the fruit of our Stewart pecan, that is now three years old. It grows slowly, but is enduring. I have done my best, my predecessors did the same; but the new preacher will find plenty to do. One of our members, Miss Belle Roberts, deserves to win the big trip to Switzerland offered by the Advocate. She has been on the road for sixty days and will be away thirty days more.

With best wishes for the Advocate and congratulations to the next preacher, I am, C. C. WIER.

WHOLE No. 2951.

Not a primrose path is that of duty. On the contrary, it is usually thorny, and he who treads it must expect to do so with pierced and bleeding feet. But it alone leads to peace of conscience, high character, true usefulness, and an eternity of joy. In other words, though rugged and often difficult, it is the only upward way.

The New York Independent thinks that many sermons and editorials would be much helped by "beheading and curtailing" them. Doubtless there is wisdom in this rather quaint suggestion. The world is now in too big a hurry to waste time upon a speaker or writer who is adjectival or circumlocutory. It wants one to move on and get through. This is the age of the direct man.

The Lutheran calls attention to the fact that no political party ventures to go before the people for support without publishing its platform, its creed. They consider such a statement of their faith as essential to a successful campaign. Yet there are persons who insist that the way for the Churches to make progress is to have no definite setting forth of the things that they teach. Such a contention is nothing short of silly. A denomination without strong convictions as to religious truth can never wield a large influence over men. A creedless Christianity would be stripped of its power.

The most powerful dynamo, properly equipped and charged, can turn no machinery and accomplish no results unless it has proper connections, unless it is hitched to something. So the minister of intellectual acquirements can do little unless he has points of contact with the people. The tendency of culture to place one in a state of aloofness from the majority of one's fellow-beings is one of its dangers and should be guarded against. It is a positive tragedy to see a man who has a liberal education and who ought to be a mighty force, delighting in his own accomplishments, but unable to exercise any considerable influence upon others. For this reason, we are inclined to think that a training wholly theoretical should not continue too long. The best education is that which, to some extent at least, combines practice with theory. This has been the strength of the Methodist system of keeping our young ministers at work while prosecuting their four years' course of study. Our theological schools, which we believe are becoming in this day an increasing necessity, would do well to note this point and provide a way of having their students, while attending them, render some actual service for the Master. It is our understanding that our General Board of Education has recently taken steps to co-operate with them in achieving this end, and for this it should be heartily commended. It is a matter of the utmost importance that in undertaking to make preachers we shall not unmake them.

OUR DEVELOPING SECTION AND CITY.

September 1 marked the ending of one commercial year and the beginning of another. Our secular papers have issued trade editions, reviewing the business transacted and the progress made within the past twelve months, and discussing the outlook for the future. Both in Mississippi and Louisiana more disasters than usual have come upon the people. The spring seasons were most unfavorable, and large areas in each commonwealth were inundated by the overflow of the Great Father of Waters. But during the summer months Providence was more kind, and at this time the crop prospect in most of the counties and parishes is highly encouraging. Orchards and gardens have been most bountiful in their yield of fruits and vegetables, and the indications point to a generous harvest of corn, cotton, rice, sugar cane, and many other products.

In fact, the South is prospering now as never at any past time in her history. The outside world is beginning to discover her undeveloped possibilities, and the tide of immigration is commencing to turn in her direction. Her cheap lands and choice climate are wooing not a few people of the North from their bleak and wintry homes, and the unceasing music of progress is now heard in every part of Dixie. Her industries are becoming more diversified, her farms are being improved and brought into a better state of cultivation, her towns and cities are forging forward, and everywhere the dawning of a larger day is manifest. Her churches, her schools, her libraries, her charitable and eleemosynary institutions, and all the other agencies that contribute to the upbuilding of a Christian civilization, are becoming stronger and more influential.

To be sure, our section has its serious hindrances, but none which can long retard its advance to a larger prosperity. The boll weevil menaces our cotton industry in which we have had world-wide supremacy, but in forcing a diversification of our products it may at last prove a blessing. Already the disastrous floods which inundated our fertile lands last spring give promise of bringing to our assistance in the maintenance of our levees and the draining of our swamps, in fuller measure, the strong arm of the Federal Government. The unworthiness and sinfulness of our people alone can wreck the inspiring future, of which we are beginning to catch faint glimpses.

Despite the calamities which have come upon her territory, New Orleans, the commercial metropolis of the Gulf States, has enjoyed a reasonable degree of prosperity during the trade year just passed. At no point has there been any retrogression of consequence, and in most particulars there has been a gratifying gain. Her enterprising merchants have had a fairly good trade, millions of dollars have been expended in the development and improvement of the city, new industries and enterprises have sprung up, and her commercial horizon is expanding in every direction. Her railroads alone are planning to spend approximately $20,000,000 in enlarging their facilities within her corporate limits, her new immigrant station, which will be by far the finest in the South, is under process of construction, and her new marble postoffice, which will cost about $2,000,000, is nearing completion. She has invested $750,000 in public school buildings within the past twelve months, and now has under way two others which will call for an additional expenditure of $400,000. Besides this, through the munificence of Mr. Isaac Delgado, she has within her reach a million dollars for the establishment of a trades school.

But her forward projects are too many to mention. The truth is, immediately surrounded by a section that is so marvelously developing, and with the door of opportunity opening so wide to her in Central and South America, the outlook for New Orleans is apparently bright beyond description. Indeed, she may yet fulfill the eloquent prophecy of Seargent S. Prentiss, made in a speech here in 1854, when the local New England Society was celebrating the anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims:

"And when a century hence, this Crescent City shall have filled her golden horns; when within her broad-armed port shall be gathered the products of the industry of a hundred millions of free men; when galleries of art and halls of learning shall have made classic this mart of trade; then may the sons of the Pilgrims, still wandering from the bleak hills of the North, stand upon the banks of the Great River, and exclaim with mingled pride and wonder, Lo! this is our country: when did the world ever witness so rich and magnificent a city—so great and glorious a Republic?"

THE TREND AGAINST CO-EDUCATION.

A few years ago co-education was the rage and it looked as if it would become well-nigh universal, but now a reaction has taken place and the trend is decidedly against it. Discussing this tendency in a recent issue, the Chicago Tribune says:

"Lake Forest College is to begin a system of gradual separation of the young men and the young women who now enjoy its educational advantages in mixed classes. It is the intention of the college trustees eventually to create separate organizations for men and women in each of the four college classes.

"Co-education is not so much in favor as it was a few years ago, and it seems destined to become less favored. Theoretically it is ideal; practically it causes too much flirting and distraction from studies. Most of the State universities cling to it, but even they, it seems probable, will swing into line with those who, while advocating plenty of social life of a wholesome sort, in which the two sexes may come together, believe education is best served by separate classes.

"The University of Chicago, after trying very liberally co-education, adopted a policy of separation. We are much inclined in our new-world life to experiment in all things, and some novelties prove desirable, but as we grow older we realize that certain customs, methods and ideas have value because they represent a testing and sifting process through many centuries of race experience."

LAITY RIGHTS AGAIN.

By Rev. F. J. Prettyman, D. D.

A communication from certain of the elect ladies of Nashville announces that there has begun a systematic propaganda of the "Laity Rights" movement, and the statement is made that the question will be brought before all of the Annual Conferences this year in the form of a petition for the formation of a committee to investigate the whole subject.

It is with profound conviction that great harm is about to be done to the Church by this movement that I desire to call public attention to it.

It can hardly be doubted that the present effort in the Church to force women out of their natural and Scriptural place is but an annex to the general political question of woman's suffrage. The recent history of this movement in this country and in England is of such a character as to lead every lover of the peace of the Church, and of the dignity of womanhood, to hope that our Zion may be saved from the scandal of it.

This demand is not made on the assertion that our women are being prevented from entering any field of actual Christian service that is adapted to their gifts or graces. Nor does the question of taxation without representation enter here, since all gifts to the Church are entirely free-will offerings. It is simply a matter of forcing women into the same official standing as men. This movement is in defiance of the laws of nature. No matter what sophistry may be set forth as a justification of the demand that there be no distinction between the sexes in the administration and government of the Church, the fact remains that the law of nature lays such restriction upon the females of our race in the discharge of their most important and holiest function of motherhood, that no fad of the twentieth century can possibly overrule it. The relative position of man and woman, which is age-long, can not be permanently set aside by any legislative action. So far as this is a church question, the demand of the modern woman can not be allowed without first convicting our Lord of unpardonable injustice in not calling Mary of Bethany or of Magdalen to the apostolic office, or of at least giving a woman a commission among the seventy. It may be of little importance that the new woman of the modern world differs in opinion from the apostle Paul, but it is rather serious to set up a doctrine at this late day in opposition to the fact of nature, the age-long precedent of human civilization and the practice of Jesus.

But apart from the merits of the case, it remains that the women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, do not desire any change in their traditional relation to the Church. In the circular letter which is going out under the signatures of a set of Nashville agitators, there is a gross misrepresentation of the attitude of the women on this question. The circular says: "At the recent session of the Council held in Washington, D. C., in April, it was agreed to discontinue the discussion in the 'Bulletin' because the women felt that a larger agitation of the subject was needful." As a matter of fact, this action was taken in the Woman's Council on a demand from the Memphis Conference that the practice of using the "Bulletin" as a medium of laity rights propaganda be discontinued. This petition was referred to a committee, was reported favorably, and adopted by a very large majority of the Council. Absolutely nothing was said on the floor of the Council about a "larger agitation," until the report of the committee was adopted. Then the president of the Council arose and said that if she had been on the floor she too would have voted for it because she believed that the time had come for the larger agitation. It was an adroit move on the part of the leader of the movement to break the tremendous force of this deliverance of the body to the effect that they were tired of agitation, and as a body would no longer be held responsible for it. It was freely talked among the delegates present that this same agitation had already created a division among the women of another Church, and as a result of it, an independent missionary movement had been started. It is a mistake to suppose that these splendid womanly women of our Church will sit idly by and see this erratic issue raised again without protest. It is true that these are not so noisy, nor so conspicuous in public as their more "advanced" sisters, but they who have from their divinely appointed sphere been the inspiration and strength of the Church will find a way to deliver their protest as they did last April at the Council at Washington.

It appears to me that it is with little grace that the leaders of this movement have planned to bring the question to the Annual Conference after the whole matter has been distinctly and emphatically discredited by the Woman's Council. The circular referred to states that "for the past two years the women of the Home Department of the Woman's Missionary Council have continued the educational propaganda for laity rights, etc." Since the action of the Council last April the Home Department has been compelled to cease its use of the Bulletin, (its official organ) for this purpose. It is well known that the Foreign Department has never been in sympathy with the movement. It seems to me that under these circumstances the question ought to have no standing in our Annual Conferences. The Annual Conference is a purely administrative body and except by way of petition has nothing to do with the law-making body of the Church. Nothing is to be accomplished by this appeal to the Annual Conferences except agitation. The General Conference has expressed itself on this subject by a vote of 144 to 70. The Woman's Council has demanded that it be excluded from the official bulletin of that body. The attitude of the Foreign Department of the Woman's Work is fairly set forth in the memorial from the Memphis Conference, which says: "Whereas, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, did not adopt the memorial to the General Conference asking for rights of the laity for women, etc." Since the action of the last General Conference the press of the Church has been almost entirely closed to the further discussion of the subject.

In view of these facts it seems to me to be but fair to demand that if the question is to be still kept alive, that it be first taken to the department where it had its origin, and let the appeal be made to the women of the Home Mission Department. Let us at least be sure first that our women want it.

In the Methodist Episcopal Church this agitation was carried on for years until at last it succeeded. In their last General Conference there were over eight hundred delegates, and out of that number only twenty-six were women, four of this number being negroes. With such a small and insignificant result, it hardly seems worth while to create a spirit of antagonism between the men and the women of the Church on this issue.

If the womanhood of the Church has ceased to produce a male offspring who are strong enough in body, and noble enough in character, to occupy the place they have held from the earliest history of the race until to-day, then it is time that we were demanding a better motherhood. For myself, I believe that there are yet great mothers and worthy sons.—From Baltimore Southern Methodist.

EXCLUSIVENESS.

By Rev. T. J. O'Neil.

Jesus Christ, the founder and head of the Church, thought and taught in universals; but some of his professed followers have so far abandoned their leader as to limit the kingdom of God to one particular denomination or sect, and deny all who do not happen to belong to this particular denomination or sect the right to citizenship in the kingdom, and all the rights and privileges of the kingdom.

Not a great while ago I read an article that purposed to prove that the Baptist Church is of divine appointment, is the only Church that is of divine appointment, and, therefore, is the only Church that has the right to administer the rites of baptism and the Lord's Supper, and that for members of this divinely appointed Church to commune with members of any other Church is for them to act the part of a hypocrite.

For authority to unchurch all who do not belong to the Baptist Church, and give to the Baptist Church the exclusive right to administer the sacraments, the author of the article referred to cites his readers to Matt. 29: 16-20, but studiously avoids quoting the said Scripture. When I read Matt. 29: 16-20 I may be prepared to agree that the Baptist Church is the only divinely appointed Church. The Gospel of Matthew, as it appears in my Bible, has only twenty-eight chapters.

One contention made in the article to which I refer is that the Sacraments of Baptism and the Lord's Supper were delivered to Baptists. The proof text cited is Matt. 3:1: "In those days came John the Baptist preaching in the wilderness of Judea," etc. "This proves," says our writer, "that the Baptist Church was instituted in Judea and was divinely appointed, and that John was the first preacher in the Church." Then he goes on further to say that from that time till now there has been an unbroken line of Baptist preachers, and to them is given the exclusive right to administer the sacraments.

The writer, by this contention that the Baptist Church was organized in the Wilderness of Judea, and that John was the first preacher in the Church, unwittingly places himself and all who hold with him in an embarrassing attitude, as will be seen by considering the following facts: John the Baptist belonged to the line of Old Testament prophets. His father, Zacharias, was himself a priest, of the course of Abia. His mother, Elizabeth, was of the daughters of Aaron (Luke, 1:5). He began his preaching, and did most of his work before Christ entered upon his priestly office; so if he founded a Church, it belonged to the Old Testament Dispensation, or Old Covenant, and was but a shadow of better things to come (Cf. Col. 2:17). Christ said of John: "Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist; notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he" (Matt. 11:11). This kingdom, according to Matthew 3:2 (and the writer above referred to concurs in this), is "at hand," that is, is set up here on earth. I belong to this kingdom, or new era. Therefore I am, according to Christ's own words, greater than John the Baptist. If greater than he, I must be greater than any in the Church he founded, unless his sons have outgrown him.

Again, John's baptism was annulled by the disciples at Ephesus (Cf. Acts 19: 1-5). So all who continue to practice John's baptism administer a rite that has served its day and generation, and has suffered annulment with divine approval.

Then again, if John organized the Baptist Church, and it was done by divine appointment, and has existed till now—almost nineteen hundred years, what has this divinely appointed Church been doing all these years that it is no larger than it is? According to the latest statistics, the Baptist Church, including Negroes, Indians, and all, numbers but approximately nine millions, while the Methodist Church, which is now but one hundred and seventy-three years old, numbers, according to Dr. W. H. Fitchett, who is good authority, thirty-five millions.

But did John the Baptist organize a Church? I contend he did not. He was a Jew; was born of Jewish parents (Luke 1:5, 13, 57); was circumcised at the age of eight days (Luke 1:59), and, as was the custom of the Jews, was named at the time of his circumcision (Luke 1:59-63). If he ever withdrew from the Jewish Church or was expelled from it, we have no record of it. If he founded the Baptist Church, why were the members of that Church not called Baptists by the New Testament writers, and why do we find no trace of the Baptist Church in history till the seventeenth century?

John's mission was not to found a Church. He tells us in John 1:31 that his mission was to introduce Christ to Israel.

Again, it is contended that baptism, as a gospel ordinance, was never heard of till John the Baptist administered it in the Wilderness of Judea. Surely he who can make such an assertion as that has read his Bible very carelessly. In First Corinthians 10:1, Paul tells us that "our fathers were baptized" at the Red Sea. That baptism was performed about fifteen hundred years before John the Baptist was born. God was the administrator, and the mode was pouring (Cf. Exodus 14:22 and Psalms 77:17). Soon after God baptized these people (there were six hundred thousand men besides children (Exodus 12:37), he summoned Moses, the leader of the people, into his presence, and gave him sundry commandments. Amongst other things, he commanded Moses to sprinkle the people (Cf. Exodus 24:8, Numbers 8:7, and 19:9-21, and Hebrews 9:13). Stephen said this Moses was in the Church in the wilderness and that he received the oracles or ordinances to give unto us. (Acts 7:38.) Paul, in referring to the people of this Church in the wilderness, whom God baptized, and of which Church Moses was a member, says: "They drank of that Spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ" (First Cor. 10:4). Is it possible that the ordinances of a Church in which Christ was the spiritual Rock, and Chief Cornerstone, were not gospel ordinances?

Again, it is contended that the disciples to whom Christ delivered the Lord's Supper were Baptists, and that, therefore, only Baptists have a right to it. If the disciples were Baptists it is strange they were never called by that name. But John is accredited with founding a Baptist Church in the wilderness of Judea, and the twelve apostles are claimed to have been members of that Church. I now turn to the records, and I find that Judas Iscariot was the only one of the twelve that was from Judea. He fell from grace, became a reprobate, hung himself, and went on to his place (Matt. 27:5). Does Judas reflect much credit on John's Baptist Church in the wilderness of Judea?

The truth is, all this ado about any one denomination being of divine origin is without Scriptural foundation. God never organized any denomination. He began laying the foundation of his Church universal on the borders of Eden when he made his covenant with the first pair. Noah was a preacher of righteousness in this Church in the Patriarchal age (II. Peter 2:5).

God reaffirmed his covenant with Abraham on the borders of Canaan. He gave the Church the first organized form and codified its laws at Sinai, when he had liberated Israel from Egyptian bondage and led them across the Red Sea, and he set aside the Levites to be preachers in this Church (Numbers 1:47-51). Christ came into this world in the form of sinful flesh, and shed his blood that he might sanctify the Church (Ephesians 5:26) and build it up (Matt. 16:18).

This Church, so long begun, and builded by the prophets and apostles, grows into a glorious temple in Christ, the chief corner-stone (Eph. 2:20-22); and all denominations that work according to divine laws are parts of this great Church, just as the several States of this great nation are parts of the nation, each State having its own laws, made and executed in harmony with the laws of the Nation.

The Church observed certain rites, with divine approval. B. C. Circumcision was administered to all the male children in the Church, because they were of the kingdom; now the rite of baptism is to be administered to all—children included because they are of the kingdom—for in Christ there is neither male nor female (Cf. Eph. 3:28; also Mark 10:14). The Feast of the Passover was kept in commemoration of the Jews' deliverance from Egyptian bondage. The Feast of Tabernacles was kept in commemoration of the wilderness wanderings. In fact, every rite had its special significance.

In this new era or dispensation of grace, the Church has two divinely appointed sacraments—Baptism and the Lord's Supper. Baptism by water is designed to symbolize the baptism of the Holy Spirit, which is poured out on the people (Acts 2:2, 17); the Lord's Supper to commemorate the death of Christ (I. Cor. 11:23-26). No one denomination has the right to lord it over God's heritage, but "All ye are brethren, and one is your Master, even Christ" (Matt. 23:8).

Newton, Miss.

TEXAS AND EPWORTH-BY-THE-SEA.

An engagement to lecture on "What We Protest Against at Epworth" took me to Texas. I went by the way of Shreveport, Marshall and San Antonio. A delayed train gave me half a day to see San Antonio. I saw the pretty streets which cross the river, and the others too. I saw the plazas, and the handsome stores (some of which were saloons, alas! alas!), and I saw the Alamo, where Travis, Bowie, Davy Crockett and their associates, in 1836, won Texas from Mexico by giving their lives. I measured the little room where Bowie fought, dying at last behind a rampart of Mexicans he had slain, and the room is twelve feet square. As I was studying the Alamo's heroic history a group of Mexicans came in and read the records with me. I wondered what they thought of it all.

San Antonio is somewhat cosmopolitan. I saw Negroes and Mexicans, Japs and Chinese—Americans of all kinds, and was shaved by a Syrian who was "a great churchman," but did not go to church now. I have seen his kind, of pure American blood, and in Mississippi—churchmen who do not go to church.

In the afternoon I ran down on the "Sap" railway, through the farms and the stretches of cactus and mesquite, through the smart little towns and the vast plantation of Charles P. Taft, to Epworth. On the sea—i. e., the bay shore—it stands treeless and wind-swept—nevertheless a comfortable place. There was lots of sunshine, but practically no mosquitoes, and the Epworth Leaguers of Texas, who own and control it, have made it a delightful place to study and find social and recreative pleasure and a healthful rest-time.

Bishop McCoy was speaking when I arrived, and I heard him again later. He can preach. I also heard Bishop Mouzon at a still later time, and he can preach. Our Bishops are verily not of that class stigmatized as non-preaching prelates.

The General Epworth League Board held its annual meeting there. This was partly my business there. Some very wise and needed things were done by the Board at its long meeting on Saturday, August 3rd, of which things the Epworth Era will tell.

Dr. Rawlings, Miss Head, Mrs. George L. Sexton, Dr. Parker, Bro's. Kern and Culbreth and others, all under the direction of the dean, Rev. Glenn Flinn, wrought well. Nor must I forget Prof. Rain of Berea College, Ky., whose talks on the Bible were fine; nor must Prof. and the pretty Mrs. Fisher who led the music so splendidly, be overlooked; nor my room-mates and fellow-workers, Brothers Moorehead and Cooper and Whatley.

I met old friends at Epworth: Rev. S. B.

Beall and his wife, Lillian, whom I knew and loved when young people at Jackson, La., and at Old Bethel camp meetings; V. V. Boone and family, who were at Summit when I tried my "prentice hand" at being a presiding elder in 1899; Mrs. J. B. Chatfield, a fellow-worker in my strenuous pastorate at Central Church, Meridian, and her sister, Miss Norville, long and still our leader in the mission at Laredo, and others.

Although so early in August, I saw corn fields ready for the gatherers and carloads of cotton bales just picked and ginned; yet I saw and ate some of the finest Elberta peaches I ever saw. Texas covers a variety of latitudes.

Corpus Christi (who of us would brook that name if translated) is a handsome city on its fine bay by the same outrageous name. And it is conceded that the city's present prosperity is largely due to the coming of Epworth. On Sunday, August 4, I preached in our Church in the city. Brother T. F. Sessions, the pastor, is happy over a new church building about to materialize. On the next Sunday I preached for Brother McKinney out at Robstown.

One feature of the Assembly attracted me greatly: It was attended by a large number of the presiding elders, among whom I must name A. L. Scarborough, a veteran, and our own S. B. Beall, who travels the Uvalde District in an automobile. Long live our Sam! By the way, the Texan Leaguers displayed great wisdom in electing him President of the State League, which puts him at the head of this great Assembly.

Time and space would fail me to tell it all. Great is Texas! but greater still is Mississippi.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

A NOTE FROM BROTHER WHIDDON.

Dear Dr. Meek: I write to say amen to your editorial on "Our Pressing Literature Problem" and on "Temporizing With a Monster Evil."

I am in the evangelistic work as much for the benefit of those two causes as anything else. I give a lecture every where I go on "The Horrors of White Slavery," and establish a "circulating library," if possible, in each place where I hold a meeting. While recently in Mandeville I placed twenty books "From the Ballroom to Hell," to check the dance craze there. I have established a library of our good books in every place where I have served as pastor. I make the library grow by charging a small fee, ten cents per month dues, which go to pay for new books. All of our preachers could establish a circulating library in every church if they would. Books cost so little now.

My meeting at Mandeville, a Catholic town, resulted in large crowds attending, which were composed of both Catholics and Protestants. There were fifteen additions to the Methodist and Baptist Churches, nine coming to ours. I had the great joy of leading my parents, brother and sisters to Christ. At the "Talisheek Camp Ground" we have, up to date, received fifteen additions to our Church, and have on foot plans to rebuild the Old Camp Ground and re-establish the camping feature of it.

I go from here to Beaumont, Texas, with my tent, to hold meeting for the pastor of our First Church, Rev. W. J. Johnson, in North Beaumont. God bless you and the Advocate.

Church News

The Florida Christian Advocate has appeared in a new and more attractive dress. It is a wide-awake and "progressive" periodical.

The Carlisle Memorial Hall is nearing completion at Wofford College. According to report, it will be a fine structure and will furnish ample dormitory facilities at this historic institution.

Through Bishop Hoss, ex-Governor Lon V. Stephens, who is a member of our Cabanne Church, St. Louis, has made a donation of $5000 to the Supernuante Endowment fund of the M. E. Church, South.

Bishop Hamilton and Bishop Nuelson have been designated to represent the Methodist Episcopal Church on the occasion of the dedication of the Wesleyan Central Buildings, at Westminster, London. They will be guests of the distinguished British layman, Sir Robert Perks.

Rev. and Mrs. L. M. Broyles, of Fort Smith, Ark., have been spending the month of August in Benton County in that State, where the climate is said to be delightful. Central Church, Fort Smith, of which Brother Broyles is pastor, has a large membership and is reported to be in a prosperous condition.

On account of Bishop Hoss' illness the Denver Conference, which met on August 28, was presided over by Bishop Mouzon. It is also understood that Bishop Hoss will not preside over the Missouri Conference which convened yesterday, but at this writing we are not informed who has been designated to take his place.

It is stated that plans have been perfected whereby the price of tuition and board at the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., will be reduced nearly one-half. This is a movement in the right direction, since educational facilities are valuable in proportion as they are placed within the reach of the masses of the people.

General William Booth's eldest daughter, Mrs. Catherine Booth-Clibborn (known as La Marachale), is planning to come to the United States this fall or winter. Arrangements for her meetings are being made by The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, to which communications from churches and other organizations should be sent.

Bishop Thirkield, who will make his home in New Orleans, is expected to reach the city about September 14, his goods having already been shipped. It is stated that he will maintain an office for the transaction of his duties as a general superintendent. The Bishop's family will not join him here until after the fall meeting of the Bishops, which will be held in Toledo, Ohio.

Rev. H. M. Du Bose, D. D., was in the city this week and paid the Advocate a brotherly visit. He was on his way from Lake Shore Assembly, where he rendered valuable service, to Epworth, where he is to render a similar engagement. He is robust in body, strong in spirit, and unlimited in service. He is at home in Texas, for he spent much of his ministerial life in this State.—Texas Christian Advocate.

Bishop Candler has been invited to take a hand in the prohibition fight that is now on in Arkansas during the month of September. If he does, the saloon advocates would do well to keep out of his way. As a vigorous and effective debater, it is doubtful whether the Bishop has a superior in the nation. The Georgia whiskeyites know him and want none of him: they have seen him flay too many of their dirty flock in the days gone.

Bishop John C. Kilgo recently assisted in a camp meeting at Loudoun, Va., preaching daily with great power and effectiveness. His evangelistic spirit is doing much to hearten and energize Southern Methodists along the Atlantic coast. When our leaders shall have become great evangelists, the rank and file of the ministry will likewise begin to flame with revivalistic fire.

The many friends of Mr. Thomas B. King, of Memphis, who is known throughout the Southern Methodist Church as one of its most active and useful laymen, will regret to be informed that he is seriously ill. While hunting near Armstrong Springs, in Arkansas, he had a hemorrhage, which was said to be due to an ulcer in the stomach, and was hurried home. He rallied and recovered sufficiently to go out driving, but later developed a case of pleurisy, and is now reported to be suffering with pneumonia. We sincerely hope that his valuable life may be spared.

MEETING OF ORPHANAGE TRUSTEES.

On August 6, the Board of Directors of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage met in semi-annual session in the Orphanage Building in Ruston, with the following members present: S. D. Pearce, C. B. Carter, R. H. Wynn, P. K. Ables, O. E. Hodge, J. H. Mays, R. O. Randle, and Wm. H. Coleman.

The Superintendent reported that the Home had seventy-eight children, and that, up to date, $5492 had been collected.

At the suggestion of the Superintendent and on the recommendation of the Executive Committee it was decided to indefinitely postpone the building of a Superintendent's Home, and to use the money borrowed for that purpose in paying for forty-six acres of recently purchased land, and to apply the remainder on the indebtedness of the Orphanage.

After the morning's session and a sumptuous repast with the Superintendent and his family, we inspected the buildings and grounds. The buildings are in a splendid state of preservation, everywhere presenting that neat, clean, well-kept appearance that proves the great efficiency of Brother Vaughan as superintendent and Sister Vaughan as head matron.

The eighty-six acre farm surrounding the buildings has been well divided into cultivated lands and pastures, and is in a high state of cultivation and development. The pasture lands are profitably used for the Orphanage pork and dairy animals, and the cultivated lands are being made to produce a quantity of such varieties of vegetables and food plants as are most profitable in the maintenance of the children. Brother Vaughan and the children had just canned twelve hundred gallons of fine Elberta peaches, besides a quantity of vegetables.

The children are all healthy, and happy, and are being well trained and cared for.

We most heartily commend Brother Vaughan for his faithfulness and efficiency, and bespeak for him and the institution the loyal support of every Methodist and interested friend in Louisiana.

Let us all pay our full assessment for orphanage maintenance, so that these little ones may have the necessities of life and that all debts may be paid as they fall due.

With gratitude to God for his blessings upon this institution, and thankfulness to our people for their co-operation in this good work, we are,

Most respectfully yours,

S. D. PEARCE, President.

TWO NOTABLE PUBLICATIONS.

By Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

The mails have recently brought to my desk the August Bulletin of the General Board of Education and the Aug. 9th issue of the Christian Advocate (Nashville), which may be emphatically called its Educational number. In these two papers there are just one dozen communications which were well worthy of publication and of our most careful reading.

Dr. Stonewall Anderson, in his article on the Carnegie Foundation, in the Bulletin, and the one "Educational Policy of the Methodist Church," in the Advocate, is lucid in his statements and evidences an acquaintance with his subjects which makes them good reading indeed. Dr. Hammond sets clearly before us the duty of the Church in the higher education of the Negro. He has studied well his theme and we shall look with increasing interest for his concluding paper.

The limits of this letter forbid comment on all of these most excellent contributions; it is sufficient to suggest that all are well worth the time necessary for a careful reading.

Dr. Hyer, of the Southern Methodist University, gives us some interesting and suggestive statistics connected with the educational institutions of our country, and he issues a word of warning lest the friends of these institutions which carry, apparently, a liberal endowment, should stop short of placing them on the surest and most satisfactory foundations. He says: "Concerning those having only small endowments (from $200,000 to $400,000, is about the figure he sets), it would be well to issue a word of warning and to caution them that unless endowments are increased the character of instruction will so deteriorate that attendance will diminish."

By the best study we could give and the strictest comparison with the institutions enumerated in his statistical table, we draw the conclusion that if we are to do the best work at our Millsaps College, it is necessary that we double our present productive endowment. Our capacity for the entertainment of students is about three hundred, and, according to the conclusions drawn by Dr. Hyer, we cannot do our best work with less than five or six hundred thousand of endowment. And, by the way, this suggests that our new President has a large field before him; and that the youthful face that appears on the outside cover of the Nashville Advocate of Aug. 9 emphasizes that he is the man to do the work. It would be a fitting close to his useful ministry if he can only accomplish such a feat. With him, however, there must be a minor change in Longfellow's lines:

"Then let him be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and don't wait."

The article by Prof. Kern in the Nashville Advocate presents some almost marvelous statements and, with your permission, Mr. Editor, I would suggest is due a place in our Conference organ. I am sure that it will be a revelation to many who are in close touch with the College, to say nothing of those who are further away.

The communication of Dr. J. M. Sullivan, in the last issue of the New Orleans Advocate, should catch the eye of every Methodist in the State. Recently I read of the action of a Conference of public school teachers in one of the Western States, affirming that the Bible should be made one of the studies in the regular curriculum, and I said, "Yes, here are those in closest touch with our young life taking this position; and why shouldn't every school, and especially every Christian school, give this 'Book of books' such recognition? And I verily believe, Mr. Editor, that it is coming.

Mr. Dickson was the only farmer among them; all the others, including the new representatives, are lawyers, except Mr. Collier. AN IMPORTANT MATTER

To the Pastors of the Louisiana Conference.

Dear Brethren: Please send your missionary collections to our Treasurer, Mr. S. H. Myer, 116 St. Charles St., New Orleans, as soon as possible. Let us not forget our minimum standard of an amount from each charge equal to seventy-five cents per member. Doubtless even the charges in the "flood sections" can and will gladly pay that much. Shall we not expect some of the charges in the sections so greatly prospered and blessed this year to go far beyond this minimum, that there may be no possible deficit, and that our Lord's work may prosper in our hands? How many pastors will see that theirs are banner charges in missionary giving this year?

Thanking you for your faithfulness and co-operation, and praying God's blessings upon you in the great work to which he has called you, I remain.

Faithfully yours,

WM. H. COLEMAN,
Chairman Louisiana Conference
Board of Missions.

REV. R. S. GALE DEAD.

Dear Brother Meek: Rev. R. S. Gale, of Summit, Miss., died here to-day at 4:20 p.m., and will be buried in Wesson to-morrow. A suitable tribute will be furnished later.

Yours fraternally,

J. T. LEGGETT.

Brookhaven, Miss., Sept. 1, 1912.

We are deeply grieved by this sad intelligence. Brother Gale joined the Mississippi Conference in 1885, and was a true and faithful minister. He was appointed to Summit when Rev. C. M. Chapman was chosen to the presidency of Port Gibson Female College, and had made a good beginning, when several weeks ago he was stricken down with illness. In his death the Church has sustained a great loss. We extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and other sorrowing loved ones.

REV. J. T. MURRAH: AN APPRECIATION.

I feel a keen sense of personal loss in the death of my dear friend. When I saw him last I could but feel sad, as I looked upon his worn and weakened frame. Big-hearted, big-brained and big-bodied, he gave promise of a long life. There was nothing small or mean in his nature. He was everybody's friend, and everybody loved him. He had unusual native gifts as a man and as a minister. He knew men and he drew them to him as a magnet attracts steel, and men believed in him and trusted him. Young men opened their hearts to him, sought him in counsel, and enjoyed his companionship. His judgment of men and measures was always discriminating and fair. He never indulged in the petty business of magnifying men's weaknesses, but he was a real brother to all men.

I looked upon him as a strong, effective preacher. When he was sent to a new pastoral charge it was a common occurrence for the non-church-going men to go and hear him preach. I leave to an abler pen the task of writing a suitable memoir, but I send this brief tribute to the memory of one I loved. May God bless his dear boy James.

THE PONTOTOC MEETING.

Dear Brother Meek: I send you an account of our great tent meeting with Rev. Walter Holcomb, of Nashville, Tenn., doing the preaching. The big tent was stretched Saturday before the first Sunday in June. Seats were provided for six or eight hundred people. The singer, Brother Richards, was on hand and held the first song service that night. We couldn't call our meeting a union meeting, as one of the pastors of the town wouldn't go into a union meeting. The other denomination went in with us and many of the leaders in the Church whose pastor is opposed to union meetings, gave their endorsement and help. Brother Holcomb preached his first sermon Sunday morning to a tent about full. His humor was not understood by all at first. Some refused to laugh at all for several services. Finally, most of the people saw the point and enjoyed his humorous ridicule of the backsliders and hypocrites. Brother Holcomb proceeded for eight days and nights and preached the plain unvarnished gospel, rebuking those who had sinned, that others might fear, until the entire town was brought under conviction for sin, deep and pungent.

Many of the Church members became active personal workers. There were in all about one hundred who gave every evidence of being converted and gave their names for church membership: 35 or 40 for the Methodist Church, about the same number for the Baptist Church, and 15 or 20 for the Presbyterian Church. We took into the Methodist Church about 30. Two came in yesterday, who are among our most substantial business men—the heads of families.

The Baptist pastor closed his special meeting last week and baptized 12, losing 20 or more who signified a desire to join his Church during the tent meeting, and gave to me sufficient evidence of being converted. Many of the Baptist preachers through this North Mississippi territory preach the most peculiar doctrines I have ever heard of. They are very harmful in their tendencies and are not endorsed by the progressive, leading members of the great Southern Baptist Church. These teachings ought to be destroyed, root and branch. We Methodist preachers can and ought to be discreet and sympathetic in dealing with the people, but I don't believe we should be too timid in the presence of such perversions of the Scriptures.

Brother Holcomb was a tonic to our entire county. I heartily recommend his work to all of the preachers. His humor and pathos always win.

I was very tenderly drawn to him, by virtue of the fact that the great Sam Jones, who, through the power God gave him, enabled me to see the light of a new day—the Christian life, expired in the arms of Mr. Holcomb, his son-in-law.

That the mantle of our departed brother may fall upon the Rev. Walt Holcomb is my sincere prayer.

SELF-HELP AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

By Prof. Alfred Allan Kern, in the Nashville Christian Advocate.

In a recent address before the National Educational Association, the President of a Western university denounced our universities as the loafing places of luxury and as winter resorts for the sons of the wealthy. Doubtless, he was, to a certain extent, at least, correct in his statements. Contemporaneous, however, with his denunciation of the growing luxury and licentiousness of our educational institutions come the reports of the self-help bureaus in our various colleges, which present a more hopeful picture of another side of college life and show that democracy is also on the increase in American universities.

Thus, the daughter of President Butler, of Columbia University, was among the freshman waiters at Barnard College during the past session. An investigation at Oberlin disclosed the fact that one-fourth of all the women in the college were either partially or wholly self-supporting, and that another ten per cent. were earning money toward their education. From the Yale bureau of self-help comes the statement that five hundred students in the university are either wholly or in part working their way through college. The ways and means employed by these enterprising five hundred students are almost as many and as varied as the students themselves; they range all the way from acting as professional pallbearers for the New Haven funerals at two dollars a funeral ("planting stiffs," as it is called in the Yale self-help circles) to winning scholarships and acting as assistants in the laboratories.

It is, furthermore, a hopeful sign for American democracy that the men who work their way through college are in no sense looked down upon by their class-mates. There are certain occupations which increase rather than lessen a man's chances for the class presidency or for similar honors. Not many years ago the degree of Bachelor of Ugliness, the highest honor in the gift of the student body of Vanderbilt, was bestowed upon a student who had worked his way through the university from his freshman year. The Federated School and Sectional Club of Yale has been making a special effort to secure future students who are willing to earn their way through college because they have discovered that many of the graduates who have brought most honor to their Alma Mater have been recruited from among this class of young men.

Apropos of this movement in our colleges, I have thought that the results obtained by the census which was taken by the self-help bureau of Millsaps College might prove of interest and of aid to the readers of the Advocate—of interest in that they can therein see what is being done to help needy students in one of the Church's own colleges, and of aid in that other colleges may perhaps get therefrom a suggestion which will increase the efficiency of their own self-help bureaus.

Last May each student was given a blank slip on which he was asked to report the amount he had earned during the session and the ways in which he had earned it. Out of the one hundred and fifty-nine students who reported there were sixty-nine (or forty-three per cent.) who had in one way or another earned money during the college year. A condensed report of the census is given below, showing occupation, amount earned, and number engaged:

Ministerial work	$ 2,480	8
Clerking	1,042	18

State legislator	552	1

$10,248 110

From this table it will be seen that preaching, clerking in the city stores, and writing insurance were the most lucrative occupations, and that the first two, together with attending to stock, delivering papers, acting as agents for laundries, and pressing clothes, were the most popular "professions."

An examination of the grades in the secretary's book showed, furthermore, that the scholarship of those who were working their way through college was superior to that of the students who did no outside work. Thus, to give but one test, the sixty-nine workers made seventy-eight grades between ninety and one hundred, while the ninety non-workers made only seventy-four such grades. Had the percentage of failures among the students been computed, it would have resulted in an even more favorable showing for the self-help men, and this, notwithstanding the fact that the co-eds, who are, as a rule, better students than the men, were for the most part classed among the non-workers. Certainly there is no ground for believing that outside work, as a whole, interferes with scholarship.

It should be added that the self-help bureau at Millsaps deserves but slight credit for the showing here made; it is due almost entirely to individual initiative and demonstrates clearly the wide possibilities in this field of work for the self-help bureaus of the Y. M. C. A. With a better organized bureau, such as we hope to have next year, the total amount earned would be increased at least thirty per cent. and the whole movement placed upon a more secure and settled working basis.

RUSTON DISTRICT EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE AT HOMER.

The Epworth League Conference, held at Homer, August 21-23, was a signal success. The program was well planned and executed. The speakers and workers were at their best. Nothing was left undone by the pastor and Homer League chapter to make the Leaguers feel at home and enjoy themselves to the fullest. Printed in bold letters on the face of the program was the key-note of the Conference, "The League and Personal Evangelism." The Conference hymn was that fine lyric, "True-hearted, Whole-hearted." The music and singing were stirring, spiritual, and superb. The large chorus choir and the famous Ford Quartette know how to interpret the gospel in song.

The welcome address by Mr. E. W. Gill, President of the Homer League chapter, was remarkably earnest and impressive. It was free from all the "frills and fancies" that too often are discharged upon us on such occasions. The response was made by the President, Rev. A. Inman Townsley, of Arcadia, and was followed by the annual message of the President.

One of the best things of the Conference was the study class in Dr. Weatherford's book, "Introducing Men to Christ," led by Rev. Albert S. Lutz. Brother Lutz was fully prepared to teach this text-book, as he has the honor of claiming Dr. Weatherford as a personal friend. He was a pupil of the author while at Vanderbilt University. After having our hearts warmed by this fascinating and engaging book, each of us returned to his field of labor better equipped to do personal work for our Lord.

The addresses of Rev. Hugh W. Jamieson were timely and well-received. His deep spirituality, his tender heart, his grace of expression, all conspired to make his presence a blessing to each of the Leaguers. His address on "The Dynamo of the League Machinery" was one of the most helpful and suggestive that I ever heard.

That skilful and nonpareil Epworth Leaguer, Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle, of Shreveport, was at her best. Helpful and well-informed in counsel, amiable and magnetic in the social circle, and strong and spiritual on the platform, she is a general favorite with the young people wherever she goes. Although she is no longer Field Secretary, her services are in constant demand to organize new League chapters and to train young people in social and religious service.

The presence of Mr. Robt. O. Steele, of Ruston, the new State Epworth League President, was an inspiration to all. His greeting and address brought a larger vision to all. He is earnest, enthusiastic and consecrated. If the League does not prosper under his administration we shall be badly disappointed. May his tribe increase!

The address of Rev. P. O. Lowrey was unique, original and humorous. Lowrey is one of those Christians, all too rare, who mixes sanctified humor with his piety.

The reception and League social given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Collier, was a treat to all. The spacious lawns, the light of the silvery moon, the happy Juniors, Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scouts, singing the simple songs and playing the joyous games of childhood, mingled with music and good-natured conversation of the older folk, made the occasion one long to be remembered.

In the election of officers for the ensuing year, the Conference was particularly happy. All of them are enthusiastic, capable and well-equipped for the responsible positions they occupy. Mr. E. W. Gill, of Homer, is President; Miss Ella Mai Leslie, of Ruston, First Vice President; Mr. S. E. Smith, Arcadia, Second Vice President; Miss Corrie Dawkins, Ruston, Third Vice President; Miss Ona McCasland, Homer, Fourth Vice President; Miss Ruth Lane, Secretary-Treasurer, Ruston; Miss Ruby Kennon, Sibley, Era Agent; Miss Willie Mai Porter, Sibley, Junior League Superintendent; A. S. Lutz, Homer, Supervisor Boy Scouts and Camp Fire Girls. All these officers now hold a responsible position in their home League, thereby fitting themselves for the larger offices they occupy in the district.

The Conference will be held next year at Ruston, the second Tuesday in August. The outlook for the Leagues of Ruston district was never brighter and more hopeful than at present. The reports showed fifteen Epworth Leagues in the district and several more will be organized this fall.

A GUILTY CONSCIENCE.

(From Ruth McEnery Stuart's "Ole Daddy Do-Funny's Wisdom Jingles" in September St. Nicholas.)

Dat little yaller pup 's got so many lickin's
For pesterin' all de ducks an' chickens,
Dat whenever he hears any barn-yard strife,
He looks over his shoulder an' runs for 's life.
But he ain't by 'isself in dat, in dat—
No, he ain't by 'isself in dat.

THE SAVED-UP SUNSHINE.

Of course Toggles had some excuse. When you come to think of it every one who is ever cross, or glum, or impatient has some excuse, and always to him it seems a good enough one to account for the disagreeable way he acts. But, as excuses go, Toggles' really was a fairly good one.

They were to start right after breakfast, all of them, in the surrey. They were to drive to the lake, and have their lunch on the shore, and grandpa had promised to take them out in a row-boat, and Toggles and Mabel were to go wading—you can see for yourself it was to be no ordinary day. And then it rained.

The moment Toggles wakened he heard it and ran to the window. Everything looked wet, and dark, and discouraged, and there was not the slightest sign of improvement. All through breakfast he and Mabel kept hoping that it would stop and the sun come out, but it rained steadily. After breakfast they still hoped for a while, but by nine o'clock they knew there was no use hoping any longer, and then Toggles simply gave up so much as trying to be cheerful. Of course he couldn't cry, he was too big for that, but he sat down in the front room, and he didn't want to play with Mabel, and he didn't want mamma to read to him, and he didn't want to go out to see grandma make cookies—that was the strangest of all—he didn't want to do anything but just be miserable.

Now whether grandpa knew how he felt, I can't tell, but all at once he came into the room rubbing his hands and saying:

"Well, this is a dark, gloomy, chilly day," and then, in the same ordinary tone in which he so often said such extraordinary things, he went on, "I think I must go down cellar and get a basket of sunshine."

A basket of sunshine sounded so amazing that Toggles stared at grandpa, quite forgetting for the moment even the rain outside and the spoiled picnic.

"I wish you would get some," said mamma, "we need it here."

"Well," exclaimed grandpa, "I'm real glad I had Mr. Walters bring up that load."

Toggles, listening, realized that either his grandpa was for once mistaken, or else here was something quite wonderful to be learned, and when there were things to be learned Toggles asked questions.

"Grandpa," he demanded, "how can there be sunshine down cellar?"

"I can't quite explain how," said grandpa, "but I know there is. I saw it there not fifteen minutes ago."

"I'll go down with you," volunteered Toggles.

But when they were in the cellar and grandpa had picked up the shovel, Toggles suddenly burst out:

"Why, grandpa, that isn't sunshine. That's coal."

"How do you know?" retorted grandpa.

"Why, by the looks."

"You can't always tell by looks. I wouldn't depend on that."

"But," Toggles laughed. Grandpa's absurd fashion of talking was sometimes really bewildering. "But—grandpa—well, how do you know it's sunshine?"

"By the way it acts," answered grandpa, and when Toggles looked puzzled, he asked: "What does sunshine do?"

Toggles thought for a moment.

"It makes things light and warm."

"Well, that's just what this does."

"But is it really sunshine?" Toggles insisted.

"Is ice really water?"

Toggles had to think again.

"One way it is and one way it isn't."

"Well, it's the same with this."

"I wish you would tell me about it."

"When we get upstairs I will."

And after the fire was kindled in the great fireplace, and the tiny flames were leaping up between the black lumps and crackling and sputtering, grandpa took Toggles on his knee and began:

"Before God made man, he made the sun, and it used to shine then just as it does now," but the sunshine was not all wasted just because there were no men to see it; for in a way so wonderful that I can't begin to explain or even understand it, the sunshine grew into the leaves and tree-trunks, and then the leaves and the tree-trunks, with the sunshine still in them, all frozen up, you might say—God turned them into coal, buried deep in the ground. Afterward men came, and they learned to dig down and get out the coal—and when they made a fire of it there would come out the heat and the light—the sunshine—that God had saved up for them so long ago, and it made them warm and cheerful."

"It is very wonderful, isn't it?" said Toggles seriously.

"Yes," returned grandpa; "but there is another thing that to me is almost as wonderful."

"What is that?"

"It is that we can do just what God did. We can save sunshine, too. I knew a man who for a longer time than you have lived was so sick he could not get out of his bed, but he was the jolliest man to visit! He had saved up the pleasant things that happened before he was sick, and when a pain hurt him very badly he thought about them. I knew a lady, too, who lost her baby, but even that did not make her unhappy for always. She had saved up sunshine, and she gave it out again—just as the coal does. I've even known little boys, not ten years old, who, when there came dark, cloudy, gloomy days never sulked—they just thought of all the good times—"

And all at once Toggles felt his cheeks getting very hot, and he reached up and put his fingers on grandpa's lips.

"Now, grandpa!" he exclaimed, "you don't need to say any more. Because I'm not going to act this way again, and I'm going right out this minute to play with Mabel."—Frederick Hall, in Sunday School Times.

CONCERNING OUR FRENCH MISSION WORK.

At the Lafayette District Epworth League Conference a special of one hundred dollars was pledged for the urgent needs of the French Mission work. This was in addition to the liberal pledges assumed by the Leagues of the State, for the Cuba special.

The following amounts have been paid:

Lake Charles, $27; Mermentau League, $5; Franklin League, $10; New Iberia League, $10. Total, $50.

This response from the Leagues is greatly appreciated. There is still a probable deficiency of one hundred dollars in what is needed for the expense of this year's work, and any generous-hearted person who is willing to contribute to this glorious work is cordially invited to send me a check.

At an early date, I hope to send some account of the French Mission work for publication.

The special fund will be handled regularly through the Mission Board. R. H. WYNN, Presiding Elder, Lafayette District.

GONE TO HER REWARD.

Dear Brother Meek: Your old friend, Mrs. E. D. Busby, of Cold Water, Miss., passed to her reward August 27. We buried the mortal part of this elect woman in the cemetery in Cold Water in the presence of a large company of friends and loved ones. Her last sickness was long and painful, but she died as she had lived, full of faith. Her obituary will follow.

Yours fraternally,

T. W. DYE.

ITEMS FROM THE WINONA DISTRICT.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am sending herewith my fourth round. It seems so strange that the year is nearly gone again. News comes to me that J. C. McElroy has had a fine revival at Bethlehem; also that Brother W. V. Shearer has had a great meeting at old Bethesda, where fifty were converted and thirty added to the Church. Brother E. B. Shaw reports another good revival at Salem. I held a meeting at Drew for Brother Raper, who has been indisposed for some time. I have just learned that Dr. J. W. Price has been suffering with bronchitis for several days. With good crop prospects and good revivals we are feeling good. Cordially,

BEN P. JACO.

INFLUENCE OF THE BIBLE.

The influence of the Bible upon humanity is far-reaching and immeasurable. The Psalmist spoke truly when he said, "The entrance of thy Word giveth light." It is doubtful whether any more telling missionary work can be done than that of circulating the Holy Scriptures. They search the heart and grip the conscience in a manner that attests their divinity. The story has long been told of how Voltaire, the noted French skeptic, in undertaking to versify the Fifty-first Psalm, was seized with conviction until he trembled and cried out under it, though he fought it off and continued in his evil ways. Instances of the Bible winning its way into the hearts of men are not wanting in this day. A striking illustration of this was recently given in The London Christian, which we quote:

"An Indian clerk in a Madras railway office overheard the remark that the English Bible was the best book from which to learn English. He procured a copy from a friend (giving in exchange a volume of Renan), and set himself to study it in order to improve his knowledge of English. Soon, however, the Book gripped his attention, and he read it through once, twice, thrice. At length, convinced that Christianity was the true faith, and that Christ was able to save him from his sins, he went to the missionary who relates the story, and after a long conversation, satisfied him that his knowledge was clear and experience definite. In the end, he joined the Church, won 'to walk after the Lord,' through the reading of the Scriptures."

But not only is the Bible effective in reaching the unsaved, but it is quite as much so as a means of promoting spiritual culture. It increases one's knowledge of Christ and the things of the kingdom and deepens and enriches the religious life as nothing else can. Indeed, a daily reading of God's Word is indispensable to spiritual health and growth. There has never been a great Christian who was not a painstaking student of the Bible, and there never will be. The neglect of the Divine Book, through which God still speaks to men, means religious dwarfhood, or something worse. Oh, let us not fail to appreciate and rightly use this glorious message which the Heavenly Father has given us!

"Lamp of our feet, whereby we trace
Our path, when wont to stray!
Stream from the fount of heavenly grace,
Brook by the traveler's way!"

"Bread of our souls, whereon we feed,
True manna from on high!
Our guide and chart, wherein we read
Of realms beyond the sky."

"Pillar of the through watches dark,
Or radiant cloud by day!
When waves would overwhelm our tossing bark,
Our anchor and our stay!"

"Riches in poverty! our aid
In every needful hour!
Unshaken rock—the pilgrim's shade,
The soldier's fortress tower!"

"Our shield and buckler in the fight!
Victory's triumphant palm!
Comfort in grief, in weakness, might!
In sickness, Gilead's balm!"

"Childhood's preceptor, manhood's trust!
Old age's firm ally!
Our hope, when we go down to dust,
Of immortality!"

THE BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

The Bluff Creek camp meeting, which is held annually within the bounds of the East Feliciana (La.) Circuit, began on August 23, and closed on Sunday, September 1, with an all-day's service which resulted in a great victory for righteousness. It was the writer's privilege to attend the last day's meeting and to learn from the lips of the managers of the services from the beginning.

Rev. J. E. Denson, of Baton Rouge, whom all Louisiana Methodists know to be an effective camp-meeting preacher, led in the preaching services for the first three days, and laid well the foundation for a great meeting; then Rev. J. G. Snelling, of New Orleans, took charge and continued three days; the last four days the pulpit was filled by Rev. H. N. Brown, of Morgan City. But while these brethren led in the work, they by no means did all the preaching. Rev. C. C. Miller, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District; Rev. J. W. Faulk, pastor of the East Feliciana Circuit and manager of the camp meeting; Rev. Elton Wilson, of Hammond; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Conference Sunday School Evangelist; Rev. E. D. Lipscomb, of Slidell, and the writer, all preached one or more sermons.

The attendance was very good, more than 600 admission tickets being sold to people over ten years of age. On the closing Sunday the crowd was estimated to be about 750 people. A large number of souls were converted and several were added to the Church. On the last day a free-will offering, amounting to $63, was taken for our pastors in the flooded district.

The Advocate was not forgotten, and a large list of subscribers was secured. The meeting was said to be the greatest held there in many years. The success was largely due to the painstaking work of the Board of Managers of the Camp Ground and the pastor, Rev. J. W. Faulk, whose labors were fruitful alike in securing the crowd, entertaining the visitors, and directing the music. The Methodists in the vicinity of the Bluff Creek Camp Ground are as fine a class of people as can be found in East Louisiana.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

We are grateful to Rev. E. L. Alford, of Pachuta, Miss., for a nice list of subscribers sent in last week, and also for his promise to send in more soon.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey spent last Thursday in New Orleans, and favored our office with a call. He was en route to the Bluff Creek Camp Meeting, where he had an engagement.

Rev. A. P. Cox, of Easin, Miss., requests us to announce that the Salem Camp Meeting will commence on October 9 and continue five days. Preachers and everybody else are cordially invited.

An interesting and largely attended Labor Day service was conducted at the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge last Sunday evening, by Rev. W. W. Drake, the pastor. Brother Drake is wide awake to every interest of the Church in his responsible field.

The congregation at Lafayette, La., anticipated the need of our preachers in the flooded districts, and contributed $78 before Bishop Mouzon and the presiding elders made the call for help. The money was given to the pastors in the Monroe district who were in need.

Rev. J. C. Chambers, the capable pastor of the Collins (Miss.) charge, has had a hundred accessions to the Church during the year. One who is in a position to know writes: "He has a great circuit and travels it." From the results accomplished, it would also seem that he fills it.

Rev. J. H. Montgomery, of Campti, La., reports another good meeting on his charge, which was held in the hills out from St. Maurice. There were ten accessions by baptism, one by vows, and the church generally was revived. The condition of the work at all points is said to be most encouraging.

We were delighted last week by a visit from Dr. I. W. Cooper, the distinguished President of Whitworth College. He keeps busy in the Master's service and makes his influence widely felt for good. Whitworth is enjoying unprecedented prosperity under his administration, and has the promise of a great opening on September 12.

Bishop Morrison will spend a considerable part of the month of October visiting churches in North Mississippi. He will give a week to the promotion of the work in the Greenville District, and will preach at Clarksdale on Sunday, October 20. We dare say that his presence and ministry will do much to hearten and enliven both our pastors and people.

Bishop Morrison has appointed Rev. Norman B. McLeod, formerly of Alabama and an alumnus of Vanderbilt University, to the Main Street Church of Hattiesburg, the pulpit of which was left vacant by the election of Dr. A. F. Watkins to the presidency of Millsaps College. It is stated that the new pastor is already in place and has made a pleasant impression.

Rev. Q. R. Henry, a ministerial student in Centenary College from Henry, La., spent his vacation doing ministerial work on Pecan Island, where he rendered valuable assistance to Rev. Ed. Stine, the preacher in charge. Brother Henry was a prize-winner in oratory last year and is a young man who gives promise of a life of great usefulness in the Church.

The third quarterly conference of the East Feliciana Circuit voted to move the parsonage from its present location, near Oakholia, La., in the country, to one of the towns in the charge where there are better school facilities. A building committee has been selected which will decide at once whether the present parsonage shall be moved, or sold and a new one built.

The Nashville Christian Advocate, of August 30, says: "Rev. N. E. Joyner, who has recently been transferred from the Louisiana Conference to the Mexican Border Mission Conference, will have charge of Laurens Institute, Monterey, Mexico, and will be pastor of the American congregation at Monterey. He succeeds Rev. Henry Stanford, who has returned to this country."

Rev. O. P. Armour, pastor at Sidon, Miss., is doing effective work for the Master and the Church. He has organized an Epworth League at Sidon, and has preached to large audiences during the hot summer months. At present he is engaged in a revival meeting at Bethel, in the Hesterville charge, and the crowds attending and interest manifested at present augur well for a great victory.

The Winona Circuit is having a prosperous year under the leadership of Rev. E. M. Shaw, who is a man of capacity and energy. Good meetings have been held at nearly all the churches, and everywhere a fine spirit prevails. A brother who has been associated with Brother Shaw in revival work this summer recently said to us: "Keep your eye on Shaw; he is one of the coming men of his Conference."

As is stated in our Sunday School Notes, the Sunday School Board of the Mississippi Conference has employed Brother R. A. Maddox, of Edwards, Miss., as field agent. He is said to be well equipped for this important work, and doubtless he will make his influence strongly felt in carrying it forward. Our people are wise in seeking the highest efficiency in this great arm of service, which is so essential to the prosperity of the Church.

Sister Lipscomb, wife of our pastor, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, of Slidell, La., is one of the most capable women in the New Orleans District. She not only has a voice, musical and trained, by which she glorifies God in song, but can take her Bible and instruct an audience as well as many preachers. Among the many profitable hours at the Bluff Creek Camp Meeting last week none surpassed in interest that in which she led the service.

Among those who have encouraged the Advocate by increasing its number of subscribers this week is Rev. F. L. Applewhite, of Benton, Miss. In the list he sent in were four new subscriptions and four renewals. Now, when the other collections are not in the way, is a good time to make a canvass for the Advocate. Besides, by beginning a canvass now it gives one time to follow up the promises that some Methodists make of subscribing later.

The following news item, taken from the Texas Christian Advocate, will doubtless prove of interest to many of our readers: "Rev. W. G. Harbin, of Beckville, recently held a fine meeting at the Rehoboth Church on his charge, aided by Rev. D. B. Boddie, and fine results followed. Twenty-one persons were received into church membership, and the people generally were revived. Brother Harbin is doing a fine work on the Beckville charge."

On last Sunday Rev. Martin Hebert began a meeting at Bourg, La., where he is assisting Rev. C. V. Brethaupt, of the Houma Mission. The Houma work is making progress under the leadership of Brother Brethaupt, who has associated with him a band of excellent workers. The meeting at Bourg promises to be fruitful in a rich harvest of souls. Brother Hebert, who is doing the preaching, has been for the past twelve years a successful French missionary.

Mr. Marion Browning, who recently came to New Orleans from the Isle of Pines, Cuba, where he had been engaged in newspaper work, has a lecture on Cuba which he has delivered at both the Second Church and McDonoughville Church. In this lecture he not only describes the island and the people, but gives sketches of history and recites many remarkable instances of valor. The lecture is well worth hearing, and was highly appreciated by both of the audiences that heard it.

"Hope to send more new subscribers soon" are the encouraging words at the close of a letter from Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Hermanville, Miss. The letter also brought a money order for subscriptions contained therein. Brother Blackwell has the right idea in sending in the money he has on hand, instead of holding it until he receives more. A good motto for pastors to adopt in connection with the circulation of the Advocate is, "Get all you can, send what you have, and get more."

Information has reached us that Rev. E. H. Smoot, of Glen Allan, Miss., is meeting with much success in his work. He has opened a new preaching place at Scott, on the riverside branch of the Y. and M. V. Railroad, where interesting monthly services are now held in the depot, and there is said to be a prospect of erecting a new parsonage at Glen Allan. This is Brother Smoot's first year in the itinerancy, and the manner in which he is bringing things to pass is gratifying to his many friends.

Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Memphis, together with his family, has been spending some time in Colorado. He reports the scenery as grand and the climate as exhilarating. We trust that Brother Lewis will have a restful and pleasant vacation. We do not doubt that he needs a respite from his labors, since he serves a congregation of about 1700 members and a constituency many times as large. Few have any conception of how trying and taxing the duties of a large city pastorate are.

Last Sunday's issue of the New Orleans Picayune contained an excellent account of the work that has been done during the past year at the Mary Werlein Mission, New Orleans. Accompanying the write-up were pictures of Dr. J. W. Moore and Rev. W. W. Holmes, who have been tireless in their efforts to reach the masses dwelling in the vicinity of this mission. Dr. Moore has begun a systematic effort to impress the Methodists of Louisiana with the great need for Christian work among the poorer classes in New Orleans.

Rev. L. W. Cain, who has conducted some of the most successful meetings held in Mississippi this year, is an enthusiastic worker for the circulation of the Advocate. He feels that he is doing effective evangelistic work when he advocates the reading of the Church papers from the pulpit. He has spent a very busy year thus far, and has open the following dates between this and Conference: the first Sunday in October and the first and third Sundays in November. Any pastor would do well to secure his assistance in revival work.

We are informed that our church at Cleveland, Miss., where the Rev. L. A. McKeown is pastor, is in fine condition, and that there is considerable talk of erecting a handsome brick house of worship in the near future. It ought by all means to be done. Cleveland is the chief town of Bolivar, the greatest agricultural county in Mississippi, and it is certain to develop into a place of considerable importance in the coming years. It, therefore, behooves our people to take steps to entrench Methodism strongly there, which they are abundantly able to do.

Rev. J. H. Evans, probably the oldest superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, who is now in his ninetieth year, was able to attend the protracted meeting at Williamsburg, four miles from his home at Collins. Another worthy veteran, who was a constant attendant upon these services, is Mr. Alfred Graves, who for a long time was a local preacher in the Methodist Church, and who was well known in his section as a godly and useful man. In spite of his advanced years, he walks eight miles to preaching once a month, and his presence in the congregation is always felt to be a benediction.

The new parsonage at Morgan City, which has been so far completed that Brother Brown and family are living in it, is one of the most modern homes of all the Louisiana Conference parsonages. When finally completed the property, including lots, building and furniture, will be worth nearly $5,000. While it was being constructed, Brother Brown took up the craft of his Master, that of a carpenter, and worked with the other men. He earned about $200 in wages, all of which he turned back into the building fund, feeling that his time belonged to the charge, whether he used it as a visiting pastor, a preacher, or a carpenter.

From a recent issue of the Texas Christian Advocate, we take the following: "We had a delightful visit from Dr. A. M. Muckenfuss, of the University of Mississippi, recently. He had been to Austin to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, Prof. Sylvester Primer, who recently died there. Prof. Primer was a leading member of our Church, and was for some years the superintendent of the University Sunday school. Dr. Muckenfuss belongs to an old Methodist family and is a devout member of the Church. He has been granted a leave of absence by the University of Mississippi for sixteen months, and he will spend the time in Germany studying in the department of chemistry."

From Killen, Texas, under date of August 31, Mr. J. T. Foster writes as follows: "On Tuesday, August 20, the death angel visited my home and took away to a happier abode the spirit of my dear mother, Mrs. A. J. Foster, the widow of Rev. A. J. Foster, who was until his death a member of the North Mississippi Conference. She had been in feeble health all the past summer, but was seriously sick only a few days. Of course it is very hard to give mother up, but I know that she was prepared to go. This leaves me the only surviving member of our family." This announcement will touch with sadness many hearts in North Mississippi, where, with her husband, Sister Foster traveled in the itinerancy for many years. She lived worthily, wrought faithfully, and has now passed to her well-earned reward. We pray God's blessing upon all upon whom the shadow of this bereavement has fallen.

THE CULPEPPER MEETING.

Dear Dr. Meek: I am glad to fulfill the request you make, and the purpose I have held, to write you for the Advocate something about the meeting in which First Church of Jackson has been engaged for the past three weeks.

After a morning service, one Sunday in June, the congregation remained for consultation about a summer program of church activity. The Conference, in which many of our men and women spoke, became so interesting that it was adjourned to meet at the hour of the evening service, to take up the discussion. We met again on Monday night. Our people displayed concern for the prosperity of our Zion, for its answer to the divine call to evangelize the many hundreds in our city who never attend church or hear the Gospel. We desired to avoid the custom of lolling into uselessness and disorganization during the summer, requiring weeks of the fine fall season to get the church into working order again. It was finally resolved that to meet all the requirements we should have a tent meeting.

Correspondence with several evangelists, under divine guidance, resulted in our securing the services of the Rev. J. B. Culpepper and his son, Rev. O. B. Culpepper. For the fourth time, Brother Culpepper came to lead the forces of First Church in a revival campaign. Our congregation rejoices in the work these brethren have done. The preaching has been serious, spiritual, edifying. There have been warning and rebuke, invitation and appeal, instruction and exhortation. The Gospel has been preached. Sometimes the voice of the preacher has been similar to what I have imagined that of the old prophets to have been. Notably strong were the sermons on Debt Paying, Murder, and The Christian Sabbath. Brother Burke Culpepper succeeds excellently with his part of the work. The singing and the children's services are wholly in his hands. He soon gathered about him an equipment of two pianos, violin, flute, trombone and cornet, and many voices. The service of song has been an attractive and helpful feature. The children's meetings have been superb.

It has been demonstrated again that nothing is so popular as the Gospel. From night to night great audiences have been in attendance. Though hundreds sat or stood beyond the tent, there was not only no misbehavior, but a deep soberness and earnest attention characterized the people. They were there in work clothes, in shirt sleeves, in dainty attire, or whatever befitted their station and custom. They came with the whole family and sat in their buggies. Street car men came in to hear while they awaited their time for duty.

Other churches entered delightfully into the meeting. Nearly a hundred names have been placed on the list for membership in First Church; about fifty others will go to the different churches of the city. Sincerely yours,

ALFRED F. SMITH.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 29, 1912.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

Dear Dr. Meek: Some time ago you asked me to write of the plans and of the prospects of our school. Rather late I comply with your request. Our plans can be briefly stated as being all aimed at the religious culture of the young people who come to us. We believe that the present attention that is devoted to athletics is hurtful to the religious life and mental development of the students. Hence, our students are not allowed to go away from the school.

We are laying great stress on the study of the Scriptures. All students in the high school proper are required to study them. We are having good results too. This last summer Payton Varrell, one of our students, died after an operation. It was no surprise to me when the news came that he died happy. A number of heart-to-heart talks with him during the session, showing enlargement of faith and spiritual life, made me feel that he was indeed prepared to go. I cannot tell you the profound gladness of my heart arising from the knowledge of this fact.

For a long time I have known that there was needed in this State a school where thoroughness was actually accomplished. I outlined our plan to one of the most prominent educators of this State. After he had heard me through, he said to me, "Establish that character of school and you will fill a great need in Mississippi." We are prepared to do the work, Doctor; and I am sure that when the people of our State really find us out, we will most surely have their patronage.

Our course of study is patterned after that of Millsaps College and the University. Why should the youth of our State go from home to Tennessee and other States, when right at their doors is an institution that does the work at about half the cost? We take preachers and preachers' children at $120.

In a few years there will be six or seven young men from this school that will be in the first churches of our Conference. Strong-minded men they are, and hard students. There ought to be a fund for helping our poor young men.

A big-hearted man said to me the other day: "Brother Galloway, find a bright boy and I will pay his board and tuition." Why should not other men of means do the same thing? Not less than fifteen have applied to me for help, but, alas! I have not the means. One of the best men in the Mississippi Conference is what he is because a noble minded Christian woman helped him when he could not help himself.

May God put it into the hearts of some noble-minded men to help. The prospects for the next session, Doctor, are fine indeed.

Sincerely,

G. H. GALLOWAY, President.

GET READY FOR RALLY DAY.

The Graded Sunday school year begins the first Sunday in October, on which day all new pupils should be enrolled, new classes organized, and new departments initiated. The Sunday before, therefore, is the best time to rally. The program on this occasion should go through the whole day, beginning with a model Sunday school at the regular hour for meeting, at which time all promotions should be made and all rewards and certificates given, and all the new scholars present enrolled and classified. At the morning preaching hour the pastor should preach on a suitable Sunday school theme, and endeavor to put new life into the workers and develop new sympathizers for the Sunday school cause. At night such themes as the Home and Cradle Roll departments, the Adult Bible class, the Teacher Training class, the importance of the pupil's regular attendance, the help that parents could give the school in encouraging their children to prepare their lessons and to practice good deportment, may be discussed. It would also be advisable to report the percentage of additions to the Church from the Sunday school during the year, to argue to the adults their duty to lead their children in Sunday school interest and attendance, emphasizing the fact that "where men go boys will follow," and to dwell upon such other subjects as local needs may demand. If this can be done by local workers, it may be wise to use them, but otherwise let outside speakers be invited.

But if the Rally Day program is important, the preliminary and follow-up work is but little less so. Every scholar, as well as officer and teacher, should be enthused with the rally spirit by constantly announcing the occasion, sending cards to each, and lots of boosting. And then the names of all possible new scholars should be secured some weeks before Rally Day, and they should be invited to be present and in the class that they would join at the Sunday school hour. These names and addresses may be secured by passing around in the Sunday school and in the congregation at church, cards for the purpose, including both individuals and families that may be considered possible scholars. They should then be turned over to the officers and teachers to be personally invited, and to be sent rally day programs or cards again inviting them to be present on Rally Day. The pastor and officers and teachers should also go over the church register and find all the members who do not attend Sunday school, and either visit them or send them printed invitations to be present, and also urge the claims of the Sunday school upon them. Every family from which pupils come should be dealt with likewise. By all means, get the people out on Rally Day to see your work and to hear you present its claims in an all-day program.

After Rally Day a systematic follow-up campaign should be carried on and every possible pupil enlisted or compelled to "show the reason why." The "almost" should be fully "persuaded."

As to the best way of working the day, individual ingenuity will devise all necessary ways and means, if only the workers get together in counsel and get busy. Smith and Lamar have out a new advertising sheet of various Rally Day invitation cards and necessary helps. In case a Sunday school has not observed Children's Day, this would be a good time to have that program. Some appropriate banners bearing suitable mottoes might well be displayed as a part of the auditorium's decorations, or carried in marches or drills. Now is the time to act; to-morrow may be too late. Rally, Rally, Rally!

Kilmichael, Miss.

We have just closed our meetings on the Kilmichael charge. The first meeting was held at Kilmichael, beginning the third Sunday in July. Brother Lagrone, of Greenville, did the preaching. We had a great revival. The meeting ran 10 days, with good results. The fourth Sunday in July we began a meeting at Lodi, Brother E. M. Shaw doing the preaching. We had a good meeting. The second Sunday in August we started a meeting at Stewart. Brother J. A. Coleman, of Jonestown, did the preaching. We had a good meeting at this place. All these brethren are strong gospel preachers and good revivalists, and each of them did very fine work. Eternity alone can tell the good that was accomplished in these three meetings. The charge is greatly revived; several have been converted and a goodly number of backsliders have been reclaimed. We hope to go to Conference this fall with a full report, and give God all the praise.—T. J. Halfacre, P. C.

Arkabutla, Miss.

Brother Carlisle, from Columbus, assisted by the pastor, his brother, Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, has just closed a ten days' meeting in the Arkabutla Methodist Church. Twenty-five were received into the churches. There were eighteen additions to the Methodist Church and seven to the Baptist Church. All the Christians in the church were greatly revived under the inspiring preaching of the man of God, whose all absorbing thought is to lead men and women to Christ. He expressed a burning desire that all the followers of Christ should allow their professions and practice to go hand in hand. May God help us to do that. His earnest appeals, hallowed by the light of peace, faith, hope and the holy resignation shining from his face, were wonderfully potent in leading his hearers into a higher and nobler Christian life. Though the weather was warm, we had fine congregations, and much good was done. May this man of God, who made such earnest appeals to the people of Arkabutla, live long to preach the gospel to a dying world.—Four Laymen: J. V. Moore, C. H. Acree, N. H. Hall and J. D. Chambliss.

Summerland, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: As I have never seen anything in the Advocate from this part of the Lord's vineyard, with your permission, I will write about the wonderful meeting that has just closed at the Bay Springs, held by our pastor, Rev. Charlie Straight, assisted by that old war horse, Rev. L. T. Jones, of Montrose, Miss. Brother Jones did the preaching for three days, delivering two sermons a day. My, my! How the fire fell! Brother Jones is full of Holy Ghost religion, and it is a feast to the soul of any Christian to be with him. Our church building had been burned, and as we have a small membership, we held the meeting in the schoolhouse. Nine members were taken into the Church as a result. The members of the church were wonderfully revived. Brother Straight, our pastor, is a good man, and had things in good shape for the meeting. Brother Lazz Jones is a power for God in the winning of souls for his kingdom. May the God of all mercies be with him and his and sustain them through this life, and may he live long and go on winning souls for his Master. May God fill the Mississippi Conference with such godly men as Brother Jones. The writer has never attended a better meeting than was held by this man.—W. A. Sherman.

Prentiss, Miss.

Dear Dr. Meek: On Thursday night before the second Sunday in August, assisted by Brother Isaac L. Peebles, we began a meeting at Bassfield, which lasted six days. Brother Peebles preached three times a day, and gave us some great sermons, doctrinal, yet kind and helpful. Four persons joined the Church and two infants were baptized. Brother Peebles also helped in a meeting at Santee, embracing the third Sunday in August. The meeting lasted seven days. Here Brother Peebles was at his best. His sermons on "Water Baptism" at 11 o'clock on Sunday, and on "Falling from Grace, or Apostasy," at 2:30 p. m. were great, and were listened to by large congregations. My people were helped greatly. Five persons joined the Church and several promised to join at my next meeting time. Brother Peebles is a great preacher on doctrine, and doctrinal preaching was never needed so much as now. This way we have of dancing to the music of Calvinism in order to prevent friction should be stopped. We live well, and our members need to stand better by their pastors while they preach our doctrines. There is as much religion in preaching doctrinal sermons as any other kind. My soul has been helped; also my members have been helped as they have listened to Brothers Peebles and Bass as they preached on water baptism, falling from grace, the Church, the second coming of Christ, and the sin against the Holy Ghost. Of course, some people got a little mad and did not think these sermons ought to be preached, but they were, and Methodism here is better off by it. Well, I am closing my fourth year with a good conscience and will meet my labors at the judgment. God bless all my people. You are giving us a good paper.—M. L. White, Pastor.

Benton, Miss.

Dear Advocate: Somebody having been good enough to inform you that I live at Benton, in close proximity to Hon. Jno. S. Williams and other celebrities, and, furthermore, having presented a bouquet to my wife, I, in consequence, feel that something should be undertaken, on my part, to reciprocate. So appended is a list of new subscriptions and some renewals to the Advocate. To my friends and brethren, whom I see too seldom, let me say, "Howdy," and that this has been a very good year with me in some respects; and that I hope all of us will conclude the year happily and prosperously. It was my good fortune to have splendid help in my protracted meetings this summer and results were good. Revs. P. D. Hardin, T. B. Clifford, J. S. Purcell, and J. E. Williams are the brethren who came to me. My people, as well as myself, enjoyed their fine preaching and brotherly association. Dr. I. W. Cooper was with us on the first Sunday of this month and preached us two fine sermons. The Doctor's father is buried in the woodland back of this parsonage. It was here that the Doctor joined the Church in his childhood, and here he spent his youth. He also served this circuit for several years in his early ministry. A few of his kinsmen and many friends reside here. Of course, Benton is very dear to his heart, and he has a warm place in the affections of these people. With best wishes to all my brethren and to the good old Advocate, I am, fraternally, F. A. Applewhite.

HERMANVILLE, MISS.

The protracted meeting occasions for this charge are over. We began our season of revival work on the 24th of July. Failing to secure the help I had been depending on, the preaching fell to my lot. The people say we had a good meeting. We had one accession to the Church on profession of faith. The second meeting began at Carpenter, Miss., with Rev. R. W. Thurman to do the preaching, which he did in a most acceptable way, winning the confidence and high esteem of all who heard him. There were about twelve or fourteen who came out and took a decided stand for the Lord. Several were reclaimed. Any person who may secure Brother Thurman's help will not regret it, for he is an untiring worker for the Church and the salvation of the lost. The second Sunday in August the revival service for Pisgah was begun, with Brother W. W. Simmons, of Gloster, Miss., to do the preaching, and it was done in the old-time way, in earnestness of soul and heart, as only one like Brother Simmons can do it. Everyone expressed himself as being perfectly delighted. I am fully persuaded that much good was accomplished. We baptized one infant, and will receive the mother into the Church at our next second Sunday's service. The third Sunday in this month we began a revival service at our Sarepta Church, with Brother R. W. Thurman to do the preaching at this place. I am glad to report that the preaching was done in a very acceptable way, and it was convincing, convicting sinners, some of whom we believe were converted. Eight were received into the Church, four infant baptisms performed, and the church was generally revived. We believe much good has been accomplished and the fruits of these services will only be known in after years, maybe not until the judgment day. God bless the brethren who assisted in these services; for I verily believe that God has given them souls as seals to their ministry.—Rev. W. L. Blackwell, P. C.

WESLEY, (LA.) CHARGE.

Dear Advocate: We have held some good meetings on the Wesley charge. At Wesley we held three days and nights with some interest among some of the members and but little with outsiders. There were no additions. I did the preaching. The church has a small membership. We commenced at Davis Springs the fourth Sunday in July, with Rev. Paul M. Brown to do the preaching, and he did it well. His sermons were of a high order. There was no interest outside of the members of the church and not near as much as should have been among some of them. There were no additions. We closed on Friday night and commenced at Holly Springs the first Sunday in August. We had very good interest. Two Baptist preachers preached: one one sermon and the other three sermons, and I preached the rest of the time. We closed Saturday night with six additions. The rain seriously interfered with the meeting. The last service was real good, there being some three hundred in attendance, with five additions to the Church. We commenced at Carroll Creek the second Sunday in August, with a very good attendance and a good interest. We had fourteen additions. The Church was greatly encouraged and revived. I had no ministerial help. We organized a prayer meeting, secured some renewals for the Advocate at Holly Springs (four new subscribers and one renewal). I called attention to this important interest at Davis Springs and no one responded. I will hold one or two more meetings, not on the work, and may hold a few days more at two churches on the charge.—Thos. J. Martin, P. C.

NESHODA CHARGE, MISS. CONF.

I have just passed through my third quarterly conference at Coy. Our beloved presiding elder, T. J. O'Neil, was with us. The financial report was low, owing to the pressure of the times. We protracted the meeting five days. Brother O'Neil did all the preaching. The Holy Ghost was with us from the very beginning, and seemed to sweep the people absolutely off their feet. There were a great many bright conversions, and forty-eight additions to the Church, forty-six of this number by baptism. We expect others to follow. We have a splendid Sunday school at that place, with a young lady superintendent. She certainly understands her work. Coy is a new place that I organized nine years ago. There are now something over one hundred members there. This was Brother O'Neil's first trip to Coy, and the people were much impressed with his preaching and power. This is Brother O'Neil's fourth year on this district, and he is winding up with great success. Any district in the Conference would be in safe hands under Brother O'Neil's administration. I pray that he may live a long time to bless the world and the Church. I have other meetings to hold yet, in which I will be assisted by Brother Edgar Hillman. I will write more fully when I am through. I am winding up my fourth year on this charge for the third quadrennium. I will not travel any more after this Conference. I will be in the local ranks proper. With best wishes to you and the dear old Advocate, I am,—J. C. Long, P. C.

REPORTS A GOOD MEETING.

Our annual protracted meeting commenced on Sunday, August 11, and lasted eight days. Our beloved pastor, Rev. S. D. Howard, was in charge and preached sixteen able and soul-stirring sermons. As a result there were nine conversions, three additions, and twelve infants were baptized. The whole membership of the church was also wonderfully revived, and the entire community was greatly benefited. Brother Wascom, the pastor of the Baptist Church, was with us one day, and his people rendered valuable assistance in the services. We were also indebted to the Black Water congregation for the use of their late supply of hooks, and to Mrs. Emma Hawsey, who served us faithfully as organist. A purse of $42.50 was made up for Brother Howard at the close of the meeting. He is much appreciated by our people. A LAYMAN.

THE HIGH COST OF LIVING.

Few people realize what a large part of the increased cost of living is due to the wasteful and destructive methods of modern times. Especially is this true in reference to the almost innumerable campaigns of villification against everything and everybody. People seem to have lost all confidence in each other. Investigations, inspections, prosecutions are the order of the day—and it all costs money. It amounts to millions and millions of dollars each year. Who pays the cost? The people, of course. How? In the increased cost of everything we have to buy.

In the good days that are gone every man was supposed to have enough common sense to buy what he wanted, where he wished, and to decide for himself whether the goods were good or bad, full weight or short measure. If his grocer sent him specked potatoes or rancid lard, he sent them back or changed his account to some other store. Now it is different. We support an innumerable army of inspectors and specialists who are supposed to analyze and inspect everything we buy. We pay them to do our thinking for us. Now we pay inspectors to force the merchant to be honest, whether he wants to be or not—formerly we obtained the same result by withholding our patronage.

Does governmental paternalism pay? It certainly costs enormously. For example, it is conservatively estimated that the Government's suit against the Coca Cola Company last spring cost the people $100,000. What did they get in return for this big pile of money? Only this: "That Coca Cola is neither mislabeled nor adulterated, as charged." Think of paying $100,000 for this scrap of information which you or I could have bought for $10.00 by sending a sample from the open market to be analyzed by any professional chemist or professor of analytical chemistry in our numerous colleges and universities. It is estimated that it cost the Coca Cola Company as much to defend itself as it did the government. That makes a total cost of $200,000 for the verdict. All of which was absolutely thrown away as the Coca Cola Company had already had their product analyzed by nearly all of the State chemists of the South and professors of chemistry in some ten or more leading Colleges and Universities, and had published these letters to the world through the public press.

But the Coca Cola case is only one drop in the big bucket of expense of paternalism in government. The commissioner's fees, the director's fees, the expert's fees, the inspector's fees, the lawyer's fees, and the total court costs are now added to the price of everything we buy from diamonds to guano and from beefsteak to baking powder.

The working Christian seldom backslides. It is generally the idler that Satan tempts and leads astray.

Woman's Missionary Work

Edited by Mrs. R. F. Harrell, 1329 Josephine St., New Orleans
Conference Press Superintendents:

Louisiana Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La.
Mississippi Mrs. H. L. McCleskey, Hazlehurst, Miss.
North Mississippi Mrs. A. C. Yeager, Water Valley, Miss.

All communications for this department should be sent to the Editor at the address given above.

This week we want to put you in touch with your Press Superintendents. Each one has a message for you, and each message comes freighted with love and earnest prayer. These women are working earnestly for the extension of God's kingdom, and they realize that unless we know about our work and can pray intelligently for it, we are going to miss the larger vision of life.

It is our desire that this column may prove a stimulus to all of our women. We will exchange ideas, methods and items of news that pertain to the work, for only by knowing are we "constrained to do." Are we, then, asking too much, when we ask your hearty co-operation for these faithful women? Do you realize that their work is often hard, and at times, most discouraging? However, they have the assurance of this nearness, and "The work which we count so hard to do

He makes it easy, for He works too."

We ask that you do your part in lifting the burden and thus hasten the time when "the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

FROM THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PRESS SUPERINTENDENT.

It was with keen interest and grateful pleasure that we received the announcement of a definite place being given in the Advocate for the work of the three press superintendents. While it is true that many of the members of societies subscribe for the organ of our Southern Board of Missions, "The Voice," and many Methodist families receive regularly our church organ, The Advocate, still we believe that the ideal conditions do not obtain until each home in Southern Methodism is blessed by the regular visits of these two indispensable bearers of good tidings.

We firmly believe that the column which has been set aside for news from these three closely connected Conferences will prove a medium for disseminating helpful information, and of creating vital interest in the work right here among ourselves, for it is not always possible or plausible for such matter to be issued through the Missionary Voice; and to this end the Press Superintendents must rely largely upon the co-operation of the District Secretaries—and the Press Agents of Auxiliaries. If they will report news items, notes of interest, and any information that may be of help and inspiration to others in the same work, it will be possible to make this column so replete with interest that each subscriber interested in the missionary activities of her Church will look forward to this column in each Advocate with ever increasing pleasure.

As newly elected Press Superintendent of the Mississippi Conference, I wish to express my gratitude to the District Secretaries for so promptly replying to recent requests and supplying much needed information in regard to the auxiliaries in their districts.

Believing that there is strength in union, and in view of the fact that all the Conferences in our division are now united, I believe that we are entering the most auspicious year in our history. My earnest prayer is that we may "go on from strength to strength" as the Lord prospers his servants in the carrying forward of the work committed to them.

MRS. H. L. McCLESKEY.

FROM THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE PRESS SUPERINTENDENT.

Our aim for this column is to make it the very best in the Southern Methodist Church. We can do it if we have the co-operation of all the intelligent women who have been appointed Press Superintendents.

Our purpose is to place the work of women in the Church on a higher plane than it has ever occupied before; to broaden the outlook of missionary women, so that it will embrace every creed and race, to catch the spirit of the Master when He said, "No new commandment I bring unto you; this I give, that ye love one another."

"So many gods, so many creeds,
So many ways that wind and wind,
While just the art of being kind
Is all this sad world needs."

Our plan is to bring our methods into touch with those of other churches; by comparison, to see which system stands the test, assimilating the best that is in each; to encourage interdenominational relations with other sects, thus fostering the "spirit of comity, of fraternity, of unity," which is one of the blessed signs of the times, and of the nearer approach of the kingdom. MRS. A. C. YEAGER.

FROM THE LOUISIANA CONFERENCE PRESS SUPERINTENDENT.

Dear Sisters: I'm sending my message to you in the little verse Miss Head taught us at the Louisiana Conference in Natchitoches. If you will sing it daily for one month I'm sure we will all be benefited. The tune is the familiar one of Auld Lang Syne.

Report, report, report;

Report, report, report."

We want our work to move up, and we want people to know that it is moving; but we cannot know unless you tell us.

Yours in waiting expectancy,

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Rev. B. F. Lewis.

The I. T. Class of our Sunday school at Gloster, Miss., mailed a fifty-two ounce package of Lesson Picture Cards to a missionary in Mexico on August 21. Mrs. J. H. Lard, who is the teacher, says that they expect to do more of this work in the future.

Brother W. Fred Long, secretary of the State Sunday School Association has issued a booklet, "How to Organize a County Sunday School Association." It is full of practical suggestions, and should be in the hands of every county officer in the State. With this booklet, there is no reason why every county should not be organized and do effective work. Almost every question has been anticipated and answered.

The Sunday School Board of our Conference has just issued a leaflet on the "Elementary Work of an Organized Sunday School." This is the joint effort of the chairman and Elementary superintendent. We desire to put this leaflet into the hands of every Sunday school superintendent of our Conference having organized or desiring to organize, his smaller children for elementary work. We have tried to anticipate all your needs in this effort. The leaflet may be had by addressing our Elementary Superintendent, Miss Daisy Magee, Columbia, Miss., or the Chairman of the Board, same post office. Enclose a two cent stamp for postage.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Sunday School Board early in August, we were fortunate enough to secure the services of Brother R. A. Maddox, of Edwards, Miss., as Field Secretary. He begins work on September 1, but it is our desire that he shall, for the present, spend most of his time in the rural sections of the Conference. We earnestly trust the brethren will avail themselves of his services. We make only one request, viz: When he comes to you, if possible, pay his actual traveling expenses. However, if you feel that this is impossible, do not hesitate to call on him, for he is here to serve, and where a school feels unable to do this much, the Board will gladly meet the expense. Brother Maddox can be reached at Edwards, Miss., or by addressing the Chairman of the Board at Columbia, Miss.

We were especially attracted to the Sunday school report of the Poplar Springs Methodist Church for the first six months of the year. The officers are, Rev. Jno. Paul, pastor; D. S. Harmon, Sunday school superintendent; W. A. Baker, assistant Sunday school superintendent; W. E. Curtis, secretary, and W. S. Holmes, assistant secretary. The school is organized under "The Loyal Sunday School Army of America" system. The attendance for the first six months exceeded that for the same period of last year, with larger contributions. Forty-six certificates of merit were given at the close of the second quarter. The school is organized into a Missionary Society and has raised $36.27. Birthday offerings amounted to $9.92. There is a Cradle Roll, with Miss Ida Curtis as superintendent, and a Home Department, with Mrs. M. R. Holladay as superintendent. Forty-five members have been enrolled, with more to follow.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

On a recent Sunday Mr. V. L. Fulton's class of First Church, Shreveport, subscribed $27.50 to the Student Volunteer Movement. Their teacher being a missionary enthusiast and the Lay Leader of our Conference, it is not surprising that these young people are themselves ready to share in the evangelization of the world. From such classes we should look for our preachers and missionaries to come.

The pastor's wife from Natchitoches, where Professor Bobbett was until recently a teacher in the State Normal school, thus writes a church worker in Mansfield: "I am so glad to tell you of one little girl there who I know will be faithful in all things—Mary Bobbett. She worked so finely here in the Missionary society and we have missed her sweet little life from our circle; but are glad that in another town she can take up the work and help others. Her gift of story telling is remarkable. In that she can take the monthly leaflet and give it perfectly to the other children." We note this, both because of the pride we have in the success of one of our own children and to congratulate our Louisiana Methodists that he who has been called to train their daughters at Mansfield is so successful in training his own, like Abraham, who was called to be the father of the chosen people because "he would command his house after him."

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

"A man by earnest searching may find God, but it is only by serving that he can really know him."

Mr. Gladney's Boy Scouts are splendid. They are ready to serve, to sing, to help somebody to-day, or to play fair on the play-ground.

Mr. Pegram, a fine young lawyer of Ripley, has a good men's class, and so well has he trained his men that when he was called away unavoidably and could not respond to the address of welcome, a talented young farmer and teacher took his place and made an admirable address.

It is now just the time to order Rally Day programs and begin to gather up the scattered threads of summer laxness. A Rally Day is needed in any and every school, and if Children's Day service has not been observed, make this day the best of the year and take your belated Children's Day collections.

Dr. John Y. Murry, of Ripley, presided for the twenty-fifth time at the Tippah County Sunday School Convention which met Aug. 15-16, and his wonderful spirit and gracious Old-South personality permeated all the proceedings. Methodism is infinitely blessed to have such a man to lead her Sunday school hosts in Tippah County.

Rev. J. W. Dorman, presiding elder of the Sardis District, opened the Panola County Sunday School Convention with a beautiful consecration service. After the reading of the Scripture, he asked all the Sunday School teachers and workers who wanted a special endowment of the Holy Spirit to come about the altar place and, shoulder to shoulder, ask God for it. The spirit of consecration, thus induced, ran through the whole convention like a silver thread.

At the request of Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, treasurer of the Sunday School Board of the North Mississippi Conference, the statement made by Rev. P. O. Lowrey in his recent article, will be repeated: "The per cent of Children's Day collections designated for the Chair of Pedagogy to be established in Vanderbilt University, is not given to the University now, but will be held in trust until the Vanderbilt matter is finally adjusted. Every preacher or superintendent can send in his collections at once, feeling assured that the funds will be properly and profitably applied."

Constipated? Go To Your Doctor

It is impossible to be well, simply impossible, if the bowels are constipated. Waste products, poisonous substances, must be removed from the body at least once each day, or there will be trouble. Ask your doctor about Ayer's Pills, gently laxative, all vegetable. He knows why they act directly on the liver.

Piano Club

THE advertising manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate dropped in on Mr. Dorough, President of Ludden & Bates, the other day for a social call. Lying on his desk was a letter from a prominent clergyman in South Carolina, which read: “We are perfectly delighted with the superb instrument,” etc., etc. When the visitor remarked that this letter would prove interesting to the readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Mr. Dorough replied that similar letters were received practically every day and that he had yet to learn of a single case of dissatisfaction.

This seemed almost too good to be true, but when it is remembered that in the organization of the club every conceivable safeguard and protection is thrown around the club member so that there is absolutely nothing for him to be dissatisfied about, the wonder is readily explained. The return privilege, the exchange privilege, the great saving in cost, the triple guarantee, the convenient payment privilege, and the superb quality of the Ludden & Bates’ Pianofortes—these combine to make a piano opportunity, the like of which has never before been known.

The new club booklet and catalogue is a thing of beauty. It sets forth fully and clearly every detail of the club and contains information that you simply cannot afford to do without. It explains how a club of one hundred piano buyers makes it not only possible but easy to really and truly save one-third of the cost, and at the same time provide many side features of convenience, safety and economy.

The new club booklet also contains handsome photo-engravings showing the five beautiful styles of instruments that are now available. If you are at all interested in pianos, grand or upright, or in self-player pianos, send in your name and address. We have a copy reserved for you. Address

Editorial

One master passion in the breast,
Like Aaron's rod, will swallow up the rest.
—Alexander Pope.

The quaintest and most succinct estimate of the political situation in the campaign for the presidency that we have seen, is the following by the Wall Street Journal:

G O P
T R = W W

The Northwestern Christian Advocate, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says: "Pastoral evangelism is to be the dominant note at many of the fall conferences." This is as it should be. Evangelistic pastors, men who have a consuming passion for winning souls, are the need of Methodism everywhere. With such men in our pulpits, our churches would soon become centers of light and power.

We should not call upon the Master in the hour of adversity, and as soon as the clouds have passed, forget and ignore him. Other dark days are sure to come, and there are perhaps ahead the infirmities of old age, and certainly the crisis of death. Jesus is the only friend who can go with us all along the way of life, and whose arm is strong enough to sustain us amid all its sorrows and vicissitudes. Without him, we may well tremble in fearful anticipation of what may come; but with him, we may with cheerful confidence confront the future. Have you, dear reader, taken him into your heart and life? Not to do so is the greatest mistake that a human being can possibly make.

THE KIND OF PREACHERS NEEDED.

God's chief method of reaching and saving humanity is through preaching. There are many subsidiary agencies that help in the great work, but the spoken gospel is the most efficient means of leading men into the way of life. When the pulpit is weak the Church has sustained a loss that nothing else can adequately supply. The sermon should be the principal thing in our regular Sunday services, and if it is not, the largest measure of good will not be accomplished. Strong, manly, well-equipped, fearless, and effective preachers are perhaps the greatest need of the religious world to-day. And every man called into the Christian ministry should stir up the gift that is within him and strive to become such.

In a recent issue of the Pacific Methodist Advocate this subject was impressively discussed by Dr. Mark A. Matthews, the present moderator of the General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church, who in the course of a few years has built up in Seattle, Wash., what is said to be the largest Presbyterian church in the world. We quote, in part, his striking utterance:

"The pulpit's greatest need is prophets. It has too many parrots. The world hears too many essays and sermonettes and too few real sermons, real expositions of God's Word, real discussions of sin and real presentations of the plan of salvation.

"No man can preach unless he preaches the deity of Christ, the vicarious atonement, the awfulness of sin, and salvation by Jesus Christ. If the pulpits of the country were filled with prophets who were exposing the awfulness of sin, the certainty of the judgments to be imposed upon sin and the consequences that must necessarily come to every unregenerated sinner, there would be an awakening throughout this country such as has never been experienced.

"The ministers of Jesus Christ must first have a deep consciousness of sin; the awfulness of sin must impress itself upon the heart and conscience of every minister of the gospel before he can preach, and not until then will he preach.

"I don't blame the people for not going to church when they receive only essays and sermonettes delivered like a poem is recited, in fifteen or twenty minutes. The church that has a long musical program and a nice little sermonette appendix, resembles a refrigerator filled with flowers.

"The pulpits of this country ought to be filled with prophets who can produce conviction by presenting the facts concerning sin, and offering the people Jesus Christ, who is the only remedy and escape from sin. The prophets of old were, and the prophets of the present day ought to be, men of conviction—men who believe something, men of courage, men of action, men who defy consequences and preach the truth regardless of whom it may affect. The pulpits ought to be filled with prophets who pray and prepare and who go into the pulpits expecting results every time they preach.

"If the pulpits were filled with prophets, they would be willing not only to speak to the people on the questions of sin and salvation until they feared the consequences of sin and begged Christ to save them, but they would go even further than that, and lead the people back to the paths of righteousness, in which they would make restitution for wrongs done.

"There was never a more opportune time in the history of this country for the work of disinterested prophets of the pulpit than the present time. If this country ever experiences a true reformation, it will be brought about by the fearless, God-serving, Spirit-filled, courageous prophets in our pulpits. As the leader said to Ezra, 'It is your business; attend to it,' so God and the whole Church say to the honest preacher: 'It is your business to preach the gospel; demand of the people repentance and restitution; clean up social conditions, and proclaim liberty to all the people.' The pulpit of to-day needs men who are not afraid to preach the same gospel to saint and sinner, high and low, rich and poor, one and all."

GOVERNOR BREWER'S AGGRESSIVE STAND.

For some time there have been in circulation reports that the near-beer saloons in Vicksburg were selling intoxicating beverages in open violation of the law. Having last week obtained what he believed to be reliable information to this effect, Governor Brewer issued a ringing letter to the sheriff of Warren County threatening to take legal steps to depose him from office unless this unlawful traffic in strong drinks is promptly stopped. The sheriff replied to the Governor at once, assuring him that he would leave undone nothing within his power to enforce a strict observance of the prohibition statutes.

Governor Brewer's vigorous action to suppress illicit retailing will command the hearty approval of an overwhelming majority of the people of Mississippi. And with the Chief Executive of the State standing aggressively for the faithful enforcement of the Dramshop Chapter of the Code, it ought to be possible to make it effective in every town and county. Indeed, with such backing, the moral and upright citizens of every community should see that this is done. A few bad men, actuated by a desire for gain, should not be allowed to make nugatory the will of the people as expressed in legislative enactments. If they will not voluntarily refrain from doing what the law forbids, they should be placed where it is impossible for them thus to afflict the body politic. And if officers charged with the duty of executing the law will not honestly and fearlessly try to do so, they should be dismissed, as Governor Brewer threatened to do in this instance. A few examples of this would, we doubt not, immensely strengthen the cause of civic righteousness in every part of the commonwealth.

SEND THEM ALONG!

Rev. John D. Ellis, the faithful and efficient chaplain of the Mississippi State Penitentiary, has issued a call for assistance in building up a library on the Rankin State farm. He asks for donations of interesting works of fiction, biography, and history, and helpful religious books; and offers to pay the freight or express charges on all volumes sent to him at Jackson, Miss. This appeal ought to evoke a generous response from all parts of the State. This furnishes an opportunity for Epworth Leaguers and Adult Sunday school classes to render a real service by making a canvass of the community for such books as are desired, and forwarding them as Brother Ellis has requested. As disciples of Him who labored among the outcasts and the guilty, let us hear and heed this call. The influence of such a work no finite mind can measure.

In spite of seeming discouragements we are never to grow faint in praying. An honest, persevering faith, a faith that works for the very object that it is praying for, a faith that holds on in spite of rebuffs, is the faith that conquers.
—Theodore L. Cuyler.

THE TRIAL OF THE KOREAN CHRISTIANS.

By R. B. Eleazer.

It appears from press reports that the trial of the Korean Christians, including Baron Yun, who are accused of conspiracy against the life of Count Terauchi, the Japanese Governor-General of Korea, is rapidly drawing to a close. Whatever the verdict may be, there are certain facts in connection with this case which should be known to the world and particularly to our Southern Methodist people, whose interest in Baron Yun is so deep and personal.

The writer has had opportunity to follow the case pretty closely for some months through letters from our missionaries, Japanese papers and the American press reports. In the light of this information I do not hesitate to assert that the case is so absolutely groundless that it would be thrown out of any American court in thirty minutes. It is evident that the conspiracy was not one on the part of Korean Christians to assassinate the Governor-General, but rather a plot on the part of the police to discredit and destroy some of the religious leaders of whom they were suspicious or jealous. The case, as made out by the prosecution, is ridiculous. If it were not so tragic, it would be comical. Below are given some outstanding features of the case which go to show the justice of the above statements:

I. Of the 123 Koreans on trial nearly all testified unequivocally that they had been subjected to torture by the police, in many cases severe and repeated, in the effort to extort confessions. They assert that they were beaten, choked, tied up by the thumbs, burned with hot irons, and otherwise subjected to unendurable physical pain. Being for months in the hands of the police, without communication with their friends, many of the accused admit that they broke down under the terrific mental and physical strain and made confessions of guilt to the police in order to escape further punishment. These confessions, in every case, were simply in the nature of affirmative answers to the questions with which the police were plying them. As soon as they had a chance in open court, every one of the 123, with a single exception, denied absolutely all knowledge of a plot or complicity therein, repudiating the alleged confessions.

II. The State's entire case was based upon these so-called confessions. Not a shred of additional evidence did the prosecution introduce; not a single corroborating circumstance or witness was brought forward with the one exception mentioned above. The sole exception was one of the accused whose conflicting and wild assertions led many to believe him crazy. If such a plot had existed it ought to have been possible to produce at least some outside evidence of it.

III. There was nothing judicial about the trial and no semblance of fairness. The presiding judge took the part of the prosecuting attorney, did all the questioning, and tried in every way to make the prisoners admit their guilt. The prosecution took at least fifteen days for the introduction of its testimony, while the defense was cut off with less than a day. The defense asked the privilege of introducing evidence which they insisted would completely prove the innocence of the accused, but the judge, determined to convict, declined to admit any further testimony. Mr. Yun, for example, was prepared to prove by indisputable church and school records that he was in another city at the times when he was accused of being in conference with other alleged conspirators—not a word of this evidence was permitted to be introduced. Likewise the testimony of railroad and telegraph records were offered in defense, but the judge ruled them out. It was as plain as day that he was determined to convict the prisoners whether or no.

IV. The police evidently intended to involve a number of the leading American missionaries in the plot. They were accused of concealing the arms, encouraging the would-be assassins, and planning with them the death of the Governor-General. This was too ridiculous, and even the Japanese officials disavowed any belief whatever in the guilt of the missionaries and denied any intention to press the charges against them. The evidence on which the guilt of the Koreans was maintained, however, was exactly the same as that against the missionaries, viz: the confessions of the accused before the police. If these confessions are acknowledged to be false as regards the missionaries, how can they be held as true against the Koreans?

V. The nature of the charge itself discredits the whole proceeding. It is charged that these 120 men, in different parties and at different times, laid their plans to assassinate the Governor-General, met him on a number of occasions where the opportunity was excellent to carry out their purpose, yet not in a single case did any one offer the slightest violence or even make an effort to do so. They went to the railroad station, for example, on a number of occasions, so the charges state, with pistols and knives concealed under their coats, grimly determined to kill Terauchi at any cost. The latter came out of the train, walked freely up and down within a few feet of the conspirators, shook hands with the people, and gave them every opportunity, yet not a gun was drawn nor a knife displayed. Conspirators so harmless are surely not worth the time of the court. As a matter of fact, nearly all were Christian teachers and schoolboys, who had gone to meet the Governor-General, as a mark of respect and without a thought of doing him harm.

VI. Even the Japanese newspapers recognize the foolishness and injustice of the charges. The "Japan Weekly Mail" and the "Japan Chronicle" have devoted page after page to exposures of the flimsiness and unfairness of the proceedings. Nothing but a determination to convict, in spite of every evidence of innocence, can bring about a verdict of guilty.

VII. To the credit of Japan, however, it should be said that many believe the Japanese Government is innocent of any complicity in the plot against the Korean Christians, and that it has been developed solely by the local police and petty officials through prejudice or jealousy. Japan, for years, has shown no unfriendliness to Christianity. Even had it determined upon a policy of persecution in Korea, it surely would not have made out a case so clumsy and self-condemnatory. There have been many rumors that the new Emperor was about to release the accused Koreans, and even if they shall be convicted, it seems not improbable that he will do so. By this means the Government would not only do an act of justice, but would relieve itself from the position that must be embarrassing and discreditable in the eyes of the civilized nations, among which Japan desires to take a position of equality. Whatever the verdict of the court and the action of the Government, nobody who knows the facts will, for an instant, doubt the innocence of Baron Yun and his fellow Christians who are suffering for their faith.

THE FACTS ABOUT THE NEGRO.

By Charles Stelzle.

The negro problem is shifting from the South to the North. At any rate, the Census figures indicate that the South is becoming whiter, largely due to the fact that there is a steady migration of the negro to the North. Also, the figures show that the negro is going to the city in both the North and the South. The percentage of negroes for the entire country is 10.7; for the cities of 25,000 and over it is 16.5. Negroes constitute one-fourth or more of the total population in each of twenty-seven of these cities, and in four of them the proportion is more than half. In each of twelve cities there are more than 40,000 negroes, although in Washington, D. C., the negro population is 94,446.

The wildest guesses imaginable have been made as to the future of the negro race. It has been said with equal insistence and with probably equal authority, both that the negro would ultimately dominate the United States because of the large birth-rate among negroes, and that the negro race would some day be practically eliminated.

As a matter of fact, while during the past sixty years the total population of the country has increased four-fold, the negro population has increased only two and two-thirds fold. But it must not be forgotten that, whereas the increase of the white population was largely due to a considerable influx of foreigners, the increase of negroes depended almost entirely upon native stock. However, the actual situation may be arrived at by comparing the relative death and birth rates of the two races.

While it is impossible to secure complete vital statistics in this country, there are certain registration areas in which figures are kept. Unfortunately these areas are for the most part in the cities; there are almost no records for the country. In 1890 the death rate for negroes in the registration areas was 29.9 per thousand, whereas for whites it was only 19.1 per thousand. As these figures for the negroes included a few Mongolians and Indians it would be fair to say that the actual death rate was about 29 per thousand for the negro. This means that for every thousand negroes, 29 die annually. In the Census Report for 1900 the figures for death rates are as follows: negroes 30.2 per thousand; whites 17.3 per thousand. It will be seen that not only is the death rate among negroes nearly twice as great as that among whites, but that the death rate among negroes is increasing, whereas it is decreasing among whites.

In the matter of birth rates, all the facts are against the negro. Absolutely reliable data is not available, but taking the number of children in the United States to females between the ages of fifteen to forty-four years of age, we arrive at the following conclusions: In the United States as a whole there were in 1880 to every 1000 white women 586 children; to every 1000 negro women (including Indians and Mongolians) 759 children. In 1900 there were to every 1000 white women 508 children, and to every 1000 negro women 585 children. While the birth rate has greatly declined for both races in twenty years, it has declined more rapidly among negroes than among whites; namely, 73 per thousand for whites, and 174 per thousand for negroes.

These figures would seem to indicate the continued supremacy of the white race—if present tendencies continue. But this fact continues to stare us in the face: the negro is actually increasing in numbers, not as fast relatively as is the white, but we may as well make up our minds that the negro is here to stay. It's simply a question as to whether he will be a "good" negro or a "bad" negro. And the answer to this question depends as much upon the whites as it does upon the blacks. We should also consider it a finality that the white race and the negro race will rise or fall together. It is impossible to have a nation part free and part slave; it is still more impossible to have at the same time in one country, a morally and physically decaying race, and a surviving race untouched by the dying race's fate.

If we could definitely settle this it would save us from a lot of flabby thinking and worse scheming. The negro will never return to Africa to establish a Liberian Republic. He is the only man in America who has been brought here against his will. For 250 years there was systematically expunged from the negro race the best qualities which fit a man for citizenship in a democracy. Considering the lack of opportunity, the advice of fool friends, and the inherent limitations which are both natural and acquired, the negro has done pretty well since the day that he was set free.

The fact that the negro is dying in such large numbers of tuberculosis and other still more frightful diseases is, of course, due to his ignorance and to other reasons for which he is largely responsible, but we cannot forget that it is also to be charged to the fact that he is compelled to live in the worst sections of our towns and cities, often without drainage or sewerage or garbage service, without water within a reasonable distance, and scarcely any of the sanitary conditions in house or yard or street which whites consider an absolute necessity. We drive the worst forms of immorality into the negro quarters and then curse the negro because of his moral weakness. We subject him to the severest test of our city life—physical, moral and political—and then cynically declare that the "nigger" is no good anyway. Let's give him a square deal—a man's chance. Neither race hatred nor mawkish sentimentality will settle this very delicate question. The South cannot settle it alone, and the North cannot do the work for the South. The North and the South, the city and the country, must tackle the thing together, for this is a national problem.

New York City, N. Y.

"A GREAT WORK."

We notice in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of August 22, that Dr. W. E. Dickey, the president of Emory College, has succeeded in inducing the presiding elders' districts in Georgia to provide for the maintenance of ten young preachers while taking the Biblical course in the institution of which he is the head, at an estimated cost of $200 each. This is a timely movement, and is an example for the entire Church to follow. The presiding elders can do a great work by taking this responsibility on them. This work has been on my heart for some time. I know from personal experience that it is an awfully hard job to work your way through college. There are very few Methodist churches that want a college student as their pastor. Many of the Baptist churches in Mississippi are filled by Mississippi College students, and thereby the churches are educating their ministers while the preachers are preaching to them.

Many of our Methodist people are educated and are demanding a better educated ministry. If each presiding elder in Mississippi would assume the education of one worthy young preacher at Millsaps College and continue this work year after year, the Church would be turning out about four graduated preachers per year. This would be an abiding work for Methodism in Mississippi. The presiding elders could figure out this assessment on the basis of the pastor's salary for each church in the district, and explain the purpose of the collection.

If I had this to raise I would say to the different churches: You are demanding better educated ministers; therefore we are going to let you help educate them, and then ask for that church's part. And I would do every church in the district the same way. Don't the presiding elders of the two Mississippi Conferences think this ought to be undertaken? For instance, to raise $200 for the Jackson District would be about one per cent of the pastors' salaries. This would be only $9 for the Bolton charge, of which I am pastor. This would amount to $5 for the Bolton Church, $2.75 for Raymond Church, and $1.25 for Brownsville Church. By the above calculation, you will see that this would be a small item for each church, but it would be educating a man to preach the gospel. There is no congregation but what would gladly pay their part in this great work, if properly presented to them.

As Dr. Meek says, "Larger ministerial help funds are needed in all our Annual Conferences, and they ought by all means to be provided."

If the presiding elders in Mississippi think the suggestions in this article are worthy of consideration, I beg them to inaugurate the movement; and if they don't approve these suggestions, I beg them to start a wiser movement. Present and future Methodism in Mississippi demands it.

Many of our young preachers can do efficient work without a finished education, but they can do more efficient work if educated and equipped. Many of them would finish their education if only the means were available, and it is possible for the Church to furnish the necessary means.

OUR ORDER OF WORSHIP.

I have observed a few things in the practice of our order of worship that may be of some value in the direction of a uniform and dignified service:

1. In the great majority of churches where the full order is not observed, that is, where some or all the parts in brackets are omitted, there is a constant violation of the requirement that the congregation stand during the singing of the second hymn. This is really the only change from the old order that is mandatory, and it should by all means be observed. The principal occasion of the violation seems to be the custom of taking up the collection at this time, but this makes a double violation, as the collection should be a separate act of worship, taken either in silence or during the rendering of an offertory. A correction of this would aid the spirit of both the collection and the hymn.

2. To churches where the order is more or less observed in all its parts, including those which are optional, I have a few suggestions to make. The choir should not, except perhaps on special occasions, render more than one musical selection of considerable length. If, as the order of worship makes possible, three long pieces are rendered, a disproportionate amount of time is consumed, and inasmuch as the average town or city congregation does not wish to be detained much over one hour, the preacher is embarrassed by having to abbreviate important parts of the worship and especially by having to begin the delivery of his message when the hour is nearly over, and when it will not be as well understood or appreciated. I recall a number of special instances where strong sermons were not well received by audiences which otherwise would have been stimulating and helpful. I think a well prepared anthem is greatly inspiring to both preacher and congregation. John Wesley was aided in his search for the experience of conscious salvation by hearing an anthem in St. Paul's Cathedral on the eventful Sunday morning when his heart was "strangely warmed." The longer selection, whether anthem or voluntary of some other kind, should, I think, follow the prayer. In this case, the opening voluntary, and offertory should be brief; and, personally, I prefer that the offertory be an appropriate instrumental selection, for the reason that the second congregational hymn, when immediately preceded by a vocal selection from the choir, is felt by the congregation to be too much, and is accompanied by opening of watches. The Gloria Patri should be a great burst of praise in which both choir and congregation join.

3. I will make a few suggestions that are applicable to all congregations. The order of worship should be carefully observed by all: (a) For the sake of uniformity. If any preacher or choir may modify it to suit his individual taste, there will be endless confusion. Otherwise, a stranger may find himself on familiar ground anywhere in Episcopal Methodism.

(b) For the sake of dignity. Much of our worship is slipshod, and certainly not more spiritual on that account. We have no right to dispense with the closing Doxology, and the preacher is obligated to repeat II. Cor., 13 and 14, as the closing benediction (it does not begin with "Now may") and he has no right to substitute any other.

The average congregation does not rise to its feet to sing the hymn until it has begun. They should be trained to rise beforehand. In many country churches it is the signal for the male part of the congregation to leave their places under the trees and come in.

Many congregations that cannot have trained choirs and cannot have the full order of worship, may at least be taught to repeat the Apostles' Creed and Lord's Prayer, and could learn to sing the Gloria Patri as readily as "Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow." R. H. WYNN.

MRS. REUBEN W. MILLSAPS.

Of all the encomiums passed upon the character of our blessed Savior, none is more expressive of his walk among men than that spoken by the Apostle Peter in the house of Cornelius, that "He went about doing good," an epitaph that might well be coveted among the best gifts.

Of the subject of this sketch, however, it may be more truly written that "others sought for her," for from the days of her earliest womanhood to the end of her long and beautiful career her life was given to the schoolroom and the home. She was satisfied to work in these less obtrusive circles, and no life was ever crowned with greater success and richer rewards. Those who have passed under her hand in the school room cease not to speak her praise and "her children rise up to call her blessed." Many have done virtuously, but none have excelled her in measuring up to the full stature of the strong woman, as described in the last chapter of the Proverbs of King Lemuel.

Mrs. Millsaps was a child of the itineracy, being the eldest daughter of the Rev. John G. Jones, for more than sixty years an honored member of the Mississippi Conference, and of Jane Oliphant Ross. She was born in Jefferson County, Miss., December 10, 1843. At the age of twelve she joined the Methodist Church at old Belle Grove, near the town of Fayette. In childhood, in young womanhood, and in her maturer years, she accepted the responsibilities of church membership and sought to honor her profession.

In 1868 she moved to Port Gibson with her parents, where she spent several years in the schools of that city. In June, 1876, she was married to Mr. Reuben Millsaps of Hazlehurst, where she lived until her departure on July 13, 1912.

So great was her interest in the young that for several years she kept a private school in her home, and gave instruction to many who otherwise must have suffered for that fuller training so necessary for this life. One must suffice for many in this testimony: "She was one of my earliest school teachers, and my Sunday school teacher also. Her impress has been left upon many of our boys and girls, and to her many owe their rectitude of life to-day." Of her broader life, one who knew of its fullness wrote: "To me hers was a life of complete sacrifice—a beautiful life, full of good deeds, thoughtful and careful for the welfare of others." A great deal more might be written of her life, as it took in the entire circuit of associations in the community, the Church and the family, but we compress it into that which was spoken of Israel's greatest king and sweetest singer, who "after he had served his own generation, by the will of God, fell on sleep." For many months she was a great sufferer, but no murmur passed her lips; she accepted the teaching that these light afflictions are to work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

On the day of her marriage there were committed to her the care of three orphaned ones, and in after years still another; to these were added three of her own, and the largeness of her heart embraced them all with equal affection and concern. No scene could be more impressive than that of those for whom she had toiled vieing with each other in her last days to relieve her suffering. She did not allow her alms to be seen of men, but verily her reward was seen of all. She sleeps in peace and awaits in full assurance the welcome, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Church News

Bishop James Atkins went to Texas last week to lend his counsel and assistance to the leaders and workers in that great field. He has done much to promote the several great enterprises that the Methodists of the Lone Star State now have under way.

The Brotherhood of St. Andrew (Protestant Episcopal Church) met in its annual session at the University of Chicago on September 4. It was reported that nearly two thousand laymen from all parts of the United States, were in attendance.

Dr. A. D. Betts, an honored superannuate of the North Carolina Conference, recently celebrated his eightieth birthday. Notwithstanding his years, he still keeps busy in the Master's service, often contributing articles to the church press which are models in their pointedness and brevity.

The presiding elders of all the Texas Conferences met in the assembly room of the Methodist Publishing House in Dallas on September 5. The object of their meeting was to cultivate a connectional interest in Texas Methodism, confer together concerning the work in general, and adjust such matters as concern alike all the Conferences in the State. One of the great needs of Southern Methodism is more concert of action, and we dare say that much good will result from this gathering.

The two Methodist churches at Rogers, Arkansas, have recently had a great revival, conducted by Dr. A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, La., and Rev. J. H. O'Bryant, the pastor, who is an ex-Mississippian. It is reported that there were 250 conversions and reclamations. Brother O'Bryant is one of the solid men of Arkansas Methodism and a valiant defender of the orthodox faith. It is such men as he that God honors with seals to their ministry. And he was fortunate in having the assistance of so skilled a workman as Dr. Holder.

Dr. L. G. Broughton, formerly pastor of the famous Baptist Tabernacle of Atlanta, Ga., but now in charge of Christ Church, London, is seeking to inaugurate a forward movement among his present parishioners. He desires to grade his Sunday school according to the American plan and to establish a training school for Christian workers. To carry forward the enterprises that he has in mind he estimates that he will need $55,000. Of this amount his own congregation has subscribed $12,000, and he is appealing to the people of London and all England to contribute the additional amount required.

Governor Colquitt, of Texas, has taken his membership out of the Tenth Street M. E. Church, South, of Austin. During the recent State campaign which resulted in his renomination, he was accused of being in league with the liquor forces, and on this account his pastor, Dr. W. D. Bradfield, refused to support him. Methodism cannot afford to be less outspoken in its opposition to the saloon to retain the favor of any man, or class of men. The outgoing of members of this kind, no matter how high their position in life, will not injure the Church, but, on the contrary, will help it.

Zion's Herald seems to be finding it somewhat difficult to keep out of politics. Two or three times within recent months it has made a fling at Mr. Roosevelt. Our contemporary would do well to leave him and also all other candidates alone. A church paper has enough battles to fight, if it does its duty, without mixing up in the strife of political parties. One of the most regrettable things of this age is the extent to which so-called religious journals have become secularized. A deeper and more constant spiritual note would help most of our church papers, as well as many of our pulpits.

The Pacific Methodist Advocate calls attention to the fact that out of more than 7000 preachers in the Southern Methodist Church only 19 were suspended or expelled or withdrew from the ministry during the year 1911. There is no choicer body of men to be found on earth than those in our itinerant ranks. The rarity of such an occurrence is one reason why so much ado is made over it when one of them does go astray. But after all, the world is right in demanding a high standard for the men in the Christian ministry. And our Conferences should take pains to see that so far as the Church is concerned, it is never lowered. Nothing that is wrong should be condoned or passed over lightly.

From the Northwestern Christian Advocate we take the following: "The denominational statistics of Australia that have just been made public are interesting to study. The Episcopal Church is at the top with 1,710,443 adherents; Roman Catholics come next with a total of 999,450 persons. Then follow Presbyterians and Methodists, each with more than half a million adherents; Congregationalists and Baptists between them number 160,000; other Protestants 109,861; Lutherans 72,395; Unitarians are at the bottom of the list with 2175 adherents; free thinkers return themselves as numbering 3254; agnostics, 3084; atheists, 579; while over one hundred and ten thousand persons declined to make any declaration."

Bishop E. E. Hoss, who has been resting and undergoing treatment at the home of his son, Dr. Sessler Hoss, at Muskogee, Okla., is reported to be still improving. On Monday, September 2, the Nashville Christian Advocate received from him the following note: "In answer to the inquiries of many friends, I write to say that I do not regard my condition as being at all dangerous, though I am considerably shaken in the nerve centers. Were I to follow my own inclinations, I should go right on with my Conferences. But the physicians, who have given me a very thorough examination, positively forbid me to do any work for a long time. They doubtless know better than I what is the proper course for me to pursue. I shall honestly try to obey them, though the task will not be an easy one. The will of the Lord be done. I am ready to march or to halt, as he may order. My heart is deeply touched by the solicitude of my brethren and friends. Whatever comes, I shall never cease to be grateful to them."

EPWORTH LEAGUE ITEMS.

The Lafayette Chapter is growing rapidly. Organized just one year ago, they give promise of becoming one of the best in the State.

Requests for organization literature have come from Campti, Pine Grove, Oil City, Glenmora, West Monroe, and Clinton. At each of these places we hope soon to hear of new chapters.

The ministers over the Conference have shown a spirit of helpfulness by their prompt answers to letters of inquiry. Their words of encouragement, appreciation and kindly advice, together with the letters of hope and cheer from the Leaguers, have meant much in making the routine work of the office a real joy and source of blessing to the Secretary.

A recent letter from Mr. R. O. Coopender, first vice president of the Alexandria Chapter, says: "Our League is doing finely now. We decided not to suspend for the summer, and instead of decreasing in attendance, we are growing every Sunday. We gave a reception last week and had fully seventy-five present. We expect to organize a Junior League in the near future."

Reports from Mrs. Sudie J. Lingle, former field secretary, and from Mr. Robert A. Steele,

State president, tell of the District Epworth League Conference just held at Homer, Ruston District. The wide-awake district president, Rev. A. I. Townsley, whose work for the League has been so valuable, was an inspiration at this Conference, and the twenty or more young people in attendance returned to their homes filled with a more burning zeal to labor for the Master and to enlist others in his service.

The Lake Charles League has just returned from a five-days "camp." Their third vice president, Mr. S. A. Mayo, writes that it was a great success. He says: "We averaged twenty in camp all the time. Twice at meal time we had over thirty, and in all fifty-two came down." This League not only has a good time socially, but is doing a magnificent work otherwise. Its pledge on the "Cuba Special" amounts to $60, and they have already paid it in full. They have also given largely to the French Mission work, besides doing much local charity.

The executive committee of the Louisiana Epworth League has decided to accept the cordial invitation from the Alexandria Chapter, and expects to hold the next conference in that city in the spring of 1913. The kind invitation from the Shreveport Chapter was highly appreciated, but the Committee deemed it wise to meet in a more central part of the State, so as to give every chapter a chance to send representatives. The Alexandria Chapter has also invited the Leaguers to meet with them for the Alexandria District Conference and Institute, which will be held some time in October. We earnestly ask the co-operation of the ministers in making this district meeting a success. We hope that every charge in the district will send a representative, and that through the means of this conference the Epworth League work may be better understood and new chapters organized. The presence of the ministers at these gatherings for the young people is always very encouraging, and we trust that a large number will attend.

MRS. CROW GIRARD,
Field Secretary, Louisiana Conference.

CHURCH EXTENSION NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the Mississippi Conference. If you remit me your Church Extension money by post office or express money order, please make it payable at Jackson, Miss., and mail to me at Philadelphia, Miss. I deposit at the Capital National Bank of Jackson, Miss., and it does not suit me to have orders made payable here at the office where I live. It gives trouble and expense. Don't burn this, but keep it.

Receipts to Sept. 2 are $286, distributed among the districts as follows: Brookhaven, $112; Hattiesburg, $40; Jackson, $25; Meridian, $40; Newton, $55.50; Port Gibson, $4; Seashore, $10.

This is about 3 per cent of our official assessment, and the year is nearly three-fourths gone. Fraternally, Wakao Ippel, one of the wealthiest men in Japan, was sixty years old before he knew how to read. At that time he was what Americans call a rag man. He then employed a teacher, and after acquiring an education, began his business career. He is now 93 years old, and a great financial power in his country.

The work of concentrating the rural schools of Mississippi into fewer school districts and serving the most distant patrons with free wagons, has gone to the point where it will require 150 wagons this year to accommodate the pupils in the outlying sections. Under the new postal law by which parcels may be sent through the mails, 11 pounds of merchandise can be sent 50 miles for thirty-five cents, and for eleven cents for each additional fifty miles. In Germany the same package can be sent fifty miles for six cents. Thus, while we have the parcels-post law, we are a long ways from having anything that will materially reduce the cost of sending merchandise from place to place. The express companies will continue to do a big business at profitable rates.

There are between sixty and seventy teachers' syndicates in France, with a combined membership of about fifty thousand. One of the principles that these syndicates agree should be taught all school children in order to further world-wide peace is that it is more noble to follow any other calling than that of a soldier. The teachers have gone to such extremes as to urge young soldiers to desert. The French Government has at last taken a hand in the matter, and has ordered all the teachers' syndicates to be dissolved.

The death rate from pellagra in North Carolina during 1911 was 47 for every 100,000 of population. This is a higher death rate than exists for typhoid fever in the United States. Pellagra is a disease which is very little understood by the medical or scientific world; and its increase in fatalities in North Carolina for one year was more than 50 per cent. Under such conditions, and in view of the fact that more than twenty States are affected by the disease, it seems just and right that the National Government should finance a commission to study the cause of it, and seek to find a cure.

Recently a benefit horse-racing program was carried out in Memphis, Tenn., the gate receipts of which were given to the residents of the Old Soldiers' Home of that place. The practice of engaging in illegal or questionable things in the name of some charity is not uncommon. Some people even conduct various kinds of raffles in the name of the Church. We believe that the public should put an end to such practices by refusing to attend them. Why should horse-racing sports cast a reflection on the fair name of the many Christian men in the Memphis Old Soldiers' Home by compelling them to be the recipients of favors thus obtained?

SAN FRANCISCO LETTER.

By Rev. W. P. Andrews.

After several months spent in negotiations, straightening out title, etc., a deal has been closed with the city of San Francisco whereby the city has become the owner of our Centenary property, on Bush street, and our little congregation is temporarily without a home of its own. The city will use the lot for school purposes. We are pleased that it is to be thus used, rather than put to some profane use, as when a saloon was opened in a former house of worship of our Church in one of our cities.

The amount realized from the sale was not what we would have liked to get—not near the cost of the property—but some $6000 more than the value of the lot, and more than we could get from any other buyer, since no one could be found who could make use of the buildings. In carrying out our plans for the building of the Fitzgerald Memorial Church it was necessary to dispose of this property as one of the preliminary steps. If plans formulated some time since are carried out, the Committee (consisting of Bishop Waterhouse, Dr. McMurry and Dr. J. M. Moore) will at once use the money realized from the sale to secure a site for the new church.

The congregation will doubtless continue to use the old premises until Conference, after which it will be necessary to secure temporary quarters. Let us hope that our people in this city will not long be compelled to worship in a hired house. The agent for the Memorial Church fund, Rev. J. A. Batchelor, reports progress, and he hopes that a fresh impetus will be given to his work by securing the lot on which it is proposed to erect the new building. What is regarded as a fair offer has also been made for the Oakland property. We are hopeful that the sum of $50,000 will have been secured in conditional subscriptions in California ere long; then, if the $25,000 authorized by the Board of Church Extension to be raised in the Church at large shall also have been secured, the contracts can be let for building the two memorial churches. Let none of our friends throughout the Church fail to have a hand in this great enterprise, which means so much to our work in the West, and which, we are persuaded, will not fail to have some influence in the Orient. May we not hold our Conference in 1913 in the Fitzgerald Memorial Church? Let us hope so.

The work in San Francisco and Oakland is doing as well as could be expected, with our present facilities. Rev. J. W. Horn, at Centenary, San Francisco, has received about seventy members since Conference, and Rev. W. J. Sims is preaching to growing congregations in Oakland. We already need a new and larger church in Berkeley. Fortunately, our location there is excellent, but the congregation now fills the auditorium; the family of the pastor has been almost entirely crowded out of the parsonage to make room for the Sunday school classes, and still more room is needed.

I referred above to the slowness of getting through the Church property deal. This was largely due to the carelessness of officials in handling the property. Among other things, the records showed no evidence of the satisfaction of a mortgage that had been paid off a number of years ago. It took considerable time to reach the mortgagee and get a second "satisfaction" executed. When will our people learn to transact business for the Church in a business-like way?

A YOUNG HEROINE.

An act of heroism which should entitle Miss Ruth Lott to a Carnegie medal, was performed in the Mississippi Sound, off the Seashore Camp Ground, Saturday, Aug. 31, an act which unquestionably saved the life of one and possibly of three young ladies who were bathing with her.

The four young ladies—Misses Ruth and Mary Lott and Mabel and Hattie Bishop, ranging in age from 12 to 16 years, are stopping with their parents at the Camp Ground enjoying a summer vacation. On Saturday morning, as is their habit, the young ladies took a boat, and rowing out into the Sound to a point which they judged it to be about shoulder deep, they cast the anchor and prepared to enjoy a dip in the salt water.

In the meantime, however, the boat had swung around on its anchor and when the girls jumped into the water it was found that the water was over their heads. Ruth Lott was the only one of the party who could swim, and, grasping her younger sister, she succeeded in keeping her afloat and her head above water, while the other girls clung to the boat. Declaring that she would stay with her sister until she herself was drowned, Ruth courageously battled with the water until assistance came in the person of a passing fisherman, who was attracted by the cries of the girls, and took all four to the shore in his boat.—Jackson (Miss.) AS CALVINISM SEES IT.

My dear Dr. Meek: On my return from Texas, I find in the Advocate of Aug. 8th a lengthy quotation from the Presbyterian of the South charging me with teaching Universalism because I contend for infant regeneration. The Presbyterian says: "If all infants are regenerated at birth, or preceding birth, then salvation is for all, or grace is no more grace. A regenerated person is a saved person, whether that regeneration takes place in infancy or maturity, or the Spirit's work is vain. It is of the Spirit that one is born again. And if all are regenerated in infancy, 'at birth' or preceding birth as our brother claims that his Church teaches, then all are saved." Yes, truly. But here we Armenians part company with the Calvinists. As they who teach that falling from grace is impossible, see it, if all men are in infancy saved, then no one is ever lost: but we believe that though all are in infancy saved, yet many lapse from that regenerate state and are lost, and many finally go to an eternal hell. I am an Arminian, and no more of a universalist than is the Editor of the Presbyterian.

Nor am I a Pelagian—nor was Wesley, nor Fletcher, nor were the majority in our last general Conference. I believe with all my believing power in the VII Article, you quote. I believe "in the corruption of the nature of every man that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam, whereby man is very far from original righteousness and of his own nature inclined to evil, and that continually." I truly and unequivocally believe it all. I also believe what John wrote of Jesus: that He "lighteth every man as he cometh into the world," see John 1:9, R. V., margin—"He lighteth every man" with salvation. I also believe that Paul wrote, "as through one trespass (that of Adam) the judgment came unto all men to condemnation, (damnation is a true rendering,) even so through one act of righteousness (the death of Christ) the free gift came unto all men to justification of life" (Rom. v, 18). I believe with the saintly Fletcher that Paul meant just what he said, that all men are justified through Christ's redeeming death. If justified, then regenerated; for the two are never apart in time. If all men are once regenerated, it is in infancy. Then every sinner is a backslider, and unless he is regenerated again will go to hell at last. This is the view of such Methodists as Fletcher, and Whedon, and Bishops Cook, Tigert, and a host of others. We believe thus because we look at it from an Arminian and not a Calvinistic view point, and there is no Universalism in the belief.

No, Doctor, the ritual, and certain "individual theologians" which teach infant regeneration, are not out of harmony with the VIlth, or any other of our Articles of Faith, not at all out of harmony with any authoritative Methodist, or Arminian teaching. We are out of harmony only with Calvinism in this matter; and we can well afford to be so. More than all we are in harmony with the New Testament.—H. Walter Featherstun.

SOME WORDS BY THE EDITOR.

Dr. Featherstun's point that universalism does not necessarily follow from birth regeneration is, we think, well taken. Our purpose in quoting the Presbyterian of the South was not to endorse that view, but to show that the Methodist Church in the formal and official statement of her faith does not give the slightest countenance to the teaching that infants are born regenerate. The Doctor contends that there is not the least conflict between the Seventh and Eighth Articles of our Faith and the doctrine of birth regeneration, but how he can take such a position passes our comprehension. The Seventh Article declares that man is born with a nature that is 'corrupt and inclined to evil, and that continually.' And since infants are born in precisely the same state now that they have been from the time of Adam's fall, this inclination to evil must be stronger than any inclination to good that may exist, as otherwise the far greater prevalence of evil in the world would be inexplicable. Now, is it not a queer sort of regeneration that leaves those who have experienced it corrupt in nature, inclined to evil (more so than to good), and that continually? It certainly seems so to us. Indeed, from such a regeneration, we are ready to say, in the language of the Episcopal Prayer Book, "Good Lord, deliver us!"

As to what Mr. Wesley's views were on the subject, it is only fair to let him speak for himself. In his sermon on "The New Birth" he says: "Every one descended from him (Adam) comes into the world spiritually dead, dead to God, wholly dead in sin, entirely void of the life of God; void of the image of God, of all that righteousness and holiness wherein Adam was created. Instead of this, every man born into the world now bears the image of the devil, in pride and self-will: the image of the beast in sensual appetites and desires. This, then, is the foundation of the new birth, the entire corruption of our nature. Hence it is that, being born in sin, we must be born again. Hence every one that is born of a woman must be born of the Spirit of God."

It does not break the force of this statement of Mr. Wesley to affirm that he subsequently modified his views. The only point at which he varied them touching this question was that he discarded the dogma of transmitted guilt. This sermon on "The New Birth" is one of the fifty-two which Dr. Du Bose, in his "Symbol of Methodism," says "were thoroughly revised by him (Mr. Wesley) certainly as late as 1783," and it has an undisputed place in the Wesleyan Standards.

But what amazes us more than anything else is that our good friend should undertake to make John Fletcher an advocate of birth regeneration. Why, in his "Appeal to Matter of Fact," Fletcher even goes beyond Wesley, beyond what any Methodist, or even Presbyterian, would now dare to teach, and quotes with full approval the Ninth Article of the Anglican Church, which is essentially the same as the Seventh Article of our Faith, with the added affirmation that "in every person born into the world, it (original or birth sin) deserveth God's wrath and condemnation."

As a matter of fact, we do not believe that, properly interpreted, scarcely any of the authorities under whom the Doctor has sought to shelter are with him. Nor do we think that the last General Conference meant in revising the Ritual to declare in favor of birth regeneration. But, for the present at least, we do not wish to be led into a discussion of these questions. We are quite willing to leave the matter in the hands of the gifted young disputant who has drawn his lance to do battle for the orthodox teaching of the Church. We have on file an article from Dr. Featherstun's pen in which he seeks to show that the New Testament writers sanction his view; we will publish this next week, after which Brother Lipscomb may reply if he cares to do so. Later we may possibly have something further to say. We regard this subject as of great importance. It is certainly a thing of tremendous consequence whether we are to teach our children that they stand in need of Christ's saving power and should seek to come in touch with it, or that they are born regenerate and need no new birth. Upon a right answer of this question the eternal destiny of thousands may be hinged.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT.

A General Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

At the request of the Secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, there was a meeting of Mission Board Secretaries held at Nashville, June 19th, to consider with him plans for the Conference of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, to be held at the Southern Assembly Grounds, Waynesville, N. C., June 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th, 1913.

The discussion had not proceeded far before Dr. Pinson expressed what afterwards proved to be the feeling of all present, that the nature and scope of the Conference should be enlarged so as to take within its purview all the missionary activities of the Church. The epoch-making Conference, held at New Orleans in 1901, was reviewed and the question arose, is it not time and are not the conditions at home and abroad ripe and pressing for another great meeting of similar character, with reasonable prospects for equal or even larger results? As the discussion proceeded, enthusiasm grew until there was but one opinion and that was decidedly affirmative.

A study of the New Orleans Conference showed it to have been largely a Conference of preachers and women workers, the laymen of the Church having but a comparatively small representation on the program and in the topics discussed, and it was suggested that from a Conference planned and conducted in such wise, as to secure the active interest and co-operation of our laymen, we might confidently expect far greater results than have hitherto been achieved.

In accordance with these conclusions, another meeting was held at Nashville on July 25th, at which were present Drs. Ed. F. Cook, John M. Moore and E. H. Rawlings, of the Board of Missions; John R. Pepper, C. F. Reid and R. B. Eleazer, of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and the day was spent in blocking out a plan of organization.

It was proposed that the Conference be called, "A General Missionary Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement," that it should be held at the Southern Assembly Grounds at Waynesville, N. C., June 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th, 1913; that it should be similar in scope and purpose to the General Missionary Conference, held at New Orleans in 1901; that the Conference should embrace within its purview all the missionary activities of our Church, and that every available means should be used to make it the most significant gathering of the kind ever assembled in the South.

A General Committee for promoting the Conference was selected, of which Mr. John R. Pepper was asked to be chairman, Bishop W. R. Lambuth, vice-chairman, and C. F. Reid, secretary. It was also decided to request others to become members of this General Committee as follows: All our bishops; all members of the Executive Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement; all secretaries and members of the Board of Missions, all General Conference officers, all Conference lay leaders, all Conference missionary secretaries, all presidents of Conference Mission Boards, and others to be selected later.

Out of this General Committee, an Executive Committee of fifteen was selected to have immediate charge of all matters pertaining to the setting up and conduct of the Conference. The other committees arranged for were a Program Committee, a Publicity Committee, a Transportation Committee, and an Entertainment Committee.

Bishop Lambuth is expected to return to America about the 20th of September, and because of his extended experience it was decided to request him to assist in the practical direction of arrangements for the Conference and to devote all the time to this work that can be spared from his other duties.

The Southern Assembly Grounds are being rapidly prepared for the reception of the Conference. The great auditorium and the hotel are now in process of construction, and we have from the management a guarantee that by the time set for the meeting of the Conference there will be ample auditorium and hotel accommodation for four thousand delegates and guests.

The place selected for the meeting of the Conference is one of surpassing grandeur and beauty. Shall we not be much in prayer that this gathering of the missionary forces of our great Church in the midst of these manifestations of God's marvellous love and power shall mark the most decisive advance step our Church has ever taken towards God's great objective in all his works—the redemption of a lost world?

A FAREWELL.

(The following is said to be the song that Josephine sang to Napoleon when she found that he was going to divorce her).

"Together now! But the morrow's morn
Will find us apart and afar;
For yours is the path of the rising sun
And I am a setting star.

"I have made my love a torch for your path,
It is all I could do or could be,
But a greater splendor lures you on
And there's no more need of me.

"You will follow the call of the beckoning world,
You will learn the world's unworth,
But your heart will lead you back to me,
From the uttermost ends of the earth.

"You will cry one day as a lost soul cries
In the ear of the Powers above:
'O Fate! take all the gifts you gave,
But grant me a woman's love.'

"Farewell! Farewell! the morrow's morn
Will find us apart and afar,
For yours is the path of the rising sun,
And I am a setting star."

THE PINK DOLL DRESS.

Mrs. Manning felt greatly worried over her daughter Fannie's selfishness. She seemed to take no thought of any one but herself. If there was only one apple left in the dish, she claimed it. If there were three white ruffled dresses to be ironed, she wanted hers first. Her mother had chided her in vain for her grave fault. At last she thought of an antidote to Fannie's growing habit. For a small girl, Fannie could sew unusually well. She made all the clothes for her own dolls.

"Fannie," said her mother, "I was calling on the poor yesterday, and I saw a dear little crippled girl who couldn't walk a step. What do you think she had in her arms?"

"A doll, most likely," Fannie answered without much interest.

"She called it a doll, but it was nothing more or less than a battered old rolling pin with a blanket pinned around it."

"I should think her mother would be ashamed of herself to let her little girl have such a thing for a doll," was Fannie's disgusted comment.

"Her mother is dead, my dear. The little girl lives with an aunt who has three children of her own and who looks too poor to buy a doll. On my way home I bought this," taking from a drawer a pretty little doll with a cloth body and bisque head, with laughing eyes and rings of yellow hair. "I'd like to have you dress it, please, you're so handy with your needle—will you?"

"Yes, I'll dress it. I'll make it a little pink dress like my new one. How will that do?"

"Just the thing," assented her mother. As Fannie loved to sew, she did not have to be urged to dress the doll without delay. She did so because she wanted to see how the doll would look in a new pink dress. When it was ready it was really pretty enough to make glad the heart of any little girl. She showed it to her mother, who praised it heartily, and then said:

"Now, my dear, please take it to little Kathie and tell her that you dressed it."

"All right, I will."

She got the address and started, wondering what the poor little girl with the rolling-pin doll would say when she saw the beauty in the pink dress. She had not the faintest idea that she, herself, would be strangely stirred, but such was the case. When she reached the place Kathie called home she found her alone, except for a small boy asleep on an old cot. The "aunt" was out, the two children were playing in the yard. The room in which Kathie sat was on the first floor. The outer door stood wide open, inviting a breath of fresh air, but failing to get it.

"May I come in?" asked Fannie, catching a glimpse of the little cripple.

"Oh, yes, please do," was the eager answer.

Fannie went in quickly, for there was a tone in the child's voice as she said: "Oh, yes, please do," that strangely touched her.

Fannie, being a quick observer, took in all the details of the little cripple's surroundings: the rolling-pin doll in her arms, the little stand beside her, evidently with the child's mid-day lunch on it (and such a lunch!), the faded paper on the bare wall, the barren outlook through the open door. I was about to say that there was no beauty anywhere, but that would have been a mistake. There was—unmistakably—beauty in the pale, patient face of little Kathie. Fannie was conscious of it, as the sweet blue eyes met her own, and her heart then and there went out to the child. In all her short life, she had never felt so generous as she did then, sitting in that poor room beside the crippled child. Before she had even opened the box that held the pretty doll in the pink dress, she was thinking of a number of things she wanted to do for her. Her thoughts ran after this fashion:

"The dry looking bread makes me sick just to look at it. I must bring the poor little soul a nice lunch some day—soon." "I must bring her a bunch of my sweetpeas, too—wonder what she'd say if I should?" "And I could give her my dear little pink china vase to put them in." "And she's so small, I believe my outgrown pink muslin would be just right for her."

Presently she put the box, with the doll, in Kathie's lap. "It's for you; guess what it is?" she said.

"For me!" gasped the child in wonderful delight. "Oh, I never had a gift before—I couldn't guess."

"What would you like most?"

There was no reply.

"What would you like most?" repeated Fannie.

"Oh, I'd like—I'd like—but it could not be that—it could not be that."

"What couldn't it be?" asked Fannie. "What is it you'd like most?"

"It couldn't be a doll, could it?" the sweet voice asked, eagerly.

Fannie smiled.

"Just lift up the cover of the box and see," she said.

What occurred then was a beautiful illustration of the sweet old saying: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

The small fingers trembled as they opened the box, but the little voice was silent when the laughing doll face looked up into her own. For a moment or two she scarcely stirred, then she cried out: "It's mine, isn't it? It's really mine—you said so, didn't you?"

"Yes, it is really yours. Mamma bought it for you, and I dressed it."

"Oh, I love it," she said, "and I love you for making the dear little pink dress and the white ruffled apron."

Days came and went, but no one called Fannie selfish any more. Her whole nature seemed to have changed with her thought of Kathie and her needs. The pink china vase belonged to the little cripple now, so did the rosebud plate and mug, both of which had been among Fannie's treasures. Many a dainty was "passed on." Flowers and fruit went "over the line" (as Fannie facetiously designated the way from her own home to the little cripple's), as well as other desirable things.

"My dear," said Mrs. Manning, one day to Fannie, "it makes me very happy to see your devotion to one of the least of these."

"It makes me happy, too," was the smiling response.—Ernest Gilmore, in Christian Intelligencer.

COST OF DISCOVERING AMERICA.

A Chicago antiquary has discovered that Columbus received a salary of $320. He estimates that the whole cost of the expedition that found America was about $7,000. John Knox received a salary of $220, and a leading lawyer in the time of Edward IV, was content with a fee which amounted to $1 in our money. A sumptuous Christmas dinner could be bought then for 17 cents. A dollar went a long way in those days, but the salaries of professional men and the wages of laborers seem absurdly meager when compared with the best paid ability and skill in these modern days. The good old times would present no attraction to those who imagine there was a time when labor was much better rewarded than it is to-day. Despite the monopolies and trusts, a moderate fortune can be acquired now more readily than it could in former times. In 1820 a man who had $20,000 was accounted rich and such men were very scarce.—From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

WHY DON'T YOU GO TO CHURCH?

You are "too tired to go to church." That's sheer nonsense. There isn't a place on this continent so restful as the church. You are going to lie around the house all day; doze in a hammock; loiter in a rocking chair; go to sleep over a book. That isn't resting, that's loafing. Tell yourself, honestly—did you ever in all your life see a loafer who looked rested? Did you ever see a loafer who didn't look tired all the time? The people who try to rest are always tired. Resting is the hardest work in the world when you make work of it. Two hours in church, two hours in the quiet; the music, the sermon, the reading, the uplift which comes from the new channels into which your mind is led, will rest you more physically, morally, intellectually, than all the day spent in trying to rest. Why don't you go to church?—Bob Burdette.

Editorial.

OUR DUTY TO THE NEGRO.

We desire to call special attention to an article by Mr. Charles Stelzle entitled "Facts About the Negro," which appears on another page. In our judgment, it is well worth a careful reading. We concur fully in the view that the Negro is here to stay, and that his future must largely affect that of the white people among whom he lives. In a sense, the problem which this race presents is a national problem, but it remains true that the section which it most vitally affects is the Southern States. With the people of the North, the question is chiefly an academic one, but with those of the South, it is a practical issue of the gravest importance. So far as the latter are concerned, it is not a mere theory, but a serious and perplexing condition which they confront.

Those who think that the Negro problem is wholly or chiefly political are greatly mistaken. If the black man were permanently disfranchised by a constitutional enactment, his presence here in large numbers would leave all the graver features of the problem absolutely untouched. The Mongolians upon the Pacific Coast are not citizens, and yet there is a race problem there that is acute and quite troublesome. Perhaps the only complete solution of the race problem would be the colonization of the negroes, but that is now impracticable, if not impossible. Next to that, the thing which would go furthest toward its solution is the thorough Christianization of both the blacks and whites in the South. In the betterment of the colored man's moral, religious, and social condition we feel the deepest interest. There is upon the white people of this section a solemn obligation to lend this needy people a helping hand. We ought to do more to instruct them and lead them into the ways of rectitude and virtue. We fear that as preachers we are not giving them the attention and assistance that we ought; nor are we sure that our Church has the work on her heart to the extent which she should. God has set before us this open door, and we be unto us if we turn negligently away from it.

In working for the real improvement of the colored race, we think there are two dangers that should be studiously guarded against. In the first place, the Negro should not be drawn into politics. As long as the blacks are so numerous in the South, the white people will resent their active participation in the affairs of government. Their property rights and the opportunity to advance educationally, morally and industrially, are worth vastly more to them than the exercise of the ballot and the holding of office. We think, therefore, that it is most unwise for them to imperil everything by contending for a privilege which is not absolutely essential to their development and prosperity. And those who advise them to pursue such a course are most unsafe counselors.

The other point which should be guarded against is that of awakening among the colored people the least aspiration for social intermingling with the whites. They should be taught with the utmost candor that any dream of that is utterly futile, that they should seek to maintain their racial integrity and develop a Christian social order of their own. Whoever leads the Negroes to believe that the time is ever coming when they may move in the same circles with the white people does them incalculable harm. The implanting of such ideas in their minds is vicious, and tends to start them upon a path that can only result in their destruction. We have little disposition to criticise the work of the Methodist Episcopal Church among the black population of the South—on the contrary, we are disposed to accord it high praise; but we have sometimes feared that the Northern Methodists are not as careful at this point as they should be; that their methods of operation tend to exert an influence in the direction of social equality that is not helpful.

We make these statements as a true friend to our brother in black. We yield to none in our desire to see him go forward along all worthy lines of progress, and we covet for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a large share in the work of lifting him up to a higher plane. It is our wish that harmful mistakes may be averted and that only that which is really helpful may be undertaken, that has moved us to write these lines. In dealing with a question of such tremendous importance the utmost sincerity and candor are demanded.

A SUNDAY IN BATON ROUGE.

About the middle of last week we received a message from Rev. W. W. Drake, our pastor at Baton Rouge, asking us, as he was engaged in a meeting at Denham Springs, La., to fill his pulpit on the following Sunday. Having often desired to visit the Capital City of Louisiana, we were glad to avail ourselves of this opportunity. So, intent upon this mission, we boarded the Y. and M. V. train last Saturday afternoon at 2:55 o'clock, and was soon speeding northward along the east bank of the Mississippi River.

What a panorama of beauty nature presents in fields and woods in these opening days of autumn! In quick succession we swept past vast stretches of sugar cane, rustling in the breeze; broad acres of corn, sometimes yet green and growing, sometimes with the stalks almost hidden from view by the luxuriant pea vines that encircled them, and frequently with the ears and blades wearing the brown hue that heralds the approaching harvest season; wide-reaching meadows, fragrant with new-mown hay; skirts of timber where the foliage is already beginning to show a variety of colors; patches of rice with the plant being cut and hauled away; areas of cotton, blooming and opening at the same time, and marshes whose entire surfaces were covered with water lilies of rarest beauty. We were so enraptured with the loveliness of the country that we paid little attention to the towns and villages through which we passed, though we observed that there was a throng at nearly every depot and that "Cuffy" was much in evidence.

As it is elsewhere, the Mississippi River valley in Louisiana is marvelously fertile. There is scarcely any product of the temperate zone that it will not grow successfully. With large quantities of such land (much of it yet wholly undeveloped), the South is bound to have a great industrial and commercial future. Perhaps, her present most urgent material need is an intelligent and industrious class of white farmers.

Almost ere we were aware, we were in Baton Rouge (eighty miles from New Orleans), where Brother W. S. Holmes met us with an automobile and carried us to the hospitable home of Mrs. S. B. Jones, in which we were pleasantly entertained. After a stormy night, Sunday dawned bright and fair, but the heat was most intense. Fortunately, however, our First Church is well supplied with electric fans, and at 11 o'clock we were greeted with an audience that pretty nearly filled the spacious auditorium. At the evening hour, in spite of threatening weather, we had another very good congregation, composed mostly of young people. To the editor, at least, these services were most enjoyable. Particularly did we appreciate the singing of the choir, which was in admirable taste and was not overdone. We were especially pleased to have with us at night Rev. H. S. Johns, the capable Chaplain of the Louisiana State Penitentiary, who resides in the city.

The temptation is strong to write of Baton Rouge, but the requisite space is not at our disposal. It is a progressive city of about 20,000 population, with paved streets, a belt street-car line, large and up-to-date stores, handsome public buildings, and attractive residences and churches. Its pride is the State University, which is a magnificent institution, with a yearly attendance of more than six hundred students.

Methodism is well to the front in the city. First Church has a membership of nearly 600, and the Sunday school, of which Brother W. S. Holmes is the young and stirring superintendent, even at this season numbers 388. In the more favorable months of the year it is much larger than this, and in efficiency it is scarcely surpassed by any school in the State. Brother Drake is in high favor with his flock, and is doing a great work in this important pastorate. We heard unqualified commendation of him on every side. Second Church has a membership of more than 200, and is active and growing. The pastor is Rev. G. P. White, whom we were disappointed in not meeting. We hope to see more of Baton Rouge in the not-far future.

THE ELECTION IN LOUISIANA.

The Democratic primary election was held in Louisiana on September 3. A heavy vote was polled and the results indicate that Louisiana is undergoing some change in political sentiment. In the city, the administration forces won every office, but by largely reduced majorities. The leaders of the opposition are optimistic regarding the trend of political opinion, particularly in Orleans and Jefferson parishes.

The following candidates have been declared nominated: For District Attorney of Orleans Parish, Hon. C. C. Luzenberg; for Congress in the First District, Hon. Albert Estopinal; Second, Hon. Garland Dupre; Third, Hon. Robert Broussard; Fourth, Hon. John T. Watkins; Eighth, Hon. J. B. Aswell; for Supreme Court, Second District, Judge A. D. Land. The following candidates will enter a second primary for Congress, Fifth District, Hon. J. W. Elder and Hon. O. C. Dawkins; Sixth District, Hon. L. L. Morgan, and Hon. Chas. Claiborn; Seventh District, Hon. L. Lazaro, and Hon. J. W. Lewis. Judge Charles A. O'Neil will enter a second primary with Judge R. R. Reid for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court from the Fourth District.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Haynesville, La., reports an enjoyable meeting in which the preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. G. D. Anders, and Rev. D. E. Kelley, of the Mississippi Conference. Much interest was manifested, and great good was accomplished.

Rev. J. B. Culpepper, and his son, Rev. O. B. Culpepper, are conducting a revival at Columbia, Miss., where Rev. B. F. Lewis is pastor. The meeting which these brethren closed at Jackson, Miss., last week was fruitful, and exercised a far-reaching influence for good.

Miss Belle Roberts, writing from Bogie Chitto, Miss., tells of two inspiring sermons that she heard there by Rev. I. L. Peebles: one on "Judgment to Come," and the other on "Heaven." As a dispenser of the Word, Brother Peebles has uncommon gifts, and it is not unusual for him to deliver discourses that thrill and stir his audiences.

The many friends of the late Rev. A. J. Foster, of the North Mississippi Conference, will be pleased to know that his son, Mr. J. T. Foster, will be the instructor in English in the Killeen High School (Texas) during the next session. No class of young men and young ladies give a better account of themselves in the varied activities of life than those reared in parsonages.

Rev. J. H. Mitchell, the resourceful presiding elder of the Corinth District, in sending in his fourth round of appointments, says: "We are hoping to round out the year well. Many of the brethren have had good meetings in their charges, and the outlook generally is encouraging." We have a vigorous Methodism in Northeast Mississippi, and are fortunate in having Brother Mitchell to lead our forces in that section.

We are indebted to our esteemed friend and brother, Dr. W. H. Mounger, of Rolling Fork, Miss., for six subscriptions, sent in last week, at $1.50, with no commission extracted. We are pleased to know that, after his trouble with his eyes and his stay in Memphis last spring to have them treated, he is again energetically at work for the Master. Dr. Mounger is one of the best informed and equipped Methodist ministers in Mississippi.

Mansfield College opened most auspiciously on Wednesday morning, September 4, with a largely increased attendance. Students are still arriving nearly every day, and the prospect is for the best session the institution has ever had. President Bobbitt and his fine corps of teachers are delighted with the outlook. Brother Morris, our accomplished pastor at Mansfield, will tell of the opening exercises and things going on at the college through our columns next week.

A very successful meeting was recently held at Bay Springs, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. W. A. Hays, had the assistance of Rev. Dan Kelley. Mr. John Kelley, a brother of the evangelist, rendered efficient service as the choir leader. The entire community was brought under the influence of the meeting, and there were a goodly number of conversions and reclamations, about a dozen family altars were erected, and 27 united with the Methodist Church on profession of faith.

Mr. J. D. Barbee, who, with his wife, is still at Waynesville, N. C., is steadily improving and gaining in strength. He expects to return to his home at Greenville, Miss., about October 1. The pleasure of his stay in the mountains of the Old North State has been greatly increased by the presence with him for the past two weeks of his brother, Mr. D. R. Barbee, one of the editors of the Mobile Register, who has been taking a short time off from the exacting duties of the tripod.

Major R. W. Millsaps is spending a few weeks at Asheville, N. C. He reports that he is in fine health and having a pleasant vacation.

Rev. C. A. Battle, the diligent pastor of Felicity Church, New Orleans, has been sick for a few days with a summer cold. He was unable to occupy his pulpit last Sunday.

In addition to pressing the claims of the Advocate and the Conference collections, Brother G. G. Yeager, the pastor of the Auburn (Miss.) charge, has held four revival meetings recently, in all of which the Lord was glorified and souls were converted.

Rev. G. R. Ellis recently assisted Rev. M. L. White, the pastor, in a meeting at Alot, Lamar County, Miss., in which 23 were received into the Church and two infants were baptized. The meeting lasted eight days and the whole church was greatly revived.

Among those who have been mindful of the Advocate and sent in lists of subscribers within the past few days are the following: Rev. J. Hurvy Hoffpaul, of Henry, La., 5; Rev. E. O. Phelps, of Magee, Miss., 4, and Rev. W. L. Blackwell, of Hermantown, Miss., 2.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, wires that Rev. I. D. Borders, whose assignment to Aberdeen station was announced in the secular papers, has decided that it is impracticable for him to accept the appointment. This leaves this important pastorate still open.

The Arkabutla (Miss.) charge is making gratifying progress under the efficient ministry of Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle. The Arkabutla church has recently enjoyed a great meeting, during which there were 35 conversions. The pastor has the interest of the Advocate at heart, and has sent in a number of subscribers.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, associate pastor of First Church, New Orleans, will return home this week from Virginia, where he and Sister Holmes have been spending their vacation. In a letter to one of the New Orleans pastors, Brother Holmes stated that he had been in a train wreck, but did not state whether he sustained any injury.

In a letter announcing a good meeting and the presence of more than one preacher assistant, a pastor in our territory closed by saying that the people and friends both near and afar had given him a big "pounding." We dare say that after more than one preacher "assisted" at the parsonage, as well as in the pulpit, a pounding was needed.

The Palmer Creek Camp Meeting, which is held annually within the bounds of the Coalville (Miss.) charge, will begin Sept. 20. Rev. Dan Kelley has been engaged to do the preaching, and a great meeting is expected. The Coalville charge is in a prosperous state, and the work of the Church has an able leader in Rev. C. C. Gihson, the pastor.

The Franklinton (La.) charge has recently been blessed with two very successful meetings. The pastor, Rev. L. C. Wilson, was assisted at Franklinton by Rev. W. W. Holmes, of New Orleans, and the meeting resulted in 22 new members being added to the Church. At Fisher Church Rev. L. I. McCain did the preaching, and 17 accessions are reported.

Rev. J. E. Sampley, pastor of the Harriston, (Miss.) charge, has just closed a successful meeting at Cane Ridge, near Lorimer, Miss., during which he had the able assistance of Rev. John Paul, of Meridian. There were five accessions to the Church. Rev. H. B. Watkins was a visitor during the meeting, and added to its success by preaching a very helpful sermon.

Mr. J. W. Carnes, a layman whose worth as a steward, trustee and Sunday school superintendent has been abundantly proven, has been confined to his bed in McDonoghville, La., for the past two weeks with pleuro-pneumonia fever. He is now convalescing, and his immediate recovery is looked forward to with pleasure by his many friends in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Dr. F. N. Parker, together with his family, returned to Durham, N. C., last week, to resume his labors at Trinity College, in which he holds the chair of Biblical Instructor. The brethren kept the Doctor busy while he tarried with relatives in Louisiana, calls to preach coming to him from every direction. He is still ours—we have only loaned him to North Carolina for a season.

Just as we are closing our forms, the mails bring us the following interesting announcement: "At the conclusion of the sermon at the Methodist Church, at Tunica, Miss., on Sunday evening, September 8, the pastor of the Tunica charge, Rev. L. P. Wasson, was united in marriage to Miss Ella Willbourn, Rev. H. M. Young, of Coahoma, officiating." We extend heartiest congratulations.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer reports a good meeting held at Day's Church, near Liverpool, in St. Helena Parish, La. Beginning on Sept. 1 and running through Sept. 8, he preached twice a day to congregations which filled the large auditorium of the church. Many claimed to have been blessed and the membership was greatly revived. Rev. J. B. Fulton, the pastor, is in high favor with his people, and will hand in a fine report at Conference.

Rev. James V. Bennett was his own evangelist in a meeting recently held at the Gilton Church, on the Pleasant Grove (Miss.) charge. The visible results were about sixty conversions and reclamations, twelve family altars erected, nineteen infants baptized, and thirty-seven accessions to the Church. If more pastors would, with faith and persistence, besiege the strongholds of sin in their charges, doing the preaching themselves, more such glorious victories might be announced.

Having been given by his people the month of August for a vacation, Rev. T. H. Morris, our pastor at Mansfield, La., spent the time in revival work, and his labors were crowned with considerable success. We have from his pen an interesting account of the meetings in which he was engaged, which we are forced to carry over until next week. Brother Morris is making full proof of his ministry in the Louisiana Conference, to which he came as a transfer last December.

Rev. D. E. Vickers reports a great meeting at the Homewood Church, on the Rose Hill charge, Mississippi Conference. The preaching was done by Rev. T. J. O'Neil, the wide-awake presiding elder of the Newton District, and there were 96 conversions and 30 accessions to the Church. Such an awakening is enough to fill a pastor's heart with gratitude and thanksgiving, and, of course, Brother Vickers is happy. A more extended account of this gracious season of refreshing will appear in our next issue.

Rev. I. T. Reames, who has served the Opelousas charge effectively for the past two years, has been transferred from the Louisiana Conference to the Columbia Conference, and will leave at once for Oregon. Brother Reames was formerly a pastor in the Northwest, and the wonderful climate and hustling spirit of that section of the country has wooed him back. The real reason, however, of his returning to Oregon is that both Sister Reames and himself are blessed with much better health there than in Louisiana.

On a postcard from West Monroe, La., addressed to this office, was this brief, but telling message: "Just got home from prayer meeting. Fifty-five present. Yours for others, E. B. Troy." When Brother Troy took charge at West Monroe he found a prayer meeting with a small attendance. It has enjoyed a steady growth since he began his ministry there and is now doing finely. If, as it is said to be, the prayer meeting is the thermometer of the church, then the West Monroe congregation must be getting near the boiling point.

Rev. D. A. Morris, of Ohio, who is a brother of Rev. C. M. Morris, pastor of the Bayou La Chute charge, has held some very effective meetings in Louisiana recently. An account of his meeting at LeCompte appears in our "Tidings from the Field" department this week. Brother Morris will continue in the evangelistic work in Louisiana until the session of the Louisiana Conference at Monroe, and is available for meetings from Oct. 9 to Dec. 11. Any pastor who may secure his assistance will have good help. He may be addressed for the present at Boyce, La.

Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, the pastor, recently closed a successful meeting at Holum, La., in which he had the assistance of Rev. W. H. Whalley. There were nine conversions and eleven accessions to the Church by profession of faith. The Standard charge is making commendable progress under the wise leadership of Brother Ledbetter. A new church has been built at Eden, which will be dedicated by Rev. Brisco Carter on the fifth Sunday in September. An invitation is extended to all former pastors to be present. The Eden class is claimed by some to be the oldest Methodist organization west of the Mississippi River.

We are informed that Bishop E. E. Hoss has gone to Tate Springs, Tenn., where he will spend a season recuperating. We earnestly pray for the speedy restoration to health of this beloved chief pastor. From a human standpoint, his enforced retirement from active service would be an irreparable loss to the Church. We reproduce in this issue his letter to the Nashville Christian Advocate of last week, which shows the deep faith and Christlike spirit of the man. Let Southern Methodists everywhere beseech the throne of grace that our noble leader may be spared, and that he may soon be able to take up his work again.

Rev. W. R. Goudelock, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, but now of Princeton, Texas, writes as follows: "I have just closed my last meeting for the season. We have had some gracious revivals, resulting in over 100 conversions. The old-time gospel that our fathers preached still has power to save from sin. There were extraordinary manifestations of this in many of our services." The Weekly Democrat-Gazette, of McKinney, gives a glowing account of a meeting held by Brother Goudelock a few miles out from that city, in which there were scores of conversions and 36 additions to the Church. We rejoice in our Brother's success in his new field.

In renewing her subscription to the Advocate, Mrs. J. K. Dunn, of McComb City, Miss., sends a dollar additional to be applied to our "Help Fund." We are grateful for this generous act, which will send the Advocate into some needy home for a year. We receive not infrequently touching letters from persons who deeply regret to give up the paper, but whose circumstances are such that they feel they cannot continue to take it. There ought, it seems to us, to be a small fund raised by every congregation to give the church paper to the poor families connected with it. No Christian home ought to be without the glorious news of our Lord's expanding kingdom.

As yet we have received from the Secretary no account of the Port Gibson District Conference, but we are informed that the presiding elder, Dr. W. H. Huntley, acquitted himself like a Bishop in the chair, and that the occasion was one of much interest. The reports are said to have shown faithful work, many good meetings, and meager incomes. One of the noteworthy acts of the Conference was the voluntary assumption of the obligation to maintain a ministerial student at Millsaps College during the approaching session. It is stated to be the purpose of the workers in the Port Gibson District to do this from year to year. We congratulate these brethren upon having set this good example, which we hope other districts will be quick to follow.

Indications point to a fine opening at Millsaps College on September 18. Extensive repairs have recently been made on the President's Home and Founder's Hall. The canvass for pupils this summer has been a vigorous one. Dr. Watkins has taken hold of the work like a veteran, and has issued a stirring appeal in behalf of the college, to both the alumni of the institution and the Methodist pastors in Mississippi. He has also attended a number of District Conferences and has spoken in many of our pulpits in the State. In the work of presenting the claims of the college to the people he has been strongly re-enforced by Dr. J. M. Sullivan and Profs. Huddleston and Noble. All these brethren have wrought well, and deserve hearty commendation for their zeal and activity in behalf of the great cause that they represent.

In a letter written from San Francisco on August 22, Dr. J. C. Ballard says: "My commission as an officer of the United States Army was dated 'September 25, 1908,' and signed by President Roosevelt. So after a service of four years, I shall retire from active duty in October. I have not yet decided where I will locate, but will do so when I go East after my retirement. It was my pleasure to meet Bishop Murrah when he passed through here on his way to the Orient. He was the same delightful Southern gentleman that he has always been, and full of youthful enthusiasm. I saw him and his wife on their steamer (one of the beautiful new Japanese ships), and had them good-by and godspeed. Mrs. Murrah had in her hand, when I caught my last glimpse of her, a bunch of carnations, which she waved toward me."

Mr. A. M. Hendon, president of the Educational Commission of the Louisiana Baptist Convention, has issued a statement that the Baptist Church had nothing to do with the purchasing of the old Centenary College property of Jackson, La., and that any attempt to organize a school there or purchase property there in the name of the Baptist Church is without due authority. He further says that no one has a right to give the name "Baptist" to a school in Jackson. We did not know that the Baptist Church had such a centralized form of government. It was our impression that a Baptist congregation anywhere could purchase property and engage in educational or any other kind of religious work on its own initiative, without the advice or consent of any other Baptist congregation. According to Mr. Hendon, we were either wrong in this, or Baptist government is changing somewhat.

It is reported that recently a farmer living in Tennessee came into the possession of a fortune of $2,000,000. His benefactor was a fortune hunter, who, when he was a young man, found succor and food beneath the humble cottage of the Tennessee farmer. Moneyless and friendless, the near-tramp was given employment, and started on the way up financially. He died last month, and in his will remembered his former benefactor in the foregoing liberal terms. This is an illustration of how bread cast upon the waters may return after many days.

ILLUSTRATIONS IN THE SEPTEMBER CENTURY.

An interesting pictorial feature of the September Century will be the reproduction of two semi-Gothic mural decorations by Robert Winthrop Chanier, selected from a group of eight panels recently completed by Mr. Chanier for a room in the country house of Mr. Harry Payne Whitney at Westbury, Long Island. In making such decorations as these the artist carefully prepares his canvas, building it up with black paint, coat on coat, very much as a carriage painter might build up a panel with successive layers of paint. The drawings are then embossed, or painted in high relief, on this specially prepared canvas in a medium composed of aluminum, silver, and Chinese white. The general effect of the decorations, though in a totally different medium, resembles that achieved at Passy in the black and white savonnerie tapestries of the seventeenth century.

On Aug. 11, 1912, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. Pearl Potter and took away her bright little jewel. The home is sad without little Zack. His age was one year and eight months. He was loved by all who knew him. He suffered a great deal but is now at rest. Weep not, dear friends, for heaven is made brighter by his going; and let us all live so as to meet him around God's throne, where parting will be no more.

MRS. E. C. McLEROY.

T. J. KING was born Sept. 27, 1866, and died June 6, 1912. He joined the M. E. Church, South, some twenty years ago. He was first married to Miss Gill, and one son was born to them. He was afterwards married to Miss Maggie Hayno, and to them were born three children. Brother King was sick but a few days with appendicitis and pneumonia. His suffering was intense. His pastor visited him during his illness; he seemed ready to go. He said, "I love Jesus." We buried him at Springfield, La., in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends. He leaves a wife, father, mother, four brothers, and three sisters. May the Lord console the bereaved family and friends, and may we meet the departed in heaven.

His Pastor, H. C. MURPHY.

MRS. L. J. LUMBLEY, nee Lewis, was born in Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 10, 1829. The early part of her life was spent at Murfreesboro, Tenn., and she came to Mississippi in 1849. She was happily married to Mr. W. W. Lumbley in 1850. They were blessed with eleven children, three of whom, with their father, preceded her to their eternal rest. After an illness of twelve weeks, on Aug. 17, 1912, her pure spirit was released and went to its heavenly home, to swell the harmony of that "Invisible Choir." For sixty-five years she was a devoted, helpful, consistent, Christian member of the Methodist Church. Her home was the haven of rest for the servants of God. That Sister Lumbley was highly esteemed and loved on earth, and was greatly mourned after passing away, was evidenced by the large concourse of people who attended the funeral. To the bereaved loved ones and friends we offer consolation, and our sincerest sympathy goes out to them. May the Giver of all good and perfect gifts sustain them and help them to live as true disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ, in order that they may meet her in that home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

S. H. FRAZIER, Pastor.

The subject of this sketch, MRS. CARRIE BELLE SIMMS (nee Davis), was born Feb. 4, 1881, and received the summons to come up higher on the afternoon of June 16, 1912. She did not live to a ripe old age, but what is far better, she lived the life of a consistent Christian during her stay here. She was married to Rev. A. A. Simms about 1900, and to them were born four bright boys. What a pleasure it was to her to be with them! Though always frail and of a very delicate nature, she never tired of working for husband and children. Not one word of reproach did I ever hear fall from her lips. She was always ready to look on the bright side of everything, and was always ready to bear her burden and help bear the burdens of others. More patience have I never seen in anyone than she showed. Meet her when and where you would, she was always bright and cheerful and seemed to be happy. During her last days, when friends and loved ones were so concerned about her condition, she was perfectly calm and quiet, and, when something was said to her as to her condition, her reply was, "I am not afraid; I'm in the hands of the Lord. His will is my will." What a consolation to the bereaved husband and loved ones, and what a legacy she has left for her boys! How blessed it is to know that we can meet her again. Mourn not, loved ones, for her, but rather rejoice to know that there will be a great reunion, and strive to emulate the noble example that has been set by her.

A FRIEND.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

We, the undersigned committee, appointed at the last regular meeting of the Junior Aid Society of the First M. E. Church, South, of Baton Rouge, La., to prepare resolutions expressive of our grief, occasioned by the death of Miss Lillie Hackett, which occurred Aug. 11, 1912, do hereby submit the following:

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has called from the "Strife Land" to the "Life Land," our friend and co-worker, Miss Lillie Hackett, therefore be it resolved:

1. That in the death of Miss Hackett the Junior Aid Society has lost one of its most useful members—one who from its organization to the time of her death was ever an active and zealous worker, her last work on earth being in its interest.

2. That we deeply deplore her death and shall miss her ever-willing service in aid of all our plans, but rejoice in having known one who by her cheerful nature and consistent Christian character endeared herself to all who knew her.

3. That we tender to her family our sincere sympathy in this hour of grief, and invoke upon them the benedictions of "Him who doeth all things well," and point them to—

Where parting is unknown,
A long eternity of love
Formed for the good alone."

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to the local press and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that the secretary be instructed to place the same upon our Society records.

Miss Mamie Elam, Mrs. W. H. Newson, Mrs. F. D. Dawson, Committee.

THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

A few extracts from letters of club members will give the reader some idea of the many attractive features of the club and explain why it is so popular. Here are a few samples taken from the correspondence at random:

"The piano is just grand! The club plan is equally as good as the piano."

"I am perfectly delighted with my Ludden & Bates Piano and fully satisfied."

"I am delighted with it."

"To say that we are pleased would but mildly express our feeling."

"I have studied the plan very carefully and consider it very liberal."

"We are perfectly delighted with it."

"It is quite in keeping with the 'Sterling' quality, which an acquaintance of twenty years leads me to expect always from your house."

"I do not believe any one can get up a better plan."

Almost every letter received contains similar expressions of appreciation. The advertising manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate cordially invites you to write for your copy of the club booklet and catalogue which describes the plan and instruments fully. Tidings From the Field

Myrtle, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Great revivals of religion have swept over our entire charge, the greatest according to the statement of the brethren, that have ever been held here. This is largely due to the prayers and efforts of a loyal people, in connection with the highest order of evangelistic help—not from "professional evangelists" but from our own worthy pastors. We are not through yet, but great things have been accomplished. The good work continues, and I will give you a fuller report later on. We have purchased a fine young horse for this charge, raised funds to buy an organ, celled a church, and raised a good deal of money for other objects. We have a good, loyal people, excellent Sunday schools and Leagues, and are doing well, and will let you hear more later.

E. H. CUNNINGHAM P. C.

Tallulah, La.

We closed a gracious meeting at this place last Friday night. Brother T. H. Morris, of Mansfield, who was with us, proved to be just the man that we needed. We had the largest congregations that ever attended Church at this place. The meeting lasted eleven days and very nearly all regretted that it could not run two weeks longer. There were ten accessions on profession of faith. The people at large were made to think seriously. The Church was quickened and drawn closer together. Sister Morris came a few days before the series closed. Her work among the children and help in the ladies' prayer meetings added much to the meeting. We certainly appreciate Brother Morris as a revivalist. Anyone is fortunate to secure his help. Our country has recovered some from the floods, but we have no crops except a little cotton, and our people will be depressed until they have had a harvest season. Our Sunday schools are improving, and we hope to hold another meeting before Conference.—C. F. Staples.

Kossuth Circuit, North Miss.

We have just closed a fine meeting at Pleasant Hill, one of the appointments on this charge. Old people who have been members of that Church for many years say the meeting was the greatest in the history of the Church. Rev. L. W. Cain, evangelist, was with us and did the preaching. Brother Cain did great work, both in the pulpit and at the altar, and was much appreciated by all. He was the pastor here some eight or ten years ago, and the people looked forward with pleasure to his coming, for he was much loved by all. I can truthfully say that we were greatly benefited by his coming, for the Lord was with us. Many were converted who said they were going to join other Churches. Thirty joined our Church. Twenty-eight adults and seven infants were baptized. We had a genuine revival in the Church. More people attended the services than could possibly be accommodated. Many were compelled to remain on the outside. From beginning to end the Lord was with us.—Thos. H. Mills, P. C.

Lecompte, La.

Dear Dr. Meek: We have just closed what is perhaps the greatest revival ever held at Lecompte. Bro. D. A. Morris from Gambia, O., did the preaching and his brother, Rev. C. M. Morris, pastor at Bayou La Chute, led the singing. The meeting began on Aug. 18, and continued through Sept. 1. The interest and attendance were good from the start and grew rapidly. The building, which is large in proportion to the size of the town, was taxed to its utmost more than once. And what was best was that the large congregations were attracted by the simple gospel preaching and singing. Brother Morris has no clap-trap methods; he depends solely on the uplifted Christ to draw and to hold the people. Jesus is his untiring theme. Brother C. M. Morris is a splendid song leader. His singing in the street meetings attracted people from all quarters. From one hundred to two hundred gathered to hear him sing, and then to listen while his brother told in a simple way the story of the Cross.

I do not want any better help than these two young men. The one is the complement of the other. Each in his way was indispensable to the work at Lecompte.

The Church was greatly revived and many backsliders were reclaimed. Nearly every one received a larger vision of Christ. There were 22 accessions to the Church by profession of faith, and two by letter. The Morris brothers are now helping in a meeting at Boyce. I will let you know results later.—Sincerely, Robt. M. Brown, Boyce, La.

Chapel Hill, Miss.

Our revival meeting at Chapel Hill, on the Mars' Hill charge, closed Saturday night, August 31, after a very successful week. We were disappointed the first of the week by Brother A. T. Clanton, of Arkansas, being sick, and failing to reach us. But our beloved pastor, Brother W. V. Shearer, and the writer, who is a young man just licensed to preach, did the preaching. We were also assisted by Brother J. Earnhardt, who is a great old soldier of the Cross. The secret of his power is that he is a man of prayer, and his whole life seems to be one continual communion with God. Brother Clanton, who lived in this neighborhood all his life until four years ago, when he went to Arkansas and began preaching, was on hand for the Wednesday services and did the preaching the remainder of the week. He came filled with the love of God and a burning desire to save souls. In his beautiful, yet simple way, he reached the hearts of former associates and relatives whom the greatest evangelist could never have touched. Church members were drawn closer to God and made to realize more fully their Christian duty. Backsliders were reclaimed and there were 18 additions to the Church: 16 by profession of faith, and 1 came from the Baptist Church and 1 from the Presbyterian Church. Brother Shearer has been, and still is, doing great things for God this year. He has indeed been wonderfully blessed in his endeavors. He is greatly loved by all on the charge. Brother Earnhardt, or Uncle Jesse as he is called, also won the hearts of the people who felt blessed by his being with them. We are all on a higher plane, and want to do more for our Master.

O. A. CLARK.

PASTOR WANTED.

The present pastor of an attractive charge in the Port Gibson District has been released to enter Millsaps College on Sept. 15. A successor on the circuit is wanted for immediate service.

The charge, with four churches, short distances apart, is all on the railroad. A very fine opportunity until the Mississippi Conference meets, Dec. 11, is open to a good man. A good salary will be paid.

Address for and with information, at once, W. H. Huntley, P. E., Port Gibson, Miss.

DALEVILLE, MISS.

We have held revival services at Linwood, Andrews' Chapel, Soule Chapel, and Bethel. Efficient help was given by the following brethren: W. G. Forsyth, W. T. Griffin, W. F. Baggett, and F. B. Ormond. The preaching of all of them was scriptural and impressive. The congregations were gratifying. We had a really good meeting at each church. We were increased in faith, love and hope. Many in public testimony said that they had been blessed in these meetings. There was a special service held at each place for the children and these were profitable hours. One father and thirteen bright boys and girls were added to the Church. "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

BUSY IN REVIVAL WORK.

Dear Dr. Meek: I have been away for some time assisting in revival meetings. The Lord has greatly blessed our efforts: many have been converted and brought into the Church, and Christians have been strengthened and built up. I have helped Simpson, Garner, Luter and Newbern. I go next to help Poe at Saltillo; then to Brother Burt.

My own charge is progressing on all lines. We organized a Senior Epworth League at Sidon three months ago, and it is doing a fine work. My prayer meetings are alive and interesting. Our Sunday schools are well organized and active: we are having good attendance at our church services of every kind. We still feel the good effects of the meetings which were held in the spring.

The prospects are bright for rounding out the year well and making a good report at Conference.

VAPOR TREATMENTS

for Pneumonia, croup and cold troubles are now used in all hospitals. The vapors carry the medication direct to the spot without injuring the stomach by internal medication. In Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve the vapors are confined in a salve so that they will be released automatically by the heat of the body, when applied to the throat and chest, and this inhaled by the patient. At the same time Vick's is absorbed through the pores of the skin of throat and chest, taking out the soreness, reducing the fever and aiding the vapors to relieve the congestion. One good rub will relieve a cold while croup is absolutely cured in fifteen minutes. A trial package free. The Vick Chemical Company, Greensboro, N. C.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING.

Here is a Christmas suggestion for the family that does not already possess a high grade piano. If your old piano is out of date or if your home has never known the delights of owning a sweet toned instrument, why not do away with the giving of useless perishable trinkets, just this once, and let every member of the family unite in presenting one big Christmas present to the entire family—a high grade piano that will last a life time and be a joy and a blessing to young and old alike. No home is right without music and the piano is the king of all musical instruments. Don't wait until Christmas is upon you. Write to-day for your copy of the beautiful new catalogue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club that makes piano buying so easy. HENNINGTON (MISS.) CAMP MEETING.

The fortieth session of the Hennington Camp Meeting closed Thursday night, September 29, 1912. Rev. W. M. Sullivan and Rev. C. F. Emery did the preaching in an instructive, earnest and generally edifying manner. They did not fail to condemn sin, and they pleaded for a more consecrated life on the part of church members. They showed in a kindly way the trend of conduct of so many who are being captured by the so-called innocent practices of the worldly-minded, and which, if continued, will ultimately result in the loss of the soul. In fact, pure, sound gospel doctrine was continuously stressed with love and admonition.

We regretted that Rev. W. B. Hogg, who was to have assisted in the meeting, had to cancel his engagement with us on account of being sick.

As to visible results, there were several who professed to have been converted, several hundred Christians testified to having been spiritually benefited, three strong young men joined our Church, and two young ladies expressed their fixed determination to join the Baptist Church at their first opportunity.

In short, I may say it has been my pleasure to attend the Hennington Camp Meeting for four years, and I have been closely identified with its work, and I do not hesitate to say my observation is that this has been in many respects the best camp meeting held here during this time, especially as to good behavior and attention. The congregations were exceedingly large at night—said to have been the largest in fifteen years.

With the splendid tabernacle recently repaired, with the many nice cottages, hotel, splendid lights, and good water, which have been provided, with hundreds of people within reach of this historic camp ground, there seems to me to be an unlimited opportunity for the co-operation of Christian men and women of all denominations for the salvation of souls.

The committee for the association wound up the business of the camp meeting yesterday evening in a very satisfactory and enthusiastic manner.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Auxiliary Fourth Vice Presidents of the Conference Society:

Dear Sisters: You are aware, doubtless, that I was elected Conference Fourth Vice President by the joint committee, which met in West Point, June 6, 1912. On account of illness in my family I was forced to let the second quarter pass without asking your support and co-operation in this new field, nor was I able to send out any literature. I trust we will be privileged to work together the rest of 1912 without further hindrance. In order that anything definite or practical be done, I urge that each auxiliary fourth vice president do her part in helping this new work to take firm root in our Conference; and that the women study to get a larger vision of what we may do, through united effort, toward bringing the world nearer to the ideal Christ gave us of the kingdom of heaven.

I see from the Annual Report that many of the auxiliaries have either failed to elect a fourth vice president, or have neglected sending her name and address to me. For this reason it is impossible to send literature to all of the societies. Let me urge upon each auxiliary the importance of electing this officer, and forwarding name and address at your earliest convenience. Remember that the quarters close the 10th of April, July, October, and January.

With deep interest for the work and best wishes for your success,

Most cordially,
MRS. WALTER TROTTER.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Arcadia Missionary Society.

This society was organized during the past Conference year. For a young society it is making giant strides. Is it any wonder when we consider that they have two such indefatigable workers as Brother and Sister Townsley? Instead of meeting once or twice a month, as some do, they have weekly meetings, and have not missed a meeting all summer.

At the first meeting of the month, the business of the society is conducted; at the next, the program in the Missionary Voice is used; and the other two meetings are devoted to topics on Social Service. The subjects to be studied during the next four months are "Woman and the Community"; "The Home and the Family Life."

A quarterly is issued by the society, giving the hostess for the meetings, the topics, and leaders. Every woman in the community is given one of these programs. Thus interest is increased, and there is no confusion in regard to the leader and place of meeting. The mission study book, "Conservation of National Ideals," has just been finished. The class met weekly and used different leaders each time.

A little girl in the Ruston Orphanage has been selected by the women, and it will be their labor of love to clothe her. A policy has been adopted whereby a Conference officer will be invited every month or two to address the society, thus enabling them to keep in close touch with the work throughout the entire State. The average attendance at the weekly meetings is sixty-five per cent of the enrollment, and this, in turn, is 33 per cent of the women church members.

DISTRICT INSTITUTES.

Plans are being made in Louisiana to hold District Institutes in connection with the annual district meetings. The exact dates and places for these institutes have not yet been fixed, but will be given later with an outline of the program.

MISS BENNETT BETTER.

Since the Council session in Washington, D. C., Miss Bennett has been quite ill. She is much improved and hopes soon to visit her niece in Seattle, where she will have change of climate and absolute rest. We pray for her complete restoration to health.

"THE CONVERTED BRAHMAN."

This poem, published by the Woman's Missionary Society, appeared in the New Orleans Christian Advocate of Aug. 22, 1912. If you have not a copy of the poem you are urged to secure one, for it is splendidly adapted for use in mission study classes or open meetings. It has been used with fine effect in connection with the chapter, "Non-Christian Faiths in America," in our study of "Conservation of National Ideals."

SOMETHING FOR YOU.

The beautiful new catalogue of the Advocate Piano Club is now ready for distribution. The advertising manager, through whose energy and business genius the club was organized, invites every subscriber of the paper to write for a free copy. In addition to its artistic beauty and elegant pictures of the pianos, it contains a volume of information that is indispensable to prospective piano purchasers.

The many economies and conveniences effected by the club are set forth in a manner which carries conviction. Five solid pages of the new catalogue are devoted to the printing of letters from old club members expressing their appreciation of the club and the superb Ludden & Bates Pianofortes. In writing for your copy of the new catalogue address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

The Sunday School.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

In a recent talk to a district conference, a speaker (a pastor) stated that he had, in prayer and in love, requested any of his teachers who would not give up their worldly ways and strive to know the Lord in a spiritual experience to resign their classes. Some are at fault in doing nothing to correct such evils, some make the effort without the needed tact and love, and some—ah! too few—both do something and do it well. The good physician neither lets alone nor kills his patient, but so treats him as to cure.

Mr. J. Van Carter, highly connected in our Methodist circles, is acting secretary of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, and is one of the strongest speakers that we have heard in defending the work he represents. We welcome him into our midst, and bespeak for him the co-operation of our Louisiana Methodists. Under Brother Ellzey our Sunday schools were given higher ideals and more practical methods of attaining them, and we believe Mr. Carter, who has been State Secretary for North Carolina, is a capable worker in this field of leadership.

The Publishing House provides literature for organizing "a rainy day regiment," giving special recognition to those who attend Sunday school on rainy days. A little rain would not affect the attendance at a concert or a social meeting, but it very materially affects the Sunday school's attendance. Because one thinks another will not be there, he too stays away, when if the right principles controlled him he would try the harder to attend. So, too, in these summer months the superintendent needs most those who put duty first, and he can soon find out who follows the crowd and who have trustworthy official character. The value of the teacher or scholar who is present at a personal sacrifice, because he fears others may be absent, who sings when his throat is sore, because others are not singing as they should, who works because he feels that he is most needed, is above riches. And it is he who shall be made "ruler over that which is much," because he has been "faithful in that which is least."

One of the best elementary departments that we have found in the country is at Calhoun, superintended by Mrs. L. Howard Peavy. To meet the need for room she has moved out under the trees for the summer and will occupy the town hall, situated nearby, in the winter. In the latter place she will have an abundance of room and a piano. The children are taught prayers, memory verses, march songs, etc. The happiest event of the season in this department was a recent special program to which the parents were invited. The children marched to their favorite song, "Little Soldiers," and gave a nature exercise, "The Coming of Flowers and Birds," and sang "Jesus Bids us Shine" and "The Alder by the River." Both parents and children had such a profitable day that such programs are to be given from time to time in the future. This idea is suggestive in getting parents into more sympathetic interest with their children's Sunday school work.

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

The superintendent holds the key to the situation, and the very first sentence he utters will be the key-word for the whole day.

Now a graded Sunday school is one in which the organization, curriculum, and teaching are adapted to the educational and spiritual needs of the pupil at each stage of his development.

September 29 is the best Rally Day, as Graded Lessons for old and new schools alike will begin on October 1. Get your programs from your own Publishing House. Call your committees and enthusiastically plan the work. Have new and attractive mottoes about; get your pastor to preach on the Graded Lessons, and some of the themes they propose to teach to various departments. Prepare a strong, brief and attractive program. Place before the school some definite plan for its betterment, and remember that it is always easier to do a big thing than a little thing. Don't plan only for a larger enrollment—that is good—but plan for better work. Have Rally Day Souvenirs, stirring music, lovely flowers, a cordial welcome, and a well-planned program.

"The demand of the hour is for making of the Sunday school a school deserving of the name, so that it may accomplish a worthy educational function." Traditionally the Sunday school has been all too much the synonym of weakness, effeminacy, inefficiency. Now, why may not the Sunday school of these late days become the synonym of strength and educational efficiency? Is it not possible that our Sunday schools shall be regarded as having a rightful claim to recognition as part and parcel of the educational system of the day? With this vision of what an effective school really is, and with this sentence glimpse of what a real Sunday school can be, we get a line of contrast which should make us improve every Sunday school we touch.

Another sentence of rather long words from a high authority on Sunday school and all Christian work also emphasizes the necessity of improving our schools to meet the crying demands of the heart and soul-hungry world: "The supreme strategic opportunity of the Sunday school of to-day lies in the direction of the developing of itself educationally, so as to measurably supply the religious shortage in current educational systems." In many and most cases the public schools do not provide religious education, and the family which ought to be the supreme factor in the religious education of boys and girls fails miserably to measure up to any such standard in unnumbered multitudes of instances. So the real religious education of the world depends chiefly on the short Sunday school hour on Sabbath morning.

YOU ARE INVITED.

The advertising manager of the N. O. Christian Advocate cordially invites you to investigate the attractive offer of the Advocate Piano Club. The club has proven, to the entire satisfaction and delight of its members, every claim that was made for it. It was founded on the principle that "what is impossible for one is easy for one hundred." The tremendous purchasing power of an army of one hundred piano buyers solves perfectly the otherwise difficult problem of securing a piano of highest artistic standard at a price and on terms which put it within reach of practically every subscriber.

The new club booklet and catalogue, beautifully illustrated and fully describing the club plans and pianos are now ready for distribution. We have a copy for you. Won't you write for it to-day? Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

Farm with this Modern Mule

Whether you farm 160 acres or thousands of acres, a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor will easily save you 25% to 50% every year over animal power.

There is no power job on the farm that is too big for this MODERN FARM HORSE. None that it will not do quicker, better and cheaper than horses or mules.

Quicker—because you can work the tractor hour after hour, day and night, if necessary, without a stop for rest.

Better—because this giant of steel furnishes such tremendous power you can plow much deeper, and do all your other farm work, with greater efficiency and thoroughness than ever before.

Cheaper—because it gives you the power of 15 to 30 sturdy horses or mules, and does it on the cheapest kerosene for fuel. When the tractor is idle, it doesn't cost you a cent for fuel. The instant you stop the engine, the fuel expense stops.

Think of it! Speed, efficiency and positive economy, all combined in the wonderful

HART-PARR OIL TRACTOR

And all under the absolute control of one man. It takes only one man to successfully operate and care for the tractor under every condition of service. For raising grain, cotton or cane; for plowing, drilling, cultivating, harvesting and hauling; for driving a grain separator, clover huller, corn shredder, corn husker, and for countless other operations, a Hart-Parr Oil Tractor furnishes ideal, reliable and economical power. We build this tractor in 30, 40, 60 and 80 B. H. P. sizes. One of these sizes will just suit your power needs.

Let us send you our Illustrated Catalog; also other literature explaining the cost of power farming.

Where Do You Stand?

ARE YOU RACING OR RESTING— FACING AHEAD OR FAINTING?

Look at the record you have made this last week and see if it is satisfactory. Has you made any advance, or are you just where you were two weeks ago? No candidate who is not willing to put in her best licks during the next few weeks can have any hope of making one of the grand trips that the Advocate plans to give away.

The Trip to Europe.

Have you, you who have thus far made little headway, ever stopped and thought out just what you will miss if you fail to win one of the grand prizes? Have you ever really understood that to make the trip to Zurich, Switzerland, next year would be the greatest trip any one could possibly take? Think about it. You may, if you will, leave New Orleans, go to New York City, on to Italy, across the indescribable Alps, and into the very heart of Switzerland. While there you will be permitted to attend a World's Sunday School Convention; you will be permitted to hear some of the greatest orators of the world, will see people from all lands and of all nationalities and races, will hear the language of every civilized people, and will receive such a mental uplift by being thus thrown into such a gathering as you could not receive by attending a great university for a year. After the Convention you will travel diagonally across Switzerland, across France, stop in Paris and Brussels, the two leading cities of the world of fashion, and then sail from Antwerp back to New York City and then overland to home. It is said that the best of all trips is arriving home. Not that it is there that you see the most, but it is there you sit down and live over again your delightful experiences as you tell of them to your friends. Take this trip! You will never regret it, and you may be the winner of it if you only will.

The American Tour.

But you answer, "I cannot win. Others are too far ahead of me." Then win the second trip. Go to Lake Chautauqua, to the Niagara Falls, go down the historic Hudson River by boat in daylight, see the wonders of New York City, and then sail back, over the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico to New Orleans. Certainly the trip will be an inspiration. To attend the Assembly meeting for one week at Lake Chautauqua will be well worth all the efforts you may put forth to win the trip. There you will hear such floods of oratory, such rhythm of music, such wealth of words of wisdom, see such beauties of nature, and live in such an atmosphere of restfulness as will bring a blessing to you every time you think of it the rest of your life. See the Niagara Falls! Did you never see them? Then, when you stand and see the wonderful manifestation of nature's tremendous power exhibited in those peerless falls, you will thank God that you put forth the effort to circulate the Advocate and by so doing were permitted to behold this, an American Wonder of the World.

This Week's Results.

The list that we are publishing below shows that some of the contestants have been at work, and there is a shifting of places. A new name appears at the top. Some other candidates may forge to the front and land at the head of the list when we publish it the next time. May that person be you? You may be way down the list, but a week spent in persistent work would accomplish wonders. Try it! Study this list carefully, and see how much you are behind, and then set about to lessen the distance between you and the top. The following is the list of the six leaders:

LAMAR, MISS.

A series of services were held at Black's Schoolhouse last week by Rev. W. L. Broome, and he had record-breaking success. A new church was organized with thirty-five members, and also a Sunday school and prayer meeting. Twenty-three infants were baptized, and a voluntary collection (in cash and subscriptions) of $100.00 was taken. Brother Broome was the happiest man you ever saw.—J. A. Maxwell, Jr., Steward of Lamar Church.

BIG PROFIT WITH LITTLE COST IN MEAL AND FEED GRINDING.

Many farmers operating cotton gins, saw mills, threshers, etc., simply do themselves out of good money by allowing their engines to lie idle at times, or by not utilizing the full power which their engines develop. A little extra shafting and a few feet of belting is all that is necessary to harness this wasted power up to a good meal and feed mill, the yearly profits from which, made by grinding for neighbors, would in many instances, run into four figures.

If you have an engine, you could hardly find a more profitable side line than feed and meal grinding. Your neighbors will have grain to grind, while you can also save millers' tolls and hauling expenses by grinding your own.

Think this over, and before you forget it, write Sprout, Waldron & Company, Box 438, Muncy, Pa., for their interesting literature. They manufacture a splendid mill, and can give you some valuable information.

LET THE STANDARD BE MAINTAINED.

We have heard the charge made that Methodist ministers, having each other's character in their keeping, are disposed to be too lenient when accusations are made, and that we are not maintaining as high a moral and spiritual standard for our preachers as we ought. We do not think the facts justify a complaint so general as this, but that there are occasional instances where sympathy for a brother who has become involved in trouble is allowed to exercise undue weight is, we fear, true. To do this is to make a tremendous mistake. Sympathy is a noble quality, but to let it undermine truth and justice is ruinous. Every breath of suspicion against one of our ministers should be cleared up before we send him out with the endorsement of the Church. Although the evidence may be insufficient to convict him, if it is strong enough to raise a reasonable doubt as to his innocence, by a vote of the Conference he should be declared unacceptable and retired. If it be said that such a course might do a brother injustice, we answer that the sacred interests of the Church are vastly more important than those of a single individual. We need a high order of manliness and courage in handling such cases. Especially is this true of the presiding elders in whose districts they occur.

HOW IT HURTS.

According to report, Dr. Rogers, of the Drew Theological Seminary, has declared that he does not believe the Bible account of the flood. We dare say that some will insist that this makes little difference since belief in the great deluge described in Genesis is not essential to salvation; but such a view of the matter is most superficial. The trouble with men of Dr. Rogers' stamp is that they discredit the trustworthiness of the Scriptures, and when that is done confidence in them is largely, if not wholly, destroyed. No volume that abounds in misstatements can speak with a note of authority. When the "critics" have discarded portions of the Book of Holy Writ, they need not be surprised if men of only average intelligence are disposed to view with suspicion what they leave unassailed. "Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus," is a rule of evidence too widely recognized to expect any person or document to be exempted from it. Herein lies the explanation of the blighting influence that "higher criticism" has exerted both inside and outside of the Church. A revelation that may be taken to pieces and put together again to suit the whims and caprices of the feeble and uncertain human intellect, can never command the faith and obedience of humanity. Its light is too flickering for people to care to be guided by it.

GOD STILL SPEAKS.

The Book of Revelation is closed and God no longer talks to the inhabitants of earth in audible tones, but he has not ceased to speak to men. By the Holy Spirit he yet communicates with human hearts and conveys to them his messages. He warns and entreats the wandering sinner, convicts and calls the backslider to repentance, points out to his believing children higher privileges, and often brings to their attention the duties that they should perform. The holy impressions and noble impulses that come to us on bended knees in the privacy of our closets—what are they but the whisperings of our Heavenly Father? No, no; the connection between earth and the Eternal Throne is not broken. Over it come communications to every human being, and to the soul that is attuned to receive them they are ever flashing forth. Conscious communion and fellowship with God are quite as possible in this as in any preceding age. We may walk with him and counsel with him daily, if we only will.

A CLERICAL SABBATH-BREAKER.

A press dispatch sent out from Klamath Falls, Oregon, on August 20, represented the Rev. C. W. Aked, formerly the pastor of Mr. John D. Rockefeller's church in New York, but now in charge of a Congregational church in San Francisco, as seated on the bank of a lake fishing on Sunday, while the people were passing by on their way to services. Reports printed in the secular papers lack much of being reliable, but as this one has gone for weeks uncontradicted, we take it that there must be some truth in it.

We suppose that Dr. Aked holds the view, which we sometimes hear expressed, that the Sabbath is intended to be a day of rest and recreation; that its object is to refresh and reinvigorate the physical man, and that sporting tends to do this more effectively than lounging. But this is a total misconception of the design of the Sabbath. We are commanded not only to refrain from labor on the Sabbath, but also "to keep it holy." Valuable as the day is for conserving the physical well-being of the race, it is even more so because of the moral and religious influence that it exerts. Man has far greater needs than those of the body—the needs of the deathless soul. To open the way for meeting these was God's great primal purpose in instituting the Sabbath, and to ignore this fact is to reduce man to the level of a mere animal and strike at the very foundation of the Christian religion.

Dr. Aked, if correctly represented, has, to express it mildly, made a tremendous mistake. We do not see how hereafter he can hope to have any standing as a minister among orthodox Christians. He has flagrantly violated one of the most important of the divine commandments and set an example which will do great harm. For some time he has been regarded as rather lax in his theological views, and his liberalism in belief now seems to have brought forth its fruitage in his conduct. It generally does this, and it is for this reason that we are so afraid of men who are latitudinarian in their teaching. It is never safe to follow them.

OUR ORPHANAGE WORK DAYS.

The Work Day for the Louisiana Orphanage is Saturday, October 12, and that for the Mississippi Orphanage, Saturday, October 19. The Sunday following each of these days is to be Rally Day, when offerings for these institutions will be received. Let every pastor at once announce and explain the meaning of Work Day from his pulpit, and take all other necessary steps to induce his people to observe the occasion, as it deserves to be. There is no nobler work than that of caring for needy orphan children, and the church that fails to share in it misses a glorious privilege. Let every Methodist in the two States interested give his earnings for one day out of the year to this worthy cause. We hope to hear that these designated 'Days' have been universally observed, and that the results therefrom have more than met expectation. Brothers Vaughan and Williams are entitled to the hearty co-operation of all our preachers and people. Men better qualified for the places that they fill would be exceedingly hard to find. We are most fortunate in having them where they are, and we should see that they are supplied with the necessary funds and facilities to execute efficiently the sacred trusts that we have committed to their hands. In these approaching Work Days we have an opportunity to accomplish something worth while. Let us make the most of it.

MORE OF IT NEEDED.

A secular paper in Virginia thus refers to the preaching of a Methodist minister in that State: "His sermons are very forceful; he is clear and simple (the very youngest could understand), and his exhortations are splendid." This is an excellent description of good preaching. We are glad to see the word 'exhortation' in print once more. To far too great an extent, it has become a lost art. We think we would do well to strive to re-acquire it. Good 'exhorting' is nothing more than an appeal to the people to act in harmony with the instruction given, an effort to reach and move the will after the message addressed to the intelligence has been delivered. No discourse can reach the highest degree of effectiveness that has in it no hortatory note. But let it be remembered that 'exhorting' is not mere noisy ranting. Exhortation is most powerful when backed by clear and vigorous exposition.

"He leads the happiest life who can best remember and most easily forget. These are both graces that have much to do with our peace and welfare."

SIN FOUND OUT.

By William J. Hart, D. D.

Moses uttered a forceful truth when he said to the children of Reuben and the children of God, by way of warning, "Be sure your sin will find you out." However pleasant it may seem at times, man discovers that the way of the transgressor is hard. The truth finds constant verification in life.

Recently a man was tried in New York for burglary. The prisoner had what seemed like a good alibi. The prosecution based its entire case on finger prints discernible through a microscope on a glass panel. Five of the jury admitted after the trial that the evidence was not satisfactorily conclusive to them, and that they would have hesitated to convict the prisoner on it. But when the prisoner saw the finger prints on a pane of glass which had been removed by a burglar in effecting an entrance to the premises, and these were compared with other finger prints he had made for the police after his arrest, he conferred with his counsel and entered a plea of guilty. "Finger print evidence," we are told, "is immutable and exact. The impress of the fingers of a new-born child will correspond exactly with the impress of those same fingers after the lapse of any number of years." Science thus aids in the detection of crime.

Bishop Goodsell used to relate an incident from his own childhood experience which had early impressed upon him the fact that serious and fatal consequences were likely to follow disobedience. His mother had an especially beautiful vase, and had warned the lad not to touch it. Curiosity, however, would sometimes overcome him, and he would then peer at the vase, and sometimes wonder if the bottom looked as beautiful as the sides. One day, remembered all through his life, when he had grown somewhat bolder, he lifted the vase in his hands. Quickly it slipped from his grasp, fell to the hearthstone, and was shattered into a thousand pieces. The tragedy had been enacted. He knew that he had wounded his mother's heart. Hearing the crash, she came in. Young Goodsell expected to be punished, but the mother simply said, "My dear boy, do you see what you have done!" He then learned, he said, what it costs to disobey law. For fifty years he had heard his mother's pleading voice saying, "Do you see what you have done?"

The late King Edward of England, it is said, was once at Marienbad, and, together with a few friends, was taking tea in the pine woods near the town. At a table close by sat another party, the host of which was a well-known German prince. A young English woman had the responsibility of waiting on the guests at both tables. King Edward noticed the blustering manner of the German, who threatened to report the terrified girl every time she had occasion to answer his summons. Annoyed by this unjustifiable behavior, the king said to Sir Stanley Clarke: "You are to convey my thanks to the proprietor here for the prompt and admirable manner in which my party has been served at this restaurant." The command, we are told, was instantly obeyed, much to the disgust of the adjoining table, a disgust which was intensified when the king gave the timid young waitress a gold piece. Thus there had been discovered and rebuked conduct which was of a lower order than might be expected.

Suffering of body or mind, memory, conscience, the Bible, all emphasize the great truth, "Your sin will find you out." Life, therefore, should be good, pure, noble, God-fearing.

These words were recently uttered by a preacher of prominence: "Scientists tell us that every uttered word produces a vibration in the atmosphere, and some have gone so far as to say that these vibrations never entirely cease. However fanciful this may be, there is an important sense in which words live forever. They live in the record which we are writing, in the characters which we are building. When Latimer was being tried for heresy he heard the scratch of a pen behind the tapestry. In a moment he bethought himself that every word he spoke was being taken down and then he became more careful." Should we escape responsibility before man, still we cannot ignore the fact that before the judgment seat of Christ we must give an account of the deeds done in the body. For every idle or false word spoken we learn that we shall have to give an account.

We are told that Alexis Piron, the French poet and satirist, sought for many years to obtain a seat among the Forty Immortals in the French Academy. He was recognized among the poets of his day, and was confident of his ultimate admission, when a vile ode, written when he was a boy, was brought to light, and he knew that the door of the Academy was closed in his face forever.

"One stitch dropped as the weaver drove
His nimble shuttle to and fro,
In and out, beneath, above,
Till the pattern seemed to bud and grow
As if the fairies had helping been;
And the one stitch dropped pulled the next stitch out,
And a weak place grew in the fabric stout,
And the perfect pattern was marred for aye
By the one small stitch that was dropped that day."

Love atones, grace heals, God forgives. But thrice blessed are the pure in heart and life.

"More and more, as life goes on," writes Dr. David Smith, "one realizes that its supreme felicity lies in keeping one's record clean, with no dark blot, no passages which haunt one's memory and bring the blush to the cheek."—From the Christian Intelligencer.

FACTS AND THE FUTURE.

By Rev. Ed. F. Cook, D. D.

In view of the approaching close of the Conference year, we wish to bring to the attention of our pastors and their people some facts about the missionary situation:

I. This is the day of God's power, a time of Providential opportunity, and 107 brave, true men (with their wives and children, making 392 persons), represent our Church in six great mission fields.

II. These 392 souls are wholly dependent for support upon what the Church pays on the annual missionary assessment. In the above are not included the 134 single women, who represent the Woman's Department of the Board in mission lands, nor the education of girls—the work to which the women chiefly devote their labors and finances. The work of the women is superb; their missionary offerings are liberal. These offerings, however, through the women's missionary societies do not aid in paying the assessments for missions, nor help in maintaining the general lines of church work in the mission fields.

III. In the mission field these missionaries promote all the lines of Church activity to which we are accustomed, viz.: evangelistic, educational, medical, literary, and benevolent. Our Mission Board has to finance there all the departments of Church activity cared for by the other General Boards at home.

IV. The equipment of the Church in mission fields is dependent primarily upon these annual payments to missions. This equipment includes church buildings and parsonages, schools and colleges, hospitals and dispensaries, presses and publishing plants, and the necessary equipment of all these institutions.

V. Under the present financial policy of the Board, all specials are taken from the budget; hence, all are creditable on assessments for missions. Our basis of business, therefore, is the missionary assessment. Whether we are to advance, hold our ground, or retrograde in our missionary work in 1913, depends wholly upon what our missionary offerings shall be for the present Conference year.

VI. These missionary men, with their families, represent the whole Church. They have gone to the mission fields to do the work to which God had commissioned the whole Church. Is not every man, woman and child in the Church, therefore, under obligation to share the burden which these men bear in heathen lands?

VII. The supreme need to-day in mission fields is more men—big, strong, well-trained men for the leadership of the Church, the training of the native ministry, and for the channeling of the mighty movements now on for the kingdom of Christ. The situation in every field calls loudly for Christian statesmen for the planting of the kingdom and the building of nations.

VIII. The missionary Church is the live Church. The non-missionary Church, the decadent Church. It is a matter of demonstration that the congregation, District or Conference, which places large emphasis upon the missionary interest, obedience, and offering, secures response not only in missionary gifts, but in revival power and in the growth of pastors' salaries and in payments to all other connectional interests of the Church. Placing the emphasis where the Master placed it, appealing to unselfishness, and drawing the Church into sympathy with the dominant purpose of the Master's ministry, is the secret of success.

IX. The crop reports and general business aspects of the South are this year unusually good. God is opening to us his bountiful hand. It is but another chance for the Church to render a long delayed obedience to the great commission, which obedience God has been making easier and more expedient each year.

X. The success of our missionaries during the past ten years is unprecedented in the history of the Church. The fullness of time is surely at hand. With Japan engaged in the sublime task of seeking for a religion; with China turning from her ancient heathen faiths, taking a republican form of government, and founding her new life upon Biblical principles; with Korea swept into the kingdom by a mighty revival; with the large areas of Africa accessible and her benighted people responsive to missionary effort; with every sign of decay and disintegration in the heart of heathenism; with Latin America in revolution against Roman Catholic dominance and welcoming Protestantism as being a promise of national progress and religious liberty, we face a situation so extraordinary, so thrilling, and so big with missionary possibility as to compel the attention and the interest of the Church. "If ever our preachers had an opportunity to offer a demonstration of Christianity and to compel belief in its universal and divine claims, it is to-day." The bigness and urgency of our missionary opportunities were never so compelling as now.

With these facts fresh in memory, surely every pastor and congregation in Southern Methodism will unite in a resolute effort to meet the obligation which now falls to Southern Methodism before the ever-widening doors of opportunity, the urgency of human need, and the repeated calls of God to advance.

The following exhibit of missionary offerings for this year may be of interest to readers of this paper:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

1912—Assessed for Foreign Missions ..$ 9,300.00
To August 1, 1912, paid to Treasurer
General Board

There remains, therefore, to be raised before the Conference Session$ 9,300.00

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

1912—Assessed for Foreign Missions$11,400.00
To August 1, 1912, paid to Treasurer
General Board 437.00

There remains, therefore, to be raised
before the Conference Session$10,963.00

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

1912—Assessed for Foreign Missions ..$12,500.00
 To August 1, 1912, paid to Treasurer
 General Board 870.00

There remains, therefore, to be raised
 before the Conference Session$11,630.00

Sending out an army of well-trained men into the heat of a mighty battle and delaying food and raiment and the sinews of war imperils the success of the whole campaign. The General Board of Missions is compelled, between January and October, to borrow on interest large sums of money to keep the force on the field and the machinery in motion. The next few weeks will determine our missionary status for 1913. Our only hope of solvency and success is prompt and heroic leadership on the part of every pastor in Southern Methodism in martialing the force God has committed to his hands, and delivering its full strength of faith and offering upon the missionary enterprise. May God honor every honest effort with success.

THE REGENERATION OF INFANTS AS TOLD IN THE NEW TESTAMENT.

By H. Walter Featherston, D. D.

Not because I am a hobby-rider, nor because I love controversy, do I return to this matter; but because some Methodist parents, as well as preachers, seem not able to get rid of a sort of hereditary trend towards Calvinism and thereby deny to their children the most sacred rights that God has decreed and Christ has bought for children.

John wrote "the Fourth Gospel" late in his long life; hence out of the full maturity of his deep learning and inspired thought. In Chapter I, verse 9, we read: "There was the true Light (speaking of Jesus) which lighteth every man, coming into the world." The margin of the Revised Version says, "Every man as he cometh into the world;" and this is the real sense of the Greek. Whether we accept this marginal rendering, or prefer the revised text, or the older authorized version, the statement is unequivocal that Christ Jesus lights every man. Now, in what sense is this true? Does it mean that every man has a "natural conscience," a supposed light of nature, which, "if man did not hinder, would shine more and more to the perfect day?" Surely not. Most assuredly, Christianity and its Christ are vastly other than "natural religion." In a larger and higher sense, Christ is "the Light of the world." This "true" supersensual "Light of the world" lights every man. How and when? When did the Church lighten Ghenghis Khan and Attila and Li Hung Chang and Nero—born after A. D. 1—and millions of others, who in adult life were anything but Christians, and some of them everything opposed to Christ and his teaching? When did he lighten these? I accept the revised version marginal reading, which is as reasonable as it is scholarly: "He lighteth every man as he cometh into the world."

How, or in what sense, does he lighten these? Let us assume, without taking time to prove it, that "all men are fallen in Adam," inheriting "the corruption of the nature of every man, that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam, whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness." This is the teaching of our Church, and no teaching is truer. Yet, the Christ distinctly says of little children: "Of such (as some babies he took into his arms at the time) is the kingdom of God;" and at another time, presenting "a little child," he said, "Except ye turn and become as little children ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. xix., 14; xviii., 3; cf. Luke, xviii., 17, and Mark, x., 15.) Paul, following his Lord, said: "Now they (the children) are holy," I. Cor., vii., 14. These Scriptures plainly teach that little children are in a saved state. They can mean nothing other than this. No Methodist dare deny this.

If infants are in a saved state, how came them so? The answer is very simple, and as given in our Discipline, in Paragraph 664, it runs: "All men, though fallen in Adam, are born into this world in Christ the Redeemer, heirs of life eternal and subjects of the saving grace of the Holy Spirit." This means that they are born regenerate. Thus is every man lightened by the Christ as he comes into the world."

In Romans, v:18, Paul says: "So then as through one trespass the judgment came unto all men to condemnation; even so through one act of righteousness the free gift came unto all men to justification of life." In what possible sense could the "free gift" come to "all men to justification," unless it be that all men, by the death of Christ, the one act of righteousness, are justified, and, in consequence, are regenerated at birth? In the next verse Paul makes it plainer: "For as through the one man's disobedience the many (used in the sense of "all men") were made sinners, even so through the obedience of the one shall the many (i. e., all) be made righteous." The meaning is as clear as the argument is strong: all men made sinners by inheriting Adam's sin, are made Christians by the death of Christ. One is as wide in its effects as the other. But there are adult men by the million who are not Christians. In infancy they were, in manhood they are not. In infancy "the free gift came unto them to justification;" but they, in great numbers, have turned away from Christ—not all, but too many, have renounced by sin their justification and regeneration, and have become sinners. Indeed, every sinner is a backslider.

In perfect harmony with all of this are the words of the enthroned Christ to the aged John on Patmos: "He that overcometh shall thus be arrayed in white garments, and I will in no wise blot his name out of the book of life." Here, I shall adopt the words of that saintly seer, the late George Matheson, D. D., LL. D., of Scotland: "I will not blot out—this implies that our names are now in. * * * There is a thought entertained by some people which to me is awful—that we are put into this world as candidates for God's love. That would be to start life in absolute darkness; the morning hour would be my rayless hour. Waiting to be enrolled in the birthday book of my Father! Waiting at the door until I can prove my right to enter! It is a deadly, a ghastly thing. O Christ, I was born in thy dwelling; my name was written in childhood in the birthday book with thee. I have never been a probationer; never been a candidate for thy heart."

It is a very significant fact that no child is anywhere presented in the New Testament as other than a child of God. It is a very beautiful fact that the New Testament presents them as in a sense God's favorites. That was a strikingly tender parable uttered by our Lord: "I say unto you that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father." (Matt., xviii:10.) Put into the ampler speech of us here and now, it says: "I tell you that my Father is so fond of the little children that he gives the seats of highest honor, those nearest his throne, to the guardian angels of little children."

We dishonor God, discredit the Christ, and grievously wrong these lambs of his fold when we class them with old reprobates, who have denied and blasphemed our Lord, by telling the children that they, even the baptized ones, are out of the Church, left out by the Christ, and can get in only by coming up with these old Christ-denying, God-defying reprobates, now repentant, and join the Church. Think of it! I am so glad that when we baptize a baby in our Church, we do not, as we once did, ask the congregation to pray "that this child may be received into Christ's holy Church and be made a lively member of the same;" but that instead of this, we say: "I beseech you to call upon God the Father through our Lord Jesus Christ, that of his bounteous goodness, he will so grant unto this child now to be baptized, the continual replenishing of his grace, that he may ever remain in the fellowship of God's holy Church." This is in harmony with the teachings of Christ and his Apostles and answers the tender love of our Lord for his lambs.

GRACIOUS ABILITY.

By Dr. W. F. Tillett.

(Some extracts from his great book, entitled, "Personal Salvation.")

THE SCRIPTURAL DOCTRINE STATED.—As distinct from these views, the Scriptures seem to teach, as to the moral status of the unregenerate world, that, but for the atonement, man would be, by nature, as a result of the fall, morally dead and incapable of any exercise of free will in meeting the conditions of salvation; but, as a matter of fact, no man is in a mere state of nature. Grace arrested man in his fall, and placed him in a salvable state, and endowed him with gracious ability to meet all the conditions of personal salvation. Fallen man has never been without the benefits and influence of the atonement. Uppermost among these benefits is what is called prevenient grace, a certain gracious influence of the Holy Spirit upon the heart and will of man that goes before regeneration. It does not act irresistibly upon any man, but is imparted to all men, and is the foundation of that gracious ability for fulfilling the conditions of salvation which all possess, and which is the ground of their responsibility for continuing in sin. Personal salvation is, therefore, a matter of co-operation between the divine and the human will, between God and man. We thus hold that there is some good in unregenerate human nature; it is not wholly evil, as the old Calvinistic divines taught; but the good that we find in unregenerate man is due not to nature, as the Pelagians and Semi-Pelagians teach, but to grace. Hence, this doctrine is well designated by the term "gracious ability." The Scriptures, while making much of the power of sin in human nature, also make much of grace and the gracious influence of the Holy Spirit which is a result of the atonement.

MORAL FREEDOM IS OF GRACE.—"The fact that man is, since the fall, still a free agent is not more essentially a necessity of his moral nature than it is the effect of grace. Its universality has this for its result, that all who are born into the world are born into a state of probation; otherwise the human spirit would have fallen back under the law of physical necessity, or in that of diabolical bondage to evil. Unredeemed spirits are responsible, but their responsibility is no longer probationary; they are responsible for a state of guilt that was determined by their own first act and has become habitual. The difference put between them and us is the mystery of redeeming mercy. The children of men are in bondage to sin; this is the character which is stamped upon them by inheritance. But the bondage is not hopeless, nor is it to any mortal necessary. All men have a natural capacity of freedom to act as well as to choose, to perform as well as to will; but this, their very nature, is itself of grace." In this paragraph from Dr. William B. Pope we have a statement which differs from what we have said above more in phraseology and form of expression than in the essential idea conveyed.

THE EFFECTS OF THE FIRST ADAM'S SIN AND THE SECOND ADAM'S RIGHTEOUSNESS COMPARED AND CONTRASTED.—The ultimate effects of Adam's sin and Christ's atonement, however, are both conditioned on man's free agency. As we have seen, the personal guilt of Adam's transgression was not, and could not be, imputed to his descendants, no one of whom ever has been, or ever can be, lost and sent to hell on account of Adam's transgression alone. Original sin is not, in itself alone, culpable and justly punishable; at least not until the individual arrives at the age of moral accountability and refuses to fulfill the conditions (repentance and faith) divinely provided for its suppression, in regeneration, after which time he may justly be held responsible for his original sin and all its consequences. In like manner, no man will be saved and sent to heaven on account of Christ's righteousness alone, which, while it made possible the salvation of all, necessitated the salvation of no one. That is, while Adam's sin and Christ's righteousness both materially affect the problem of man's sin and salvation, they do not in any way set aside the great and universal law of moral free agency and probation, by which every man has the deciding of his own destiny.

Bishop W. A. Candier has lately been doing some stirring preaching in a meeting held in Druid Hills Church of Atlanta.

Mrs. Russell Sage has given Syracuse University, of the M. E. Church, $50,000 for its Agricultural Department, in memory of her father, the late Joseph Slocum.

The ninety-sixth session of the Missouri Conference met at Shelbina, Mo., on September 4, with Bishop Mouzon presiding in place of Bishop Hoss. The presidency of our Texas General Superintendent is reported to have given great satisfaction.

After a brief vacation spent in the North and East, Dr. J. W. Lee is back in his pulpit at St. John's Church, St. Louis. He was never more popular in the Missouri metropolis than he is at present.

The Wesleyan Christian Advocate announces that the new auditorium of Trinity Church, Atlanta, will be opened on October 13. It will easily seat 1000 persons, and by using chairs can be made to accommodate 1200.

Dr. T. N. Key, the versatile editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, has been swinging the circle of the Western Conferences. Doubtless his presence among the brethren in that section will prove helpful both to the work and our General Organi-

Dr. H. M. DuBoise is contributing to the Wesleyan Christian Advocate a series of illuminating articles on "Tessellism." Great is the Wesleyan, and it has no more brilliant contributor than this versatile ex-Mississippian, who has achieved distinction as a poet, preacher, platform orator, writer, and connectional officer of the Church.

Dr. W. E. Thompson, according to the Midland Methodist, has given out six weeks before the meeting of his Annual Conference that he will not return to Centenary Church, Chattanooga, assigning as his reason for going elsewhere that many of the congregation will not co-operate with him. This proceeding strikes us as quite unmethodistic.

Pinson College is the new name that has been given to the institution in Cuba formerly known as Collegio Ingles. A magnificent new site has also been secured for the school in the suburbs of the city of Camaguey, with four buildings already upon it. Rev. B. F. Gilbert, who directed the affairs of the institution under its old name, will continue in charge.

The Methodist Orphanage at Raleigh, N. C., has received in bequests for building and other purposes during the year about $20,000. This has made possible a considerable increase in the facilities of this institution. Wealthy Methodists do well to remember our charitable work in their wills, but it is better still to remember it with generous donations while they are yet living.

Three years ago the East Mathews Circuit, Virginia Conference, had a church membership of 432, a Sunday-school enrollment of 361, and the pastor was paid $700. It now has a church membership of 551, has enrolled 762 in the Sunday schools, and pays the preacher $1200. Rev. J. A. Winn, who is in charge of the work, states that this advancement has been principally made through the agency of the organized Bible classes.

The Randolph-Macon contest has recently broken out afresh. Though a majority of the trustees and the patronizing Conferences reached satisfactory terms of agreement several months ago, a minority element of the board was displeased with the settlement and a few days since applied for a legal injunction. The arguments in the case were to be heard on September 7, but at this writing we have not learned the result.

There are said to be four Presbyterian churches in the South with a membership of more than a thousand, as follows: First Church, Nashville, 1449; Central Church, Atlanta, 1258; First Church, Houston, Texas, 1046, and Second Church, Charlotte, N. C., 1000. Reports show that there are 67 congregations numbering more than a thousand in the North and West, the largest being the First Church of Seattle, of which Dr. M. A. Matthews is pastor, which has a membership of 4800.

Dr. H. A. Boaz, Vice-President of the Southern Methodist University at Dallas, Texas, is back home, after a delightful vacation spent in New York City, where he supplied the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church during the month of August. One of the stewards of that congregation, who had just returned from London, pronounced Dr. Boaz's sermons superior to those to which he had been listening in Westminster Abbey. Evidently this gifted young Texan made a great impression on his Northern auditors.

All over Florida the Southern Methodists seem to be marching forward, and the Christian Advocate of that State is sounding out, clear and strong, the call to still larger things. Some years ago one of our leading Bishops, in talking to us, said: "There is little in Florida but sand and fleas." But no one would now presume to make such a remark. The star that glitters to the name of this developing commonwealth is destined soon to become one of the brightest upon our national banner. And the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is doing her full share toward making it such.

Among those who rendered effective service for the cause of State-wide prohibition in the recent contest in Arkansas was Gov. George W. Donaghey, who is a worthy member of the Methodist Church. It is refreshing to see a man who holds high public office speak out so unequivocally against the open saloon. The Western Methodist was also a veritable gatling gun in the fight. Every week it poured a terrific broadside into the ranks of the enemy. The press dispatches report that the "wets" won. This is most regrettable; but those who stood for the right in the struggle are none the less deserving of applause. He lacks much of possessing the highest order of manhood who had not rather he defeated battling for the true welfare of humanity, than to triumph with the forces of evil. The reign of wrong must sooner or later give way. No question is settled until it is settled properly.

A dispatch from Laurel, Miss., to the Times-Democrat on September 12 reads as follows: "Much local interest has been aroused by the action of Rev. L. G. Gates, pastor of the First Baptist Church, in communing with the members of the Presbyterian Church. The incident has been magnified and has become the main topic of discussion here. Rev. T. E. Pinegar, pastor of the Hickory Grove Baptist Church, announced to-day that he will challenge the Rev. Mr. Gates to a debate on "The Lord's Supper." This occurrence is chiefly interesting as an indication that the rising tide of fraternity, which for years has been manifest among the Baptists of the North and of England, is beginning to appear in the South.

The Editor of the Central Methodist Advocate has the following to say of Bishop J. H. McCoy's work at the recent session of the Western Virginia Conference: "Bishop McCoy seemed to have had meat to eat that ye know not of," as Jesus said, and is a man of great spiritual and intellectual strength. His messages at the morning openings of the Conference at Sutton were full of grace and power, and the address that he gave at the Educational Anniversary was as good as any we ever heard on an occasion of that sort. He is an able, firm, and kind presiding officer, and the brethren were delighted with him in every way." On his way to the seat of the Conference the Bishop ate a single meal that cost him $10. He did not order that amount of food, but gave the waiter a ten-dollar bill to pay what he owed, and he returned change for only a one-dollar bill and refused to rectify the mistake. Being a man of peace, there was nothing for the Bishop to do but submit.

MISSISSIPPI CONVICT FARM.

Mississippi's prison farms have not only proved the most humane and beneficial way of handling prisoners, but they have proved most profitable. Every year from 4,000 to 5,000 bales of cotton, more corn than enough to supply the demand of the farm, bushels upon top of bushels of sweet potatoes, molasses as good as can be found anywhere on earth, peas, vegetables of all varieties, fruits, melons, in fact everything good to eat, are raised on the State farm, and after paying a profit into the State treasury of from a quarter to a half a million dollars the tables of the convicts are provided with better fare than many of the free citizens of the State can boast.

Mississippi has tried several different ways of dealing with her convicts, but she finds that placing them upon farms is the best method of them all, both for the good of the State and the welfare of the unfortunates who have forfeited their right to be at large.—Jackson Clarion-Ledger.

The recent session of Congress was less expensive than either of the two preceding sessions. The total appropriations of the 1912 session amounted to $1,019,626,143.60, while the session a year ago exceeded that amount by $7,046,788, and the one of two years ago by $21,000,000.

THY WILL BE DONE.

(Written by Mrs. L. M. Lipscomb upon the occasion of the death of her brother, Mr. R. U. DuBois, Jr., who, in the prime of young manhood, was killed by a train in Birmingham, Ala., on the night of December 12, 1911.)

Thy will be done;
Whether the call comes at noon or set of sun;
Tho' all is dark—not one ray of light,
He will make the pathway bright;
Thy will be done.

Thy will be done;
For thy will is all I have to lean upon;
Tho' from my eyes the briny teardrops start,
I'll say from a crushed and bleeding heart,
Thy will be done.

Thy will be done;
And when at last life's race is run,
We'll bid farewell to grief and fears,
For God shall wipe away all tears,
When our crown is won.

Fargo, N. D., is so prosperous that it has declared a dividend to the taxpayers, and will distribute $10,000 among its citizens.

The shipyards of the United States will be busier this year than for many years. On July 1, 120 steel vessels, aggregating 254,000 gross tons were under construction. The cause of this activity in ship construction is said to be the near completion of the Panama Canal.

It is notable that the drift of intellectual research is toward the scientific and not toward the classical. This is particularly true in the United States, there being granted last year but 17 post-graduate degrees in Latin, and 5 in Greek, while chemistry, physics, zoology, agriculture, bacteriology, botany, physiology, and anatomy claimed a large number of such graduates.

The post office receipts in Chicago for the month of August were $1,932,488.69, which is $20,274.30 in excess of the receipts of the New York post office, which was its nearest rival. The reason of this is, doubtless, due to the fact that New York is more largely foreign than Chicago, hence does not use the United States post office to the extent that the more Americanized center does.

Lieutenant General Sir Robert Baden-Powell has returned to England after a 53,000-mile journey around the world in the interest of the Boy Scout movement, of which he is the originator. He found more than 400,000 Scouts enrolled in the United States, and personally reviewed 25,000 British Scouts. He visited nine countries, and was encouraged with the Sea Scout movement which has just been started.

Robert G. Valentine, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, has resigned. He won for himself the favor of Protestant America when he issued an order forbidding Catholic sisters wearing their denominational garb while teaching in Government schools. President Taft, it will be remembered, held the order up, and it is alleged that his decision, which will soon be announced, is the reason of Mr. Valentine's resignation. Doubtless the Sisters will be permitted to do just as they please, so long as Mr. Taft has the say.

According to recent reports, the South produced 4,018,000 bales more cotton last year than the year preceding, or a total of 16,138,426 bales. However, the high price of cotton in 1910-11 caused that crop to bring $92,500,000 more than that of the year just passed. In the fruit growing sections of the South a similar condition exists: that is, the crop is far in excess of previous crops, but the price is so low that its value is less than in former years. There seems to be some way by which manipulators always leave the farmers with small returns, no matter how favorable the season, or large the crops.

There will be three vacancies in the grade of brigadier general in the United States Army this year. There is, as usual, much speculation as to who will be the fortunate officers to be named for these places. Among the names of those most prominently mentioned that of Colonel Wm. A. Mann, Chief of Staff of the Eastern Division, Governor's Island, N. Y., seems to be one of the most popular. He is widely known both as an able soldier and as a high-toned, honorable gentleman, and, with it all, is one of the most genial and companionable men to be found anywhere. There is probably no man in the army whose promotion would be more universally popular.

That the Negro is a power in politics may be easily discerned by the fact that the following number of colored voters will participate in the coming election for President: Massachusetts, 20,000; Rhode Island, 3500; Connecticut, 6000; New York, 50,000; New Jersey, 30,000; Pennsylvania, 70,000; Delaware, 10,000; Maryland, 65,000; West Virginia, 24,000; Kentucky, 75,000; Missouri, 50,000; Ohio, 45,000; Indiana, 25,000; Illinois, 50,000; Michigan, 7000; Iowa, 7000; Kansas, 20,000; Nebraska, 4000; Oklahoma, 40,000; Colorado, 5000; California, 10,000; Washington, 3500. It will be noticed that in a large number of the above named States the Negro holds the balance of power, and may dictate who the winner shall be in the States thus affected.

Charles W. Morse, whom President Taft pardoned a few months ago because a number of doctors declared him to be in a dying condition, has returned to Wall Street and is said to be in perfect physical condition. Morse was incarcerated for having embezzled a large sum of money from the depositors of a bank, mostly from widow women and laborers. During his brief term of confinement his wife maintained an office in Washington and a regular press bureau, from which were sent news reports of the serious illness of the criminal capitalist. Being liberated on the plea that he was dying, he secretly slipped away to Europe, and has returned a well man. There should be a law remanding him to the Federal prison to finish his unexpired term of confinement.

CALLED HOME.

Monday afternoon, Sept. 16, we received from Rev. E. S. Lewis, our pastor at West Point, Miss., the following telegram: "Mrs. Amos Kendall died this morning; interment at Aberdeen tomorrow." This message will touch with sorrow many hearts and homes in North Mississippi and elsewhere. Sister Kendall was the widow of the late Rev. Amos Kendall, than whom the North Mississippi Conference never had a truer or more worthy member. Hand in hand, she went with her honored husband in the work of the itinerancy for many years, and happy, indeed, was the charge that was so fortunate as to have their services. Not being blessed with children, their love for the Church seemed to be all the more ardent and unwavering. Since Brother Kendall's death a few years ago, Sister Kendall had resided with relatives in Texas. She was on a visit to devoted friends in Mississippi when the Master's summons came. It seems fitting that she should have heard this call in a city where her translated husband had served for years as pastor, and where both she and him were universally esteemed and loved. Side by side with the noble man with whom she walked so happily along the road of life, she will sleep until the trumpet of the archangel shall bid them rise to share in the larger activities and richer glories of eternity's unending day. She lived to high purpose, using faithfully the talents with which God had endowed her, and she had no cause to fear the time of reckoning. Long will her name be revered and her memory cherished.

A FINE OPENING.

The seventy-third session of Port Gibson Female College opened auspiciously at 9:30 a. m., Wednesday, Sept. 11, with several scores of boarding students and a goodly number of local students in attendance. In response to the invitation of President C. M. Chapman quite a number of friends and patrons also lent their presence; and short addresses were made by M. M. Satterfield, H. H. Orisier, Judge H. C. Mounger, Rabbi Weis, and Revs. W. F. Creson, H. G. Hawkins, and W. H. Huntley. Rev. E. C. Gunn, of Gloster, is to preach the opening sermon next Sunday.

THE GALLOWAY MEMORIAL SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT FUND.

To the Pastors, Superintendents, Teachers, Scholars and Parents of the Mississippi Conference Sunday Schools:

Dear Fellow Workers:

You are aware that the Joint Board of Finance of our Conference has the sacred duty of providing for the support of the superannuated preachers and the widows and orphans of deceased preachers of the Mississippi Conference. The provision made in the past has been meager in the extreme. No one realizes this more keenly than the members of the Board themselves. Hence, at the last annual meeting the Board had under consideration the matter of increasing the endowment fund as the very best means to aid in the support of these claimants. At that meeting a committee was appointed to project a plan by which the Sunday schools of the Conference could assist in taking care of our superannuates. It is the message of this Committee that we now send to you, confidently believing that your response to the Committee's appeal will be prompt and hearty. This assurance is doubly inspired: First, by the fact that all of us feel the inadequate support given these old men who labored for us in the past so faithfully; and secondly, because of the love, devotion and reverence we all have for the great and good man you are asked to honor by this contribution.

This fund, started in the Sunday schools, will be a memorial to the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway, and will be known as the Galloway Memorial Fund for the Superannuated Preachers of the Mississippi Conference. Of all the memorials proposed in honor of our ascended leader, none, we are sure, would be more grateful to this greatest preacher of the South than this sacred fund we are now asking you to help in building up until it shall be a monument worthy of his name.

Bishop Charles Betts Galloway was the greatest Southern Methodist Preacher of the nineteenth century, the greatest ecclesiastical statesman since the days of Bishops Soule and McTyeire, and possibly the most widely known and influential Methodist Bishop of world-wide Methodism.

We feel sure the Sunday schools of our State will gladly join in a movement to perpetuate the memory of this matchless orator, soul-stirring preacher, ardent missionary, great scholar and greater educator.

He devoted his life to the people of Mississippi, declining persistently the flattering offers of admiring friends in other States, who craved the influence of his brilliant talents and citizenship for their States. He sacrificed every other interest for Mississippi and Mississippi institutions. We now ask you, pastors, superintendents, teachers, scholars and parents of the Sunday schools of our Conference to assist in honoring his name, and at the same time, in helping in the provision of a more adequate support for our Superannuates. Therefore, the Committee asks that the First Sunday in November be observed in all our Sunday schools as the Galloway Memorial Day, at which time the Sunday Schools are asked to contribute not less than $1500.00.

A conditional program will be prepared by the Committee, and together with contribution envelopes, will be mailed to every Superintendent of a Sunday school in the Conference, one week before the appointed time.

We feel sure that the superintendents of our Sunday schools will engage heartily in this laudable undertaking with the Committee and pastors. The Committee also requests the pastors of the several charges to announce this Memorial Day from all their pulpits.

REV. J. T. MURRAH.

(The following, from the pen of Major Jonas, the editor, appeared in a recent issue of the Aberdeen Examiner, published in the city where Brother Murrah was serving as pastor when he died. It is a beautiful tribute from one who is not connected with the Methodist Church.)

We were down by the sea when the distressing announcement was whispered over the trembling wires that the soul of our beloved fellow citizen, Rev. J. T. Murrah, had been recalled.

He responded to the summons, after a brief period of ill health, Tuesday, August 20, and the eloquent tongue that had so often helped the "weary of heart" to peace with God by invocation of peace, twist man and man, was silenced until the Master called for an "account of his stewardship."

Great, big-hearted Dr. Murrah, minister of a creed, yet whose nature was too broad for creed's restraint; who could be faithful to his altar vows and yet commune with a universe: A good man, because it was in his nature to keep the garden of life well weeded; because the spirit which animated him had no affinity with, or tolerance with, sophistry, hypocrisy, envy or other influences, oftener alluring than repelling, that he set the walk of morals. He was cosmopolitan enough to recognize all mankind as kin, and only sectarian in the sense that he demanded of associates pure hearts, generous impulses and clean hands. It was notable that he was frequently seen on occasions peculiarly conspicuous, in converse and companionship with men to whom others gave the way, as concessions are to the leper made by passers by, but no one questioned or criticised—they felt that this good man had found mission work without probing "darkest Africa" or the blazing realm of the Hindoo, and there was always a harvest from such communings—the hands of the priest were not contaminated by associations that won a crown invisible here, that is pressing his brow elsewhere, now; and we felt that he had healed soul wounds long neglected, and encouraged the dispirited communicant. We know that Aberdeen is the better for his brief sojourn; we know there were seeds of reform to germinate in better things that he planted in good fellowship and nurtured in simple, rough, unassuming pluck, in soils barren to other warning and culture, and all because he met his subject upon the plane of common manhood that had in it no suggestion of "holier than thou." There were deserts he threaded regardless of sand, storm or thirst; there were palms that he planted in oases no other eyes discerned; he gathered figs from the thistle that had only nettles to one of less watchful eye and sympathetic heart. No one save the Great Recorder hath note of this good priest's trail, for he pursued his modest walk without blazing the trees to advertise his progress or guide his return. There is many an humble fireside that will miss him, and many a lordly mansion where eyes are dimmed by tears—he was "all things to all men," as regards those things material and spiritual, blessed by his Maker, and his kindred was the commingling of prince and peasant, with no barrier unsurmountable, no bridge of preference.

Yonder stands as an eternal memorial, stately, grand and beautiful, the temple he erected to his God. We may be pardoned for paying this perhaps exaggerated tribute to the dead, but man is doubly generous in his bestowals when a beneficiary stands beyond the bar of contention; but it is so nearly true, that all will let it pass, and his colleagues in the great work will be content that they were associates where he led. By the exhibition of admirable tact, that in this instance was akin to genius, he brought together and welded into harmonious sentiment the warring opinions of many wise men and women, until the determination was reached to supplant the old and revered Methodist Church with one of the handsomest and most commodious structures in the State.

As the work progressed he was a constant and anxious observer, and in our last interview he said, "The building is about complete, and next week I want you to go over the structure with me, and write it up, just as you see it." That would have been a pleasant task had Fate not recalled the guide. Of the temple builder and the temple, we can only say to-day, "It is finished." It is sad to think that almost at the very hour of consummation; that while the retiring architect passed the portals of the lordly structure, he who had conceived it passed through the gates of that "temple not built by hands." His "write up," had all gone well, would not have been the screed his modest nature pictured, a tribute to man's skill in the assembling of stone, and brick, and glass, and wood, and pigments, but the story of the patient, tactful pilot, a narrative of conception, consummation and consecration.

MANSFIELD COLLEGE AND ELSE.

Dear Advocate: I know you will be glad to learn that Mansfield College has had its hest opening in years. The formal opening exercises were held at 10 a. m., September 4, and the attendance of town people indicated an unusual amount of interest and hopefulness. The new president presided; this scribe read the Scripture and led the prayer; then followed addresses by Mayor Parsons, Rev. P. M. Brown, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, and President Bobbitt. A beautiful instrumental solo, delightfully rendered by Miss Marsalis, one of the music teachers, varied the proceedings. There were more than twice as many pupils present as were at the opening one year ago, and pupils are arriving almost every day. Enough are yet to come who have contracted definitely to more than double the attendance of last year.

President Bobbitt has demonstrated already his fitness for the place he occupies. He has ability both as an executive and as a teacher, and there is not a lazy bone in him. Mrs. Bobbitt is a worthy companion for him; good in the classroom, in the office, in the social circle and in the church work. That team, with the least bit of help, will make Mansfield College break the record in three years. The preachers can and ought to help. The faculty, too, is very satisfactory. The new departments—Domestic Science and Kindergarten—are proving very popular. A graduate from Mansfield will soon be in great demand wherever a first class woman is needed. The kindergarten method used is the Montessori system—the best in the world—and this is the only school in the State, so far as we can learn, that has it.

The College League has made many improvements, especially in the parlor and dining room. Other improvements are contemplated and needed, and the friends of the College everywhere should help now, if ever, to make the college known and attractive. People who have God's money for investment could not do better than contribute to Christian education as represented by Mansfield Female College. Money for endowment, as well as for improvement, is needed. Any sums, however large or small, will be gratefully accepted. Remember the college in your will.

The delight of the opening was marred by the absence of Rev. N. E. Joyner and his excellent wife, both of whom did so much to make the school a success. They were highly esteemed by all the people of Mansfield. Joyner has native ability, is cultivated, conscientious, and courageous. I learned him well enough not to ask him anything if I did not want the truth—just the plain, blunt truth. He does not know how to lie. Mrs. Joyner is just as bright and just as honest. I never saw a little woman win her way to the hearts of folks as she did in Mansfield, and without an effort. They answered the call of duty, and I guess it's all right. But I cannot help wishing that somebody else could have met that demand, and that they could have remained in Mansfield. And all the people here will say, "Amen!"

Another sad feature was the absence of Brother A. F. Jackson, so long and so honorably connected with the college and church, as well as the commercial and social life of Mansfield, but who fell on sleep Aug. 19, at Eureka Springs, Ark. By every token, he was a rare man. He was honest and capable in business, and had amassed at least a competence; he was systematic in his business, and equally so in his Lord's business; he loved his pastor, his church, and all God's people, and was always anxious to bring together people who were estranged. He was much interested in the prosperity of the college and would have rejoiced greatly at this auspicious opening. He will be sorely missed. Peace to his ashes.

ORIGINAL SIN: THE REMEDY.

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

Fletcher, in his Appeal (first part), says, "In every religion there is a principal truth or error, which, like the first link of a chain, necessarily draws after it all the parts with which it is essentially connected. This leading principle in Christianity, as distinguished from Deism, is the doctrine of our corrupt and lost estate; for if man is not at variance with his Creator, what need is there of a Mediator between God and him? If he is not a depraved and undone creature, what necessity of so wonderful a Restorer and Savior as the Son of God? If he is not enslaved to sin, why is he redeemed by Jesus Christ; and, in a word, if he is not born in sin, why is a new birth so absolutely necessary that Christ declared, most emphatically, that without it no man can 'see the Kingdom of God?'"

A proper conception of this foundation doctrine of Christianity is very important; for by it true religion either stands or falls. If we say that man comes into this world in a regenerate state, it would contradict the positive teaching of Jesus Christ, "Ye must be born again" (John 3:16). It is a second birth and must be subsequent to the natural birth. If we believe that children are already in the kingdom, there will be no effort to bring them to Christ, who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not;" and very soon the Church would be filled with unregenerate persons. If children have no one to bring them to the Savior, they will naturally wander away from him. But if they have some one to bring them, how easy it is for them to accept and trust in Christ. They should be taught their need of him and of regenerating grace.

"Original Sin" is one of the doctrinal truths of the Bible, and of our Church, and though the statement of these truths in our literature may be questioned by some, it is an important doctrine of the inspired word of which it is a part and should be constantly taught—"line upon line and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little," "Lest we forget, lest we forget."

ALONE WITH GOD.

He who himself and God would know,
Into the silence let him go,
And, lifting off pall after pall,
Reach to the inmost depth of all.

How small in that uplifted hour
Temptation's lure and passion's power!
How weak the foe that made him fall!
How strong the soul to conquer all!

A mighty wind of nobler will
Sends through his soul its quickening thrill;
No more a creature of the clod,
He knows himself a child of God.

RESISTING TEMPTATION.

"Grandma, what is resisting temptation?" asked 5-year-old Maude.

"Why do you ask, dear?"

"Teacher wants us to tell her next Sunday."

"Your question reminds me of something I heard when I was a little girl like you," answered Grandma.

"Please tell me," pleaded Maude.

"It is of a temptation which came to a little girl and to which she almost yielded. Her papa gave her a big, round silver dollar, saying, 'Nellie, take this to Bennet's Bakery and get it changed into pennies.' Nellie took the dollar to the bakery, and when the man gave her a big roll in exchange, she opened wide her eyes. In those days the cents were much larger than they are now, and a great many of them were in constant use. This little girl was very fond of a candy called 'juba paste,' made at the candy shops in that beautiful old city which was her home. She thought: 'I could take just one cent, and papa would never miss it out of all these.' She knew she could get a nice, large piece for one cent, enough for any child. You see, my dear, there was temptation to take what was not hers, to do wrong," said Grandma.

"Oh, did she take it?" exclaimed Maude, with wondering eyes.

"I will tell you. She sat down on the white curb of the pavement and slyly slipped a penny out of the roll. She looked at the shining thing, then slipped it into her pocket—all little girls at that time had pockets in their dresses. She pushed her handkerchief over it and stood up, saying to herself: 'Nobody will ever know.' Then she repeated, 'Nobody.' She could go no farther, for suddenly the words of her Sunday school teacher came to her, saying: 'God sees and knows everything.' She felt ashamed that God knew, and then the thought came that perhaps the dear mother who had died and left her knew also that her daughter had come so near to sin. At once the little hand went into the pocket, the coin was withdrawn and placed with the others, and Nellie went home glad that she had resisted the temptation which had almost overcome her. Do you understand now, Maude?"

"Yes, Grandma, and I'm so glad she resisted."

"Well, you see, dear, there is always a thought sent us showing the right way to resist the temptations which come to all of us," replied Grandma.—The Child's Gem.

WHERE TOM FOUND HIS MANNERS.

Tom's father was a rich man, and Tom lived in a large house in the country. He had a pony and many other pets, and wore fine clothes. Tom was very proud of all the fine things his father's money bought. He began to think that being rich was better than being good. He grew very rude, and was cross to the servants. Once he kicked Towser, but the dog growled, and Tom was afraid to kick him again.

One day, when Tom was playing in the yard, he saw a boy standing by the gate. He was ragged and dirty, his hat was torn, and his feet were bare; but he had a pleasant face. In one hand he carried a pail half full of blackberries.

"Go away from here!" said Tom, running to the gate. "We don't want any boys around."

"Please give me a drink," said the boy. "If you are so rich, you can spare me a dipper of water."

"We can't spare you anything," said Tom. "If you don't go away, I will set the dogs on you."

The boy laughed and walked away, swinging the tin pail in his hand.

"I think I will get some blackberries, too," said Tom to himself. He went out of the gate into the lane leading to a meadow where there were plenty of berries.

Tom saw some fine large ones growing just over a ditch. He thought he could leap over it very easily. He gave a run and a big jump. The ditch was wider than he had thought; and, instead of going over it, he came down in the middle of it.

The mud was very thick and soft, and Tom sank down in it to his waist. He was frightened, and began to scream for help; but he had not much hope that help would come, for he was a long way from any house.

He screamed until he was tired. He began to think he would have to spend the night in the ditch, when he heard steps on the grass. Looking up he saw the boy he had driven from the gate.

"Please help me out," said Tom, crying, "I will give you a dollar."

"I don't want the dollar," said the other boy. Lying down flat on the grass, he held out both hands to Tom, and drew him out of the ditch.

Tom was covered with mud, his hat was gone, and one shoe was lost in the ditch. He looked very miserable.

"Who is dirty now?" asked the boy.

"I am," said poor Tom; "but I thank you very much for helping me out of the mire, and I am sorry I sent you away from the gate."

"The next time I come, perhaps you will treat me better," said the boy. "I am not rich; but I am stronger than you are, and I think I have better manners."

"I think so, too," said Tom.

The next day, when Tom saw the boy going by the gate, he called him in, showed him his rabbits, doves, and ducks, and gave him a ride on his pony.

"You have better manners now," said the boy.

"Yes," said Tom. "I found them in the ditch."

THE WAY TO PROSPERITY.

Dear Editor: The urgent need of the people during the present financial crisis impels me to try to cause the struggling classes of our land to consider the following:

There is only one step between them and success. That step is to prove God—to test his word, to test his promise. He asks it of all mankind—not just one or two, but the whole human race has the same privilege. God is no respecter of persons. He says to one and all, "Bring all the tithes into the storehouse that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." (Malachi, 3:10.)

You are not to wait until everything is harvested and sold to see what your tenth will be, but (1 Cor., 16:2) "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God has prospered him." In substance, God says to you, "All I ask of you is that you prove me, and I will do my part." Is it not evident that it is far better to "render unto Caesar the things which be Caesar's; and unto God the things that be God's?" Walk straight with God and he will open the windows of heaven and give blessings in such abundance that the people will be at a loss to know what to do with what they have.

It is not necessary to be vexed with the boll weevil, the potato bug, the army worm, and other pests. All that is necessary is to rally to the help of the Lord by paying to him our dues, and he will rebuke these pests and they will cease to annoy. Praying that these words may be bread cast upon the waters of God's divine providence, I solicit the careful consideration of all who may read them. Respectfully,

A CHRISTIAN.

HOW IT GOT ITS NAME.

Upon the arrival of Col. Roosevelt at Chicago to attend the National Republican Convention, he was greeted by an overwhelming throng of admirers and followers, among whom was a well-known representative of the Chicago Tribune, who, after a desperate struggle with the throng, succeeded in getting within hearing distance of the great leader and called out, "How are you, Colonel?" "Fine," said the Colonel, "strong and healthy as a bull moose." True to his instincts, the newspaper man saw his "catch," and immediately made use of the appellation in his write-up, and it is now apparent that his judgment was correct. At first, there was some doubt as to whether the former President approved the name, but in a speech made in New York on the 23d of July, he said:

"I see that the Bull Moose is a pretty vigorous animal," thus stamping the seal of his approval upon the title. During the convention of the Progressive party, one form of demonstrative approval adopted by the delegates was in imitation of the call of the bull moose, a long "moo." The head of the bull moose was one of the prominent decorations in the hall, and many of the delegates' songs were in praise of that animal.—Times-Democrat.

SOME QUEER HORSESHOES.

In Japan rice straw, strapped on to the horse's feet, is used for horseshoes. The Icelandic ponies wear shoes made of sheep's horn. In certain parts of Central Asia the horses have shoes made from the antlers of the mountain deer. These are fastened to their feet by means of horn pins. The queerest horseshoes, however, are those employed in the Soudan; these are not really shoes, but stockings made of camel's skin.—Century Path.

THE CAREER OF GENERAL BOOTH.

When General William Booth, the founder of the Salvation Army, passed peacefully away at his home at Hadley Wood, near London, on August 20th, the Christian world lost, perhaps, its foremost religious leader. Such a career, beginning in obscurity and amid the limitations of poverty, and ending in earth-wide fame, with thousands bending above his bier and kings and emperors and presidents sending messages to do him honor, is deserving of more than a passing notice. Indeed, the biographies of great and good men constitute one of the most instructive and helpful branches of human literature. People are enough alike for the struggles, triumphs, and achievements of one soul to find a responsive echo in others, heartening, thrilling, and inspiring them. Perhaps even more than their teachings, the reading of the lives of Wesley and Fletcher has awakened in other bosoms a passion for holiness and noble living. The power of lofty example is a sort of moral attraction of gravitation. Nor does it end with death—it stretches across the centuries, and is one of the indestructible forces that make for righteousness.

William Booth was born at Nottingham, England, in 1829. His father was connected with the Anglican Church, and by baptism in infancy he became a member of that denomination. When a mere lad, however, he began to attend a Wesleyan chapel, and was there soundly converted at fifteen years of age. He at once felt the call to preach, and while earning a living as a clerk, undertook to speak for the Master, as opportunity offered. Within a year he had acquired some reputation as a street and field preacher. His educational advantages were meager, his chief instruction being received at the hands of a private tutor. In 1850 he was ordained a Wesleyan minister, and remained in connection with that Church and the Methodist New Connection until 1861, when, because of the fact that the Methodist restrictions seemed to interfere with his plans, he became an independent worker. He commenced his ministry in London, while yet a Methodist, in 1850, and soon achieved a considerable measure of success. In 1865 he established in the notorious East End of the great metropolis what he called the Christian Mission, and in 1878 he changed the name of his organization to the Salvation Army, at the same time placing it upon its present military basis. This was a stroke of genius, and the new movement at once attracted public attention. From this time on, General Booth commanded influential support, and the work that he had projected prospered and grew to a phenomenal extent.

We cannot give even an outline of the labors of this remarkable man. They cover a period of more than fifty years and form one of the brightest chapters in the history of Christianity. Into the darkest sections of the great cities, he carried his campaign to rescue the perishing, and where Satan's reign was most undisputed, won notable triumphs for his Lord. The drum-beat of the Salvation Army is now heard around the world. It operates in sixty countries and colonies and conducts services in thirty-four languages. Its charities are varied and numerous; its official organ, "The War Cry," is read by millions. Like Wesley, who was his hero, General Booth set a high estimate upon wholesome literature and made free use of the printing-press. Of the products of his pen, the following are the most important: "Salvation Soldier," "The Training of Children," "Letters to Soldiers," and "In Darkest England."

Many are the outstanding lessons of the fallen leader's life. We can mention only a few of them:

1. General Booth had a sound religious experience. He knew what Christ had done for him, and believed that he could do the same for others. Such a regeneration of the soul must antedate every great and fruitful ministry. The vision on the road to Damascus made Paul a new man—"a flame of fire." The light kindled in his own heart gave the world a new Wesley—before he had toiled without results, but now the seed he sowed sprang up into a mighty harvest. "Twice-born" men have swayed the religious world in the past, and will ever sway it. This is because God can work through no other kind.

2. General Booth's aims were wholly unselfish. He thought not of himself, but of others. He sought not his own ease, comfort, gain, or advancement. Not even a desire for an illustrious name did he cherish. The honor of his Lord and the good of humanity engrossed him and commanded every talent and resource that he possessed. Such a crucifixion of self and renunciation of the world have ever been the price of personal holiness and spiritual power. In the lack of this to-day is to be found the explanation of the religious dwarfhood and barren ministries that are now far too generally prevalent.

3. General Booth's career illustrates anew the profound truth taught by the Master, that service is the pathway to true greatness. Without learning, without wealth or noble lineage, without commanding eloquence or genius that dazzled, he began as an untrained Methodist exhorter and became one of the foremost figures of Christendom. Protestant and Catholic, prince and peasant, millionaire and pauper, alike paid tributes to his worth when, at 83 years of age, his life ended. They talked of giving him a place in Westminster Abbey, but he preferred to sleep beside his faithful and honored wife. It was because he heard the needy cry of the suffering millions of humanity and contributed something toward the betterment of their condition that men of every creed and station grew to admire and reverence General Booth. Nor will they ever let his memory perish from the earth.

4. There are two additional facts that Methodists might profitably note: (a) The doctrines that General Booth preached were essentially the same as those with which Wesley set England aflame in the eighteenth century. The so-called new theological discoveries have contributed nothing to this mighty movement. (b) The Salvation Army is not a democracy. General Booth's power was well-nigh supreme, but he used it for God's glory and accomplished what he could never have done with a loose organization, dependent upon the popular will. It is a significant historical truth, that the world's greatest religious achievements have not been made by people so concerned about themselves as to be always sticking for their rights. What a Christian should desire is what will most speed the coming Kingdom.

A VISIT TO MOSS POINT.

It was our pleasure to spend last Sunday in Moss Point, Miss., where we went to preach for Rev. W. M. Sullivan, the pastor, who was engaged in a protracted meeting at Silver Creek, with Rev. R. A. Shiley. Though there were gathering clouds and occasional claps of thunder, both in the morning and afternoon, there was no rain, and the day was an enjoyable one. At 10:30 o'clock a.m. we looked in on the Sunday school, which evidently is in a flourishing condition. Brother C. W. Jackson is the superintendent, and he is a most alert and capable one. What an opportunity we have as a Church in the privilege of teaching and training so many children and young people! The red furrows of their uncorrupted hearts constitute the richest soil for seed-sowing to be found upon our planet. None other yields such a harvest.

Both at 11 o'clock and at the evening hour we were greeted by good audiences, who gave us respectful attention. The singing was to us inspirational. The choir led in an admirable manner, and voices could be heard coming from every part of the house. There is a tremendous power in hearty congregational singing. Would that we had more of it!

Moss Point is a most attractive town. It is situated only a few miles from the gulf, and is near the Pascagoula and Escatawpa Rivers. It is connected by a street-car line with Pascagoula and Scranton. The fishing thereabout is said to be fine, and there is a quietness among the clusters of pine trees that seems to call to one appealingly. The support of the town comes chiefly from its large saw mills.

Our church is a tasteful frame structure and is beautifully situated in an enclosure surrounded by fine trees. This is one of the choice appointments of the Mississippi Conference. Any preacher should count himself fortunate to be the pastor of such men as J. L. Dantzler, J. W. Griffin, John Albert, C. H. Wood, Dr. J. N. Rape, J. A. Vanderwall, C. M. Fairley, C. W. Jackson, and others like them whose names we did not learn. Concerning Brother Sullivan and his work, we heard many kindly expressions. For the many courtesies and attentions shown us, we were most appreciative and grateful. Not soon shall we forget our stay in the charming home of Brother and Sister C. M. Fairley, who left nothing undone to minister to our comfort and pleasure. We count it an acquisition to have made the acquaintance of the good people of Moss Point.

AN EMINENT AUTHORITY.

We call special attention to the article appearing in this issue of the Advocate, under the caption, "Gracious Ability." Perhaps the most capable and accurate theologian in the Southern Methodist Church is Dr. W. F. Tillet, the distinguished Dean of the Theological Department of Vanderbilt University. As an exponent of Methodist teaching and as an interpreter and expositor of the Scriptures, he probably has no superior in the nation. What he says on any subject is, therefore, entitled to great weight.

Let the reader of these excerpts notice that Dr. Tillet clearly holds that the "prevenient grace" which comes unsought to every person born into the world, comes before regeneration, stops short of regeneration, and is not regeneration. Note also particularly the following statements: "Its universality has this for its result, that all who are born into the world are born in a state of probation;" "Original sin is not, in itself alone, culpable and justly punishable; at least not until the individual arrives at the age of moral accountability, and refuses to fill the conditions (repentance and faith) divinely provided for its suppression in regeneration, after which he may justly be held responsible for his original sin and all its consequences."

As is stated elsewhere, these quotations are from Dr. Tillet's great work, "Personal Salvation," which ought to be in every preacher's library, and which could scarcely be read too often.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Culpepper meeting at Columbia, Miss., is reported to be deepening in interest and accomplishing much good. The singing is one of the most attractive features of the services.

Revival services were conducted at Galloway Chapel, Jackson, Miss., last week. The pastor, Rev. John Chisolm, was assisted in the work by the other Methodist pastors of the city.

The congregation at Lewis Chapel, on the Bucatunna charge, has recently enjoyed a gracious season of spiritual refreshing. Rev. S. N. Young, the pastor, had with him in these services Rev. B. W. Lewis, of Enterprise, Miss.

Rev. Henry T. Young, our gifted young pastor on the Keatchie (La.) charge, has completed his round of protracted meetings with gratifying success. His report of the campaign conducted will appear in the Advocate next week.

A note from Chaplain John A. Randolph, of the United States Army, written from San Francisco, brings the good news that he is well and happy. Brother Randolph's son will enter the Medical Department of Tulane University this fall.

Writing from Enterprise, Miss., a few days since, Rev. B. W. Lewis says: "My brother, Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Clarksdale, Miss., was with me a short time ago and held our meeting for us. The Lord richly blessed us in the services." It is not unusual for Brother John Tillery Lewis to have success in revival work.

Ex-United States Senator H. D. Money fell from the gallery of his home at Fairhaven, on the coast between Biloxi and Gulfport, last Monday night and suffered a fracture of his right hip. Mr. Money is almost totally blind and past seventy years of age, but, notwithstanding this, he is expected to recover. He will have the sympathy of a host of friends in the misfortune which has befallen him.

Mr. I. C. Enochs, one of the first business men of Mississippi and a leading member of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, of Jackson, was accidentally struck by a street car in that city on Tuesday evening, Sept. 10. He was carried to a sanitarium, but, to the gratification of his many friends, his injuries were found not to be serious. We trust that this choice layman will soon be quite himself again.

The Seashore Campground School is reported to have begun its initial session under favorable circumstances, and the prospect is considered encouraging. Among those taking part in the opening exercises was Rev. M. L. Burton, of Guilport. The location of this school is ideal, and under the guiding hand of President Van Hook, it should go steadily forward, until it has a secure place among the educational institutions of Mississippi.

Mr. M. L. Lifsey, who has been rendering acceptable service as a good chorister, with Conference Evangelist A. W. Turner, would be glad to correspond with any who desire the services of an evangelist singer. He may be addressed at Shreveport, La.

Rev. J. W. Ramsey is assisting the pastor, Rev. W. J. Dawson, in a revival at Pelahatchie, Miss. A post card from Pelahatchie states that the meeting has begun well, and that great interest is being manifested by all the people, regardless of denominational affiliation.

Rev. J. S. Rutledge will begin a revival meeting at Pipkin's Chapel, near Greensburg, La., next Sunday. Brother Rutledge, who is in his fourth year on the Indian Bayou charge, Vermilion Parish, is by no means a stranger in the Pipkin's Chapel neighborhood.

Just as we are closing our forms, we are in receipt of a telegram from Rev. H. A. Gatlin, of Brookhaven, which says: "Whitworth had a great opening; never was the outlook so promising." With Dr. Cooper to lead, large things indeed may be expected of this historic institution.

Rev. J. W. Moore, D. D., pastor of First Church, New Orleans, is in Brookhaven, Miss., where he is assisting the pastor, Rev. Robt. Selby, in a meeting. Brother Selby began the services last week, and Dr. Moore found the church in excellent shape for a good meeting. A great victory is expected.

"We are doing fairly well in our work" writes Rev. W. W. Perry, pastor of Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, La., and as evidence to substantiate his remark, he enclosed $9.05 to pay for a number of subscriptions to the Advocate. Who can doubt that Brother Perry is doing "fairly well?"

Rev. M. L. Burton began revival services at Guilport, Miss., last Sunday, and conditions are said to be propitious for a great meeting. About half the material for the new church building there has been ordered; the congregation is in love with its pastor, and a healthy spiritual atmosphere prevails.

Rev. W. A. Mangum, formerly of Meehan Junction, Miss., has been appointed to the Pine Grove Circuit, in the Baton Rouge, (La.) District. He has already reached his new field and is now in a revival meeting at one of his churches. Brother Mangum is a young man, who gives promise of great usefulness to the Church.

The following brethren have remembered the Advocate by sending in money to cover the price of subscriptions taken in their respective works: Rev. J. Wilson Brown, Clinton, La., 2; Rev. W. D. Dominick, of Hildesburg, Miss., 4; Rev. Thomas H. Morris, Mansfield, La., 4; Rev. W. W. Jones, Calhoun City, Miss., 5, and Rev. G. G. Yeager, Auburn, Miss., 1.

Miss Belle M. Roberts, of Franklin, La., one of the leaders in our Tour Contest, who is soliciting subscriptions in South Mississippi, along the line of the Illinois Central Railroad, in a note to the Publisher, says: "I find such nice Christian people in these red hills. I am enjoying my canvass very much." She is right; there are none better anywhere.

The annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Louisiana will be held in Alexandria on Nov. 7-10. Among the speakers who will be present are some of national reputation. Further information regarding the convention may be secured by addressing the State President, Mrs. A. C. McKinney, Ruston, La., or the Secretary, Mrs. A. G. Bryce, Minden, La.

Rev. Brisco Carter, the wide-awake presiding elder of the Alexandria District, was in New Orleans last Monday and was a welcome visitor at the meeting of the Methodist ministers at First Church. Brother Carter spent Sunday in Amlite, La., where he filled the pulpit acceptably on Sunday morning. He reports the pastor at Amlite, Brother Bowman, as being in favor with his people and doing a good work.

During the last week two Louisiana young ladies have left to enter school to prepare themselves for special religious work: Miss Nora Godat, a member of Parker Memorial Church, who has entered the Scarritt Bible and Training School, in Kansas City, and Miss Willie Lee Rowan, a member at Jeanerette, La., who passed through New Orleans en route to Nashville to begin her second year's work in the Methodist Training School, located in that city.

The Joint Board of Finance of the Mississippi Conference asks that the first Sunday in November shall be observed in all the Sunday schools as "Galloway Memorial Day," at which time collections will be taken to start a fund in honor of the lamented Bishop Galloway, which is to be used to increase the endowment for the superannuated preachers of the Mississippi Conference. See the statement bearing on this subject which appears elsewhere in this issue.

Rev. J. A. Moore, of Magnolia, recently assisted Rev. J. G. Galloway, the pastor, in a very successful meeting at Crystal Springs, Miss.

Rev. C. E. Fike is doing a good work at Vivian, La. He has a Sunday school with an average attendance of 90, and has effected the organization of an Epworth League.

Evangelist L. W. Cain is now holding the 24th camp meeting at the Lebanon Camp Ground, near Potts Camp, Miss. Large crowds are in attendance and the indications point to a good meeting.

The press dispatches state that Grenada College has begun the new session with a large attendance and the brightest prospect in its history. We heartily congratulate President Council.

Rev. Robert Selby writes: "On Tuesday, September 3, the Licensing Committee of the Brookhaven District met in Brookhaven, and after he had passed the required examination, Nolan B. Harmon, Jr., son of Rev. N. B. Harmon, our pastor at Hazlehurst, was duly licensed to preach. The young man showed that he had thoroughly prepared himself for this important test, answering intelligently every question that was asked him."

From Meridian, Miss., on Sept. 12, Rev. C. N. Guice writes as follows: "On Sept. 5, Mrs. Elizabeth Compton Campbell, wife of Dr. C. W. Campbell, a local elder in our church (Fifth Street), passed to her reward. She had been ill about three weeks, and all ten of her living children were at her bedside. Dr. Campbell is well known throughout the Mississippi Conference. I will furnish a suitable memoir later." We regret to hear of the death of Sister Campbell, and extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved.

The First Methodist Church of Beaumont, Tex., is enjoying great prosperity under the ministry of Rev. W. J. Johnson, who was reared in North Mississippi. There is much activity in all departments of the work, and 117 members have been received within the past ten months. Ninety-six copies of the Texas Christian Advocate and twelve of the Nashville are taken. More than sixty persons were at prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, Sept. 4. Brother Johnson is spoken of by all who know him as one of the live wires of Texas Methodism.

In a note bearing date of September 12, Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Jackson (Miss.) District, says: "I am just back from Asheville, N. C., where I had a delightful outing of two weeks with my family. I am as well as I can be and ready for work." Brother Jones's quadrennium in his present position, which is fast drawing to a close, has been a most fruitful one, all the interests of the Church having gone steadily forward under his guiding hand. As a presiding elder, he easily takes rank with the best.

Bishop Thirkield of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who is to reside in New Orleans, reached this city last Saturday and occupied the St. Charles Street M. E. Church on Sunday morning. At the evening hour he preached to a colored congregation. A reception was tendered him at the St. Charles Street Church Monday night, at which addresses of welcome were made by Mayor Behrman, Rev. W. W. Holmes, president of the Protestant Ministers' Association, and others. Bishop Thirkield is reported to have made a most pleasant impression.

Brother George L. Carley, of Gulfport, Miss., was fanned by a catfish some time since while fishing in the Mississippi Sound. For several weeks he was detained at home, being unable to use his wounded foot. We are glad, however, to state that he is rapidly recovering, as will be seen from the following extract from a letter written by him to this office and dated Sept. 11: "I am glad to say that my foot is improving, and that I was able to hobble down town this morning for the first time in many weeks; perhaps I can lay aside my crutches by Sunday."

Our church at Biloxi, Miss., is making commendable progress under the able ministry of Rev. W. L. Linfield. During the summer the church building has been thoroughly renovated, and the painters have improved the appearance of the auditorium, and the new pews purchased some time since will be set up in a few days. The congregation has undertaken to raise funds with which to purchase a pipe organ and the amount already secured insures the success of the enterprise. While these improvements have been under way, Brother Linfield has preached to splendid audiences in the Sunday school room of the church.

We were favored last Thursday with a visit from Brother T. S. Rogers, of Hammond, La., who was brought to the city by the demands of business, but took time to show his interest in the New Orleans Advocate by hunting up its place of publication. Brother Rogers, formerly resided at Fernwood, Miss., but is now shipping clerk for the Hammond Lumber Company. He is a local preacher and keenly interested in all the work of the Church. At present the shadow of affliction has fallen across his home, the health of his wife being far from good. We earnestly pray that Sister Rogers may soon be better and his anxiety concerning her relieved.

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Field Agent for the Memphis Tri-State Hospital, requests us to announce that his address has been changed from 996 Union Avenue to 2086 Union Avenue, Memphis, Tenn. His correspondents will please take notice, and govern themselves accordingly. On account of so many of the brethren, both clerical and lay, being away from home on summer vacations, Brother Ellis found the month of August rather an unfavorable one for the hospital enterprise, though he managed to add about $1200 to this growing fund. He reports that the two ex-Mississippians filling pastorates in the Bluff City, Rev. T. W. Lewis and Rev. R. A. Clark, are continuing to give great satisfaction.

Dr. J. M. Henry, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, spent last Sunday in Slidell. In referring to the occasion, Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, the earnest pastor, says: "Dr. Henry was with us last Sunday and preached a strong and helpful sermon. We had a good day. The pastor's report for the third quarter showed that twelve members had been added to the Church, and twenty-one infants had been baptized." This is a splendid showing. The Slidell charge is making commendable progress. Rev. S. L. Riggs, of St. Francisville, will begin a revival meeting there next Monday night. Special prayer meetings and cottage services are being held preparatory to the approaching meeting, and a great revival is expected.

A pleasant caller at our office last Friday was Rev. E. L. Whiddon, missionary evangelist of the Houston (Texas) District, who was just from Talisheek, La., where he held a profitable meeting, immediately following the one at the Campground, which is about eleven miles from the town. The town meeting resulted in four accessions and a general quickening of the membership of the Church. Talisheek is said to be a promising place, having a large saw mill and turpentine still, as well as other resources. A nice school building is soon to be erected. Under the leadership of Brother T. V. Peters, the pastor, our people have recently built a new church at this point, and the outlook for Methodism is most encouraging. Brother Whiddon left over the Southern Pacific Railroad for Beaumont, Tex., where he is booked to hold a tent meeting for Rev. W. J. Johnson, our pastor in that city. From there he will go to Anguilla, Miss., to assist Rev. J. S. Parker in a revival.

AFFLICTIONS NECESSARY.

"Thorns in the flesh" are frequently God's spurs to urge us on to a higher and holier life. Great saints can be produced nowhere but in the school of suffering. "No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness to them which are exercised thereby."

BE BRAVE.

It was a principle with one of England's great modern artists never to reveal the frequent moods of sorrow to which his sensitive temperament made him the victim, but rather always to display a brave and hopeful temper—"to ease life for everybody," as he said. It is a chivalrous way in which to bear one's self for the sake of the encouragement which even the forced attitude of good cheer may bring.

There is a very subtle danger in sorrow; it tends to magnify itself and to induce selfishness. It pushes into the inner circle of all occasions and declares its presence. We must reckon with this, and not permit the thrusting forward of gloom or grief. Life does need to be made easier for everybody, for there is so much in it that is disheartening at the best. We all need to be heartened, and it is the gracious ministry of many who feel the sorrow of the world most keenly to bear themselves so bravely that their very presence brings blessing. In the process of encouraging others we ourselves become braver. One way in which to prevent despair is to make life easier for others by the assertion of what little bravery we have at the moment. This act induces courage. It also helps the battle for our friends.—Zion's Herald.

A RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION.

Forasmuch as it has pleased our Heavenly Father to take from us our Sister, Mrs. A. A. Simmons; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we extend Brother Simmons the deepest sympathy of our hearts in this sore trial, assuring him of our love and prayers, and that we deplore the loss of the noble woman which falls so heavily upon him and her many friends, commending to him and to them the faith which made so beautiful and strong the character of the deceased.

2. That a copy of this resolution be published in our county papers and the New Orleans Christian Advocate; and also that it be spread upon the minutes of our League and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

(Signed) Rev. G. H. Galloway, Miss Sella McLaurin, Miss Julia Kennedy, Committee.

THE ADVOCATE PIANO CLUB.

A few extracts from letters of club members will give the reader some idea of the many attractive features of the club and explain why it is so popular. Here are a few samples taken from the correspondence at random:

"The piano is just grand! The club plan is equally as good as the piano."

"I am perfectly delighted with my Ludden & Bates Piano and fully satisfied."

"I am delighted with it."

"To say that we are pleased would but mildly express our feeling."

"I have studied the plan very carefully and consider it very liberal."

"We are perfectly delighted with it."

"It is quite, in keeping with the 'Sterling' quality, which an acquaintance of twenty years leads me to expect always from your house."

"I do not believe any one can get up a better plan."

Almost every letter received contains similar expressions of appreciation. The advertising manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate cordially invites you to write for your copy of the club booklet and catalogue which describes the plan and instruments fully. On August 11, 1912, the death angel visited the home of Mrs. Pearl Potter and took away her youngest child, little ZACHARIAH WILSON, aged 1 year 9 months and 29 days. All that kind hands and loving hearts could do was done for the little sufferer; but after an illness of something over three months he fell asleep in the arms of Jesus, who said, "suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." The writer held the funeral service at the cemetery among a large concourse of friends and relatives, and we then gently laid his little body in the grave to await the resurrection of the just. We would urge the grief stricken mother not to weep as those who have no hope, for if she is faithful to her God, she will some day meet little Zach, with her husband who is now awaiting her home-coming. That God's grace may be sufficient for Sister Potter in this sad hour is the prayer of her pastor.

THOS. L. PORTER.

THOMAS WISTER CAIN, the oldest son of Franklin and Naomi Cain, was born in Cherokee County, Ala., March 25, 1851. He, with his parents, moved to Jasper County, Miss., while a child; afterwards he moved to Harrison County, where he spent the remainder of his life. He gave himself to God and united with the M. E. Church, South, in the year 1874. He lived a consecrated Christian until the death angel came and said, "It is enough; come up higher." For a number of years before his death he was superintendent of the New Zion Sunday school. His place was never vacant when the pastor came to fill his appointment, and he could feel assured that he had the sympathy of Brother Cain. He was indeed the preacher's friend. He was married to Miss Miranda Whittington Dec. 23, 1874. To them were born nine children. He departed this life April 16, 1910. His wife, eight children, and many friends are left to mourn their loss; but we feel that our loss is heaven's gain. He was sick about two weeks, and bore his sickness with a Christlike spirit. It was said by some of his children that if there was a true Christian, he was one. But he has gone from us. So, sorrowing ones, he cannot come back to us; but let us live as he lived, so that as, one by one, we cross over the river we may strike hands with him, and join him in singing praises to our God.

SAMUEL HENRY, the eldest son of T. A. Henry and Mrs. C. C. Henry, was born in Martinsville, Miss., Dec. 4, 1890, and died in Selma, La., July 28, 1912. In 1903, with his parents, he moved to Pollock, La., where he lived till he came to Selma in 1907. In the early summer of 1907, Samuel professed conversion and joined the Methodist Church during a series of meetings held by Brother Holder, under the pastorate of Rev. W. J. Elliott. In many ways he was an exemplary young man, quiet and unassuming, yet kind and friendly to all. He was what is commonly called a home boy, a mark of distinction that cannot be too highly commended. While his comrades were spending most of their time and salaries in congenial pleasures, Sam was finding his pleasures in investing for the comfort and happiness of those around the sacred hearthstone. On account of his father's afflictions, grave responsibilities were thrust upon his shoulders when he was scarcely more than a boy. These he bore manfully, and dispatched business with credit and honor to himself. A young life of great promise has been ended. He fought his battles bravely and did his work well. He leaves a mother, an aged father, three sisters, one brother, a number of half brothers and sisters, and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his passing away. The day following his death the funeral service was conducted by the writer, and we gently laid his body away to rest. We hope to meet him again.

J. A. ALFORD.

MRS. CORNELIA CONNOR ROGERS (nee Case) was born Sept. 5, 1889, and departed this life July 6, 1912. Miss Cornelia was born of Christian parents, and grew up in a home where love and good cheer filled life with sunshine. As a product of such a home she developed into a noble Christian woman; she united with the Methodist Church at an early age. On June 2, 1911, she was happily married to Mr. W. M. Rogers. I never saw a happier couple, nor one in which the hopes and prospects for a long and happy life together were brighter. On June 18, 1912, this union was consummated by the advent of a bright little girl coming into the house, and life seemed doubly enriched. Surely the weeks that followed, in which heart-strings were wrung, was a time when the strongest faith almost faltered. "What I do now ye know not, but ye shall know hereafter," could best be realized. Miss Cornelia bore her afflictions with Christian fortitude, saying to me upon the last visit I made to her, "Pray that I may get well, for it seems that I have more to live for now than ever; yet the Lord's will be done." Her faith only grew stronger as the storm increased. When this home was established the twain entered into a covenant with God that they would erect a family altar. The fire was kept burning here until the end. Emanating from a home of culture and refinement it was natural for the daughter to excel in these graces, yet she was ever mindful of the lowly about her and ministered to them in many ways. The father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. G. I. Case, six brothers, one sister and a host of relatives and friends mourn with the husband the departure of this loved one.

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of the M. E. Church, South, at Wesson, Miss.)

Whereas, God in his wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved co-worker and sister, Mrs. Georgie Rembert; and whereas, for many long years she has been a faithful, sincere, and appreciated member of our church and its societies, ever ready to lend a helping hand for the advancement of both our church and community; therefore be it resolved:

1. That while we mourn her loss with deep sincerity, we rejoice in her gain, and bow in humble submission to the will of our all-wise and loving God.

2. That we extend love and sympathy to the bereaved husband and affectionate children and, wishing peace to her ashes and rest to her soul, we say farewell for a season.

3. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of these societies, published in the Wesson Enterprise and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and that a copy be sent to the family.

(Signed) Mrs. L. H. Wimberly, Mrs. R. A. Drummond, Mrs. E. H. Cutrer, Committee.

Tidings From the Field

Mantachie (North Miss. Conf.)

Dear Dr. Meek: We closed our round of meetings last Thursday night at Shiloh. The results were that 22 were added to the Church and the membership was greatly revived. We have never seen larger congregations anywhere, nor have we seen closer attention paid to the preached word. Thirty-six years ago this was our field of labor, but we then had ten appointments and our circuit covered much more territory than we now have. Many who were here then are gone, but a few of them yet remain.
G. W. GORDON.

Haynesville, La.

My first revival service was held at this place, Haynesville. The services continued for fifteen days. The pastor preached for the first five days; then Rev. D. E. Kelly, one of the Mississippi Conference Evangelists, took charge and conducted the meeting to the close. The meeting was grand from start to finish. There were conversions at almost every service. The shout of victory was heard several times and the good people would rejoice as they saw "salvation rolling on." It was a great pity that the meeting could not continue longer. We took a thank offering at the close and the people paid the nice sum of $162. This amount was paid by nearly as many people as we collected dollars. I have not finished my revival meetings and will continue reporting until I am through with each meeting.
G. D. ANDERS.

Calhoun City Charge, North Miss.

We have closed our last meeting. The results were good, but not as large as they should have been; at least, it seems that way to us. Our people at Tabernacle, where our church was destroyed by a cyclone, are rebuilding. They have the rafters up and will soon be ready for services in the new house. There are not many of them, but they are a plucky set. We will have a nice little house. At Pittsboro we have a committee of enterprising men appointed to take up the matter of building a much needed annex to our church. We need four Sunday school rooms, and think the effort to build them will succeed. The committee consists of the superintendent, a doctor, a farmer, the circuit clerk and a retired merchant—all good men. Brother J. E. Cunningham spent a few days with us in the meeting at Pittsboro. He did excellent preaching and won the hearts of the people.
W. W. JONES.

Rose Hill, Miss.

On the fourth Sunday in July we began a meeting at Homewood Church, on the Rose Hill charge, and continued six days. The attendance was good at every service; often the house would not accommodate the crowd. Rev. T. J. O'Neil, our presiding elder, who is greatly loved and esteemed by our people, was with us and did the preaching. Brother O'Neil's preaching was orthodox and logical, and every sermon had some definite end in view. He is not only a good presiding elder, but a great revivalist. The spirit came upon us in great power from the very beginning of the meeting. Many were made to overrun with joy, shouting the praises of the Lord. Some of the visible results were ninety-six conversions, and eighteen accessions to the Church: five by baptism, twelve on profession of faith, and one by certificate. Nine family altars were pledged and nine children were baptized. One choice young man was called to the ministry, and the spiritual life of the church was greatly revived. Homewood Church was organized last year and a new house of worship erected. We have a membership of about sixty. The stewards have kindly agreed to relieve their pastor of all collecting.—D. E. Vickers, P. C.

Hickory Flat, North Miss.

I will give you a brief account of my summer's work on the Hickory Flat charge. My first meeting was held at Hickory Flat Church, beginning the fourth Sunday in July. On Monday night following, Rev. W. V. Shearer came to our assistance and we continued the battle against sin till Friday night. While the visible results were not what we had hoped for, yet we feel sure there were gospel seed sown that will spring up and bring forth fruit in after years. We next went to "Old Bethel," and began there the first Sunday in August. We had with us there in the battle against the devil that grand old soldier of the Cross, Rev. D. M. Floyd. Oh! how he does fight sin; yet loves the soul of the poor lost sinner. The Lord gave us the victory. There were about 10 professions of religion and 6 accessions to the Church. And also the church was greatly revived. Our next battle was at Palestine, beginning the fourth Sunday in August. Brother Thos. Jones, a local preacher, helped us there, though the pastor did most of the preaching. We feel sure that we did some good, though the visible results were very meager. There were four professions, but no accessions; the Church was somewhat revived. Our next and last battle was in Ebenezer, beginning the first Sunday in September. We had no ministerial help there—just the dear Lord and the good people. The Lord was with us in great power. It has been many a day, Mr. Editor, since this scribe was in such a meeting. For four services the people took things out the hands of the preacher. This meeting was of the old time sort. "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." The dear Lord blessed the labors of his servants and honored his precious word. The visible results were about 25 conversions and reclamations and 5 accessions to our Church. The last service will be long remembered. It was, indeed, good to be there. The writer preached from the text, "My heart is fixed on thee, O God, my heart is fixed." God gave me great liberty and as I preached, oh! how we rejoiced to see the people, both old and young, pledging themselves to live better and cleaner lives and to give themselves to the service of God. In the main, this has been a good year. On the entire charge we have had 11 accessions to our Church, with perhaps others to follow, and about 40 professions. To God be all the glory. I never had a stronger faith in God and in his precious promises. God bless the Advocate family.—Yours in his service, Thos. L. Porter, P. C.

THE SUMMER HEALTH DRINK

Horsford's Acid Phosphate
A healthful, invigorating and delicious tonic beverage—more cooling and refreshing than lemonade.

TREATING COUGH EXTERNALLY.

Don't dose delicate, little stomachs with strong internal medicines. Rub Vick's Croup and Pneumonia Salve well over throat and chest and in five minutes the breathing is easier, in fifteen minutes the worst cases are relieved. Vick's vaporizes when applied to the heat of the body. These vapors, inhaled with each breath, loosen the tough phlegm while externally Vick's stimulates the surface of the skin, relaxing the nervous system. Nothing injurious—full formula on each package. A liberal sample will be sent free to mothers addressing The Vick Chemical Company, Greensboro, N. C.

SOME WIRE FENCE ADVICE.

Farmers are said to buy economically; but is this always true? A man once bought some wire fence for his hog pasture. It wasn't the proper kind to bar hogs, but "sale" price was very low, and he thought the fence would do. On the whole, he considered it a shrewd deal. Now, in stretching this fence, it broke in several places, which he spliced together, of course, and finally got it up. But his hogs soon learned to spread the wires, and he had a lot of trouble chasing them back to pasture. Besides this, the wire soon rusted and snapped apart, which called for patching; and the upshot of his whole fence-deal was that it cost him much more in expense and bother than if he had bought a good fence of the right design in the first place.

The above is an illustration of poor economy. Fences are a very important item on a farm, and should not be skimmed. Learn all you can about them—how they are made, what kind of wire is used, and then buy wisely by choosing the fence of proper construction, right design and made of the heaviest wire you can afford. Heavy wire carries considerable more wire galvanizing in proportion to its size than light wire, and is the cheapest in the end, besides having greater strength.

And in this connection, because a fence shows rust it does not always mean that its effectiveness is impaired. This is particularly true of fence made of Open Hearth Wire. The method of making this wire is much slower than the other methods, but it permits closer watching and better mixing and so the wire is of uniform texture clear through. Corrosion won't hurt this kind of wire for a long time, as the inside of it is just as good and strong as the outside. Other kinds of wire lack this feature, which is an important one to consider.

Write to the leading fence manufacturers for their descriptive literature, and read every bit they send you, you will gain much valuable information, and be better able to judge fence. When you go to buy it, first find out what kind of wire is in it, what kind of galvanizing protects the wire, see that the joints are immovable and have no projection wire ends which injure stock, that the spacings are right for your purpose, and then, when all these points are settled, choose a heavy gauge wire.

EXONERATED AT LAST.

About fifteen or twenty years ago the wonderful success of Coca-Cola, the national soft drink, had attracted the attention of the country at large, and when other manufacturers were hurriedly rushing into the market with imitations of various kinds, with similar names, some one started the false report that Coca-Cola was an alcoholic drink. At that time prohibition sentiment was growing by leaps and bounds, and was rapidly attracting to its support the best citizenship of the South. When it was first reported that Coca-Cola was an alcoholic drink, the manufacturers considered it such a self-evident falsehood that they did not even take the trouble to deny it. They relied upon the good judgment of the people to refute the report. They failed to take account, however, of the activities of those who had an interest in injuring the Coca-Cola trade, and so the falsehood was carried on and on and grew. Many good people who never drank Coca-Cola accepted the report as true and passed it on to their friends. At length it became necessary for The Coca-Cola Co. to prove the falsehood of the report. A simple statement of the facts would no longer be sufficient to convince the public, so the company decided to have their product analyzed by the leading chemists of the country and have these analyses printed in the public press. Professors of Chemistry in the leading universities and colleges, also State and city chemists were called upon to select samples of Coca-Cola from the open market and analyze them. These analyses were published in newspapers everywhere and printed in book form for free distribution. In the mean time the same class of people who were active in starting the false report about alcohol were active in starting the report that Coca-Cola contained injurious and habit forming drugs. At last the matter came to the attention of the Food and Drug Department of the United States Government, which brought a suit against the Coca-Cola Co. in the Federal Court at Chattanooga under the pure food and drug law. The decision of the court in favor of the Coca-Cola Co., on every count of the indictment was handed down in Chattanooga last April and that verdict is expected to kill the last vestige of the slander which had for years followed this popular drink.

(If the reader has any doubts regarding the wholesomeness of Coca-Cola, and will write us, we will be pleased to give more detailed information.—Jacobs & Co., Adm. Mgrs., Clinton, S. C.)

HOME CO-OPERATION IN SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK NEEDED.

There is no field so freighted with possibilities as is the field of home co-operation. The officers and teachers of the Elementary Department cannot accomplish all they should unless the mothers co-operate with them. The mother may help the teacher to secure regular offerings from each pupil. Children often have no money of their own, and their offerings can only be such as are given them by their parents. Even should they have funds of their own, it is necessary for the mothers to instruct them in systematic giving. Few mothers would fail to see that each child has a regular offering, if they only knew that such was expected.

In the second place, the mother may aid in securing regular attendance. In the Beginners' and Primary Departments many children want to attend Sunday school, but are prevented because careless mothers do not get them ready. The indifferent Junior scholars may be persuaded to attend regularly by the mother when all other efforts have failed.

In the last place, teachers need the help of the mothers in the spiritual training of the children. The teacher has the child scarcely more than an hour each week. It is impossible to give all the spiritual food a child needs in so short a time. The mothers should, during the week, deepen the truths taught on Sunday. The mothers may study the lessons from the Sunday school books and thus know what to teach, and then help the child to apply these truths in every day life. Then the mothers may help to develop the children's spiritual natures by having them study their Sunday school lessons.

How can we get such co-operation from the mothers? By having "Mothers' Meetings." The Beginners, Primary and Junior teachers should have the mothers of the children in these departments meet with them at least once every quarter. During this meeting the various problems of mutual interest may be discussed, and the hour may be made one of more than ordinary interest by following the discussions with social intercourse and refreshments. If by having such a meeting the teachers should obtain the co-operation of the mothers, their power of doing good would be increased four fold.

MISS DAISY MAGEE.

THE BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

Upon a very cordial invitation from Rev. J. W. Faulk, the preacher in charge of the East Feliciana Circuit, the writer was privileged to attend part of the time the recent Bluff Creek Meeting, which closed on September 1. There were some eight hundred persons present, first and last, a good per cent of whom camped on the ground throughout the meeting.

The meeting is run conjointly by the East Feliciana, the St. Helena, and the Pine Grove Circuits, a committee of consecrated laymen having charge of the affairs. The officers are chosen by the "Association." The presiding elder and the three pastors look after the preaching. Rev. J. B. Fulton this year being detained by sickness in his family, and the Pine Grove Circuit having no pastor Rev. J. W. Faulk had increased responsibility and proved himself a splendid revival leader and chorister and Brother Miller exercised a wise pastoral oversight over all the preaching services.

The invited preachers were Rev. J. G. Snelling, and Rev. Elton Wilson; and Rev. T. D. Lipscomb and Rev. H. N. Brown, though among their home people and attendant upon the services, also did a share of the preaching. Mrs. Lipscomb gave an excellent address, some sweet solos, and led a number of children's meetings. Rev. A. J. Gearheard made two addresses to the Epworth Leaguers, and the writer led two services in the interest of the Sunday school work and preached twice to the children. The Misses Haney, along with many others whom we did not know, were valuable helpers in the choir. The preaching was good, the praying was in the spirit, the people were reverent and attentive, and the music was fine. Quite a few were converted and some joined the Church.

In spite of the history of Methodism and all our camp meeting traditions, this was the first Methodist camp meeting, except the Sea Shore, that I ever attended, and while this was not like the palmy days when 1500 people gathered, still it was refreshing and made one feel that we ought still to have camp meetings. The personnel of the tenters and attendants was of such a high type that inquiry was made as to the source of such culture and refinement, and the credit was given to the Bluff Creek Camp Meeting and to Mrs. Munday's school at Clinton, both of these institutions having honorable records. A New Orleans drummer testified that he had sold 26 pianos through these camp meetings. Upon a strong appeal from the presiding elder on the last day of the meeting an offering of $65 was taken for the pastors of our flooded district, and all the obligations of the meeting were cheerfully met by the tenters.

Rev. J. W. Faulk is proving himself to be one of our finest young preachers, and is loved by the people of East Feliciana circuit as but few are loved. His idea of bringing some institute features into our camp meetings is, we think, capital.

VALUE OF SYSTEMATIC INSTRUCTION.

"It is a fool's logic," says Prof. Cobbett in the Mansfield Female College catalogue, "that arrives at the conclusion that a child should acquire mental power and habits by regular, progressive, and systematic work, but his spiritual power and habits by indifferent, haphazard, and capricious methods." To which we fully agree. Since, then, it takes five days in the week under the best tutors to properly develop the mind, how is the higher spiritual life, which is even more capable of expansion, to reach its perfection under one sermon a month of the type that many of us preach? The ancient Jews sent teachers from place to place to teach the people, and Jesus "began to teach and to preach," and the early Church sought bishops who were "apt to teach," and Martin Luther, John Wesley, and leaders in all permanent reforms have set in motion aggressive teaching agencies. And as Frauch Xavier, by establishing schools, in a measure hindered the forward march of Luther's reformation through the open Bible, just so will we hold what we have gained, to say nothing of a progressive forward move, by teaching our people—in the home, in the church, and in the school. How "fat" may a soul become on one spiritual meal a month? Spiritual babes must come to their perfection through systematic nurture, regular teaching, and definite training. If this scheme both the Sunday school and the Christian college have indispensable places.—Worker.

THE MODERN FARM HORSE.

One farm horse which does the work of many horses, or many mules. The Hercules of modern agriculture. This is the Modern Farm Horse.

This Modern Farm Horse is a general purpose farm tractor. Not a single purpose machine, but an all around farm horse made of steel and with cheapest grades of kerosene. It works on the roads or in the fields; plowing, seeding, tilling, harvesting or threshing. Wherever a load needs to be hauled or a shaft to be turned, it is there with the needed power.

It is there, not only once but every time, and all the time. In it one man as control of the full strength of many horses. Or he may make it do the work of only one. Its power is constantly under his absolute and instantaneous control.

It never balks or kicks; never gets tired, tired or overcome by the heat. Never gets sore shoulders, or loses its endurance in times of idleness. It does not have to be fed or hurried when not in use.

With it one man can do the work that ordinarily requires several men and many horses or mules. Does that work better and cheaper than it can be done with horses and mules. And will do the work whenever the ground is in condition to be worked with anything.

Interesting literature describing this Modern Farm Horse can be had by addressing the Hart-Pharr Co., 20 R. Lawler Street, Charles City, Iowa.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING.

Here is a Christmas suggestion for the family that does not already possess a high grade piano. If your old piano is out of date or if your home has never known the delights of owning a sweet toned instrument, why not do away with the giving of useless perishable trinkets, just this once, and let every member of the family unite in presenting one big Christmas present to the entire family—a high grade piano that will last a life time and be a joy and a blessing to young and old alike. No home is right without music and the piano is the king of all musical instruments.

Don't wait until Christmas is upon you. Write to-day for your copy of the beautiful new catalogue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate Piano Club that makes piano buying so easy. Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

CONFERENCE ON THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

This conference was held in New York, Feb. 29, 1912, under the auspices of the Committee of Reference and Counsel of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, including the Boards in the United States and in Canada. Its purpose was to discuss the present conditions in China and the consequent duty of the home Churches. Nearly every phase of China's new life was thoroughly discussed by men of deep learning and world-wide reputation. The Conference stressed union in all forms of mission work, such as education, preparation and publication of literature, hospitals and philanthropic work.

The Message of the Conference was drawn up by Mr. Robt. E. Speer at the request of the Committee. Among other thoughts which it contained are the following:

"The whole world is agreed in recognizing in the transformation of China one of the greatest movements in human history. Whether we consider the immensity of the population affected, the character of the change that is taking place, the magnitude of the interests which are involved, the comparative peacefulness of the crisis, or the significance of the fact that a great and ancient race is undergoing in the period of a decade a radical, intellectual, and spiritual readjustment, it is evident that it is given to us to witness and have a part in a vast movement whose consequences will affect the whole world and be unending."

At present there are 11,661 leaders of the Chinese Christian Church, 278,628 members, and 4,299 missionaries from Western lands. With such a force, the opportunities for spreading the knowledge of the Lord Jesus are almost unbounded. We in the homeland are asked to share this great responsibility, and in order that we may not fail, we must pray earnestly and intelligently. Mr. Speer gives us the following comprehensive outline of a Prayer for China.

"Pray: For the people of China, this great and virile nation which, awakened from the torpor of ages by the quickening forces of the modern world, is now called upon to deal with enormous legislative, economic, educational, and moral readjustments. For the Chinese Christians, who share in full measure the privations and problems that are the common lot of their countrymen.

For the missionaries and their work, the adequate expansion of Christian education and evangelization, and adaptation of mission methods to the needs of the present situation.

For full religious liberty in China. For perfect union among the Christians of every name.

For a spirit of true independence on the part of the Church in China, and of perfect co-operation with the missions of the Churches of the West.

For guidance of the new leaders of China, that they may be Christian men and may lead their land forward in wisdom and peace.

For the purity of the gospel in China, that it may not be misconceived, but that it may be known and experienced as the power of God unto salvation.

For a right attitude on the part of all governments toward the government of China.

For the Manchus and the Chinese alike that they may find Christ."

Costs You Nothing When Idle-- Almost Nothing When It Runs

AN IHC oil and gas engine is no expense to you when it stands idle. It does not eat while not working, nor draw wages when it has nothing to do. When it does work, it is the cheapest power you can use, and it has many advantages over steam or electricity; when not working it costs you nothing. It will work just as hard at the close of the day as at the start—will work overtime or all night just as readily. It is ready to work whenever you need it; always reliable and satisfactory. You can use an

to pump water, to run the wood saw, cream separator, churn, grindstone, washing machine, wringer, electric light plant, feed grinder, corn husker and shredder, ensilage cutter and conveyors, or any other machine or tool on the farm, to which power can be applied.

Constructed of the best material; built by men who know what a good engine must do; thoroughly tested before leaving the factory; an IHC gasoline engine is strong, dependable and powerful—as perfect an engine as can be built.

IHC oil and gas engines are made in all sizes from 1 to 50-horse power; in all styles—vertical and horizontal, air and water cooled, portable, stationary and mounted on skids, to operate on gas, gasoline, naphtha, kerosene, distillate or alcohol. Kerosene-gasoline tractors, 12 to 45-horse power.

Ask the IHC local dealer to show you an IHC engine and explain each part. And remember our responsibility does not end when the dealer makes a sale—the customer must be satisfied. If not convenient to see the local dealer, write for catalogue and full information.

The Sunday School.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

By B. F. Lewis.

A Teacher Training Class has been organized on the Satartia charge.

The Sunday school at Laurel, Kingston, under the pastoral supervision of Brother M. M. Black, has outgrown its ability to handle itself, and until its readjustment, needs help. This is a fine showing. A Sunday School Institute was held in this church two years ago under the auspices of the Sunday School Board.

The Field Secretary reports a very pleasant and profitable visit to the Woodville charge, where Rev. W. W. Hopper is pastor. A Teacher Training Class of twelve and a Wesley Adult Bible class were organized, an organization in the Beginners and Primary Departments was begun, and a house-to-house canvass was made.

The Home Department of the Magnolia Church, a few days ago, issued invitations to a reception to be tendered Rev. H. R. Singleton. This is a departure in the right direction. Why should it not be followed? This department is under the supervision of Mrs. Eugene W. Reed, assisted by Mesdames Ford, Goza, McFadin, Robertson and Huff, as visitors.

LOUISIANA NOTES.

By Rev. P. O. Lowrey.

The Sunday school at Wisner, on the Gilbert charge, is soon to be re-organized and started with a more aggressive policy, according to the plans of the pastor, Rev. W. L. Hunter.

In a forward move at Gilbert, plans are made for a teacher training class to meet in conjunction with a workers' council on Tuesday night of each week. Heretofore the pastor has been teaching a Bible study class at this time and simply changes the form and varies the work to cover the first-year teacher training course. He has already done a good work, and some testify that they never knew so much about the Bible; and under the new plan better things are promised. A Home Department has also been organized, and a young men's, a young ladies' and a mixed adult class are being planned. This young ladies' class has been in existence for some time, with the pastor as teacher, but has not been organized.

In the death of Mrs. Sam Allen, of Monroe, on June 25, we lost one of the most efficient and best loved Sunday school workers of our Conference. She superintended the Beginners' Department of First Church and had a warm place in the hearts of her scholars. The children of her department and those who had been promoted to the Primary Department acted as honorary pall bearers at the funeral and marched in front of the corpse. During the service they were seated within the altar in their kindergarten chairs and sang as a special song, "Will there be any stars in my crown?" which had been a favorite with their teacher while she lived, and was most appropriate at her funeral, she having taught them to sing it most effectively. The scene of the sorrowing congregation and the singing of so well trained and so devoted a class of children for one so universally loved were sublimely pathetic. A life spent so unselfishly cannot die. Peace to her ashes, and may some one be found Christlike enough to carry forward her work in shepherding these lambs of the fold!

NEWS AND NOTES.

By Miss Elizabeth Kilpatrick.

Rev. J. R. James, of Ashland, writes of a fine Sunday school and a good hard year's work. You usually find a good Sunday school on Brother James' work.

The Sunday school must fulfill its mission as the great religious educative force of modern times, or some other organization will claim that heaven-sent prerogative.

Teacher of the Secondary Division, what are your boys and girls reading? In what amusement are they indulging? Do you seek to understand them and their vast potentialities?

When you are elected as a class or Sunday school officer this fall, don't grumble, shirk, or half attend to your task. Remember the Psalmist of old said, "I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tents of wickedness."

A boy's religion must be like a boy's whole nature, idealistic and hero-worshipping. Give the boy a right hero, set before him the right ideal, and you have done him an inestimable service. "The man who sets a good example preaches a sermon without words."

Along with several other mottoes, this fine sentence occupied a prominent place in the late D. L. Moody's Bible: "If each of us will at once set about some work for God, and will keep at it three hundred and sixty five days in the year, then a very great deal will be accomplished." This is just what it takes to achieve results.

Remember that Oct. 1 begins the Graded Lesson year, and it is earnestly desired that many schools commence this work, if only in the Primary Department. Ask your pastor to give one or several sermons on the subjects selected in this course; on the advisability of selecting teaching material adapted to the age of the pupil, and to give emphasis to the need of trained teachers.

Begin Rally Day preparations now, if you have not done so already. Your school and each particular class should have the privileges and benefits of such a day. Many schools and classes have their programs well in hand now, and success is best assured by a well-planned program. Rev. W. S. Lagrone, of Greenville, is already laying plans for just such a day, getting speakers, selecting effective invitations, and arranging good music. His Adult Class has been holding up well, considering the hot weather.

YOU ARE INVITED.

The advertising manager of the N. O. Christian Advocate cordially invites you to investigate the attractive offer of the Advocate Piano Club. The club has proven, to the entire satisfaction and delight of its members, every claim that was made for it. It was founded on the principle that "what is impossible for one is easy for one hundred." The tremendous purchasing power of an army of one hundred piano buyers solves perfectly the otherwise difficult problem of securing a piano of highest artistic standard at a price and on terms which put it within reach of practically every subscriber.

The new club booklet and catalogue, beautifully illustrated and fully describing the club plans and pianos are now ready for distribution. We have a copy for you. Won't you write for it to-day? Address Ludden & Bates, Advocate Piano Club Dept., Atlanta, Ga.

SOME GOOD MEETINGS.

My Board of Stewards gave me the month of August for a vacation, and since for personal reasons, I could not spend it as I had planned, I spent it in revival work. My first work was with Rev. Robert Randle, on the Cotton Valley Circuit, where I labored for two weeks at Cotton Valley and Pleasant Valley Churches. There were "many adversaries," but fairly good crowds attended, and the visible results were 3 conversions, 1 reclamation, 3 additions to the Church, a general improvement in the condition of the churches, three or four times as much given on the Conference collections as the whole circuit paid last year, and the raising of the salary of the pastor in full at one point. Brother Randle and his devoted daughter, Miss Pauline, did all that was possible for my comfort and made my stay a pleasure. Brother Randle is still physically vigorous, and mentally he is perhaps as acute as at any period of his life. He will make a good showing for Cotton Valley Circuit this year.

My next meeting was at Tallulah, from August 18 to 30. It was one of the most difficult fields in some respects that I had ever seen. We had unusually large congregations, according to the testimony of the people. There were nine additions to our Church, and one to the Presbyterian Church, and a pretty general cleaning up upon the part of the professing Christians. Rev. C. F. Staples, the pastor, has wrought well under very trying circumstances. The whole town and parish, with the exception of a very small portion, was under water for many weeks, the water receding too late to put anything like the usual acreage into cultivation. I was hospitably entertained in the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Hall Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Ziegler, and many courtesies were extended me by others, regardless of church affiliation. Tallulah is a delightful place, and I hope it may some day be taken for God.

THE STORY OF THE UNIVERSE.

A wonderful fairy-tale of science is contained in "The Story of Spirals" in the September Century, by Dr. Arthur Fath. "It seems as if the story of the spiral is the story of the universe," declares the author. "Many years, possibly centuries, will pass before the main part of the story can be written, but the opening chapters, so briefly sketched here, unfold before us a view of the physical universe of such wonderful grandeur and unity that we are tempted to believe that, at last, we have some inkling of its actual structure and development."

MEMORIAL RESOLUTIONS.

(Adopted by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Coldwater, Miss.)

Whereas, on August 27, God in his wisdom saw fit to remove from our midst Mrs. F. D. Bush, one of our charter members, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we are thankful for her gentle, sweet, Christian life. She was loyal and faithful to every good work her hands found to do.
 2. That we extend to the bereaved ones our heart-felt sympathy.
 3. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes, and published in our County and Church papers.
- (Signed) Mrs. M. E. Veazey, Mrs. M. E. Featherston, and Mrs. A. Y. Gillespie.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

(Adopted at a memorial service held at the Presbyterian Church in Aberdeen, Miss., on Sunday evening, Sept. 1. The other churches called in their appointments, and their pastors and many of their members attended.)

It having pleased God to call our beloved pastor and brother, Rev. J. T. Murrah, from his earthly labors to his heavenly rest, it is the wish of members of this church and others to give some expression to their sense of sorrow and bereavement, and to pay tribute to his memory.

Brother Murrah had been pastor of this church only a little over two years preceding his sudden death, but in that short time he had become greatly endeared to us all, and had won in an unusual degree the confidence and affectionate regard of the people of this city, of every condition in life. The unaffected simplicity and kindness of his nature speedily attracted the hearts of others to him, and he acquired an influence over the minds and hearts of men which he exercised with tactful and tender regard for their highest interests, temporal and spiritual. He was social, genial and sympathetic, greatly enjoyed intercourse with his fellow-men, and went in and out amongst them, sure of responsive good will, and everywhere met a cordial reception and kindly greeting.

Whilst devoted to his own branch of the Christian Church, he was tolerant, free from all bigotry, and loved as brethren Christians of all other Churches, regardless of difference in creeds.

But it was in the pulpit that he was at his best. He preached the gospel and Christ crucified. This was the burden of all his sermons. He concerned himself but little with modern "Higher Criticism," so called, or with mere metaphysical speculation. Believing unwaveringly in the Bible as the word of God, he preached its truths with profound and convincing earnestness and effect, seeking to win souls to Christ. He carefully prepared his sermons and they uniformly possessed an attractive and finished literary form, unblemished by meretricious ornamentation, and were ever weighted, with noble thoughts and sound Christian principles. He was scholarly, broadly cultured, deeply pious, had much common sense, and these molded and gave tone to his preaching and to his conduct.

He was the third of his family to preside over this charge; his father, long gone to rest, and his brother, our beloved Bishop, had both been pastors of this church; all three were great preachers, whose pious ministrations remain as precious heritages of this body.

Be it Resolved:

1. That in the death of our pastor, Rev. J. T. Murrah, this church has lost a much beloved, useful and wise pastor, the entire Church has been deprived of the life and services of a great preacher, and his large circle of friends have sustained a sad bereavement.
2. That we extend to his afflicted family our deepest sympathy.
3. That these memorial proceedings be put upon the proper records, that a copy be sent to his son, another to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and one to each of the city papers.

A THEOLOGICAL WANDERER RETURNED.

Perhaps the most noted heterodox theologian in the United States within recent years has been Dr. C. A. Briggs, Professor of Theological Encyclopaedia and Symbolics in the Union Theological Seminary of New York. His heresies have attracted national attention, and resulted in his suspension by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. It is now announced that after his various wanderings in the fields of theological speculation he has again adopted the orthodox teaching of the Churches concerning Christ. Discussing the Doctor's late utterance to this effect, Zion's Herald says:

"Dr. Briggs' announcement is positive and unequivocal in every way. It is, in fact, a challenge. 'I challenge any man,' he asserts in the American Journal of Theology, 'to produce any valid results of modern philosophy or modern science that will in the slightest degree impair the Christ of the Church as represented by her creeds and institutions.' Here is something conclusive, written out of maturity of judgment, which should prove a help to those who, wandering as did once this famous theologian, are looking back for a mooring for their faith. Dr. Briggs affirms that modern objectors to the Christ of the Church simply stir up and revive ancient heresies—that and nothing more. And yet it is with the cry of progressiveness in theology upon their lips that many cause these theological mummies to live again!"

Dr. Briggs is not the first venturesome theologian who, after navigating the seas of doubt, has come back to the simple faith of the fathers for anchorage. None of the essential truths of Christianity are late discoveries. They were revealed in the beginning, and have been known to the disciples who were faithful ever since. And, as has been said above, there are few, if any, new heresies. Practically all the false faiths of today existed under other names in the past. Satan left nothing undone to pervert and destroy Christianity in its incipency. Modern research is not without its value—it may in some instances illuminate the Scriptures and correct our interpretations of them as to things that are non-essential, but the foundations will ever stand secure. The old paths are the true paths, the safe paths, the paths that lead to light, to a rich religious experience, and to the heavenly home.

AN INTERESTING HISTORICAL FACT.

In a late issue of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, Dr. J. E. Godbey brings forward a most interesting historical truth, one which has been very generally overlooked, at least within recent years. He shows that after Episcopal Methodism was rent in twain in 1844, slavery continued to exist in the Northern, as well as the Southern, branch until it was abolished after the outbreak of the Civil War. We quote, in part, his statement:

"The Methodist Episcopal Church held slaves as long as we of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, did. They held slaves as long as anybody in the United States held them—that is, until they were freed by Lincoln's proclamation and the subsequent acts of Congress. The Methodist Episcopal Church never enacted a law making slavery a test of membership. The effort to enact such a law at the General Conference, held in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1860, failed."

Dr. Godbey then quotes from the Journal of the General Conference of that year, which appears to sustain fully his contention. From this, it would seem that some who are disposed to condemn the Southern Methodist Church for allowing slaveholders to remain among its members would do well to brighten up on the history of their own denomination.

KIND WORDS FOR BISHOP HOSS.

The New York Christian Advocate probably stands first among Methodist journals of the world. It is not given to the bestowal of indiscriminate praise, its utterances usually being carefully weighed. Coming from such a source, the following reference to Bishop E. E. Hoss, appearing in the issue of Sept. 19, will be read with interest and appreciation by the Methodists of the South:

"Very disquieting rumors concerning the health of Bishop E. E. Hoss, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have been rife for several weeks. He is so well known among Methodists everywhere in the world, and has such a host of friends in every part of the Church, that the intelligence of his physical improvement will be received with much gratification by all who read it. * * * The whole-heartedness, the intellectual brilliancy and the oratorical and literary power of Bishop Hoss have made him one of the most commanding figures in the modern religious world. We trust that he may be long spared to bless the Church by the use of his splendid gifts."

INTER-RACIAL MARRIAGES.

How the five great races came into existence, in view of the fact that they are all generally held to have sprung from one common source, is a question that has never been settled. God, in the exercise of his providence, seems to have brought about the distinctions which characterize them, and any attempt to ignore these appears usually to result disastrously. For instance, it is reported that five white women in California who married Japanese found their way into an insane asylum during the past year, and only a few days since the white wife of Jack Johnson, the negro prize fighter, committed suicide. A secular paper, in discussing this subject, says: "That the number of such tragedies is not greater can be due alone to the limited number of these unnatural marriages. That any of the women escape constitutes the one cause for surprise."

We do not think there is any doubt that every race should stand firmly for the maintenance of its racial integrity. Such seems to be the Divine Will as expressed in nature, and we have no doubt that the highest good of all will be conserved by acting in harmony therewith. Some of the States have enacted laws to prevent such matrimonial alliances, and they are wise in doing so. The history of the world does not show much to the credit of hybrid peoples.

THE MOST IMPORTANT THING.

Perhaps nothing counts for so much in making up the elements of success in the life of a minister as his private conduct. "It takes three things," said a prominent layman, "to make a well rounded preacher: religion, common sense and learning." The three are all valuable, but of the three it is the most important that a minister should have religion—the kind that permeates his whole life, that causes him to appreciate the lost condition of humanity, and that makes him have one supreme desire—that of converting "sinners from the error of their ways."

We heard recently of a minister conducting a revival meeting who spent his whole forenoon shooting birds and the afternoon playing games. He tried to preach after such a day's preparation. No wonder there were no results. No wonder that a leading layman said: "I never invite our pastor to have prayers with us, for he seems to be always on a frolic."

It is a tremendous responsibility which rests on the shoulders of the man who is a minister. The eternal destiny of souls depends upon his faithfulness. Scores never see the inside of a Bible, and the only way they will ever be attracted to the Cross of Christ is either by the words of the preacher or by his influence. His words should be freighted with Gospel truth, but even then they are apt to fall back dead unless supported by a life of true piety. The saddest words that can be spoken concerning a pastor by his members are, "We like his sermons, but we do not like his life."—A. J. G.

What should be one's guide in life? The consensus of public opinion, or one's own notions as to what is expedient? Nay, verily. A man's deepest convictions, carefully and intelligently formed, are the things that should govern and control him. Disloyalty to one's true conceptions of right is high treason to one's own personality. It debases the soul and takes from it its only safe regulative principle. Well may we beware of trampling under foot the dictates of an enlightened conscience. To do so is to undermine the foundation of all noble manhood. Do your duty, as you see it, even if you have to stand alone.

Our Monthly Sermon

GOD'S CALL AND ITS MEANING.

By Rev. George H. Thompson.

Text: Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that ye should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain; that whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give it you.—John xv:16.

Paganism makes deity a monstrosity. The idea reflected in their graven images gives him eyes that are a flame of fire, nostrils that emit fire and brimstone, and a mouth that is a veritable volcano, throwing anger, vengeance, and fury, on crouching, craving, crying creatures. He is the incarnation of all that the guilty fear, the despot of an arbitrary government. His great deeds are preserved in blood and his grandeur is revealed through his acts of fury. He is just such a being as the fear of man would create in his wildest delirium. Man was regarded as an insignificant atom, fit to be destroyed by the whims of his deity.

No other teacher has given to man the exalted position allowed him by Christ. In this matchless chapter he endeavors to tell men how close to God they are. He calls himself the vine, and tells them they are the branches; that they are in him, and that he is in them. He exhorts them to abide in him, and tells them that close union is essential to life. He calls them 'friends.' He reminds them that the highest test of friendship is to lay down your life for your friend—just what he had done for them. He had taken on him their nature, and was imparting his nature to them. He called them not servants, for the servant does not know the plans of the master. He is not taken into his secrets, but is to remain in silence and to obey orders. Christ had taken them into his plans, and told them all the things that he had heard of the Father. Christ is beginning his spiritual kingdom, and he calls to his assistance these men, who are to co-operate with him and work under his instructions.

1. "Ye have not chosen me." Some people very zealous in church work act as if the spiritual kingdom was inaugurated at some time in the misty past, and that during its history men have volunteered to assist in its work, and that by complying with certain conditions God can be induced to come to man's aid, and that in this way the Church has been kept going.

They esteem themselves fortunate when God will deign to help them. God seems so indifferent at times about the work of saving souls that they need to pray all night, or to fast much, or to do other kind of penance. With them, it is painful that God could be so indifferent concerning the souls which are so dear to them. To this kind Christ says: "Ye have not chosen me." Who loved these souls before you had your being? Who died that they might live, before you saw the light of day? Who built up the spiritual kingdom of which you are only an heir? When you were in your sins, the prisoner of Satan, when you were in your slavery, and rejoicing in your condition, in darkness, and proud of it, who freed you, and gave you light? When by your life you were cursing the souls which you now so much love, who reversed your vision and affections, and made you a new creature? Think you, that since your conversion God has lost interest in the souls of men? Or, do you think God has so exalted you that you are wholly commissioned to carry on this spiritual kingdom? Nay, nay, my brother. The hand which launched the old ship of Zion is still guiding her; the voice which called you from darkness is still calling the lost; the cross which saved you is still saving man.

Some one may want to know if I discourage fasting and prayer? By no means. I would have you fast much for your failures in life. Let them haze you, and let your humiliation take from you your appetite. For such an unprofitable servant you have been. I would have you pray more, that you may have a clearer vision of yourself, that your pride and unbelief might be taken from you. I would have you lose your will in His will, and your faith strengthened in his willingness to lead, and your place in his kingdom clearly revealed. If you have thought more highly of yourself than you ought to think, I would have you know how needy you are.

II. "But I have chosen you." He called you into existence and fashioned you in his own image. He has stood by and kept in action your heart which has carried life to all parts of your being. He keeps your lungs at work as an inspirator, giving oxygen to supply the needs of your body. He has sent an angel to keep watch over you, and when you would put your foot into the pit of destruction, or strike it against a rock of ruin, he delivers you. Long before you came into the world he prepared a Bible, the chart of life, and laid it in your lap as soon as you embarked on the sea of time. He had prepared for you a Church which threw about you its motherly arms of protection, and which supplied you with spiritual food during the period of your spiritual orphanage. It may be, that like Samuel, the Holy Ghost called you from your mother's womb; and he witnessed to the consecration which you made, declared you a pardoned rebel, created within you a clean heart, and has been the comforter of your life in joy and sorrow.

Christ chose you in the remote past for pardon and redemption and adoption. He has chosen you to be a laborer with him. He has employed you to work under his direction. Do not get beside yourself and feel that the work is all yours. He who called you has not retired. He still directs and desires that you should follow out directions. When you pray, let it be to know God's will. When you labor, let it be with an assurance that you are following out that will.

He calls all for usefulness; that "ye should walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom and glory." It is the dignity and glory of man, that he should be able to walk worthy of God—a worthy son of Jehovah—a son that is worthy of such honorable parentage! This is the son who reflects the life of the Father, and who co-operates in the Father's plans. Think of sinful man engaged with the Father; the Son; and the Holy Ghost in the redemption of the world! By his own call he has listed you with Moses, Abraham, Elijah, John, Matthew, Mark, Luke, Peter, Paul, Chrysostom, Augustine, Luther, Knox, Calvin, Wesley and the numerous host who have revealed God to man.

Do you suppose that you hold your position in the Church by the choice of man? What potentate is there that would allow another to fill his cabinet positions without his knowledge or consent? Do you think Christ has been more careless, and has allowed man to select the members of his cabinet? Unless Christ has withdrawn from the administration of his Church, he had something to do with your selection for the office which you now hold.

The call to the Christian life has for a purpose the same high end. Obedience to Christ's rules is all that he requires. The church work which disregards his plans and spirit is to him offensive in the extreme. By all means should this rule be applied to every department of worship.

III. "And ordained you." I have qualified you. Strange notions prevail concerning the phenomena of God's call to service. Some have looked for such a manifestation of God as he made of himself to Moses. Joseph Smith claims to have had such an interview. His followers, the Mormons, still have revelations of God, they think. The Negroes dream dreams and see visions. The ignorant look for some very unusual phenomena, such as the earthquake, the cyclone, or the face of God to appear in the angry cloud. God's method of calling men under the dispensation of the Spirit is by the still, small voice. God's call means qualification. No wise ruler would call to a position a man unqualified for the duties to be assigned him. This is the time of specialists, and they have been introduced into the economy of the Church. If you have a good voice, God has appointed you to sing. If you are a financier and love God, he calls you to take care of the Church's finances. If you have a clear mind and powers to impart information, and see in the ministry the greatest possible field of usefulness, and the welfare of man comes to be a burden to you, very likely you are called to the ministry. This call should not be limited by countries and continents, but by the needs of humanity. The man who believes that God is more concerned about some of his children than others needs a new and broader vision of duty and privilege.

IV. "That ye should go and bring forth fruit." Christ bids all come, and commands all to go. The invitation is to come and receive life, and the command is to go and impart it. The one is not more imperative than the other. The going is the means of caring for and increasing the reward of coming. The idle man has no place in the kingdom of righteousness. Since God has commissioned us to work among men, it is a strange thought that the worker should shut himself in from men.

Fruit is to be the reward of man's calling. To bear fruit is to do what Christ would do. "In that ye did it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto me." No impatience should be exercised to get into other fields of labor. Let us meet the purpose of our own calling.

VI. "That whatsoever ye ask in my name of the Father he will give you." He has sent us to work, and he will furnish all needed supplies. You are an employe of the Lord, and what is needed for carrying out his will he will provide. His supply-house is unlimited, and when you need anything to help you as his servant, you have only to make proper requisition. As Paul said, "God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work."

REVERENCE FOR SEX.

By Rev. N. H. Williams, formerly Editor of the Florida Christian Advocate.

The division of the human race into male and female follows the divine order with relation to all the higher organisms. "So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." The fact that he did not make a man a sexual, as he made some of the lower forms of life, argues that it is better to have man, his crowning work, in two departments, male and female; for God always does the best that can be done. A hint as to why he worked on this wise is given us in the development of the embryo. In a study of human embryology we find that the primary cell from which God intends to grow the future man or woman manifests its life in no other way except by its power of assimilating nutriment. As this cell multiplies itself it is then that we see developed the special organs, as the sexual organs, the alimentary canal, the nervous system, the brain, the liver, the kidneys, etc. The human body in its development is as the growth of a great business; while the business was small one man could manage it all, but as it grows its complexity demands the attention of a specialist for each department. Sex, itself, is one of the departments of human life. It is no accident that it exists, but it was incorporated in the divine plan for a divine purpose. Any disregard for the sphere of sex is a rebellion against God's law, and a sin against nature.

In the creation of the sexes God not only selected the best plan for propagating the species, but the only plan for development of a rounded and complete race. There are elements in masculine and feminine character that cannot be developed except by specializing. There are zones of thought and spiritual experiences impossible without the two sexes. Morality itself is possible only because of this fact; it is the offspring of authority and love. It finds its genesis in the family, where the authority of the father is law and the love of the mother is gospel. Only by maintaining and developing this God-given distinction of sex can man or woman realize fully his life or her life, and contribute a moral heritage to their children. It takes the emphasis of an entire life to develop manliness or womanliness; one sex cannot exemplify the graces of both; any attempt at it results in a monstrosity with the unlovely elements of both sexes magnified. Any masculinity among women or effeminacy among men is a sin against sex. Each sex has his or her contribution to make, and the contribution is possible only by following the lines indicated by the respective constitutions of the two sexes. President King, in that suggestive book, with the double title, "The Moral and Religious Challenge of our Times, or The Guiding Principle in Human Development: Reverence for Personality," has this to say about reverence for personality which is as applicable to reverence for sex: "The writer has come to believe that the principle of reverence for personality is the ruling principle in ethics and religion; that it constitutes, therefore, the truest and highest test of either an individual or a civilization; that it has been, even unconsciously, the guiding and determining principle in all human progress; and that, in its religious interpretation, it is, indeed, the one faith that keeps meaning and value for life."

The demands of the "new woman" is a movement which seeks, whether wittingly or unwittingly, to destroy reverence for sex. The most efficient means possible for the accomplishment of this destruction is to eliminate all possible difference between the sexes. Equals never reverence each other; only an inferior reverences a superior. If we are to maintain reverence for sex, we must maintain and develop the God-established differences between the sexes, enhancing in every possible way the superiority of each sex in his or her sphere, and thus render each worthy of the reverence of the other, the man superior in his manliness, the woman superior in her womanliness.

God never intended that woman should lead in Church or State, as his word declares. St. Paul writes: "But I would have you know that the head of every man is Christ; and the head of every woman is the man; and the head of Christ is God." "Wives, be in submission to your own husbands, as unto the Lord." "For the husband is the head of the wife even as Christ is the head of the Church." God's plan is that woman shall make leadership possible and worth while. As the general stays in the rear and directs the army, so woman is to stay out of sight and direct the affairs of the world. To put her at the front would mean more than the destruction of a general; it would mean the destruction of the principle that made the organization of the army possible.

The women who are clamoring for the various "rights" are not the joyful mothers of children, but for the most part, are those who have not a proper reverence for sex. If debate and activity in the effort to secure those "rights" for which these women contend could be confined to the mothers, to those who love home, reverence their husbands, and are fulfilling their duties as wives and mothers, we would hear little of the "New Woman" with her raucous rant for "rights."

Women who have lost reverence for sex are a menace to the morals of a nation and a detriment to the cause of Christ. It is startling to read the facts laid bare before us by Mrs. Gross Alexander in the Methodist Quarterly Review for July. She shows plainly that it is this "smart" class that are going off after heathen gods. Practically every conspicuous abomination that curses our American society to-day, was, or is, mothered by a woman. Mme. H. P. Blavatsky introduced Theosophy and Mrs. Katherine Tinsley is its present head and high-priestess; Mrs. Sarah Farmer and Mrs. Annie Besant are responsible for Hinduism in the United States; Mrs. Ruth Hilton is responsible for the existence of Sun Worship among us; Mrs. Eddy founded Christian Science; and the apostles of the New Thought are women.

The lack of reverence for sex, with all the evil it entails, is not confined to Boston dreamers, nor to the cultivated heathen of some sections of the West. It threatens us here in the South, and can work only evil and that continually. Let the ministry be ever alert against its insidious approach as they are against all "erroneous and strange doctrines." That one here and there is short-sighted enough not to see the danger is but natural; but so long as the rank and file of true preachers of the Word stand in their lot to proclaim the God-ordained reverence for sex, as they proclaim any of the other teachings of the Book, and, so long as the ministers are supported by the home-loving, husband-reverencing, sex-reverencing God-fearing women, the "new woman" will only wear out her throat and the patience of the people who have the good of their country and the glory of God in their hearts. Let us continue to teach that "Aged women be likewise reverent in demeanor, not slanderers or enslaved to much wine, teachers of that which is good; that they may train the young women to love their husbands, to love their children, to be sober-minded, chaste, workers at home, kind, being in subjection to their own husbands, that the Word of God be not blasphemed."
